Poetry.

How my Ship came in.

I stood on the shore at sunset
And watched the tide flow by,
Mirroring clear on its restless breast
The crimson and gold of the sky.

The boats that had entered the harbor
Were anchored safe in the bay
Lazily rocking, with white wings set
As to dull on the day.

Faint on the far horizon
Glimmered a hazy sail,
And I watched with eager, anxious eyes
To see if it would win or fail.

The wind was dead against it,
The tide flowed strong and still,
But steady and sure as the wind and tide,
And part as certain a will.

The sail grew large and larger,
Wavered and faded away,
Yet still I watched with anxious eyes
To see it re-enter the bay.

In the west the colors deepened,
And a golden sunset lay
Full a-slant the ocean and rested on
The ship that had entered the bay!

"My ship!" I cried out gladly,
Watching the shining sail
That was touched to a delicate, roseate hue
By that ray from the sunset pale.

"But how did it enter the harbor?"
I asked of a sailor lad.
"Why, child, it tacked 'gainst wind and tide,
And came in with glowing sail!"

"But the wind and the tide o'ercame it,"
I said, "as 'twas entering the bay."
"Yes," answered this gray-haired sailor,
"yes."
But, child, it tacked, I say!"

"Tacked?" I repeated vaguely.
"Tacked?" And what is that please?"
"Why," laughed the sailor, "why, my child,
'Tis coming in 'gainst the breeze!"

"But how is it done?" I queried,
Watching the stately ship:
"'Tis sailing hither and fro, my child."
Said the sailor with smiling lip.

"Till at last, with stern endeavor
Gaining against the tide
That and the wind may both be strong
Into port 'twill certainly ride;

"For, child, a patient waiting O'ercomes the strongest ill!"
As the sailor paused, the ship bore to,
At rest beneath the hill.

"In life," the sailor continued,
"The winds and tides of fate
Are strong and relentless for those who yield
To its swelling waves of hate:

"But, friend, there is One above us
Who watches with sleepless eyes,
Guiding the ship with loving hand
Thro' tides that are sweeping by.

"'Tis true He calls to us often
To tack, and tack again:
But when harbor is entered with shining sail
We see 'twas not all in vain!"

The sunset colors faded,
The tide flowed steadily still,
Bearing away in its restless grasp
The seaweed and shells at will;

But the ship rode safe in the harbor,
Its white wings folded down:
While the strong, sweet breeze from over the hills
Swept out thro' the quiet town.

No sail to be seen on the ocean
All was peaceful and still;
But I'd learned a lesson grave and true
That evening under the hill!

Do You Know Jesus?

"He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments is a liar, and the truth is not in him." 1 John ii. 4.

The above is a question which may involve more than that which appears on the surface. It means something to know Jesus, "In whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." Col. ii. 3.

The Queen of Sheba was amazed at the wisdom of king Solomon, of whom she affirmed that the half had never been told. But only think of it, in King Jesus, "are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge." He is the personification of "wisdom and knowledge," in him it has reached perfection. He is wisdom's depository which may be drawn upon by those who know Jesus.

To know Jesus signifies more than a passing acquaintance, or to simply know of him. It carries with it the thought of familiar association and friendship; and where that relationship exists, the individual so favored knows him, and can intelligently testify about him, and such testimony is reliable, because of previous knowledge.

There is another fact that is well to bear in memory, and that is, those who know him the best, trust him the most. And those who know and trust Christ delight to herald the praise of his glory. Paul says, "that we should be to the praise of his glory, who first trusted in Christ." Now, when does this implicit trust begin to be exercised? See Eph. i. 13: "In whom ye also trusted after that ye heard the Word of truth, the gospel of your salvation; in whom also, after that ye believed, ye were sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise." We certainly cannot fail to perceive from this Scripture, that our trust and sealing takes place "after" hearing and believing," the Word of truth the gospel of your salvation." The "sealed" ones recognize the familiar voice of Jesus in this grand message which he proclaimed as he traveled over the hills and vales of Judea, they say: "it sounds just like him." The message we sometimes hear about the preparation of immortal souls to inherit a sky-kingdom, sounds strange in the ears of the "sealed" ones, they cannot recognize the voice of Jesus in it. Being so familiar with his voice, they say: "it don't sound like him, it cannot be his voice. "A stranger (from the covenants of promise) will they not follow, but will flee from him: for they know not the voice of strangers," it does not resemble the voice of Jesus, which they know so well.

To know Jesus implies mutual recognition. Says Jesus: "My sheep hear my voice, (give heed to his teaching) and I know them, and they follow me: and I give unto them eternal life, (those who know not Jesus' voice profess to possess present immortality) and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand." "The sheep follow him, for they know his voice."

When the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven many will profess to know Jesus, but the recognition will not be mutual. "Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied (taught a false gospel) in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? (out of others, but not out of themselves) and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity." Some may profess to know Jesus, but to know him aright, is quite another thing. All such, says Jesus: "hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me"—cease to "work iniquity." He says with regard to all who "hear my voice"—believe, or give heed to my teachings—and then "follow me"—cease to "work iniquity," and obey me,—"I know them." But all who simply profess to know him, and under cover of profession "work iniquity," it will be of no use "in that day," to plead "wonderful works," for he will say, "I never knew you."

God has given Jesus, "power over all flesh that he should give eternal life to as many as thou hast given him. And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." A knowledge of Jesus necessarily involves a knowledge of God, they are inseparable, a knowledge of one cannot be attained without knowing the other, Jesus says, "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me. If ye had known me ye should have known my Father also." It is not possible for any one to reach, or be accepted by the Father, except he come to the Father through the Son. The Son will recognize only those who hear his "voice," and "follow" him. To hear his voice, is to give attention to the words his voice gave expression to. Paul speaking of the message manuscripted by his voice says: "Continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard." He says I am "the life." "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: and I give unto them eternal life." Now, it is certain, the way to "eternal life" which he gives those who hear his "voice" is through "the hope of the gospel which ye have heard" his voice proclaim. This is certain. His voice proclaimed the following message, and attached life and death to its acceptance and rejection: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel (you have heard me preach) to every creature, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not, shall be damned." These are the words of life voiced by the divine Son of God, and "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me; and I give unto them eternal life; (shall be saved) and they shall never perish," but all who will not hear Jesus' life-giving words—"believeth and is baptized," he himself pronounces the dreadful sentence: "shall be damned."

Alas! it is a sad fact that hundreds of thousands of those who profess to know Jesus deliberately take the liberty to strike from his life-giving message the words: "and is baptized." Tell me, do such hear or give heed to his "voice?" Do they know Jesus? They may profess to, and may say to him when he appears in glory: "Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?" They have done all this, and still be unsaved, because they did not "hear" his "voice," or give heed to the message of life his voice proclaimed, but substituted their own in its place. I fear he will class them with workers of iniquity, because they disobey him themselves and teach others that it is not necessary to avail themselves of his divinely appointed way for the pardon of iniquity. They may profess to know Jesus, but the real vital point is, will he know them? "Then will I profess unto them, I never knew you, depart from me ye that work iniquity." And certainly it is a work of iniquity to blind the eyes of others as to the necessity of complying with his own divinely appointed plan for the pardon of sin. It is a very serious matter indeed.

It is of a truth, a necessity to know Jesus, and the real vital point to each of us personally, is: How can I be assured that I know Jesus? See 1 John ii. 3, 4: "Hereby we do know that we know him, if we keep his commandments." To obey his command to believe and be baptized, is to start right, it is the birth-place of the Christ-life, it is from this point he commences a life of obedience to whatsoever he has commanded, and follows wherever he may lead. It is from this point that a life of obedience will count to his personal advantage in the life to come. "We do know that we know him if we keep his commandments" There is no room for doubt here.

See verse four: He that saith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments is a liar, and the truth is not in him." A liar is an untruthful person. And a person who affirms that he knows Jesus, and at the same time lives in open disobedience to his commands does not speak truthfully, and besides this "the truth is not in him," that is "the Word of truth, the gospel of your salvation."

"If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God." This knowledge is conditioned on doing his will, or keeping his commandments. If the commands are not kept it is clear evidence that a saving conviction of the truth is not in him. Jesus says: "Every one that is of the truth, heareth my voice." "Oh, that thou hadst hearkened unto my commandments! then had thy peace been as a river."

Oh, blessed gospel of peace! her ways are truly ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace. She is a tree of life to them that lay hold upon her. O peaceful messenger of a joyous and tranquil life. Her right hand carries an olive branch, the symbol and emblem of quietness. She hath the face of a glorious angel, always looking towards righteousness, as the two cherubims looked upon each other and both unto the mercy seat. What is the knowledge of Christ worth to you? What value do you place upon it? Are you willing to sacrifice to obtain it? Its value can only be measured by the results which can be attained through its possession. I would that we could all realize the richness of such knowledge as expressed in the following language of the apostle Paul: "But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ Yea doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord: for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ, And be found in him, not having mine own righteousness, which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith: That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death; If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead."

There can be nothing so desirable as to "know him, and the power of his resurrection." "The power of his resurrection can never be known unless we first know Jesus. Yes, have a positive assurance that he really knows him, and also that Jesus knows you. To some who profess to know him, he will say: "I never knew you."

None can ever experience "the power of his resurrection," unless they experience a prior resurrection described in Rom. vi. 3-6: "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection."

God grant that all who have not a saving knowledge of Jesus may never rest until it is found. And having attained it, seek at once an opportunity to be planted together in the likeness of his death that we may be also in the likeness of his resurrection."

W. H. Wilson.

First Epistle to Korinthios. Chap. 8.

1. Now concerning idolatrous practices we know that we all have comprehension. The comprehension puffeth up, but the love edifieth.

2. If any one thinketh that he hath comprehended anything, not yet hath he comprehended even as he ought to have comprehended.

3. But if any one loveth God this one hath been comprehended by him (God).

4. Concerning the eating them of the idolatrous offerings, we know that an idol is nothing in a cosmos (a harmonic order of things) and that there is no God (disposer) except one.

5. Yea if there be those called gods (disposers) whether in the heavens or upon earth, even as there are gods (disposers) many and lords many;

6. Yet for us (Christians) there is one God the Father, of whom (out from) are all things and we for (into) him, and one Lord Jesous Christos through (mediatorially) whom are all things and we through him.

7. But not in all is the comprehension; and some in their familiarity with an idol until this very time are eating it (the offering) as though an idolatrous thing, and their conscious knowledge being weak is polluted.

8. But food will not commend us to God; nor if we do not eat do we deprive ourselves, nor if we eat do we abound.

9. Look out lest somehow this your official-power may have become a stumbling-block to the weak.

10. For if any one shall have seen thee who hath comprehension reclining in an idolatrous place, will not the conscious-knowledge of this one which is weak have been built up to eat the idolatrous offerings?

11. And the one who is weak is being destroyed by thy comprehension, the brother namely for whose sake Christ died?

12. And in this wise sinning towards the brethren and smiting their conscious-knowledge which is weak ye are sinning towards Christ.

13. Wherefore if food cause my brother to stumble, I may not eat flesh forever (as long as I live, though the phrase is in the aion) that I may not cause my brother to stumble.

CHAP. 9TH.

1. Am I not a freeman? Am I not an apostle? Have I not seen Jesous our Lord? Are ye not my work in the Lord?

2. If to others I am an apostle, yet to you I am; for the seal of my apostleship are ye in the Lord.

3. My defensive argument to those who criticise me is this.

4. Have we not official-power to eat and to drink?

5. Have we not official-power to lead about a sister or a wife, as do also the rest of the apostles and the brothers of the Lord and Kephas?

6. Or have I alone and Barnabas official-power not to use it?

7. Who ever engageth in warfare at his own expense? Who planteth a vineyard and doth not eat the fruit thereof? Or who shepherdeth a flock and doth not eat of the milk of the flock?

8. Am I talking these things as a man merely? Or doth not the law also say these things?

9. For in the law of Mouses it hath been written. Thou shalt not muzzle the ox who treadeth a threshing-floor.

10. Is God's care for the oxen? Or is it for our sakes entirely that he is speaking? For for our sakes was it written, that the one who plougheth ought to plough in hope, and the one who thresheth ought to participate in hope.

11. If we have sown for you the spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap your carnal things?

12. If others are sharing in your official-power shall not we the more? But we have not used this official-power; on the other hand we are covering everything that we may not give any hindrance to the gospel of the Christ.

13. Know ye not that those who perform the temple services, are accustomed to eat from the temple? That those who are seated beside the altar take their portions in distribution with the altar?

14. And in this wise hath the Lord directed those who declare the gospel to live off of the gospel.

15. But I myself have not used any of these things; and I have not written this that it might occur in this wise unto me: for it were a good thing rather for me to die than that any should make void my boast.

16. For if I am announcing the good-tidings it is nothing for me to boast of, for a necessity is incumbent upon me; yea woe is me, if I do not announce the good-tidings;

17. If though I do this willingly I have wages; and if not willingly I am entrusted with a stewardship.

18. What then are my wages? That in announcing the good-tidings I may dispose the gospel buyishly without using to the fullest extent my official-power in the gospel.

19. For although free from all I have made myself a bond-servant of all that I might gain the more.

20. And to the Joudaians I have become a Joudaian that I might gain Joudaians; to those under law though I am not under law, as though I was under law, that I might gain those under law;

21. To those without Law as though I was without law, though not without God's law, but in Christ's law, that I might gain those without law.

22. To the weak have I become weak that I might gain the weak: To all I have become all things that in every way I might save some.

23. But I am doing everything for the gospel's sake that I may have become its co-partner.

24. Know ye not that those who run in a race-course all run? But one taketh the prize? In this wise run ye that ye may have attained.

25. And every one who contesteth disciplineth himself in every way: those then that they may take a corruptible crown (garland-crown), but we an incorruptible.

26. I myself then am running in this wise not as in an uncertain way (as to the result he means). In this wise am I boxing, not as though flaying the air; but I am severely disciplining my body and bringing it into bond-service, lest somehow when I have heralded to others, I myself may have become rejected when tested

CHAP. 10.

1. For I would not have you ignorant, brethren, that all our fathers were beneath the cloud and all passed through the sea,

2. And all were baptized into Mouses in the cloud and in the sea,

3. And all were eating the same spiritual food,

4. And all were drinking the same spiritual drink. For they were drinking of a spiritual rock that followed them; and the rock was the Christ.

5. But not with the majority of them was God satisfied. For they were strown along in the wilderness.

6. And these things occurred as types for us, to the end that we should not be inordinate desirers of evil things, even as they inordinately desired.

7. Nor do ye become idolaters even as some of them just as it hath been written; the laity sat down to eat and to drink and arose to make sport:

8. Nor let us commit fornication even as some of them committed fornication and fell in one day twenty-three thousand of them.

9. Nor let us test the Lord even as some of them tested and were destroyed by the serpents:

10. Nor murmur ye even as some of them murmured and were destroyed by the destroyer:

11. Moreover all these things occurred to them in a typical way, and have been written for our nurture, for us namely unto whom the ends of the ointimate ages have come.

12. So then let him who thinketh that he standeth see to it lest he fall.

13. No temptation hath laid hold of us except a human one and God is faithful and he will not allow us to be tempted beyond our ability, but will make along with the temptation (or trial) a way of escape in enabling us to endure it.

14. Wherefore, my beloved ones, flee from idolatry.

15 I am speaking as unto thoughtful ones. Judge ye what I say.

16. The cup of the praise which we commend is it not a common participation in the blood of the Christ? The loaf of bread which we break is it not a common participation in the body of the Christ?

17. Because one loaf, we the many are one body; for we all partake of the one loaf.

18. Look at Israel according to flesh: Are not all those who eat the sacrifices common partakers of the altar? (or the altar's partners)

19. What then do I say? That an idolatrous offering is anything? (no.)

20. But that what the nations are sacrificing, they are sacrificing to demons and not to a god, and I would not have you become partners of the demons.

21. Ye cannot drink the Lord's cup and a cup of demons; ye cannot partake of the Lord's table and the demon's table.

22. Or shall we provoke the Lord to zeal? Are we stronger than he?

23. All things are possible; but all things are not advantageous; all things are possible, but all things do not edify.

24. Let no one seek his own interest but that of the other.

25. Eat any thing that is being sold in a meat-market, discriminating in no respect for your conscious-knowledge's sake:

26. For the earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof.

27. If any one of the unfaithful invite you, and ye desire to go your way, eat anything set beside you, discriminating in no respect for your conscious knowledge's sake.

28. But if any one shall have said to you, this is an idolatrous offering; eat it not for the sake of the one who informed you and for the conscious knowledge's sake.

29. Conscious knowledge I say, though not your own, but the other's (conscious knowledge;) for why is my liberty being judged by an alien conscious-knowledge?

30. If I am partaking with gratitude why am I being blasphemed for what I am thankful?

31. Whether then ye eat or drink or do any thing, do them all for God's glory.

32. Become not stumbling-blocks to Joudaians and Greeks and the church of God;

33. Even as I also am pleasing in all respects to all men, not seeking my own advantage, but that of the many, that they may have been saved.

The Telephone in Europe.

Berlin and Vienna were connected by telephone hardly a month ago and already there is business enough to need another line. The line has been connected with Trieste at one end and Hamburg at the other, making a total length of nearly 900 miles. It is expected that Hamburg will soon be connected with Copenhagen, which is joined to the Swedish system, extending 850 miles north, when it will be possible for Northern Sweden and Southern Austria to communicate by telephone.

The students of the University of North Carolina, at Raleigh, have finally agreed among themselves to discontinue hazing.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION reverences the final restoration of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means by this end the exalted manifestation of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with the Church of Jesus at once, and the universal coming to power with him in the glorious age of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the inauguration of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

READER, however much good you may do, you may be sure that none of it will be done in vain, although the effects may not now be seen.

A LETTER from Bro. I. Foore tells us that he starts for Tempe, Arizona, Feb. 25, where he may be addressed for the next 2? days in care of C. A. Saylor.

WHEREVER there is authority there is a natural inclination to disobedience. It was so with our first parents, and it has been so with all their descendants.

HE that would know the falseness and deceitfulness of sin must compare what it promises with what it pays. It promises life and pleasure and profit, but the wages it pays are death and destruction.

IT has been said that infants count by minutes; children by days; men by year; planets by revolutions of ages; stars by revolutions of systems; the Eternal meditates in a perpetual present. What an impressive thought!

IN Heb. v. 14, we are told that "strong meat belongs to them that are of full age, even to those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil. We think few people are aware how much a habit of thought creates a power for thought!

A SCOTCH ferryman once stopped his boat in the middle of a broad stream, and pulled the right hand oar alone. The boat went round and round again, but advanced not an inch. "This," said he, "is faith." He took the left hand oar and pulled on that; the boat went round and round as before. "This," said he "is works." He took both oars, and with his lusty sinews in full play, how the boat flew which said he "is faith and works."

THE intellectual world in its many departments good and bad, is governed by alliances, confederations, associations or unions, and each compact has its test by which to decide who is qualified for admission into the fraternity. But oh, reader, have you become acquainted with the test of admission into God's household? If not we say to you, it is faith in the gospel of Christ that works by love purifies the heart and produces obedience.

THE correspondent who quotes Dan. xii. 7, and then asks, "Do you think the holy people will be scattered?" is evidently mistaken as to the holy people referred to. They are the people of Israel, whose power has been scattered, broken, or dispersed for near 2000 years. The end of this dispersion is at hand. They are to be gathered to their own land, a great future awaits them; they will become a more powerful and holy people than they ever have been, when the Lord reigns over them in Zion before his ancients gloriously.

THE great purpose of God as revealed in his Word relative to man in this life, ever has been, to so change his character as to qualify him for a change of nature a change from the human to the divine, everliving nature at the resurrection of the just, that he may live forever in his kingdom. This grand object stands out in bold relief above all other objects in all the teachings, promises, admonitions, entreaties, warnings and fearful threatenings throughout the Scriptures of truth; and those who have heeded the same will receive the approbation of God while those who disregard his merciful call will experience his displeasure. When we reflect that we are offered a share of divine nature of existence, it is astounding that men and women by thousands do not haste to accept it, why will they die? Why will they incur the wrath of that God who gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him might not perish but have everlasting life?

"THE grand essentials to happiness in this life, are—something to do, something to love, and something to hope for: and nothing is more certain to preserve the balance of the mental faculties, than an earnest, practical, conviction of the truths of the Gospel."

Saved by Law or Gospel Which? No. 14.

IN previous numbers we have shown that the seventh day sabbath is made the cornerstone of the community styling themselves "Seventh-Day-Adventists." They get their name out of that idea; and not only so, but all who "keep" the first day are said to stamp themselves with the mark of the beast. This community claims to teach the truth respecting man's nature and that therefore all who do not believe the record God has given of his Son, which is that eternal life is only in his Son, 1 John v. 10-12, make God a liar. The Catholics are said to have set aside the law of the sabbath of the Lord and substituted the first day of the week, and for this reason all their efforts are directed against Catholicism. A whole bundle of their papers are before us, and not a word do we find against that BAD for by the doctrine promulgated by Pope Leo the XIth, making man by nature immortal. No fault is found with Protestant churches for making God a liar by claiming an imperishable existence apart from the Son of God, but if they abstain from business or labor on the first day of the week they have the mark of the beast, in the face of the positive command of God that no one is permitted to judge Christians in regard to meat, or drink, or holy days, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath. Col. iii. 16, 17. If words mean anything the utmost liberty is granted here, and if a man in the Christ should see fit to set apart three days a week from his usual occupations, for reading, meditation, prayer and praise it would be nobody's business. Of course one instructed in the truth as it is in Jesus would never think of connecting any days he may set apart for religious purposes with the law graven on stones, since those ordinances have been blotted out, and

MAKING GOD A LIAR

NAILED TO THE CROSS.

He can have as many rest days as he please, but his "voluntary humility" will entitle him to no recompense from God, because he has not required it of him. Those who have in the past written in THE RESTITUTION in advocacy of the seventh day sabbath, have argued as if against Presbyterians and Methodists or other popular churches who teach that the first day of the week is to be observed instead of the seventh. Positively there is no divine warrant for this, and such arguments as those should be addressed to those who believe that the law of the fourth commandment now applies to the first day of the week,—

WE DO NOT.

We now wish our readers to turn their attention once more to 2 Cor. iii. 7-9 and see that what was engraven in stones was a ministration of death. It could not give life; (2 Cor. iii. 7) the life giving covenant had existed 430 years before this ministration of death was inaugurated; and we have the apostolic Word for it in Gal. iii. 17 that this ministration of death did not make void the life-giving covenant, so that it was in operation all through the existence of the law, and it entitled the believer to life. It was its function, to give a

TITLE TO FUTURE LIFE

before there was any law and during the existence of the law, and that is its function still, 1800 years after the law expired by statute of limitation. Yes; it is by means of these same exceeding great and precious promises we expect to be made partakers of Divine Nature. The law was added for another purpose. The covenants as we have seen, being were competent to impart the hope of life, it was added because of transgressions on the part of Abraham's multitudinous descendants, who could not be held on the principle of faith and obedience; and only

AN ARBITRARY LAW

would enable Abraham's seed, two thousand years ahead to be born according to promise. Intermixture with Gentiles would have prostrated God's purpose; the law prevented this. The Scripture in hand calls the ten commandments engraven on stones, "a ministration of death, (that is to those who broke the law) although it was inaugurated gloriously, so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance, which (ministration) was to be done away. "How shall not the ministration of the Spirit be rather glorious? For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the exceed in glory. . . . For if that which is done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious." Candidly, what was done away? The Spirit's answer is, THE MINISTRATION OF DEATH engraven on stones was done away. It is possible to get no other answer from the Spirit's Word before us. Well, the administration of death graven on stones being done away (v. 11), what remains? What is it that exceeds in glory the administration of death? Answer the administration of righteousness, v. 9, which is the administration of the Spirit, v. 8. The added law being done away the ministration of right-ousness remains. This hath preceded and survives the law. It is justification or righteousness by faith just as it was before the law; this is the ministration that REMAINS after the law is done away. No plainer truth is revealed in the New Testament.

MINISTRATION OF RIGHTEOUSNESS

A GLORIOUS MINISTRATION" is superceded by a more glorious ministration. The first was based upon the ten commandments engraven in stones and other laws—the other is based upon oath-confirmed covenants made 430 years before the commandments. Let the honest reader reflect that the apostles and elders at Jerusalem forbade Christians being circumcised and keeping the law. They wrote thus, of the attempt of Judaizers to compel Gentile converts to keep holy the seventh day as being part of the law:—"We have heard that certain who went out from us have troubled you with words, subverting your souls, saying, 'Be circumcised, and keep the law,' to whom we gave

NO SUCH COMMANDMENT.

Acts xv. 24-29. Here we are at apostolic headquarters, and shall soon know what the unanimous mind of that Body was in reference to the law. We know they had neither commanded Gentile believers to be circumcised, nor to keep the law. Singularly remiss were they if our sabbatarians be correct. Happily the discussion came up at the right time to have it apostolically settled; and here is the judgment of that court handed down to us. "It seemed good unto us, being assembled with one accord, to send chosen men unto you with our beloved Barnabas and Paul,—men who have hazarded their lives for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. . . . . For it seemed good to the Holy Spirit and to us to lay upon you no greater burden than

THESE NECESSARY THINGS:

[now we reach the point,—here follow the necessary things.] That ye abstain from meats offered to idols, and from blood, and from things strangled, and from fornication; from which if ye keep yourselves, ye shall do well. Fare ye well. Put it down, there is no sabbath in it. Here we have a unanimous verdict,—a double verdict. They did not command Gentile believers to be circumcised nor to keep the law. 2ndly They, conjointly with the Holy Spirit did command what was necessary, viz. abstinence from meat offered to idols, blood and strangled things, and fornication. How dare uninspired men 1800 years later lay on greater burdens than the Spirit imposed? It was Constantine, who first compelled the observance of the first day religiously in honor of the day on which Christ rose from the dead. This was in the year 328. We know he was

CATERING TO THE CHRISTIANS

of his time, and this public act of his would lead to the conclusion that great as their declension had been, they had kept up the early practice of breaking bread on the first day of the week; and a Judaizing clergy soon connected it with the fourth commandment. In this connection we suggest that in the dispensation of the fulness of times,—when Jewish times are re-established under the great King, the sabbath may be celebrated on the eighth day, or what we call the first day, instead of the seventh. Ezek. xliii. 27, speaking of the temple, priests and altar shows that seven days will be occupied with cleansings and consecrations, "And when these days are expired," it says, "it shall be that upon the eighth day and the priests shall make your burnt offerings upon the altar, and peace offerings, and I will accept you saith the Lord God." If this be correct the day of Christ's resurrection will be the sabbath of that age.

SO FORWARD

We were requested by a correspondent some time since to show what the commandments are which Christians are to obey,—some of these will appear in our next number if the Lord will Higher Criticism.

LAST week we made a statement concerning the truth of which abundant proof is by no means lacking. It was in substance this: that the so-called discoveries of modern critics are but the re-stating of certain infidel arguments which have long been before the public. In proof of this, we quoted some things from Dr. Lorimer's latest volume. It seems to us that a recent incident which is given in the last issue of the Truth, edited by Dr. James H. Brookes, furnishes proof along this line. It relates to the recent meeting of the "Baptist Congress," held in the city of Detroit, and is as follows:

"President Harper and President Andrews, of Brown University, with others had been advocating the methods of modern Higher Criticism, and saying that the last twenty-seven chapters of Isaiah were written by some other men. when Prof. Howard Osgood, of Rochester, arose to reply. He spoke briefly, completely answered the Higher Critics, and then said, 'I have here an article, written almost exactly one hundred years ago. I will read it, and then tell you the name of the author.' He read a criticism on the Bible, and especially on Isai h, advocating adouble authorship of the latter, in almost exactly the language of Harper and his friends. He made a few comments upon the clearness of the ideas of the author, and showed his teachings to be identical with modern Higher Criticism. He then exclaimed, after a long pause, 'The author of this paper was Thomas Paine.' The effect was wonderful. There was a look of surprise on the faces of the critics, and then, as the applause rang out, they looked as though they would like to escape."

And yet these learned (?) men did not know that they were proclaiming the infidelity of Tom Paine! And so they lost the glory of being the original discoverers of the dangerous doctrines which they had been declaring. They were willing enough to be regarded as scholars, but they were ashamed to be found in Tom Paine's company. And we do not wonder. But the surest way to get rid of him is to stop preaching his pernicious doctrines, which doctrines he renounced before his death. It would be an excellent thing if Harper, Andrews, and their associates would imitate his example in this respect.

The devil is not a very original fellow. He simply puts a new dress upon an old heresy, and puts it out as a new discovery. And if he can get some person of prominence to hold it up to the world, he is greatly pleased. This masquerading, which is an attempt to deceive the people, should be a warning. It would seem as if the repeating of old theories which have been again and again shown to be false, should be regarded as a significant sign of the times.

Dr. Lorimer has truly said (we are quoting from his recent work): "Liberality is the keynote of the campaign. Time was when all religions were dealt with on the assumption that they were equally false and fraudulent; but now the disposition is to regard them as equally true, though of varying degrees of merits. We have reached the drawing-room stage in the history of Apologetics. Evening dress and gloves are now in order. Politeness and compliments are more in demand than facts and arguments. . . . Like the executioner, to adopt a comparison suggested by an Englishman, who bowed before Charles I., kissed his hand, and begged pardon for undertaking the unpleasant business in which he was engaged, but nevertheless beheaded him just the same, so now, on the close of the nineteenth century, infidelity wearing a mask and uttering courtly words is sharpening the axe, and will not be slow to cut off the head of Christi nity when the suspicious moment arrives."

Brethren, let us not be deceived by the fair words of the enemies of the truth, but let us at all times remain loyal to the Word of God. —Herald of the Coming One.

Benefits of Christ's Death.

"For even Christ our passover is sacrificed (slain) for us." 1 Cor. v. 7.

In sustaining the essential benefit to be derived from Christ's death in our salvation I would offer the following Scripture quotations.

Said Paul, Rom. iv. 25, "He was delivered for our offences and was raised again for our justification." Again in Rom. v. 8-10, he said, "For when we were yet without strength in due time Christ died for the ungodly, for scarcely for a righteous man will one die, yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die. But God commendeth his love toward us in that while we were yet sinners Christ died for us. Much more then being justified by his blood we shall be saved from wrath through him. For if when we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son. Much more being reconciled we shall be saved by his life."

In Eph. i. 7, he said, "We have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins according to the riches of his grace." Eph. ii. 13, "But now in Christ Jesus, ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ."

Col. i. 20. "And having made peace through the blood of his cross by him to reconcile all things unto himself, by him, I say whether they be things in earth or things in heaven. And you that were sometimes alienated and enemies in your mind by wicked works yet now hath he reconciled in the body of his flesh through death to present you holy and unblameable and unreprovable in his sight."

Said Peter i. 18, 19, "Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things as silver and gold from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers, but with the precious blood of Christ as of a lamb without blemish and without spot."

Peter iii. 18, "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh but quickened by the Spirit."

1 John i. 7, "But if we walk in the light as he is in the light we have fellowship one with another and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."

1 John ii. 2, "And if any man sin we have an advocate with the Father Jesus Christ the Righteous, and he is the propitiation for our sins and not for us only but also for the sins of the whole world."

1 John iv. 10, "Herein is love, not that we loved God but that he loved us and sent his son to be the propitiation for our sins."

The Savior himself said as recorded by Matt. xxvi. 28, after taking the cup and giving thanks he gave it to his disciples and said, drink ye all of it for this is my blood of the New Testament which is shed for many for the remission of sins."

Matt. xx. 28, "that he came not to be ministered unto but to minister unto and to give his life a ransom for many."

Paul said to Titus in 2nd chapter 14th verse "He gave himself for us that he might redeem us from all iniquity, etc."

Heb. ix. 13, 14, "For if the blood of bulls and of goats and the ashes of an heifer sprinkling the unclean sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh, how much more shall the blood of Christ who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God."

Heb. x. 10, "By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all." 12th verse, "But this man after he had offered one sacrifice for sins forever, sat down on the right hand of God, from henceforth expecting till his enemies be made his footstool, and Paul says in chapter ix. 28, "That unto them that look for him he will appear the second time without a sin-offering unto their salvation."

Paul considered the death and resurrection of Christ a matter of such great importance that he said in his declaration of the gospel to the Corinthian brethren that he "delivered to them first of all that which he also believed himself, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures was buried and rose again the third day according to the Scriptures".

Rom. iii. 23-26 shows us briefly how we can obtain that redemption which is in Christ Jesus and well will it be for us if we are willing to accept of it on the conditions God proposes to give it.

I will report what Paul says about it in the above reference. He says, "For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God, being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, whom God hath set forth to be the propitiation (mercy-seat) through faith in his blood to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God. To declare, I say at this time his righteousness that he might be just and the justifier of him which believeth in Jesus." And Jesus himself said in harmony with this, "That God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life."

John i. 29. "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world," and in the Book of Revelation he is represented as a Lamb slain from the foundation of the world and whose blood speaketh better things than that of Abel.

In Rev. v. 9, 10 it is said of him "Thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof, for thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and nation, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth." That great company spoken of in Rev. vii. 9, 10, are said to have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

In conclusion, I would say with Paul, "Thanks be to God for the unspeakable gift," and may I ever be willing to accept of the Blessed Savior as he is presented to me in the Scriptures of truth. Amen.

Further Report of Labors.

The elder reached home from Argos about Jan. 10th, and after a week of rest, we lock our doors and again take to the road. We both start from home Jan. 19th at 8 o'clock A. M., separating in Grand Rapids, he goes to Vicksburg and I to McBride, Montcalm Co., where he meets me on the following Tuesday. Here we remain for a week only, strengthening the things that remain and sowing the seeds of truth awaiting God's own good time to bring forth the increase. Bro. and Sister Boice are doing good work here in their quiet, earnest way. There is much prejudices to overcome at this point, many silently saying what one person ventured to express, "I wouldn't believe that doctrine if I knew every word of it was Bible." God pity them, they little realize they are fighting against God's own words.

From here we go to Millbrook on Saturday 26th, reaching there in a blinding snow storm, roads badly drifted, and thermometer settling until it reaches from 14 to 26 degrees. Within 1½ miles of us it was reported 28 and 30 degrees for two days, but in spite of cold and snow and wind the congregations are good and interest splendid, and after one week's preaching 7 persons make the good confession and desire baptism. Accordingly on Monday morning 12 degrees below zero, a sleigh load of dear ones, weary, of sin, drive to Bro. L. Deckers, where a few rods from his house lay a beautiful sheet of water. The burial place was prepared by cutting away the ice which was 21 inches thick and we drove to the water's edge, where each obedient one could step out of the watery grave into warm robes and quilts and he quickly driven to the house, by so doing all danger of taking cold was avoided, and all were at the evening meeting rejoicing in their Savior's love. One of these dear ones was nearly 70 years of age and he said to me in the evening, "I only regret that I was not buried many years ago." (Since we left there he has been out to the meetings, greatly rejoicing in God's love, and to-night a letter from there tells me the startling news, he suddenly fell asleep in Jesus, on the 18th, not three weeks since he accepted Christ. It was his last chance and he accepted it, "praise the Lord.") We staid here four days longer, and every morning the elder led one down into the water until 10 had been obedient to mercy's call. We are so glad to report of this church that they are a devoted, prayerful people, and we did not have to work a week to convert the church for they are all at work every day. Every brother's house we visited we found the Bible often used, the family altar established, the thank-offering given before each meal. O what an impetus for earnest work to the evangelist when the fervent prayer ascends from consecrated lives for God's help upon the work. A sister Grote had been in the neighborhood visiting and praying from house to house, and holding evening meetings for 4 or 5 days previous to our coming, she remained several days after we reached there and we learned from her that she had been a life-long Methodist until within two years she learned of "life only in Christ," and the soon coming of the King, and is now trying to undo years of work she says she did wrong. She has been working as a Methodist home missionary for many years, and says she nearly went crazy when she found she had been teaching a false hope. She is about 60 years of age and is a very earnest worker; and so Paul may plant and Apollus water, but God alone can give the increase. Sister Grote has herself baptized over 40 persons in Northern Michigan this winter.

"God moves in a mysterious way.
His wonders to perform."

We left Millbrook Feb. 7th, going to Byron where we had sent an appointment, but the cold was so severe, roads so badly drifted, that it was impossible to have meetings until more settled weather. May God keep all the dear ones sheltered in his love until he shall come to claim his own is our prayer. Yours in his name.

Silent Steps.

Unheeded all, the silent Hours
Pass outward, one by one;
So much amid the Past we love,
Or castles of To Come, we move.
We scarcely deem the Present ours,
Until, perchance, 'tis gone;
Gone with its record, dark or fair—
For all life's deeds are written there.

In silence, but the hurrying Years
Pass outward, one by one;
We almost deem Time's silver sands
Are lying idle in our hands
Though clothed here and there with tears—
Until they, too, are flown;
Ay, furrowed brow and frosted hair
Tell how the Years are passing there.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 7.

JACOB ADOPTS THE SONS OF JOSEPH.

Jacob had lived in the land of Egypt seventeen years. He was one hundred and forty-seven years old and feeble and blind.

He felt that his time had come to die, but you never read of death quite like this. It almost brought the tears to my eyes to-night as I went over the story again.

Isaac was one hundred and eighty years old when he died. He had blessed his sons twenty years before, when already blind. You remember how it was,—that Esau had sold his birthright to Jacob, and that the latter received the blessing that would have been Esau's? It may have troubled you as it used to trouble me.

But look here, when a man sold his birthright, he sold everything that belonged to it. It was just the same as if Esau and Jacob had changed places and names. Esau was no longer Esau the first-born, he was Jacob, the younger. He had despised his glorious birthright with all its blessings and privileges had sold it for a poor mess of pottage, and it was gone forever.

This pottage, or soup, was made from lentiles, the seeds of a plant that belongs to the bean family. It has small prettily-veined flowers and seeds, of a tawny red color. The people of eastern countries make this pottage still. They add a little suet for flavoring.

Paul, calls Esau "A profane person because he sold his birthright. It was making merchandise of a holy gift that was from God. The power to foretell coming events; the right to stand at the heavenly altar and make sacrifices for the atonement of sin; the double portion, (one for the ruling office, and the other for the priestly,) that would be his inheritance from his father; the place of rulership:—all these he sold for a dinner of beans, and in selling this precious birthright from himself he sold it away from his sons forever. In going to Jacob it went to another nation for the ages of eternity.

The dear Savior, the birth-right Son-of God, that all these things pictured could never come from Esau's family now. His descendants could never be the chosen nation, the fenced-off people.

In the coming age the people of Jacob are to possess the lands of the children of Esau. (Read Obadiah.)

The mighty men of Esau are to be cut off. Only a remnant of the nation is to be left. Hosea ix. 12; Deut. xxiii. 7. We shall learn more about this by and by when we come to the oppression of the children of Israel in Egypt.

There are men now who are just like Esau. They have come into Christ, and the holy gifts of priesthood and rulership with double portions are to be their inheritance from God. Their names have been written with the names of the first-born in heaven, Heb. xii. 23, but a ruby cup of wine, or some paltry pleasure sparkles before them, they become hungry and faint in their desires for earthly good and "fall into the pot of pottage;" some other man takes their crown and their names are blotted out of the book of life, Rev. iii. 11; xx. 15; iii. 5. One man prizes what another despises. Jacob prized and desired the gifts of God, Esau held them of no account. He would soon die any way, and what would they amount to when he was dead? He was like the men in Paul's day who said, let us eat and drink for to-morrow we die." He saw no grand hereafter, no precious Savior, no recompense of reward.

But it was a fair and square trade, and when Jacob got by strategy the blessing of the first-born, he got what really belonged to him in the mind and purposes of God as the real Esau. This was prophetically foretold at the time of his birth when he received the name of Jacob, or "the supplanter." Rebekah knew that the elder would serve the younger, even before the children were born. This accounts for the greater love she had for Jacob. God had told her what was to be but Isaac had forgotten or disliked to disinherit the son of his heart.

But despite his wishes the prophetic blessing goes to Jacob; it is God's choice and not man's. The wild robber hunters of Mt. Seir would have been little fitted to bring about the restoration of a lost Eden.

How many things there are to think about and to look back over! It makes us wish that we could study all the time. It is such delightful work to dig into these mysteries, and link the histories of God's great men together.

But we must return to Egypt now. Joseph has visited his father and has promised to carry him back to the land of Canaan for burial. He goes away but tidings soon comes that Jacob is sick.

Taking his two sons Manasseh and Ephraim,—lads of perhaps eighteen and twenty years, Joseph hastens to his father's bedside.

See how the aged face brightens and how the aged frame thrills with new life when he finds that the first-born son of his first chosen wife has come! He strengthens himself and sits upon the bed and talks, oh so lovingly and tender. because this he knows will be their last interview together undisturbed by the presence of others. love speaks in priestly prophetic voice. It calls up precious words and blessings of other days, and sets them before Joseph's eyes as a valid reason for what he is now about to do.

"God Almighty appeared unto me" he says, "at Luz, in the land of Canaan, and blessed me, and said unto me, behold I will make thee fruitful and multiply thee, and I will make thee a multitude of people, and I will give this land to thy seed after thee for an everlasting possession. And now thy two sons Manasseh and Ephraim, which were born unto thee in Egypt before I came unto thee in Egypt, are mine, as Rueben and Simeon, they shall be mine. Whatever other children you may have shall be yours. As for me when I came from Padan Rachel died by me in the land of Canaan in the way, when there was but a little way to come unto Ephrath and I buried her there in the way of Ephrath, the same is Bethlehem."

He is giving the son one of the brightest and one of the saddest pictures of his life.

Joseph was only seventeen years of age when sold into Egypt. Jacob wishes to fix in his mind by this solemn rehearsal, the promise that had been made to him and to his children of a coming Redeemer, through whom they could live again, and enjoy the land as an everlasting possession. This promise of this blessed hope must never be forgotten.

This is the bright picture,—the death and burial of Joseph's mother is the sad one.

But what does Jacob mean when he says "Manasseh and Ephraim are mine?" I have adopted your sons for my sons? God intended that there should be thirteen tribes, so that the number would still be twelve after one of them,—the tribe of Levi, had been taken out for the priesthood.

If you will turn and read numbers iii. 41, 42; xviii. 2-6, you will see that the Levites were given to Aaron and to his sons (of the same tribe) for the service of the Lord, as a gift from the Lord, instead of the first-born of all the tribes.

There is more changing of birthrights here. Leah was the first-born daughter of Laban. Jacob had served seven years for Rachel, whom he loved and had chosen, but Leah was given to him in her stead. It was not the custom in Laban's country to give the younger daughter in marriage before the elder.

But if Laban thought that Leah's children would have the pre-eminence in Jacob's family he was mistaken, though her sons, and those of Bilha and Zilpah, were all born before the sons of Rachel.

Reuben sinned and his birthright was taken away and Joseph, 1 Chron. v. 1,—the firstborn of Rachel, takes the place of the first-born of Leah, the birthright of Rachel and Leah, and of Reuben and Joseph, have been changed. Rachel in Jacob's mind and in the mind of God is really the first wife.

Manasseh and Ephraim are now brought to the bedside of Jacob. They have been adopted as his first-born sons in place of Reuben and Simeon. He kisses and embraces them, rejoicing that he has seen not only Joseph's face but the faces of his children. The lads stand first in the family now and the first blessing prophetical of their future pre-eminence must be theirs. God sees the end from the beginning. and he knows that from these two children will spring two nations, the one great, the other with its colonies a multitude of nations.

They are placed so that the blessing of Jacob's right hand shall fall upon the head of Manasseh the elder son; and that of his left hand on the head of Ephraim, the younger son, but blind as he is, he reverses the blessing and the birthright, by crossing his hands. Joseph thinks it a mistake, and seeks to change the matter by changing his father's hands, saying, this is the first-born, place thy right hand upon his head, but the father refuses, replying, I know it my son, I know it; he also shall become a great people, (or nation,) but truly his younger brother shall be greater than he, and his seed shall grow into a multitude of nations.

"And he blessed Joseph and said God before whom my fathers Abraham and Isaac did walk, the God which fed me all my life long unto this day. The angel which redeemed me from all evils, bless the lads; and let my name be named on them, and the name of my fathers, Abraham and Isaac, and let them grow into a multitude in the midst of the earth." Here is the adoption,—Jacob's name is now their name, they have become, Ephraim—Israel, and Manasseh—Israel.

The Kingdom of God.

"Good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people."

Whenever I have the privilege of expressing myself before the world, or the sentiments of my heart in the presence of God's children either by speech, or in writing—there is one subject that is uppermost, and that takes precedence over all others: and that is the kingdom of God.

I wonder if any, who are of the faith, ever get impatient at seeing it so often spoken of and written about in our paper. I hope not, for if Jesus ever had what in this 19th century is called a hobby, it was that. When he began his mission in Galilee, the first and only thing that he preached was "the gospel of the kingdom of God." Mark i. 14. All through his ministry he taught it. He bore witness before Pontius Pilate concerning it, for which he was put to death, and the very last question the disciples asked him before he ascended to the right hand of the Father was, (Acts i. 6) "Lord wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" And while he did many wonderful works; yet he never neglected an opportunity to preach it, or teach some particular phase of it in parable or otherwise.

The very fact that God has promised to set up a kingdom at the closing up of this present dispensation, over which a "king shall reign in righteousness and princes shall rule in judgment, which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but shall break in pieces and consume all other kingdoms and stand for ever—over which Jesus the Anointed shall be King, ought to fill the heart of every believer with joy and gladness to full utterance.

It is glad tidings of good things to me, and if it is not to you, it is because you fail to comprehend the true significance of a kingdom founded upon principles of equity and justice, and whose king is not only righteous and holy, but wise above all other kings. And when we understand, by Holy Scripture that we poor, mortal, dying creatures, can actually obtain a share in the joys and glories of that kingdom, to which we are called simply by believing and obeying God—the news is too good almost to expect people to believe. And yet, we are not required to believe it without the very best of evidence: not asked to take anything for granted: nor any one man's word for it, but God has revealed it to us by his spirit, through holy men of God—prophets, apostles and Jesus Christ, to which he has borne witness both with signs and wonders and divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost according to his own will. Now don't get the idea from what I have said that I believe an inheritance in that kingdom can be earned, neither can it be purchased with gold or silver, nor with good works, but it is simply God's gracious gift to man, conditioned on faith and obedience. It is only as we believe in the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, that it becomes glad tidings to us. It is good news to the believer because it pertains to him and to him alone, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. Rom. i. 16.

Therefore, my heart rejoices in hope of the glory which shall be revealed in all God's saints at the revelation of Jesus Christ, for he said, "The glory which thou gavest me I have given them," and Peter adds, "When the chief Shepherd shall appear ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

Why do I rejoice? Because the God of heaven, whom we worship has made certain great and precious promises, and those promises apply to you and me—although not made directly to us, who are Gentiles. But Paul says we are made "fellow-heirs and of the same body; and partakers of his promise in Christ Jesus by the gospel. Eph. iii. 6. I believe that God is able and will fulfil every one of these promises; but they are conditional to us—if we fulfil the conditions; by these we are made partakers of the Divine nature, like unto Christ and the angels to die no more. Will not that be glorious? No more death, neither sorrow nor crying. Well, says one, what are those promises that so rejoices your heart? I too am rejoicing in hope of heaven, of a home at the right hand of God—a mansion in the skies, to this my title is perfectly clear. But are you sure of it? Have any of these things been promised you? Examine your title carefully. Get an abstract; note carefully the items,—"the earth and dwell therein forever," "the kingdom and the dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven." Gen. xvii. 8. "All the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession." This to Abraham and his seed, which Paul says is Christ. Gal. iii. 16. He also says, Gal. iii. 7, "Know ye therefore that they which are of faith, the same are the children of Abraham." 9th ver. So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham. So it is promised to Abraham, Christ, and they which are of faith "shall inherit the kingdom,"—not in heaven—but of heaven, "shall reign with Christ." "Reign on the earth," for Christ is to reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem and before his ancients gloriously." This is when he comes in his glory to judge and reward and recompense the righteous in the earth, much more the wicked and the sinner. If we have a clear title to anything, it is surely here on the earth, but thank God it is not to be as it is at present, but in its renewed, restored and glorious condition, and day by day we pray —thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. Yes, eternal life is included in those great and precious promises, for Paul said, Tit. i. 2, In hope of eternal life which God that cannot lie, promised before the world began. Not happiness which is a condition of that life, but length of days forever and ever.

Jesus came into the world to bring it to light through this same good news which we have been writing about. Hear him tell us how it is attained. John iii. 14. "For as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up—that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have eternal life; for God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." Here he lays down the law by which it is obtained—faith and by a patient continuance in well doing, and seeking after glory, honor and immortality.

There is no promise that is greater or more precious than this. We look for realization of that blessed hope at the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us that he might redeem us from all iniquity and purify unto himself a peculiar people zealous of good works. Paul says Rom. viii., "We are saved by hope; but hope that is seen is not hope, for what a man seeth why doth he yet hope for; but if we hope for that we see not then do we with patience wait for it." You see Paul was like Job, he expected to wait till the resurrection for his reward. He had no idea that he would reap his reward at death, as some modern teachers do, but said 1 Cor. xv. 13: "If there be no resurrection of the dead then is Christ not risen, And if Christ be not risen; then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. * * Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished. He expected it "at his appearing and kingdom," "shall give me at that day, and not to me only but unto all them that love his appearing." 2 Tim. iv. 1-8.

This same hope which Paul had is my hope, which was begotten within me by the gospel. Peter says to "sanctify the Lord God in your heart and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear." 1 Pet. iii. 15. The reason for my hope is the promises which we have been considering, which Christ came to confirm and seal with his blood. This is the gospel —the blood-sealed—the everlasting covenant. As I said before we must become Abraham's seed in order to become heirs of the promise, and the manner of doing this, is by getting into Christ. Repentance, faith and baptism into Christ. "Be buried with him by baptism into death." Be planted together in the likeness of his death. Rom. vi. 3, 4, 5. Gal. iii. 27, For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. * * Ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise. Having now put off the old man and put on the new, we become new "creatures in Christ Jesus." "For we are his workmanship created in Christ Jesus unto good works." How important then that the heart should yearn to work the works of him that hath called us out of darkness into the marvelous light and liberty of the sons of God. How important that we should have a knowledge of the kingdom of God, and of Jesus the Anointed, that we have a correct faith, a faith that comes by hearing the Word of God; and the disposition of mind and heart to obey it, that when the King comes in glory we might be among the number that shall be caught up in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so ever be with the Lord. May it be the lot of all who really love his appearing and kingdom, to be among the number, is my prayer.

WALKER PERRINE.

The Coming Government.

The following item cut from the Chicago Daily Record, is quite significant as showing that events now occurring point strongly toward the fulfillment of the prophetic Word.

"Some of the orthodox rabbis of the east are engaged in controversy as to the form and functions of the Jewish government after it shall be established in Palestine. One sanguine Jewish publication thinks that "these differences will help in keeping alive public interest, and the movement will be promoted by it."

This preliminary talk of leading Jews with regard to forming a Jewish government in Palestine," and particularly with regard to its "form and functions" on which point there is differences of opinion among them. They have perhaps, very little idea that the Prophetic Word has already indicated the kind of government they will eventually accept prior to their final acceptance of him who was "born King of the Jews."

Jesus said: "I am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not; if another shall come in his own name him will ye receive."

The Prophet Daniel has pointed out a person who "shall come in his own name," out of one of the four divisons of the Grecian Empire, "him will ye receive," and enter into a seven years covenant with him, and he will restore the temple sacrifices, possibly in the Mosque of Omar refitted by him as a temporary Jewish temple, and at the expiration of three and half years he will break his covenant with them, and "take away the daily sacrifice," and set himself up in this temple as God, and terribly persecute Israel; after which experience they will readily accept him who was born their King.

Watch coming events, and see if they will not point toward the working out of the above outline, which seems to me to be the line indicated by prophecy. I know other students differ somewhat with me. Keep your eye on that also. Coming events will very soon indicate the correct line.

The above quotation from the Daily Record, with regard to a coming Jewish government seems to me to be a preliminary step looking toward a temporary acceptance of him "Who shall come in his own name," which Jesus said: "him will ye receive."

The Jews as a whole have never yet united in an acceptance of the character of whom our Lord, whose Word never fails, said: "him will ye receive." Watch.

W. H. WILSON.

What to Read.

"Search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me." John v. 39.

An open Bible reflects the smile of a Divine Christ, who lovingly invites us to his heart of strength. It reveals God's plans and purposes concerning man, and recalls to mind that we have something nobler and grander to live for than this world affords. It can be made a beautiful as well as a profitable study, and is so far reaching in its instructions and revelations that we never tire of perusing it when once we become interested in Bible study. Talents are intrusted to us and for their use we must render an account. Will our answer be like unto the unwise servant who hid his talent in the earth, that we have gained nothing? Or will we, like the wise servants, increase it tenfold or twofold while our Master tarries? Matt. xxv. 14-30.

Oh, my dear young friends, be careful what you read. It is the literature that makes the mind. The culture of moral and intellectual faculties, depends on the mental food afforded them, and the associations we form as friends. The mind requires proper nutriment and an atmosphere of environment of absolute purity, just as much as the body requires pure air and wholesome food for its health and sustenance. Can those who indulge an appetite for the fabricated works of fiction or the worthless novels of papers and magazines, appreciate the Word and works of God? Their minds become weakened, and their taste injured by such unprofitable literature.

The mind neglected, is like a neglected garden—bringing forth weeds, thorns, and briers for the burning. Then let us take up the pure and undefiled Word of God and heed the call to come up to a higher plane,—a region of unselfishness, love, and purity—having our minds and hearts engrafted with the Word of Truth, and bring forth fruit to the praise of him who hath called us out of darkness into his marvelous light and an atmosphere of holiness. This life is short; it vanisheth away, even as a vapor, or as a flower of the field it flourisheth for a time and then fadeth away. How important therefore, that we make the most of time so brief, and prepare for the eternal life which God has promised to the faithful and obedient.

While living a life of prayer, praise and faithfulness to our dear Redeemer, we may not only touch the hem of his garment, but we may sit at his feet, look up into his face of divine compassion and hear words of loving encouragement and tender rebuke, and rising from this precious communion with him we can go forth to our duties and to the struggle which he bestows on his own. Thus holding Christ supreme, having our will wholly surrendered to his will we find ourselves in possession of a deep peace hitherto unknown, which shall enrich us in all that is most desirable, and make our lives fragrant with an influence precious and lasting, which shall be felt not only now, but in future hours.

None liveth to himself. Our influence on those we come in contact with is for good or evil. We are forming our character one way or the other. Then will ye not choose the right way that ye might have life, and as the apostle teaches in 1 Tim. iv. 12, "Let no man despise thy youth; but be thou an example of the believers in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity." Oh, heed now the voice, and turn not away from him that speaketh from heaven! "Whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely." And drinking thou shalt thirst no more.

O that we may be ready, when heaven dawns on this benighted sphere, to hail that bright and everlasting day with joy.

CLEMENTINE OVERMAN.

OBITUARY.

He sleepeth—Little Sherman,—the elder of two little boys comprising the children of Brother Oscar and Sister Carrie Stewart, and Grand-children of Brother and Sister Mills formerly of Indiana.

He died on Jan. 28, 1895, (would have been 6 years old, March 5th,) of the dread disease, "diphtheria," combined with measles at the same time.

He was a remarkably bright intelligent boy. The terrible anguish of heart experienced by these dear parents can never be known fully, only by those passing through like affliction. Yet how sweet to know, they sorrow not as those without hope. How gladly would those;—members with them of the same body, have shared equally with them the burden and the grief, had it been possible for them to do so.

They have the unfeigned sympathy of the whole community in their distress.

We bid him away in the Andover Cemetery to await the call back from the "land of the enemy." The nature of the disease, not permitting at the time, the funeral service was postponed until yesterday, Feb. 10th.

D. T. HALSTEAD.

Sister Georgiana Hellen Johnston, wife of Brother William Rennie, fell asleep in Jesus, Feb. 6th, 1895.

Sister Rennie had been in delicate health for two years and when seized with LaGrippe which rapidly developed into pneumonia about two days before her death she was unable to withstand the fell destroyer. She was 40 years of age, of Scotch birth like her husband. They both came to a knowledge of "Life in Christ only," while living in Stuling, Scotland, and afterwards in the church in Glasgow, then meeting in Stockwell St.

Sister Rennie was a devoted and loving wife and mother, a consistent and earnest Christian, beloved by all who knew her. A loving disposition, long-suffering and patient, had no enemies other than those who were such to the truth. Considering death as a falling asleep to awaken again at the return of the Master, having full assurance of faith in the blessed resurrection.

Being unable to obtain any of the brethren of our faith the Baptist Minister, Mr. Leonard, very kindly conducted the funeral services and spoke very appropriately from 1 Cor. xv. and Thess. iv. which tells us so plainly and forcibly of the glorious resurrection to eternal life.

We shall sleep but not forever,
There will be a glorious dawn,
We shall meet to part no never,
On the resurrection morn.

May the Lord soon come. Your bereaved and afflicted brother.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1895.

Any one desiring my services to hold meetings during the winter may address me at Galesburg Mich.

L. H. CHRISTMAN.

New Restitution:

The love-feast calls for a word from every one, old and young. Therefore, I will send in my mite.

I enjoy reading the letters very much. It seems like a social gathering to read them. They have been a great help in our social meetings. Many encouraging words and grand lessons have been found in the letter drawer. Yes; we know our duty well, the great object is to perform it well, but when I stop and look around I almost raise my voice with one astonished cry, "Where is the Church of God drifting?" The tide of this world is a swift and dangerous one, we had better not risk our skiff too far lest we be carried away, and when once in the current the sharks have eaten us up.

Brothers and sisters, let us be on our guard and not treat this matter with indifference. What care we for the frivilous things of this world? We are only preparing for the next, and in so doing we have no time to dally with anything that does not pertain to spirituality. It does not seem hard to distinguish spirituality from carnality. Paul was a plain spoken man, so was James and Christ. In fact all the inspired writers and we love them for it, why? because it leads to our good. Christ says, if you love me you will keep my commandments, then let us show by our lives that we do in truth love Christ and our brethren. God is no respector of persons but he is of character. Let us ever remember that we are dealing with him and not with man. If you are working for him no one can harm you. Pure metal, though tried by fire remains pure metal still. So let us build a character that will stand the test.

Your Sister, ever striving for the truth.

MRS. CORA HARLAN.

Dear Restitution:

As we renew our subscription we will say we are still journeying on toward the kingdom which is to be under the whole heavens. I verily believe we are nearly to our journey's end. Certainly testing times are upon us and will prove who are the worthy ones. God's people will move right along, while the others will stop to parley. There are to be some who will not have oil in their vessels when Jesus comes.

Let us each ask ourselves, are our lamps trimmed and ready to go into the marriage supper of the Lamb. Those who have their vessels filled should, while they have time and opportunity help those who have not. Do not try to draw them farther away on the downward road, but plead with them earnestly. The servant of the Lord must not strive, but be gentle unto all men, patient, in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves. Not purloining, but showing all good fidelity, that they may adorn the doctrine of God our Savior in all things; teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts we should live soberly, righteously in this present world, looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior, Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works.

Before I close my letter, I must say a word to my Sunday School class, who have been baptized into the Christ Body, Florence and Josie, hold fast the faith, be rooted and grounded, unmovable by any of the alluring scenes and pleasures of the world. Think what is promised you. A kingdom, with Jesus as the King of kings, and the glory of God filling the whole earth. You shall be immortal, shall see Jesus and be like him, as it is written, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear hath not heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

Yours in hope.

MRS. W. A. MOORE.

Dear brothers and sisters:

How swift the hours of the past year have sped away, and as they have swept along they have carried myriads down to death, and we have reason to fear, many to everlasting destruction! What a sad, sad thought. Have any of them come under your influence? Have you warned them of their danger? May God forgive us if they have, and help us to be faithful in the future.

Dear Brothers and sisters, God has been very merciful to us the year that has just past, as well as all the years since we had our being and I will praise him for all his blessings, and strive by his grace to be more humble, and watchful, and prayerful in the future. We are poor in this worlds goods, but rich in faith, and hoping (though very unworthy) for an inheritance in the kingdom of God. We would not miss the prize after so many years of self-denial of worldly honors and pleasures which the world and nominal church are so wild after at the present day. There is a "Fad Swim" in Scotland tonight, where the church and the world together, are spending the last running sands of this dispensation in foolish, vain amusements!! Why will they be so foolish? I often ask myself and world! ask them if I had an opportunity. It is many years since I have been to the church except on funeral occasions. It makes me sad often, to think that we are shut away from all of "like faith." How gladly we would meet with you had we the opportunity, God is our witness.

When I was young and with the Methodists the prayer and class-meeting were my delight, and I did not forget "the closet" in those days. There is where we get our strength, next to the study and belief of the Word.

O brethren and sisters, do we watch and pray as we should? I know I do not. The cares of this life that weigh so heavily upon us take too much of our precious time and thought. God have mercy upon us and help us all to overcome.

THE RESTITUTION is a great source of comfort and blessing to us. We are interested in all that pertains to it. Of course we are not in sympathy with all the opinions expressed when there are differences, (which we wish there were not) we still love you all and desire to meet you all in the kingdom of our dear Savior.

May the Lord give us all wisdom to discern between truth and error.

Our prayers and sympathies are with the afflicted ones. The Lord comfort and strengthen you all.

Now a word to the young. The Lord keep you from turning aside to enjoy the vain pleasures of the world, but may you like Moses "esteem the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt," having like him "respect unto the recompense of reward." Study the Scriptures daily and pray much. Make your requests known to him who gave his precious life for you, for he is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother and he is all-powerful to help you and surely will.

God bless Brothers Joblin, B. Wilson, W. H. Wilson, Wagoner, Elton, Underwood, and all the other children of God's great family.

Your Sister in the one hope.

ADDIE A. HOWARD.

Editor Restitution:

It has been about a year since I have written to the paper. I am now living with my children in Oklahoma. I am a stranger to most of you, but not to the covenant of promise God made to the fathers. Paul was taken prisoner and tried before King Agrippa for contending for the promise God made to them. Brothers and sisters are we alive to Christ and dead to the world, or are we like a great many professors alive to the world and dead to Christ? Let us ponder well whether we are living holy and upright before our God and letting our light shine before the world, for God's Word says none but the blessed and holy shall see the Lord, for John the revelator says, "Blessed and holy is he that hath a right to the tree of life that he may enter in through the gates into the city." "He that hath an ear let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches, to him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life which is in the midst of the paradise of God." This tree of life the first Adam was cut off from by his disobedience. The second Adam, Christ, by obedience at his second coming gains back for the faithful overcomers what the first Adam lost, and free access to the tree of life and live and reign with Christ forever on this sin-cursed earth after the curse is removed and the earth redeemed back to its Eden beauty, as it was prior to Adam's fall. Then the land shall yield its increase and the nations shall learn war no more. Every man shall sit under his own vine and fig tree and none shall make him afraid. The promises in God's Word should inspire our hearts to renewed energy. O that we may stand before the world as shining lights, redeeming the time, that we may be able to stand before him who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom. Let us study the signs of the times and see if Christ is not near at hand, for he has said, "When ye see all these things come to pass know that your redemption is nigh." Every believer of God's revealed Word of Truth, should arouse and rejoice in the Lord knowing that redemption is nearing. Can we say we are prepared to hear his welcome voice, "thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things, enter into the joys of thy Lord." How thankful we should be that our lives have been spared through the past year, and in the year just entered let us try to live nearer to God than ever before.

Your brother in Christ.

D. M. COWARDIN.

Dear Restitution:

I will contribute a few lines to your columns, for I enjoy your letters so much, especially those from the ones with whom I am acquainted, that I would like to join your number. I think our letter drawer is like unto a jewel case which contains beautiful and precious gems, and who of the consecrated number of the believers marching through this wilderness of sin to the promised inheritance under Christ their Head will not drop a pearl of thought which might prove more lasting, more precious, more beautiful than precious stones into this treasure drawer to revive some one's hope, to cheer some fainting pilgrim or to brighten the faith of those that is already shining. Above all things to please our blessed Savior:—bearing one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ. Gal. vi. 2, which law is love. See Matt. v. 43-48; xxii. 37-39; Rom. xiii. 10. And when Christ's law predominates in us selfishness will have become a thing of the past, and while rejoicing in heavenly things, basking in the sunshine of God's love and in the glory of his power, we can the more fully rejoice with them that do rejoice and weep with them who weep. Knowing that our afflictions work for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory which shall be revealed with the glourious presence of our King. Therefore, let us put on the whole armor of light, walk uprightly before God, living for the good of others and to the honor of our Creator. "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." Knowing this, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep for now is our salvation nearer than when we first believed." Rom. xiii. 11.

Your Sister waiting for the King in his Beauty.

CLEMENTINE OVERMAN.

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see it is accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks those not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfillment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MARCH 0, 1895. NO. 9.

Poetry.

FULFILLMENT.

The hope to which we fondly cling,
And call our own,
Is oft the swiftest to take wing,
And soonest flown!

The wish for which we long and sigh,
And pray and yearn,
May be but a bitter draught to drink,
Which we should spurn.

The evil which we fear and dread,
And dare not face,
God may give the strength to bear,
And needed grace.

The good for which we scarce have hoped,
Nor all perceive,
May be sweetest in its fulfillment
When we receive.

The joys for which we seek and strive,
And follow fast,
When we call them ours, may be
With dark o'ercast.

The trials which we fain would shun,
And cast away,
Like precious pearls may show to us
Some hidden ray.

MRS. MATTIE L. BAILEY.

Original.

The Epistle to the Hebrews.

Without pronouncing this "by far the most important and useful of all the apostolic writings," as Adam Clarke has done, yet we may safely say that so interesting and instructive is it that one may read it many times over with increased instruction at each reading. In taking a general view of it, let us consider

1st. The time of writing. It was written while the temple was standing, that is, before the city and temple were destroyed in A. D. 70. This is evident from its saying in the present tense, "There are priests that offer gifts" and "which serve the tabernacle." Heb. viii. 4; xiii. 10, 11.

2nd. The author of it. "The greatest weight of testimony favors the opinion that Paul was the author."—Oxford Helps. What other author could have cause to withhold his name? But Paul's mission was chiefly "to the Gentiles," and in Judea were "many thousands of Jews that believed" though yet "zealous of the law:" and they had heard that Paul was teaching all the Jews which were among the Gentiles to forsake Moses." Ac. xxi. 20, 21; xxii. 21, 22. This prejudiced them against Paul, and might have prevented their giving a fair hearing to an argument with his name attached. And yet, in their ignorance, they were surely in need of just such an argument as this epistle. Its internal evidence especially favors a Pauline authorship, for it has no less than sixteen marks of a Pauline style of writing.

3rd. The design of it. First in Galatians, and a few years later, in Romans, Paul had treated of justification by faith without the works of the law. It, therefore, became necessary to show of what use was the law, and what relation it sustained to the gospel. This is done profoundly and beautifully in Hebrews, the three epistles forming what has been called a trilogy, because they bear a mutual relation as the three parts of one treatise. This epistle was designed also to warn converted Jews against apostasy, which they might be inclined to on seeing Judaism tolerated by the Romans, and themselves persecuted by both Romans and Jews. And it is equally good for us.

4th. The plan of it. That it has an admirable plan is evident from the close chain of reason observed throughout. "Better" is a key-word to this epistle. The argument establishes the following seven points;

(1) The gospel is better than the law, for it was spoken to us by the Son of God, who is "so much better than the angels" that spoke the law "as that he hath by inheritance obtained a more excellent name than they," and all of them "worship him." Therefore we are not to "neglect" what was spoken by the Son and confirmed unto us by them that heard him; God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Spirit, according to his own will. Heb. i. 2 to 4; ii. 2 to 4.

(2) Jesus, the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, has "more glory than Moses" who meditated the law; for the "Son" over God's household is a better Mediator than a mere "servant" in it, and leads to a better "rest" than Moses and Joshua did. Therefore beware of departing from the living God, and let us fear "lest, a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it." Heb. iii. 1 to 4; iv. 1 to 11.

(3) Our great High Priest is "WITHOUT SIN," and is "Priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec," which is superior to the order of Aaron; and a change of the priesthood implied a change of the law. Let us therefore "hold fast our profession," and "come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." Heb. iv. 14 to 16; vii. 11 to 24.

(4) The gospel covenant, in which we stand, is "a better covenant established upon better promises" than the Mosaic covenant made at Sinai, and which had long been "ready to vanish away" according to the oath in Psa. cx., which, being spoken "since the law," gave notice of the intended abrogation of the Aaronic priesthood and also of the law. (And even the time of that abrogation had been set in Dan. ix. 24, 26, and fulfilled when Christ the true High Priest "died for our sins"). Therefore we should cling to Christ who has "an unchangeable priesthood," for "he is able to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them." Heb. vii. 22 to 28; viii. 6, 13.

(5) The sanctuary made with hands was but a temporary "figure" intended to last "until the time of reformation" which Christ has introduced. And he interceded for us in "a greater and more perfect tabernacle" whose "Holy of holies" is heaven itself. Heb. ix. 1 to 11, 24. Compare Galatians iii. 19.

(6) The sacrifices offered by Aaronic priests could not take away sin, but Christ has offered the only sacrifice that could put away sin and secure that eternal redemption and inheritance promised to believers. Therefore "let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, for he is faithful that promised." Heb. ix. 11 to 28; x. 1 to 10, 23.

(7) The gospel doctrine of justification by faith is illustrated by examples and attested by Scripture both before and since the giving of the law. Therefore "let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus," and awaiting the promised shaking of heavens and earth in order to our receiving a kingdom that cannot be moved. Heb. x. 38; xi., xii. 1, 2, 26 to 28; Gen. xv. 6; Hab. ii. 4.

These great points the epistle enlarges upon with Scriptural testimonies and applies with practical exhortations; and thus affords an apostolic example of how to "testify and exhort." Ac. ii. 40. And it proves, point by point, that, according to the purpose God revealed beforehand through his prophets, the Mosaic dispensation (with its covenant, its priesthood, its tabernacle, and its sacrifices), was only intended to last until Christ came; and has now given place to the gospel dispensation

First Epistle to Korinthioi. Chap. 11.

1. Become imitators of me, even as I also am of Christ.

2. And I am praising you, because ye have been mindful of all my (instructions) and even as I committed to you, have held fast the things committed.

3. Moreover I want you to know that the head of every man is the Christ; and the head of the woman is the man, and the head of the Christ is God.

4. Any man who offereth votive-prayer or prophesieth with his head covered disgraceth his head;

5. and any woman who offereth votive-prayer or prophesieth with her head uncovered disgraceth her head. For it is one and the same thing as for her to be shaven.

6. For if a woman does not veil herself, let her also be shorn. And if it be a disgrace for a woman to be shorn or shaven, let her veil herself.

7. A man though ought not to cover his head, since he is God's image and glory; but the woman is man's glory.

8. For man is not of woman, but woman of man.

9. And for the reason that man was not created for woman's sake, but woman for man's sake,

10. Therefore the woman ought to have official-power upon her head because of the angels.

11. However, neither is woman without man nor man without woman in the Lord.

12. For even as the woman is of the man, the man is also through (through the instrumentality of) the woman but all things of God.

13. Judge within yourselves, Is it a proper thing for a woman to offer votive-prayer to God unveiled?

14. Or doth not nature itself teach you that if a man wear long hair, it is a dishonor to him?

15. But if a woman wear her hair long it is her glory? Because her hair hath been given her instead of a veil.

16. But if any one seemeth to be contentious, we have no such custom nor have the Churches of God.

17. And this I am telling you in the way of commendation, because ye are accustomed to come together not for your advantage but for your disadvantage.

18. For in the first place when ye come together as a church (en ekklesia) I hear that there are schisms among you, and some part of it I credit.

19. For it is necessary that there should be heresies among you, that those of approved votive among you may have become manifest.

20. When ye come together then at the same place, it is not to devour a Lord's supper.

21. For each one taketh his own supper beforehand in the way of devouring, and one perchance goes hungry and another becomes drunken.

22. Have ye not houses though for your eating and drinking? Or do ye despise the Church of God, and put to shame those who have not? What shall I say to you? Shall I commend you in this thing? I commend you not.

23. For I myself received from the Lord that which also I have committed to you, namely that the Lord Jesous, the night he was being betrayed, took a loaf of bread,

24. And when he had given thanks, he brake it and said, This is my body, the one for you, This do ye in remembrance of me.

25. Likewise also the cup after they had supped, saying, This cup is the New Covenant in my blood, This do as often as ye drink, in remembrance of me.

26. For as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup, ye are declaring the Lord's death until he shall have come.

27. So then whoever shall eat the bread or drink the cup of the Lord in an unworthy manner, will be amenable for the body and blood of the Lord,

28. And let a man test himself and in this wise let him eat of the bread and drink of the cup.

29. For the one who is eating and drinking is eating and drinking a verdict on himself, if he do not discriminate the body.

30. Therefore are many among you weak and not robust and some are lying down to sleep.

31. But if ye had examined yourselves discriminatively ye would not have been judged.

32. But being judged by the Lord we are being chastened, that we may not have been condemned along with the cosmos.

33. So then, my brethren, when ye come together to eat wait for one another.

34. If any one hunger let him eat at home, that ye may not come unto judgment. And as for the rest, when even I shall have come I will give specific directions.

CHAP. 12.

1. Now concerning the spiritual things, brethren, I would not have you ignorant.

2. Ye know that when ye were nations (of the nations meant) ye were being led away unto the dumb idols, however ye were led.

3. Therefore I am making it clear to you that no one talking in God's spirit, says anathema Jesous; and no one can have said Lord Jesous unless in sanctified spirit,

4. And there are divisions of gracious gifts, but the same spirit.

5. And there are divisions of menial-service (deacon-service) but the same Lord,

6. And there are divisions in working (or energizing) powers, but the same God, who energizeth all things in all persons.

7. And to each person hath been given the manifesting of the spirit for that which is advantageous.

8. For to one through the spirit hath been given a word of wisdom, and to another a word of comprehension according to the same spirit;

9. To another faith in the same spirit, and to another gracious gifts of healings in the one spirit.

10. And to another inworking phenomena; (or energizings) of able-forces (or abilities). To another forsooth prophesy; and to another discernings of spirits; to another kinds (genera) of tongues; and to another interpretation of tongues;

11. But all these inworketh (or energizeth) the one and the same spirit distributing to each individual one as he (the Lord) will

12. For even as the body is one and hath many members, and all the members of the body are one body, though many members, likewise also the Christ.

13. For we also in one spirit have all been baptized into the one body, whether Joudaians or Greeks, whether bond-servants or freemen; and we all have been given to drink one spirit.

14. Yea indeed, the body is not one member, but many.

15. If the foot shall have said because I am not a hand, I am not of the body, is it for this reason not of the body?

16. And if the ear shall have said because I am not an eye, I am not of the body, is it for this reason not of the body?

17. If all the body were an eye where were the hearing? If all hearing where were the smelling?

18. But now God hath disposed the members, each one of them in the body even as he hath purposed.

19. And if they were all one member where were the body?

20. But now are they many members and one body.

21. And an eye cannot have said to the hand, I have no need (lit. use for) of thee; nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of thee.

22. On the other hand by as much as the members of the body seem to be weaker, are they more necessary?

23. And those parts of the body which seem to be more wanting in honor we environ with more honor;

24. And our shapeless parts have more exceeding good-shape. Yea God hath commingled the body, having given more exceeding honor to that which lacketh,

25. That there may be no schism in the body; but that the members may exercise the same anxious care for one another.

26. And whether one member suffereth all the members suffer along with it; or if a member be glorified, all the members rejoice along with it.

27. Now ye are Christ's body and members par by part;

28. And those whom God hath placed in the church, first as apostles, second as prophets, third as teachers, and after that intelligent forces (abilities, powers) after that gracious-gifts of healings, interpositional helps guiding-helps (steering-forces) kinds of tongues;

29. All are not apostles are they? All are not prophets are they? All are not teachers are they? All are not intelligent-forces are they?

30. All do not have gracious-gifts of healings do they? All do not talk with tongues do they? All do not interpret do they?

31. Be emulous forsooth for the greater gifts; and yet I show you according to a surpassing way—to-wit.

CHAP. 13.

1. Though I talk with the tongues of men and of angels and have not love, I have become echoing copper (a copper horn or wind-instrument) or a symbol for an alala (an instrument like our large cymbal used to swell the volume of harmonic sound.)

2. And though I have prophecy and know all the mysteries and all the way of comprehension, and though I have all the faith so as to transfer mountains, and have not love, I am nothing;

3. And though I morsel out all my possessions, and though I give my body that I may be burned, and have not love, I shall be profited in no respect.

4. The love forbeareth, benefiteth, The love doth not envy, doth not vaunt itself, is not puffed up,

5. Doth not behave badly, doth not seek its own interests, doth not get provoked, doth not account the evil,

6. Doth not rejoice in the wrong-doing, but rejoiceth along with the truth,

7. Sheltereth everything, hath faith at all times, hopeth always endureth patiently in every way.

8. The love never leaveth off, but whether there be prophecies, they will have been accomplished; whether tongues, they will cease whether knowing it will have been accomplished.

9. For we know in part and prophesy in part.

10. But when the complete shall have come, the partial will have been accomplished (or wrought out.)

11. When I was a child I talked as a child, I thought as a child, I reasoned as a child; when I became an adult man I had wrought out the things of the child.

12. For just now we are looking through a mirror (the inspired Word of God) at an enigma (the enigma of creation) but then face to face, just now I know in part, but then I shall fully know even as I have been fully known.

13. And for the present abideth faith, hope, love, these three; but of these the love is great r.

Mexico's great drainage canal, which is thirty miles long, will be opened in about sixteen months. Its construction will cost something like $20,000,000.

Multum In Parvo.

If to say God's "law of adoption," "the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus, that makes free from the law of sin and death," initiates one into the Church of God, and connects them to the Father, and the Son, and his people, and the world to come with all its untold glories, then to obey the initiatory rites of any secret order, which is this law of adoption" (and they all have them) must surely adopts one into said order, as a full fledged member, and connects them to its human head, and to its "master," and its "grand master," and to its "most worshipful master," and all the rest of their family as a band of oath-bound brethren, for weal or for woe. Not only so, but as they are now a member of a human organization, they thereby become connected to this present evil world to which it belongs, and which is soon to pass away, and the lust thereof." While he that doeth the will of God, and comes out on the Lord's side, and separates him or herself from them—having no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reproves them, not daring to touch them, abides forever. And God says I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters saith the Lord Almighty. Brethren, remember typical Israel, study well her history, and learn that her heart wanderings after evil things alienated her from God's favor. And remember that all these things happened unto them for examples, and are written for our admonition.

The Living Way.

The living way is the sublime truth of the New Covenant. There have been many ways of approaching God, but none can compare with the living way.

The tree of life was once the mediator between God and man, but the flaming sword guarded its sacredness after man was tainted with sin. Then came the sacrificial system with the first-fruits of the field and of the flock. Man became a priest to offer up sacrifices for his own sins, and to implore mercy from an offended Father.

The altar of stone in the days of Jacob was the house of God, and the gate of heaven. The tabernacle in the wilderness was the temple of worship during the pilgrimage of Israel, and was succeeded by the Holy House at Jerusalem, where the Shekinah blazed—an emblem of the mercy and love of God. But the temple is no more, the altar is in ruins, and the hosts of Israel are scattered from their fatherland, and God no longer makes known his law through the temples made with hands. Neither at Jerusalem, nor on the mountains of Samaria, does the Infinite show forth his power. The ancient ceremonies have ceased to be offered while the temple is in ruins. The sabbaths, new moons, and solemn feasts of Israel, are buried in the ruins of their nation. But there is an altar whereof they have no right to eat who serve the tabernacle. God has a temple yet on earth where offerings are made, and at whose threshold the pure in heart meet for worship. Christ is the way, the truth, and the life, and is an High Priest over the House of God, whose house are we, if we hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering.

The living way was consecrated by the blood of Christ, and we have boldness to enter within, and find the bread of life. If we wander from the Christian pathway, we hear the voice crying unto us, "this is the way, walk ye in it." At times the way seems long and dreary, and our bleeding feet indicate its sorrows, but beyond we behold the portals of peace and the eternal city, we take new courage and press on to victory.

Who would not endure the conflict for the crown? The path of the just is a shining light, which shineth more and more unto the perfect day. May the day soon dawn where the shadows of night shall never be known, and may we be in the way of life forever.—H. T. Reed, in The Herald of the Coming Kingdom.

The Poor Rich Man.

There are so many things which one has to have nowadays in order to be comfortable that it seems almost improvident to inquire how much one ought to save before facing the question of what one can possibly do without. Here the people who are said to have too much for their own good have an advantage over the rest of us. The future of their children is secure. If they dread death it is not because they fear to leave their wives and children unprovided for. Many of them go on saving just the same, and talk poor if a railroad lowers a dividend or there is not a ready market for their real estate at an exalted profit. Are there more irritating men or women in the world than the over-conservative persons of large means, who are perpetually harping on saving, and worrying lest they may not be able to put by for a rainy day, as they call it, 25 per cent or more of their annual income? The capitalist careworn by solicitude of this sort is the one fool in creation who is not entitled to some morsel of pity.—January Scribner.

The Earliest Coined Money.

Throughout the early parts of Scripture, as well as through the poems of Homer, not a single passage occurs from which can be inferred the existence of stamped money of any description. It is agreed that the Egyptians had no coined money. Herodotus is authority for the statement that the Lydians were the first people who coined gold and silver. The Parian Chronicle, however, ascribes the first coinage of copper and silver money to Pheidon, King of Argos, 895 B. C., in Aegina, which Aelian corroborates, and the best numismatic antiquaries agree in considering the coins of Aegina from their archaic form and appearance the most ancient known. They are of silver, and bear on the upper side the figure of a turtle, and on the other an indented mark. Coins are among the most certain evidences of history. In the later part of the Greek series they illustrate the chronology of reigns. In the Roman series they fix the dates and succession of events. Gibbon observes that, if all our historians were lost, medals, inscriptions, and other monuments would be sufficient to record the travels of Hadrian. The reign of Probus might be written from his coins.

In dredging the harbor of Biserta, in Tunis a silver sacrificial bowl was found, which is the most valuable piece of workmanship in the precious metals yet discovered in Africa. It is oval in shape, shallow, has two handles, and weighs twenty pounds. The inner surface is ornamented with a design in inlaid gold representing the contest between Apollo and Marsyas. The work is by a Greek artist of the first century after Christ. The bowl is now in the Bardo Museum.

Let us learn to wait upon the Lord, in silence though it be, asking him to search us, and see if there be any evil in us, and lead us into the way everlasting.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION addresses the final accomplishment of all things which God has spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortalized saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the first resurrection of the dead; the judgment-location of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a heart-belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

JOHN Lord says, "There is no more absurd cant than that the culture of the mind favors the culture of the heart. What do operas and theatres do for the moral elevation of society? Does a sentimental novel prompt to duty? Education seldom keeps people from folly when the will is not influenced by virtue." •

AN Editor is often placed in a very awkward position by friends who write articles of various kinds and forget to give their names. We have one such now and no doubt the sender is thinking hard of us for not giving place to the article. Name need not be signed for publication always—but to protect the Editor is the purpose of the rule.

THOSE who have the care of families cannot be too careful about what their children read. We commend to such the wholesome words of Morgan Dix; he says, "In multitudes of cases, perhaps in the greater part of them, the household sorrow and the household wreck may be traced to the workings of a poison distilled into the unhappy family, through a literature which ought to be driven like offscourings, from every respectable library, and every circle of honest people. The teachings of a godless philosophy filter in, drop by drop; they make the whole head sick and the whole heart faint. And the following lines from Grayson's letters, are in point: "Three-fourths of the popular novels of the day enfeeble the intellect, impoverish the imagination, vulgarize the taste and style, give false views of life and human nature, and worse than all waste that precious time which should be given to mental improvement." •

To Some Suffering Ones.

Dear readers, the rapidly revolving wheels of time are speeding us on to the grand rendezous of those redeemed to God by the blood of glorious Son,—the general assembly, the congregation of firstborns having been enrolled in the heavens, and to a God who is Judge of all, and to spirits of the righteous made perfect, and to a Mediator of a new covenant—Jesus; the living one, the overcomer who beckons us on with words from heaven:—"But what you have, hold fast till I may have come; and he who conquers, even he who keeps my works to an end I will give him authority over the nations:" and again, "The conqueror, —I will give to him to sit down with me in my throne, as I also conquered, and sat down with my Father in his throne."

We are thinking of some who are suffering, always suffering, suffering intensely and unable to help themselves at all, and who year after year lie and suffer, but who are sustained by the Blessed Hope. Oh! what a change awaits them! "Over there" the source of injury and decay are entirely removed; time does not waste, nor does eternity impair. There is no need of carefulness there; thank God! No thieves break through and steal,—and this earthly house will have given place to the house not made with hands. •

Saved by Law or Gospel—Which? No. 15.

According to promise we now proceed to the positive commands given for the regulation of the Christian's life. We may not be able to give them all, but will promise to give what will keep the most faithful and obedient busy without having to draw upon the commandments engraven upon stone. By way of introduction we turn to Acts iii. 22 where Peter quotes a passage from the 18th of Deuteronomy. It reads, "For Moses truly said unto the fathers, a prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; [a law-giver] him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass, that every soul which will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people." So much as to the prophet and the law-giver. The fourth commandment will not save him from destruction. The Lord God did raise him up and we come now to his laws.

LAW I. "Go ye [disciples] therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them [the baptized believers] to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

[Remarks, this shows that all the commands of Jesus are not to be found in Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. In the 10th of Luke we find him saying to the seventy evangelists on sending them out. "He that heareth you heareth me, and he that despiseth you despiseth me, and he that despiseth me, despiseth him that sent me." And in 1 Cor. xiv. 37 we find Paul saying, "The things that I write unto you are the commandments of the Lord." So that every rule of conduct laid down in the New Testament comes under the head of the commandments of Jesus.]

II. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment," and

III. "The second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." Matt. xxii. 37-40.

[Remarks, it is noteworthy that neither of these two greatest commandments were graven on stones, and by the Sabbatarian rule they were part of the law of Moses in contradiction with the law of the Lord, and were therefore done away with the ceremonial law. We have never seen the argument refuted in any of their works. They rule out the two greatest laws.

IV. "Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal; but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through and steal."

Remarks, This is one of the commands upon the keeping of which the retention of his love depends. Says he, "teaching them to observe all things, whatsoever I have commanded; and again, "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love." We must know them before we can keep them. We seldom hear of any binding law from Sabbatarians but Sabbath keeping, as if all the laws of God hung on that; or as if the observance of that would secure an immunity from punishment for all other infractions.]

V. "Let no man therefore judge you in meat or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbaths." Col. ii. 16.

[Remarks. There was a time when this law of Christ's commandment of Jesus could not have been given. What had brought about the change? The answer is found in the fourth verse. The handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us had been taken out of the way and nailed to the cross by Christ. Before it was nailed to the cross it would have been in conflict with that writing but it has now taken its place. Sabbatarians say "you could not blot out what was engraven on the stone, nor nail up the stone to the cross, and therefore it was the handwriting of ordinances." And add: "There were yearly Sabbaths associated with meats, drinks, feast-days and new moons, none of these are in the ten commandments." The truth is however, every word of the ten commandments was written by the hand of Moses on parchment with all the rest of the law of Moses. See Deut. v. and other places. The whole law as a system was blotted out. To try to show the law as such, brought forward and mixed with the gospel of the grace of God is to do exactly what Christ forbids in the 5th of Luke: it is putting new wine into old bottles, or new cloth on an old garment. In Lev. xxiii. Moses gives a list of the Jewish holy days and places the Sabbath first, and it is positively associated with gifts, vows, and offerings, meats, drinks and all the Jewish feasts just as Paul puts it in Col. ii. 16.]

VI. "Wherefore my brethren, ye also are dead to the law by the body of Christ, that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, that we should bring forth fruit unto God. When we were in the flesh the motions of sin which were by the law did work in our members to bring forth fruit unto death: but now we are delivered from the law, that being dead wherein we were held, that we should serve in newness of spirit and not in the oldness of the letter." Rom. vii. 4.

[Let the reader look at verses 1, 2, 3, and see if it were possible to be married to Christ if the law be not dead? And then turn to Gal. ii. 16 and see that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ; even we (Jews) have believed in Jesus Christ that we might be justified by the faith of Christ and not by the works of the law, for by the work of the law shall no flesh be justified." V. 29, "If righteousness come by the law then Christ is dead in vain." He did not take it out of the way, is the idea.] •

Catholics and Protestants.

The Catholic priests and Protestant ministers of Bay City, Michigan are still having happy times. The Detroit papers report a meeting recently held in the opera house at which three additional ministers had fallen into line. Although an admission fee of ten cents was charged, even the gallery was crowded and no standing room any where. Rev. Thos. McLean (Episcopal) led in repeating the Lord's prayer, all uniting. After this Father Schrembs was called upon to lead in singing, "Nearer My God, to Thee," the scene was said to be "overwhelming." Three priests, one Congregational, one Episcopal and one Presbyterian minister addressed the meeting, all heartily endorsing the movement. Rev. Charles T. Patchel, the Congregationalist, said: "Father Rafter is my brother, and I greet him as such. He believes in Christ. (?) So do I. He believes Christ purchased heaven. So do I. If Father Rafter wears robes in the pulpit with our Episcopal brother, let him do so. I would feel like a rat in a strange garret if I did, and could not speak with ease. He preaches Christ. Why should I say he is wrong?"

Where are they drifting? Have they just discovered that Luther led them astray?—That there was no need of a Reformation, and nothing to protest against? Have they come to the conclusions that they are all Schismatics, and take this method of getting back into the fold? It would look that way if they had not said it was an effort in the way of "Christian Union, but not Church Union." Think of it! Father Rafter is Rev. Patchel's brother, and yet does not belong to the same church! Both believe that Christ purchased heaven, and if the mutual belief of this great blinding error does not make them members of the same church, what would? The intelligent believer of the truth as it is in Jesus will place them all in one body,—a body of organized "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world." Eph. ii. 12. If God had covenanted the heaven, they mutually believe in they would not be without God; or if any Scripture warranted their belief that Christ purchased heaven for them they would have a hope that would be realized, if found worthy of it; but as no such warrant is to be found, we are obliged to say they cannot believe in Christ, when they reject the Gospel of the Kingdom on earth he preached. It is the obedient believer of this that shall be saved.

It would be unfaithful to the trust imposed in us to keep back these solemn verities. With the lamp of life in our hands we seem to hear the words addressed to Ezekiel, "Thou shalt speak my words unto them whether they will hear or whether they will forbear." Profoundly grateful are we that the "God who commanded the light to shine out of darkness hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. Most gladly would we conduct our fellow mortals to the Lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world, and who has the words of Eternal Life,—but almost all turn a deaf ear toward us; and our only hope is in the coming of the Just One to establish a divine government. When his "judgments are in the earth the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness." Isa. xxvi. 9. Soon may he come and end the long delay we earnestly pray. •

OUR CHILDREN.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 8.

JACOB BLESSING HIS OWN SONS.

Ephraim and Manasseh have been adopted by Jacob. Their surname has become Israel. They stand now as the elder brothers of this tribal family.

The other sons are next called to receive the parting blessing of their dying father. Being a prophet, he can tell something of what will happen for thousands of years to come, or "in the latter days." They will not understand it all, but they will be comforted. They know that the blessing will be God's blessing and that he will speak to them through their father. Reuben comes to the bedside first.

He calls him "his first-born, his might, the beginning of his strength, the excellency of dignity and the excellency of power." Jacob's future might, his strength as a nation, is to be in his children. From them is to spring the nation that is to stand at the head of all nations. Reuben was the beginning of this mighty people because he was the first of Jacob's children.

Here are two sentences about excellency? What do they mean? The one refers to the priesthood, the other to the right of dominion, belonging to the birth-right. These were Reuben's by right of birth.

But see, dear children! he is "as unstable as water." Water cannot stand on a high place, neither can Reuben. He has no strong, firm, hard, valid hold of that strength that helps people to attain, and to keep, "the abounding excellency of eminence." He has not made himself "strong in the Lord," and so his father tells him he shall not excel, or stand. Through sin, he has lost for his tribe the place nearest to God. It has gone from the grasp of the Reubenites forever.

Simeon and Levi are called together to receive the blessing, but, they too have sinned. They "are brethren," but in a sense not at all pleasant. It is in some compact to do wrong.

"Instruments of cruelty are in their habitations,"—the Greek translation of the Bible, makes this, —"they finished the iniquity of their chosen counsel."

The word "habitation," is derived from a word that means "to sell, to bargain, to barter."

They made a bargain with the Shechemites and then taking their swords went and killed every one of them, and the Jews say it was these brothers who were so angry at Joseph because of his dreams and who wanted to put him to death. They must have known that Reuben's sin had lost him the birth-right,—(we had not thought of that before had we?) and that they would stand the next chance of getting it.

We have been wondering all the time why they took such an interest in Reuben's claim when he himself seemed to care nothing about it, but sought to hinder them in their wicked scheming,—here is the solution of the problem,—they wanted the birth-right blessings for themselves! But God does not make the steps of sin, the ladder whereby to reach her glorious heights.

Jacob himself had no part in their sin, and in these prophetic words "O my soul, come not thou into their counsel," he washes himself not only from the sins of the past, that belong to Simeon and Levi, but also from the particular sin of the future to which he is pointing. The other tribes excepting Judah would not be guilty of plotting for the Savior's death.

"In their anger they slew a man"—or "Ish,"—the man" a man, higher, more exalted than other men.

When Cain was born, Eve thought he was "the man" the promised Redeemer. Jesus is called "the man" meaning the pre-eminent One—the one who saves. It was Simeon's and Levi's intention to kill Joseph, and God holds those who harbor such hatred in their hearts to be already guilty of murder. Joseph was the man who pictured the Savior,—and in killing him, even in thought, it was a prophecy that they would be brothers in a compact to kill the second Joseph, the real "Ish."

The Jewish Targum says that, "the scribes and the teachers of the law were of the tribe of Simeon." This would take some of them to the courts of Judah, and of Benjamin. These would not be taken captive with their brethren in the captivity of the ten tribes, but would remain to fulfill the prophecy in the person of their descendants. It was the Scribes and the Pharisees who took counsel with the Levites to put Jesus to death.

"Cursed be their anger." A curse is to come on them because of their anger and oh what a curse! I can not stop to tell you about it but if you will read of the terrible things that happened to them because of their participation in the death of Jesus, you will understand what Jacob meant.

It was on account of their uniting together as brethren in wrong-doing, that they were to be "divided in Jacob, and scattered in Israel."—Simeon as scribes and teachers; and the Levites as priests and teachers of the law. The tribe of Simeon had "their inheritance within the inheritance of the tribe of Judah." Josh. xix. 1. 9, this "divided him in Jacob," from the other tribes and when the captivity of the ten tribes took part of his people away, and left part he was again "divided."

Simeon and Levi are the only tribes upon whom Jacob pronounces a curse, and curses leave little room for blessings. Suffering and eternal loss are the sad fruits of sin.

Simeon must have been the ring-leader in wrong. He stood next to Reuben in the right of birth, but the birthright blessings pass him entirely. The double portion has gone to Joseph, the priesthood descends to Levi, the regal honors to Judah. No one after Joseph is to have "the many crowns" until "the Lamb that was slain" comes "to receive the power, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory and blessing." Christ is to wear the triple honors of Prophet, Priest and King.

Simeon and Levi step aside, and Jacob's hand is placed upon Judah's head.

"The dark and massy folds" of "a curtain dense and black." God's hand hath reached "and slowly pushed it back!" oh what a fortune we see. Wonderful, far-reaching, glorious! Judah thou art he whom thy brethren shall praise or confess. Praise or confession is the meaning of Judah's name.

Judah is to be honored because from him is to come the kings of his people, and from them "The king of Kings, and the lord of Lords." He is honored in the giving of his name to David's kingdom, to its people and to its land. His hands are to be in the neck of his enemies, his father's brethren are to bow down before him,—what a prophecy of the coming Kingdom!

He is to be like an old lion, when in power, other nations will be afraid to rouse him up. The sceptre, or the kingly power is not to depart from his tribe until Shiloh, or the Savior comes, and gathers all the tribes to himself. Shiloh means the giver of peace.

The gathering is the obedience, the adherence of the nations to him. "Him shall the people obey;" "Him shall peoples wait for." He is the "root of Jesse, that shall rise and reign over the Gentiles." To be the progenitor of such a being, is honor above all other honors, and gladness, and gladness, and gladness, repeated in ever echoing song, till it rise to the highest heights of heaven. And this was to be the praise of Judah, the delightsomeness of the honor conferred upon him.

The promise to Judah, that "his scepter should not depart," is the same as saying "the sceptors of the other tribes shall depart, but yours shall remain." "Some one of your tribe shall have the regal power until the Redeemer comes to reign." You shall have teachers of the law, until then, "your name and your lineage shall never be lost."

History tells us that Judah never lost his tribe. His census was taken by itself. his genealogies were kept apart from those of his brethren. In name, in features, in blood, he is Judah still, a living, ever-abiding witness that Jesus is to come again. There are distinguished Jews whose genealogical tree dates back to scenes that antedate the Savior's birth by hundreds of years.

But how do we know that the sceptre has never departed from Judah? We know it, we are sure of it because God has not only made this promise to Judah, but another much like it to David.

"David shall never want, or lack a man to sit upon his throne." Though "his tabernacle be fallen down" and his kingdom departed, some one in the line of his rulership must somewhere bear rule over the tribes until the Lion of the tribe of Judah takes it from his hands. There is a nation now that has the lion and the lion's whelps on its seal. It is a great nation, made up of a company of nations. It has the Bible; it is sending missionaries into all lands; it is blessing other nations.

It is not Judah, though many of the tribe of Judah dwell among its people, but a daughter of Judah, of the house and lineage of David is its reigning queen.

But what more about Judah? What strange words! "Binding his foal to the vine and his ass's colt to the choice vine!"

You would never guess what they mean. Is not Jesus the vine? Does he not himself say so? Can you not think of peoples and nations that are much like wild asses? They know no more of Jesus and his doctrines than wild asses do of men. But Judah cannot bind them, he does not know the Savior. It is the Shiloh, the Savior himself, who tames the wild Gentile races of the earth. But we cannot study any more to-night. We must leave the blessings of the other tribes for another lesson.

AUNTIE WINCE.

The First Fruits.

The Old Testament requirement of presenting to the Lord the first fruits, finds no annulment in the New. It was, like many another law, as good for one time as another: something of permanent value and obligation.

The "first-fruits" were asked for, because these are the choicest and most set by, and therefore very properly belong to him whose claim is first. We give to him not the leavings, the ends of things left over after every other wish has been met; but the first and best out of the earnings, scant or full. We are, first of all, to set apart the tenth, and hold it sacredly as his. One is never the loser of this systematic giving. The bank of heaven keeps strict account with every depositor, and repays with large interest. "Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first-fruits of all thine increase; so shall thy barns be filled with plenty." Better security one could not ask for investments. Only it is to be genuine giving to him, born of the recognition of his right to own all.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some good man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

Dead Sea Drying Up.

The Dead Sea of today is a little body of sluggish, dark, greasy water, gathered at the bottom of the deepest depression on the earth's surface—a hollow 1,300 feet below the level of the Mediterranean. A recent scientific expedition has proven, however, that at one time its surface was on a level with that of that of the Mediterranean and its area more than twenty times what it is at present. In what the geologists call the "glacial period" the Jordan was an arm of the Dead Sea and was more than 1,000 feet in depth.

The Awakening.

A [illegible] baby, from his morning dream
[illegible] sometimes, and lies without a sound,
And all his rose-leaf fingers twirled around,
The while his violet eyes, half open, seem
Their petals to unfold, and pink cheeks beam
A [illegible] glad thought: the little brain had found:
[illegible] when the mother's step upon the ground
He knows, his red lips speak the word supreme [illegible] God's heart, "agape."
So, we shall rise
[illegible] when we awake from life's brief sleep.
[illegible] but lie in rapt surprise,
[illegible] and lip all meaningless shall keep [illegible] speak, as new-born power expand,
[illegible] strange word that God shall understand.

The Kingdom of God.

"In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: nor shall the sovereignty thereof be left to another people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever." Dan. ii. 44.

As it is claimed that the church is the kingdom referred to here, and that it was set up on the Day of Pentecost, I will endeavor to show that the church is not the kingdom of God.

I.

The saints are now in the church of God. In Acts ix. 13, Saul is represented as having done much evil to the saints; and the saints here referred to were none others than the followers of Christ,—those who were in the church of God.

In 1 Cor. xiv. 33, we have the following language:—"God is not a God of confusion but of peace, as in all churches of the saints." This testimony settles the fact that the saints are now in the church. Dan. vii. 27:—"The kingdom, and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdoms under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High." The kingdom, then, is to be given to the saints, to those who are in the church. If, therefore, the saints are in the church, and the kingdom is to be given to the saints, the church is not the kingdom.

II.

"Give the more diligence to make your calling and election sure . . . for thus shall be richly supplied unto you the entrance into the eternal kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." 2 Peter i. 11.

The saints in the church of God are heirs of the kingdom. James ii. 5:—"Harken, my beloved brethren, did not God choose them that are poor as to the world to be rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he promised to them that love him?" Instead of being in the kingdom, as some vainly argue, according to James the saints are only heirs. But when will they receive the inheritance—the kingdom? When the Savior comes again, the saints will inherit the kingdom. If, then, the saints are now heirs of the kingdom, and they are to receive it at the second coming of Christ, the church is not the kingdom.

III.

The phrase "flesh and blood" is an idiom expressive of the present corruptible state of the human race. The idea is expressed with us by the phrase "mortal man." Permit me here to produce a few examples of its use:—

1. Matt. xvi. 17: "Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jonah, for flesh and blood [mortal man] hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father which is heaven."

2. Gal. i. 15, 16: "But when it was the good pleasure of God . . . to reveal his Son in me that I might preach him among the Gentiles, immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood" [mortal man]. In these examples it will be seen the phrase is expressive of mortality.

That mortal men and women are in the church, no one who believes the Bible will deny. Indeed, in this respect, the body of the church is composed of flesh and blood—of mortal men and women. 1 Cor. xv. 50: "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God." This language is plain and positive. Man cannot inherit the kingdom of God while in a state of mortality. If, now, the body of the church is composed of "flesh and blood," and "flesh and blood" cannot inherit the kingdom of God, the church is not the kingdom.

IV.

Covetousness is a besetting sin. Men love money. Wealth makes a man respectable, and in all important enterprises it is desirable to have the influence of the rich. In politics, oddfellowship, masonry, etc., etc., the rich man is gladly entertained. It is so in the churches. Let a rich man apply for admittance, and a shout is raised over his reception. The rich man enters the church without trouble or difficulty, and when once in the church he wields an influence. Indeed, his influence is so potent that it is to be feared many preachers shun their duty, lest they lose a part of their bread and butter. Matt. xix. 23, 24: "Then said Jesus unto his disciples, verily I say unto you it is hard for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of heaven. And again I say unto you, it is easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God."

If, therefore, it is easy for a rich man to get into the church, and it is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God, the church is not the kingdom.

V.

In many places it is considered fashionable to be a church member; and church members and the world are so nearly alike that, so far as actions are concerned, you can scarcely distinguish the one from the other. Church fairs, church festivals, etc., etc., attest the truth of this assertion. The professed church and the world mingle together, and where is there any persecution or tribulation? If one suffers tribulation it is not merely because he enters the church, but because he leads a godly life. The Christian will pass through tribulation, but one may enter the church without it. Acts xiv. 22: "Through many tribulations we must enter into the kingdom of God."

If, now, men enter into the church without passing through tribulation, and it is through many tribulations that we are to enter the kingdom, the church is not the kingdom.

VI.

Let us look at Acts xiv. 21, 22, again: "And when they (Paul and Barnabas) had preached the gospel to that city, and had made many disciples, they returned to Lystra, and to Iconium, and to Antioch, confirming the souls of the disciples, exhorting them to continue in the faith, and that through many tribulations we must enter into the kingdom of God." From this language I gather the following points:—

1. The confirmation of the disciples.

2. An exhortation to continue in the faith. Of course, they were in the church, or they would not have been exhorted to continue in the faith.

3. We learn that through many tribulations we must enter into the kingdom of God.

If, therefore, those disciples were already in the church, and they were told that through many tribulations enter the kingdom of God, the church is not the kingdom.

The church was instituted that sinners may come to Christ and live. It was not instituted for those who are without sin. Jesus Christ "came not to call the righteous, but sinners." Mark ii. 17. "Faithful is the saying and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." 1 Tim. i. 15.

When men have sinned against God they may reform and come into the church. It is thus they are to fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold on eternal life. But children who have never transgressed the law of God have no need of repentance, nor of entering the church. They are without sin, and remain innocent until they take themselves out of the favor of God by actual transgression. The church is the medium through which they then return to God. Hence the little children are not in the church. Mark x. 14: "Suffer the little children to come unto me, forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God."

Now, if little children are not in the church, and there are to be little children in the kingdom of God, certainly the church is not the kingdom.

VII.

The Greek word for church, occurs in the New Testament about one hundred and fifteen times; and it is not once translated kingdom. Greenfield defines the word as follows: "Any public assembly, a congregation; a Christian assembly, a church." He does not even hint that it signifies kingdom. The Greek word for kingdom occurs in the New Testament about one hundred and sixty times, and it is not once translated church. Greenfield defines kingdom thus: "A kingdom, realm, i. e. the region or country governed by a king; kingly power, authority, dominion, reign; royal dignity, the title and honor of a king." These are the primary difinitions of these terms, and it is easily seen that they do not mean the same thing.

If the church were the kingdom of God, the Greek words for kingdom and church would be used interchangeably; but they are not once thus used. Therefore the church is not the kingdom of God.

VIII.

"Grace to you, and peace be multiplied in the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord; seeing that his divine power hath granted unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that called us by his own glory and virtue, whereby he hath granted unto us his precious and exceeding great promises, that through these ye may become partakers of the divine nature, having escaped from the corruption that is in the world by lust. Yea, and for this very cause adding in your part all diligence, in your faith supply virtue, and in your virtue knowledge, and in your knowledge temperance, and in your temperance patience, and in your patience godliness, and in your godliness love of the brethren, and in your love of the brethren love. For if these things be yours and abound, they make you to be not idle nor unfruitful unto the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."

The apostle here enumerates the graces that are to adorn the Christian's life; and his language applies to those who are in the church of God. In the 10th and 11th verses he addresses the people of God as follows: "If ye do these things ye shall never stumble; for thus shall be richly supplied unto you, the entrance into the eternal kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Now, if one must be in the church in order to have the Christian graces, and if one must have these graces in order to obtain an entrance into the kingdom, it certainly follows that the church is not the kingdom.

IX.

Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and God's holy prophets of old, have long since been gathered to their fathers. They are not now living in the church. They sleep in the silent dust, awaiting the resurrection of the just, to be gathered home.

Luke xiii. 28: "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets, in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves cast forth without. If Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets are not now in the church, and they are to be in the kingdom of God, the church is not the kingdom.

X.

That the church had an organized existence in the days of the apostles, no one who believes the Bible can for a moment doubt. In Acts ii. 47, we read that "The Lord added to them, day by day, those that were being saved." We cannot add to a thing unless the thing itself exists. But here we are informed that the Lord did add to the church; hence the church existed in the days of the apostles.

Paul represents the kingdom as coming when Christ comes to judge the living and the dead. "I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing, and his kingdom, preach the Word." 2 Tim. iv. 1.

If, therefore, the church existed in the days of the apostles, and the kingdom is to come when Christ comes to judge the quick and the dead, the church is not the kingdom.

If the saints are in the kingdom now, the judgment is in the past. But the judgment is yet future; and, hence, the kingdom is future also, while the saints are in the church now. Therefore, the church is not the kingdom.

XI.

The kingdom of God can never be divided. It is to stand for ever. It shall never be destroyed. Hence division cannot exist, for "a house divided against itself cannot stand."

But the church has been divided. Look at the different "isms" of the day, and you have ample proof of this. Today, different factions bite and devour each other. Each tries to put the other down. Yet each of these churches claims to be the kingdom of God. How, in view of these facts, and in view of the Savior's declaration, "If a kingdom be divided against itself, that kingdom cannot stand." Mark iii. 24: can the professed church claim to be the kingdom of God?

If, therefore, the kingdom of God cannot be divided, and it never can be, for it shall never be destroyed (Dan. ii. 44); and the church has been divided, the church is not the kingdom.

XII.

"Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." John iii. 5. This language refers to the resurrection. Our Lord declares that, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the Spirit is Spirit." John iii. 6. Paul says "there is a natural body and there is a spiritual body;" and he also says, "It is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body." 1 Cor. xv. 44.

When the sleeping saints are raised from the dead, and the righteous living are changed, they will have their spiritual bodies, which will be like Christ's glorious body." Phil. iii. 21; 1 John iii. 2. After rising from the dead, Jesus came and went as he chose, unperceived, like the wind. See Luke xxiv. 31; and John xx. 19-26. The saints will be able to do the same; for "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the voice thereof, but knowest not whence it cometh and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit" able to come and go, unperceived like the wind.

From the foregoing it will be easily seen that the birth of the Spirit in John iii. 5, refers to the resurrection. "Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."

It is proper here to remark that the Greek word which is here translated "enter," according to Greenfield signifies "to take possession of;" and that this is the probable meaning of the word here; for when the saints are born of the Spirit, they will enter into the kingdom and take possession of it, for "the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdoms under the whole heavens, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High." Dan. vii. 27. In the 22nd verse we have this language: "The Ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom."

If, as has been shown, the saints are in the church now, and one must be born of the Spirit in order to enter or take possession of the kingdom, the church is not the kingdom.

XIII.

In Matt. xvi. 19, we have the following words of our Lord to Peter: "I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." Keys are to open and to close doors. The word, however, is here used figuratively. Peter received authority to bind and to loose; and it may be said that he opened the door of the kingdom by making known the terms of admission. And what are they?

To the believing penitent Peter says: "Repent and be baptized every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost; for to you is the promise and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call unto him."—Acts ii. 38, 39.

To the saint, he says: "To your faith supply virtue; and in your virtue knowledge; and in your knowledge temperance; and in your temperance patience; and in your patience godliness; and in your godliness care of the brethren; and in your love of the brethren love. . . . . Wherefore, brethren, give the more diligence to make your calling and election sure: for if ye do these things ye shall never fall: for thus shall be richly supplied unto you the entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." 2 Peter i. 5-11.

If the keys of the kingdom were given to Peter, and he teaches that the believing penitent is to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and that he is to add to his faith virtue, knowledge, temperance, godliness, brotherly kindness, charity (and certainly he gets into the church before he does all this,) in order to enter into the kingdom, then the church is not the kingdom.

Having shown that the church is not the kingdom, I now propose to examine a few passages which our opponents claim as teaching that the church is the kingdom. Col. i. 13, "Who delivered us out of the power of darkness, and translated us into the kingdom of the Son of his love." As it stands in our version, this passage seems to teach that the saints are now in the kingdom; but a correct translation shows that it is in harmony with the position I have advanced.

The Greek word which is translated by Greenfield to signify "to move from one place to another, remove, transfer, to cause to pass from one mode of thinking to another, cause to change sides," in the Emphatic Diaglott New Testament is rendered thus:—"Who delivered us from the dominion of darkness, and changed us for the kingdom of the Son of his love." This translation removes all difficulty. Upon this, as upon other subjects, the Bible is not yea and nay, but yea and amen.

Heb. ii. 28, is quoted to prove that the church is the kingdom. Let us examine it in connection with the context. We commence at the 25th verse:—"See that ye refuse not him that speaketh. For if they escaped not when they refused him that warned them on earth, much more shall not we escape, who turn away from him that warneth from heaven, whose voice shook the earth; but now he hath promised, saying, Yet once more will I make to tremble not the earth only, but also the heaven. And this word: yet once more, signifieth the removing of those things that are shaken as of things that have been made, that those things which are shaken may remain. Wherefore receiving a kingdom that cannot be shaken, let us have grace, whereby we may with reverence and awe offer service well pleasing to God." In analyzing his passage, the following points appear:—

1. God's voice once shook the earth.

2. God has promised to shake once more not the earth only but also the heaven.

3. The declaration, "Yet once more," signifies the removal of the things shaken, that the things unshaken may remain.

4. When the shaking and removal take place, the saints are to receive a kingdom which cannot be moved.

Instead of proving that the church is the kingdom, this passage shows conclusively, when examined in connection with the context, that the saints are to receive the kingdom in the future when God shakes heaven and earth.

It now remains for us to examine Rev. i. 9, which reads as follows:—"I John, your brother, and partaker with you in the tribulation and kingdom and patience which are in Jesus, was in the isle that is called Patmos, for the Word of God and the testimony of Jesus.

There is a figure of speech called "synecdoche" by which a part of a thing is put for the whole, or the whole for a part, as—"This roof shall be my protection." Here roof, a part of the house is used to represent the whole house. In this example we have a good illustration of the figure. An organized kingdom cannot exist without its elements, for each element is a part of the kingdom itself. The church is an element, a part—the kings and priests—of the kingdom of God. John was in the church—one of the elements—and in this sense alone was he in the kingdom. If we try to prove that the church is the organized kingdom of God by this passage, we make it contradict other portions of the Bible, but when we apply the figure of synecdoche all is plain.

Wakefield translates Rev. i. 9, thus: "I, John, your brother, and sharer with you in enduring the affliction of the kingdom of Jesus Christ, was in the island called Patmos, on account of the Word of God, and testimony of Jesus Christ."

Thus, we conclude, that the common belief is altogether wrong on this matter. The church as a called-out body, occupies a high position now, but it is not in possession of its greatest honors. The saints are now undergoing training and discipline to fit them for the exalted dignity which shall pertain to them, if faithful, when the kingdom of God shall come "If we endure, we shall also reign with him; if children then heirs; heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified with him." Bible Standard.

From Bro. Woodruff's Scrap Book.

The mystery which is said to have been hid in God from the beginning of the ages (Eph. iii. 9) to be revealed to the holy apostles and prophets is this: That the Gentiles since the resurrection of Christ are made partakers of the Messianic promise of the kingdom, which aforetime was made to the Jews only as Abraham's seed. Now both Jews and Gentiles without distinction are one in Christ Jesus. How? By believing the glad tidings and being immersed for a union with the name of Jesus. This union is called "one new man," or the reconciliation of both Jew and Gentile of this dispensation in one Body by the cross; a body composed of many members, of which Christ is the Head. It is the church, his Body, the completeness of him who filled all in all.

Dominic Smith remarks about Nazareth and other places visited in his travels in the Holy Land as follows: "How strange it is that where Jesus lived so long,—where he first announced himself as the Savior of the world, and where the marvelous light of the gospel first burst forth with such splendor, and which has since made so many other lands radiant with Divine illuminations,—that here such gross darkness now covers the people; and not only Nazareth, but this whole land. Never before was a people so favored of God, and never before were such blessings so indignantly scorned and rejected; and never before was a country apparently so terribly cursed by the Almighty."

The Bible:—
"Within this useful volume lies
The mystery of mysteries:
Oh happiest they of human race
To whom our God hath given grace
To hear, to read, to fear, to pray
To lift the latch and force the way.
Better they had never been born
Who read to doubt, who read to scorn."

"The heavens" are symbolical of the civil and spiritual rulers of the earth, and habitable, although the saints are promised power over the nations to rule them,—to sit with Christ in the heavenlies; or as the prophet says, "Ride upon the high places of the earth." The present heavens are closed against them. They have to wait till the time for the present occupants, the principalities and powers, the rulers of the darkness of this age, the Satan which is sin in official manifestation, and holds the power and glory of the world's dominions and occupies the present heavenly places are doomed.

Jesus in the vision of the future, said, "I beheld the Satan as it were lightning fall out of heaven." This is by virtue of one stronger than he,—the Lion of the tribe of Judah to whom all power is given. His strength is sufficient to make an opening in the heavens, cast down the thrones and take to himself his great power and reign King over all the earth; when the kingdoms of this world will be his, and we as the members of his Body will sit with him on his throne. Having suffered with him we shall reign with him. As Paul says, the world to come is to be put in subjection to Christ and his saints. The Devil occupies the heavens at present; the world lieth under the power of the evil one. The God of this world reigns. That stone cut of the mountain without hands will by and by do the work. This is graphically set forth in the temptation of our Savior. The Devil taketh him up into a high mountain and showeth him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time; and the Devil said unto him, all this power will I give thee and the glory of them (that is the glory of the kingdoms) for that is delivered unto me and to whomsoever I will give it. If therefore thou wilt fall down and worship me all shall be thine. But Jesus said, it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God and him only shalt thou serve."

The Religion of Japan.

It would be hard to say just what the present religion of the Japanese is. There are all kinds of sects. Buddhism probably predominating. Since the Mikado renounced his infallible and sacred character considerable looseness in religious thought or superstition prevails—leaving, of course, all the more room for the advance of Christianity. The temples are very simple structures, the chief internal feature in many of them being a looking-glass, supposed to be emblematic of the soul's purity. Near it is a font containing water. In this the worshiper washes, then proceeds to the looking-glass and prays for what he wants, and after leaving a few coppers in a box near by rings a bell at the door thrice as he goes out.—Engineering Magazine.

The Christian Endeavor Convention for 1895 will be held at Boston, Mass., next July, and the Nickel Plate Road has effected arrangements by which the lowest rates will be offered, either going and returning same route, or by going one route and returning in whole or in part by different routes. The following points of interest may be visited without extra charge: Chautauqua Lake, Niagara Falls, Thousand Islands, The Rapids of the St. Lawrence, Saratoga, Palisades of the Hudson, and the Hoosac Tunnel. Mar. 31.

Home-Seekers' Excursions South and Southeast via Pennsylvania Lines.

Special low rate excursion tickets with twenty day return limit will be sold March 5th, April 2d and 30th, from ticket stations on the Pennsylvania Lines to points in Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia. For details, apply to nearest Pennsylvania Line Ticket Agent, or address P. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a New Year gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

The Knight Templars Conclave will be held at Boston, Mass. during next August, and it will be of interest to Sir Knights and their friends to know that arrangements have already been successfully accomplished by the Nickel Plate Road providing for the sale of excursion tickets over direct lines, going and returning, or by circuitous route: i. e. going one line and returning another. By so doing many of the following notable resorts may be visited without additional expense: Chautauqua Lake, Niagara Falls, Thousand Islands, The Rapids of the St. Lawrence, Saratoga, Palisades of the Hudson, and the Hoosac Tunnel. The above arrangements will, no doubt, make the low rate excursion tickets offered by the Nickel Plate Road very popular.—Mar. 31.

Editor Restitution:

You can say to the brethren that we are striving and laboring for our Master in our weak way, as best we can. Our faith grows brighter and brighter the nearer we approach the coming of the Lord. Speed on the day. Our hearts rejoice to know that the time will soon be here when Jesus will be here arrayed in all his glory. Dear brethren, I ask an interest in your prayers, that I may be found ready when Jesus comes to make up his jewels. Oh, how my heart yearns for the glory that awaits me in that kingdom prepared for all those that love his appearing.

Your Brother, watching and waiting.

GEO. W. HAYNES.

Dear Restitution:

I write to let you know how generously the brothers and sisters have responded to the call of Sister Libbie Palmer, of Alden, Iowa, for the relief of the drouth sufferers of Nebraska.

The supplies that have been sent in have consisted chiefly of clothing, third grade flour and coal, which are all really necessary to be sure, but hardly sufficient in themselves to sustain a healthful body. You may read all the newspaper reports that have been circulated, or come and view the situation for yourselves, and you will be obliged to exclaim, "The half has never been told." Let me say right here, in behalf of our people, that they are not of an idle shiftless class, but are hardworking, energetic farmers, who have been reduced to poverty by successive failure in crops. Many of them only a few years ago seemed to be on the high-road to wealth. Some will say, "they have farms, why dont they mortgage and thus get means to tide them over?" I will say to all such, that the owners of some of the best farms in Furnas Co., have been trying since last fall to get loans on their land, and are unable to procure a dollar.

I will say to those who have remitted money, could you see the tears of gratitude in the eyes of the mothers, and hear the shouts of joy from the children when I have carried them meat and sugar, you would be amply rewarded.

I will here give a report of the money received by me for the benefit of the sufferers. The first to respond to the call was Bro. Edgar Hatch, and friends of the "Invalids Home," Kokomo, Ind., to the amount of $5.55. Sister A. E. Carskaden, Prescott, Kansas, $5.00 Brother Jesse White, Perry, Iowa, $1.00. Brother Jesse H. Benn, Norriston, Penn., $3.00. Brother and Sister Wince, Pierceton, Ind., $1.50. Total, $16.05.

Let me say in conclusion that all funds received by me will be expended to the very best of my ability for the benefit of the needy.

Address me at Edison, Nebraska.

JANE WHITE.

Dear Restitution:

How we miss thee this week. It seems like a month to wait, wish there were no odd Wednesdays to make us sad and weary. Dear RESTITUTION family, what are you doing these cold wintry days? A good time to read, write, think and execute something good for the Master and his cause, and his people. You must occupy and exercise yourselves in the Lord's cause or you will sicken and die spiritually, which is far worse than physical death, which only kills the body, while the other kills the soul or future life. One is a short nap while the other is an eternal sleep. Remember, our Master has taken his journey into the far country and he has been gone a long time, and he has ordered his servants to occupy and watch, and if we grow cold and careless, and thus let our faith, hope and zeal abate, our Lord and Master will come in a day when we are not looking for him, and remember that his return is now imminent, even at the door and if this be true and our faith be strong, then we like Father Abraham, should give glory to God, lifting up our heads and rejoicing in the Lord, believing that our redemption is very nigh. Remember, that if our faith, and hope, and zeal grow cold, because iniquity abounds and the Bridegroom tarries, the door will be locked and we left out to knock and plead in vain. Do not forget brethren, that in time past they who feared the Lord and thought upon his name, spake often one to another, and the promise, oh, how grand and satisfying it is.

T. E. ADAMS.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I thought I would send in my mite. I have not written for the paper but once before. We have nine of the one faith here within a radius of 20 miles. I want to tell about my faith. I want to grow in the knowledge of our Lord. If our title to the eternal inheritance cannot be found in the Mosaic Testament, then turn to the Abrahamic or New Testament. It is distinguished from the Mosaic because it is everlasting, and what is everlasting must always be new and never become old and vanish away. This New Covenant must remain as long as the redeemed and their inheritance remains. It is also new because though typically confirmed four hundred and thirty years before the law, it was not fully confirmed until about fifteen hundred years after the law, when the blood of Christ was shed as the blood of the everlasting covenant, and thus a new and living way was opened up for the pardon of sin, a way different from any that had been seen before. The following proves that it is the Abrahamic covenant on which all Christians should stand, the law could not annul it. Gal. iii. 17. Christ came to confirm its promises. Rom. xv. 8. He is the one seed named in that covenant and we that are of the Abrahamic faith who have obeyed the gospel, been buried with him in baptism and raised to walk in newness of life are the joint-heirs with Christ in that kingdom that is to be established at Christ's second coming. Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly. Let our loving eyes behold thee the Lamb that was slain and lives again, and is alive forevermore, and holds the keys of death and hell.

Brothers and Sisters I ask an interest in your prayers.

MARY E. HOWARD.

Editor Restitution:

I am here alone, no one to see or talk with that are interested in the truth. Most of the people are church members and they are the last ones that are willing to talk on Bible subjects. They are all going up as soon as they die. The great deception is almost universal. I am hoping and praying for the kingdom that is to be set up on the earth when the Nobleman returns.

All the preaching that I get is in THE RESTITUTION, and the letters that the brethren write do my soul good when I read them. Let us pray that we all may be kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation when he comes who is our Life.

JACKSON WALKER.

Dear Restitution:

As I am a reader of your columns and see so many good letters from all over the country published in it, I thought maybe you would put mine in.

I will be eleven years old next June and I know you wont expect much of me.

Bro. J. F. Wagoner has just left us after holding a good meeting of nearly two weeks, and I was sorry when he left. We have a Bible Class here every Sunday evening and I recite a lesson in Catechism of the Bible to Miss Sadie Skeels. I am trying to learn all I can.

Your Little Friend.

CLEVELAND SUTHERLAND.

[We are glad to hear from our "little friend," and that he is "trying to learn all he can." We are all commanded to "grow in knowledge," and when we begin early in life, just think how much more we will know of God's ways, than if we put it off until we grow old. Ed.]

Editor Restitution:

I will write you a few lines to let you know that we like your paper just splendid. My husband calls it a "soul-sleeper paper" and I call it a "sanctified paper," and so it suits us both. My husband does not belong to any church, but I belong to the "Church of God," and love all Christian people. My hope is built on Christ and his righteousness.

Some movers camped near our house and left a paper and my children found it and brought it to the house, and that is the way the Lord had us to find this great paper out. It has done me lots of good. I would not be without for twice the amount. I wish I could see some of you and have a talk with you about the Lord. I talk to the people and they call me crazy. A preacher called me a "crank" and he took down sick in the pulpit and died. I beat everything as well as I can, and I want you all to pray for me.

AMANDA FERGUSON.

Dear Restitution:

I will now send $1.50 to pay for the paper I so much love to read. I am sorry I could not send it sooner, but it is hard times here as in other places, but I hope I can pay more promptly hereafter. I believe in the restitution, I believe in the everlasting gospel as Brother J. S. Hatch describes in the issue of Jan. 23. I might say I love the writings of all the good brethren, but, why do I call them brethren? I am not united with the brethren only in mind, but that is why I call them brothers, because I am united with them in faith in Christ and his gospel and kingdom, and if there was a church of the same faith near enough I would unite with it. Waterville is the nearest, and that is about one hundred miles from me. I have heard Bro. Corbaley preach a few sermons in Spokane and that is all the preaching I have ever heard of our faith.

Love to all.

HIRAM CORBELL.

Bro. Undercoat:

Last Saturday Brother Geo. Meyer came to Gladbrook and stayed with the church here over Sunday, giving three discourses upon practical themes. The church was built up and edified.

While he was here I was at Clarksville. Meeting began there on Friday evening and lasted until Wednesday evening of the following week. Seven discourses in all were given.

The attendance was small. The Christian denomination began a meeting on Sunday and continued every evening, this and two funerals during the week and the Toboggan Slide was the cause. Yet, there are some in Clarksville who love the gospel of the kingdom and will obey it we trust before long.

Money is scarce and many will not take THE RESTITUTION until another year.

Our visit to Clarksville will long be remembered as among the best of our meetings.

A. J. EYCHANER.

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God's love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through. No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MARCH 18, 1895. NO. 10.

Poetry.

Forgiveness.

Forgiveness is the fragrance, rare and sweet,
That flowers yield when trampled on by feet
That reckless tread the tender, teeming earth;
For blossoms crushed and bleeding yet give birth
To pardon's perfume; from the stern decrees
Of unforgiveness, Nature ever flees.

Ella R. Giles.

Original.

Baptism for the Remission of Sins.

Information is conveyed to the human mind through the medium of both spoken and written language which is made up of words united by correct rules into groups called sentences. Entering into the formation of these sentences are parts of speech called nouns, verbs, adverbs, adjectives prepositions, pronouns both singular and plural, etc. Now, suppose we misplace some of these parts of speech, as for instance, use the plural number in connection with a pronoun when the singular should have been selected, we then give an imperfect expression of thought upon the topic we may wish to convey information upon to others.

In quoting the language of some author, we are not allowed to rearrange the parts of speech used in said quotation lest the thought of the writer should be changed. Now, we read that "holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." These "holy men" spake just the right words to convey the mind of the Holy Spirit to those who hear and read those words, and this being the case, we are not allowed to change the parts of speech in such language, to suit some notion of ours. With regard to the book of Rev. lation we are forbidden to add to, or "take away from the words of the prophecy of this book," on pain of having our part stricken from the book of life.

On the day of Pentecost the Holy Spirit filled the apostles and qualified them to deliver the message of life in the various languages of their auditors, and no mortal man may safely take the privilege to re-arrange the parts of speech in the language indited by the Holy Spirit on that occasion.

Peter speaking by divine inspiration rehearsed to his hearers how God had raised up the Christ, whom they had slain, to sit upon David's throne, and sent home the truth with such convicting power, that they cried out, "Brethren what shall we do?" and Peter said to them, "Reform, and be each of you immersed in the name of Jesus Christ, in order to the remission of sins." (Campbell's Trans.)

There are those who ignore the doctrine of baptism for the remission of sins, and seek to evade the force of the above language. I quote from one as follows: "Peter was talking to those who crucified their king; and they were convinced that they had killed their king. Now, for this sin (or error) they must repent and be baptized."

Such writers take to themselves the liberty of changing the language as indited by the Holy Spirit by using the word sin in the singular in place of the plural number, that their theory may be read in. To change the grammatical construction of the writings of a human author is considered wrong, but to take such liberty with the writings indited by the Holy Spirit, is hardly pardonable.

Peter was sent to Saul of Tarsus with the following message: "The God of our fathers hath chosen thee, that thou shouldst know his will, and see that Just One, and shouldst hear the voice of his mouth. For thou shalt be his witness unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard. And now why tarriest thou? arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." Now here we have a man specially chosen to "know his will," and "be his witness unto all men." Before he entered upon his important mission, as a preacher of righteousness to others, he himself must first have the pardon of sin. Peter says: "Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins."

The word "thy" is a personal pronoun in the possessive case, possessing sins, (in the plural number) which he must "wash away" by being "baptized." Now, if this specially "chosen," and specially instructed "witness" to the Gentiles, must "wash away" his "sins" by being "baptized." Think ye that those Gentiles to whom he was about to bear "witness," would not have to submit to the same method as himself, and also the convicted thousands on the day of Pentecost? unless there are various methods by which men may be saved.

Now, I will produce some direct positive evidence from God's Word showing that the message Peter proclaimed on the day of Pentecost, for the remission of sins is not limited to the few Jews who slew the Lord of glory, but the same shall be proclaimed for the remission of sins, and my authority for the statement is based on no less a person than the resurrected Christ.

See Luke xxiv. 44-51: "And he said unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning me. Then opened he their understanding, that they might understand the Scriptures. And said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day. And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. And ye are witnesses of these things. And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high. And he led them out as far as to Bethany, and he lifted up his hands, and blessed them. And it came to pass, while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven."

We read that he opened "their understanding that they might understand the Scriptures." Would that it could be the case today with many who profess to teach the people, and lead them into error. He made them understand why it was a necessity that he should "suffer, and rise from the dead the third day: and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name, among all nations,

BEGINNING AT JERUSALEM."

Peter's proclamation for the remission of sins was not to begin and end at Jerusalem, but should begin at that city, and from that point extend "among all nations." Now the message for remission of sins which should begin at Jerusalem, would be the identical message which shall be proclaimed "among all nations," for the same purpose. If we proclaim something different "among all nations," "for the remission of sins," from that which did begin at Jerusalem it would not be the proclamation for the "remission of sins (which) should be preached in his name beginning at Jerusalem," but something else. Now what did begin at Jerusalem? Listen: after Peter had preached to them a risen Christ to sit on David's throne, he said: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." This is what really did begin at Jerusalem, and Jesus said this is the "repentance and remission of sins, (which) should be preached in his name, among all nations beginning at Jerusalem: Jesus said "repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name." In what way is remission of sins connected with "his name?" See the fulfillment of this prophecy in Acts ii. 38: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." Likewise Saul was commanded to "arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord."

Col. ii. 7-13, is a remarkable testimony showing that we have remission of sins in baptism: "Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ. For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principality and power: In whom also ye are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in putting off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ."

Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God who hath raised him from the dead. "And you, being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses."

Notice verse eleven. The allusion to circumcision is significant. In Gen. xvii. 8, 9. God makes a covenant to Abraham and his seed with regard to an everlasting possession of the land of Canaan, and says: "thou shalt keep my covenant, etc.," and commands circumcision as a seal of the keeping of the covenant. See Rom. xv. 8: "Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers."

And if we are circumcised in him, become Christ's by being baptized into him, we then become Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. (Gal. iii. 27-29).

Hence in Col. ii. 11, we are told that we put "off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ." What is "the circumcision of Christ?" If we complete the sentence as found in verse 12, we have it as follows: "Buried with him in baptism, wherein also ye are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead. And you, being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses." It is in baptism we are "quickened together with him," "risen with him," and the result is, hath "forgiven you all trespasses."

It does seem to me that no one can study the sixth chapter of Romans (which was a letter written to a Gentile church, in a Gentile country) without being convinced that baptism is for the remission of sins. The first twelve verses are rich in matter on that line, but space forbids its being considered at this time, but will briefly direct your attention to verses 17 and 18: "But God be thanked, that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you. Being then made free from sin, ye became the servants of righteousness."

These verses state specifically the condition of the one who has "obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered you." Before obedience "ye were the servants of sin" after obedience, "being then made free from sin ye became the servants of righteousness." No one can possibly figure away the teaching that these Gentiles were "made free from sin" as a result of obedience.

In harmony with this is 1 Peter i. 22: "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart fervently: Being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the Word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever. For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away: But the Word of the Lord endureth for ever. And this is the Word which by the gospel is preached unto you." "Ye have purified your souls (lives) in obeying the truth,"—the purity following "obeying the truth," is forgiveness of sins, "being born again," "by the Word of God," "and this is the Word which by the gospel is preached unto you."

Another significant text is found in 1 Pet. iii. 21: "The long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing, wherein few, that is, eight souls were saved by water. The like figure whereunto, even baptism, doth also now save us, (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God,) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ."

Now, there can be no salvation until sin is forgiven, and if "baptism doth also now save us," it signifies that forgiveness of sins results from that act of obedience I defy any one to possess "the answer of a good conscience," and at the same time have a "conscience" hardened with sin.

We cannot be of the truth, and reject the prophesy of Jesus, "that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations (Jews and Gentiles) beginning at Jerusalem:" which preaching was: "Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins," (in the plural).

The candid must certainly see that remission of sins follows obedience of faith by being baptized. It certainly would be well for every one to be very cautious with regard to accepting the teaching of those who hold the contrary, lest you make a fatal mistake. Eternal life is too precious a gift to sacrifice for somebody's pet hobby. We are nearing the consummation of the age. Let us be very careful both with regard to doctrine and a practical clean walk in life.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 9.

JACOB BLESSING HIS OWN SONS.

Zebulon's home is to be by the Sea, his tribe is to be a sea-faring people. Two hundred and fifty years pass away and Zebulon receives his portion in the promised land, and it borders on the Mediterranean Sea, and on the Sea of Galilee.

"Issacher, is a strong ass,"—a "strong-boned" fellow, who can drudge away at any work with patient endurance. But why is he said to couch between two burdens? The word rendered burdens, is, Mr. Bush says, from a root-word, that means, "to stick up, to be prominent." Issacher received for his lot in Canaan the beautiful vale of Esdrnelon, lying between ranges of hills, there he couched, or settled himself and went to farming.

Dan is to be a judge. Samson one of the judges who ruled twenty years was of the tribe of Dan. He is to be a serpent by the way—a dangerous foe to his enemies, this was fulfilled in Samson, but this deliverance is only a short-lived redemption; Jacob is not satisfied at this glimpse beyond the lifted curtain, there is something better than this for Dan, it is the salvation of the Lord, that is to come through Jesus, that he waits for.

God is to be overcome at first,—he will conquer by and by. The tribe of Gad was a war-like tribe, there were mighty men among them, but they were tormented and beaten by their enemies in Canaan, when they first made it their home, but crying to God, and trusting in God, their foes were slain.

Asher is to have the royal dainties, his land was of the best in Palestine.

Naphtali is to be swift and timid like the hind giving "goodly words," "words of fairness, elegance, grace," and perhaps of poetry and song.

And now, the blessing of preeminence is given to Joseph. No writer, no language has ever produced more beautiful passages than those that in Genesis and Deuteronomy refer to Joseph.

You will think as I do when you have read them over and have compared them together.

"Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well, whose branches run over the wall.

The archers have sorely grieved him, and shot at him, and hated him; but his bow abode in strength and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob; (from thence is the Shepherd, the Stone of Israel.) Even by the God of thy father, who shall help thee, and by the Almighty who shall bless thee with blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under * * *

The blessings of thy father, have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills; they shall be on the head of Joseph and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren.

Like a vine, would the children of Joseph climb over and go beyond the walls of their home.

They would colonize and take root in other lands, other nations might fight against them and hate them, but, oh see! their bow abides in strength! Abiding, means enduring, lasting—something that cannot be shaken. It abides in strength, because the arms that hold it are made strong of God. Joseph was strong in the hour of temptation, because he trusted in God and fought with the weapons of God.

Jesus was strong in that love to face battle with satan, because he used the arrows of truth to baffle the foe.

The nations that spring from Joseph are to be trusting, God-fearing nations, strong in moral principle and rectitude of conduct.

All that heart of love, or tenderest hope of friend could wish for friend is to be the inheritance of Joseph's people.

No matter about the years of rebellion of sin, of captivity, of hiding from the sight and knowledge of men, they are to come to light as a great people, strong in the knowledge and fear of God. Joseph's tribes must be found, mighty dominant nations, not in Canaan, but in another land.

They have been lost and thought dead for years upon years. But blessings of heaven above, and blessings of the deep that lieth under, have followed them, and will be on the heads of Ephraim and Manasseh, and on the crowns, on heads of their rulers, to the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills,—or forever and ever. Joseph will make himself known to his brethren by and by. Judah will recognize Ephraim and Manasseh, and the other tribes and there will be tears and embracings and shouts of joy. All this must come to pass, because God has promised in a coming time to unite all the tribes again into one kingdom upon the mountains of Israel.

We come to Benjamin now, his descendants are to be stalwart warriors.

The words of prophetic blessing are ended, Jacob dies, is carried back to Canaan and buried in the field of Machpelah, where Abraham and Sarah, Isaac and Rebekah, and Leah were buried; Joseph forgives and cares for his brethren, lives to be an hundred and ten years old and dies.

You want to know why Jacob says so much more about Judah and Joseph, than about his other sons? He has the prophet's glasses on, it is like looking into the future with the eyes of God, because God tells him what is going to be, through thousands of years to come, and he can see that the name of Judah, and the name of one of Joseph's tribes, will by and by be the names of the two kingdoms into which the twelve tribes will be divided.

The division took place after the death of King Solomon, of whose greatness and glory, you have read so much. Ten tribes were sent away from his house, and were given to other rulers. These tribes, constituted "The Kingdom of Israel," or "Ephraim's Kingdom." The name Ephraim, alone, was sometimes used to designate it, Hosea vi. 4; v. 12, 13, 14, 15. But Ephraim's surname was Israel, and so this name was more frequently used.

Two tribes constituted the Kingdom of Judah. The name Judah, stood for, and included both the tribe of Judah and that of Benjamin, because it was the chief representative name.

The tribe of Levi, remained with Judah, but it was not numbered with the other tribes.

Joseph was distinguished above his brethren in the blessing because in character and rulership he was a picture of the character and rulership of a coming Savior: and Judah because from him was to spring many of the future kings of the tribes, and from these the desired, the longed-for Redeemer.

But you thought Judah proposed selling Joseph to the Ishmaelites? He did, and Judah in the person of Judas sold the Savior into the hands of sinners to be put to death.

Is there anything in the blessing given to Joseph that makes him look like Jesus? Indeed there is, He is given place and honor far above that of his brethren. And so it is with Christ. He stands at the head of the redeemed ones in honor and glory and power.

Joseph has two tribes the one to be a great nation the other a multitude of nations.

Jesus has "the church of the first-born" and "the innumerable company that no man can number."

Israel, the name of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob—becomes the name of Ephraim and Manassah; —the name of Father, Son and Holy Spirit, becomes the name of Christ's dear followers.

The sons of Joseph were adopted by having the name of Israel named upon them; we are adopted by having the name of Christ named upon us in the waters of baptism.

Joseph's sons become joint-heirs with him in the blessing, by the terms of adoption, we become joint-heirs with Christ as the adopted children of God. Joseph stood next to Pharoah in the government of Egypt,—all things were put into his hands,—all things are to be put into the hands of Jesus. Everything went smoothly and quietly on while Joseph ruled. Everything will come right when Jesus reigns.

AUNTIE WINCH.

A common task may become a holy service, by doing it to please God.

The Resurrection advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the ushering in of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as priests with him in the government of the nations; the resurrection of the just to life, and resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ; these and many other kindred truths. Also a timely belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Talents.

My dear young Friends:

Suppose we were bidden to work for a prize, would we not work very earnestly, each one trying to win it?

God is offering a prize; not to any particular one of us, but to all who will work. This prize, this gift of God is eternal life and a home in his beautiful kingdom.

Some have money to buy homes without working, but God bids us labor for his kingdom. He has given us talents wherewith to work, —do we all know what they are? Probably not. They are the hands, the feet, the eyes, the ears, the mouth, Matt. xxv. 14, 31, and whatever we have that can be used for God. See parable of the talents.

To one servant he gave five talents, to another two, to another one.

Some of us possess a greater number of talents than others,—more money and brighter intellects.

Some of us cannot see, while others are deaf or lame.

The one to whom the Master has given five talents, is the one who has the greatest ability to do right, and the largest share of wealth, wherewith to carry on the work of God. He must put his talents out and bring in other talents, then, when the Lord comes and restores to him his ten talents, he will say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things I will make thee ruler over many things, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

To the one who received the two talents and used them to bring forth fruit he will say likewise.

The servant who received the one talent and hid it in the earth, is the one who uses all that he has for his own pleasure and not for the benefit of his Lord. He saves no one; he lays up no treasure in heaven. What will the Master say to him in the day of his coming? It will be this, "O thou wicked and slothful servant,—take the talent from him and give it to him that hath the ten talents, for unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath."

He has not been faithful in using himself and his money to bring about the rule of Jesus, and he can now have no part in that blessed reign, he has lost his own life, and all the glorious rights and honors of the kingdom.

These are the rewards according to the manner in which we use our talents. Let us all use them to the best advantage, that to us may be given the prize of eternal life when Jesus comes.

Your little blind Sister.

"Do not despise your situation. From every point on earth we are equally near to the infinite. We must live, act, suffer and conquer just where we are." •

"I cannot preach;" well, dont attempt it then; just talk; talk religiously just as simply and naturally and earnestly as you would other important matters, and your trouble would be more than half over. Of course you must have something to say before you can say it: but if your mind has been illumined by God's truth, and through obedience you possess a hope blooming with immortality you always have something to say. •

KEPLER concludes his treatise entitled, "Harmony of the Worlds," with these reverent words. "I thank thee, my Creator and Lord, that thou hast given me this joy in thy creation, this delight in the works of thy hands; I have shown the excellence of thy works unto men, so far as my finite mind was able to comprehend thine infinity; if I ha said aught unworthy of thee, or aught in which I may have sought my own glory, graciously forgive it." If Kepler was not a devout Scientist, we doubt if ever there was one. We have read of Newton, too, that he never mentioned the name of Deity without uncovering his head. •

THE Czar of Russia is determined to follow in the footsteps of his father. He will maintain autocracy unimpaired; so he told a deputation of Zemstoos that waited upon him. The Zemstoos are local councils an municipalities of the principal cities of the country. He said to them, "It has come to my knowledge that latterly in some meetings of the Zemstoos voices have made themselves heard from people who have allowed themselves to be carried away with the foolish fancy about the participation of the Zemstoos in the general administration of the affairs of state. Let all know that I devote all my strength to the good of my people, but that I uphold the principle of autocracy as firmly and unflinchingly as did my ever lamented father." •

JESUS said, "If any man serve me let him follow me," John xii. 26. On this it has been said, "Multitudes are trying to serve Christ without following him. They follow their own preferences. They follow a fictitious Christ. When Christ goes up a mountain, they go round by the base of it, and lose the trace of the leader. If we serve Christ truly, we serve him exclusively, not him and another." "Christians imagine that it is not necessary to break with the world as Christ did. If they are right, then Christ was much in the wrong. He would be strictly taken to task if he should make his appearance in the churches unrecognized, as when on the way to Emmaus. It would be seen that the disciples are the teachers; and they would require him to receive at their hands an improved Gospel." •

THE Memphis Commercial says Rev. Lem. Penrod of Grassy Creek, a few miles southeast of Vanceburg, Ky., got into an argument with John State, a lay member, on the subject of the efficacy of infant baptism. The controversy became loud, and Rev. Penrod drew his revolver and fired at State, the ball passing through his body and inflicting a fatal wound. Only a few days ago a Baptist minister in straightened circumstances up north put on a mask and entered a bank when all the officers save one had gone to lunch, and at the point of his revolver was about to confiscate the funds in sight when help came from across the street and arrested him. The Lord only knows how much of the material essaying to take the world for Jesus is of this sort. The rottenness of the theological systems is disclosed every day; and it is madness to expect moral progress upward from existing agencies. •

"HAPPY is he who has learned to do his work conscientiously, and then, without anxious questionings or haunting fears, leave the results wholly with God." •

"WHAT had the record of Jesus been to us, if we had only the records of his sermons without the record of his works? What value is our faith without our daily works?" •

SINCE our last report of the additions to the Body of Christ, in Cleveland, Bro. Wm. Ellfring, formerly a Catholic, and Sister Stafford, an Episcopalian, and Miss Lizzie Brown, a Presbyterian have become obedient to the faith. The last named was buried with Christ on Sunday last; and another was prevented by illness. We thank God and take courage, because a few can yet be reached by the gracious message. Four others are diligently searching to see if these things are so, and we hope they will soon have counted the cost and decided for God and Truth. •

"NEW York city has a shrine in which it is seriously asserted that there is to be seen a fragment of St. Anne, procured of Pope Leo XIII., and the press frequently announces the cure of some incurable case. Another shrine is located at Auriesville, Montgomery Co., N. Y., under the control of the Jesuits; and papers state that a veteran policeman has lately been cured of malaria of the spine, which baffled all the doctors. This, remember, does not come from South America or Mexico or Canada East, but from the Empire state. This is doubtless intended to aid in the conversion of America so vigorously attempted just now. •

A Reaction.

Advices from Berlin on Feb. 25, inform us that one of the Clerical members of the Reichstag gave notice on Monday that he would submit an amendment to the Anti-resolution bill, imposing a fine of 600 marks and imprisonment for two years upon any person who, in a public speech, or in writings, denies the Deity or the immortality of the soul, or who shall in any manner make an attack upon the religious character of the marriage relations. The Cologne Gazette characterizes the proposed amendment as an outrage upon human liberty, which will make Germany the laughing stock of nations. The clericals, the Gazette says, will next propose a law to enforce the doctrine of papal infallibility and the immaculate conception. In this connection we might state that the London Spectator speaks of a marked reaction in Europe from the prevalence of unbelief and socialistic disintegration towards Roman Catholicism and Conservatism, and quotes from M. Brunetiere, the director of the first organ of literary opinion in Europe, to show that science has lost part of its prestige, and that religion has recovered a part, and that it is coming to be seen that the antagonism between them is due to the extravagant pretentions of the men of science; and that science has not fulfilled one of the promises with which it started out; that is has not, as Condorcet thought it would do, establish a universal morality; nor has it organized humanity, as Renan expected. It has told nothing of man's origin or destiny, nor explained the origin of language, of society, of laws or of conduct; that the Hellenists indeed have discovered the scattered fragments of the Sermon on the Mount in the Manuel of Epictetus or the Thoughts of Marcus Aurelius,—but they have never explained why the Sermon on the Mount has in a sense conquered the world, while the Manuel and the Thoughts have remained mere barren pieces of literature. The Hebraists have had no better fortune. They have reduced the Bible to the level of the Mahabharata or the Odessey, and suggested half a dozen dates for the Pentateuch, and as many authors for the Fourth Gospel. The historians have been no more fortunate; they can tell us little enough about their own proper subject, and how can they explain a religion the interests of which transcends history, and is as living as it was in the days of the Shepherd kings? And when the moralists break away from religion they are just as much at sea. Physiology cannot prove or disprove the freedom of the will or explain the sense of responsibility. If we ask rules of conduct from Darwin we get only such maxims as that the weakest must go to the wall. And so it is that we are confronted by a religious reaction. Those who are convinced that a democracy cannot dispense with morality, and that men cannot be governed without religion are considering the various l ms. M. Brunetiere gives his vote for Catholicism because it is a government while Protestantism is the absence of government and its history the history of divisions. For our part we see from the wonderful activity in the Catholic world, that there is a change in the air, and we are watching with interest. •

Saved by Law or Gospel Which? No. 16.

We will have to abandon our purpose to make a paragraph of each commandment, as they are so numerous, and content ourselves with the bare mention of some of the rules laid down by our Lord. We think no one will have to look about for something else to do. And we respectfully suggest that the divine principle stated so long ago, "That to obey is better than sacrifice," is still in operation,—and as the words of Jesus are to judge us, it is to our interest to obey him before we do anything else.

THE COMMANDMENTS OF JESUS:—

Be ye therefore wise as serpents and harmless as doves. Matt. x. 16: Beware of false prophets [teachers] which come to you in sheep's clothing; but inwardly are ravening wolves. [What a comparison?] Matt. vii. 15: "Take heed that ye do not your alms before men to be seen of them, otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven." Matt. vi. 1. [This is a serious consequence.] When thou prayest enter into thy closet—and use not vain repetitions . . . your Father knoweth what things ye have need of: Matt. vi. 6, 7. If any man shall say unto you, lo, here is Christ or there, believe it not, for there shall arise false christs and false prophets. Matt. xxiv. 23, 24. Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh. Matt. xxv. 13. First cast out the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye. Matt. vii. 5. Ask and it shall be given you, seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you. Matt. vii. 7. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven. Matt. v. 16. Every one that heareth these sayings of mine and doeth them not shall be likened unto a foolish man that built his house upon the sand. Matt. vii. 26, 27. I say unto you that every idle [pernicious] word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment. Matt. xii. 36. Let them alone [those who teach for doctrine the commandments of men, see v. 9] they be blind leaders of the blind; and if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch. Matt. xv. 14. Therefore, all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets." Matt. vii. 12. [It is useless to think of skipping this and doing something else instead, which is not commanded.] The Word that I have spoken the same shall judge him in the last day. John xii. 48. Judge not, that ye be not judged. Matt. vii. 1. Love ye your enemies and do good, and lend hoping for nothing, and your reward shall be great. Luke vi. 35. Seek first the kingdom of God. Matt. vi. 33. [The Sabbatarians have sought that neither first nor last. They believe in a kingdom, but not the kingdom of God where all people, nations and languages serve the Son. Dan. vii.] The law and the prophets were until John, since that time the kingdom of God is preached. Luke xvi. 16. Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Matt. v. 10. If any man will do his [God's] will, he shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God or whether I speak of myself. John vii. 17. Man shall not live by bread alone but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. Matt. iv. 4. Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst, but . . . . be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life. John iv. 14. If a man keeps my sayings he shall never see death. John viii. 51. [What in addition to this would he get by observing the 7th day, which is not found among his sayings.] Take heed to yourselves lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness and cares of this life, so that day come upon you unawares . . . . Watch ye therefore and pray always that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass and to stand before the Son of man. Luke xxi. 34.

He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but have the light of life. John viii. 12. [No need of following any one else.] A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another as I have loved you. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye have love one to another. John xiii. 34. He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me, and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me. Matt. x. 37. As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise. Luke vi. 31. Swear not at all, neither by heaven for it is God's throne, nor by the earth, for it is his footstool; neither by Jerusalem, for it is the city of the great King. Matt. v. 34, 35. I say unto you, resist not evil, but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also. Matt. v. 39. If ye continue in my Word, then are ye my disciples indeed, and ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free. John viii. 31. And as the blessed Lord says in the 12th verse of this chapter, that those who follow him shall have the light of life, let us strive to follow him; it will keep us busy. We hope to present other commandments next week. •

Investigation Fatal to the Doctrine of Soul Immortality.

How many of those who assume, for it is only assumption, that man is immortal, have ever given to the subject the amount of thought and examination which its great importance merits? Will the theory stand investigation? We think not. Our opponents say that the soul is an immortal, immaterial being, that it is the thinking part of man, is incapable of death, and so lives on after the body is dead. Are we to believe that because it is immaterial it is therefore immortal, or because it is immortal it is necessarily immaterial? Does immateriality prove immortality, or vice versa? If God can create can he not also destroy? We affirm that man is now mortal and will remain so until 'the gift of God' is bestowed upon him, when 'death is swallowed up of life' when this mortal shall have put on immortality. And even then we claim he will still be material, but of a different organization. We believe that a thing to exist at all must be material itself, the product of material or intimately connected with material. Take any one of the things which we cannot conceive to be material themselves such as heat, light, gravitation and electricity, can we imagine any of them apart from matter? Are they not all products of matter, or associated with matter? We know they exist, and can feel their effects, but that is as far as we can go. We cannot put one of them under microscopic examination, nor into the scales and weigh it. If then, these phenomena spring from dead matter, why is it not possible for thought to proceed from highly organized and living matter? Sulpher, charcoal, and nitre, in certain quantities make the explosive we call gunpowder. Now what gives the powder its explosive property? Is it not the exactly proportioned and nicely arranged materials of which it is composed? Disarrange those materials by adding to, or taking from it one of its ingredients, and you render the powder valueless as an explosive; you have destroyed its organization.

Again, chemical analysis finds no difference between common carbon and the beautiful and brilliant diamond. The materials in both are exactly alike, it is in their organization they differ. How is it that the very same matter is so vastly different in appearance? We answer, the Creator who fashions, arranges, and organizes the crude materials of nature only knows. Look at a beautiful flower. Whence comes its delicate perfume, its color, and its exquisite formation? Again we answer, matter arranged and organized by the Almighty so as to bring about these results. Can we by analysing a flower-seed discover wherein lies the color, the perfume, or the life of the future flower? No; yet those properties are there. Crush the seed and you have disarranged its organization: it cannot now produce a flower.

We do not think our immaterialist friends will deny that dumb animals manifest affection, fear, and hatred, and we know, whether it be instinct or not, some brutes show wonderful powers of memory. Do they not hear, see, taste, and smell as we do, and if their sense, sight and hearing are, as we know, so exquisitely keen, why may not their other faculties or instincts be as much keener than man's. Yet our opponents will not allow that they (the brute creation) have immortal souls. If they have not, then they must be very highly organized matter. But we do not admit they have immortal souls any more than man has.

Whilst our opponents claim that man has an immortal soul, and say that it is the thinking part of man, they may forget that when a man is intoxicated his thoughts are rather confused. What is wrong? We don't suppose our friends would admit the possibility of the immortal soul "the divine spark" being under the influence of alcohol. Then, we ask, what has become of the soul while the man (the body) is drunk? Does it leave the body until the latter gets sober and then return? But that won't fit their theory, for they say when the soul (the thinking part) takes its departure the body is dead. We think it cannot control the body for being immortal and incorruptible, and also divine. It would not allow the body to get intoxicated, and if it left the body by its own will, possibly it would never return, but go straight to heaven or the other place.

Again, are we to suppose that some souls are capable of being overcome by alcohol which is taken into the body? No, that won't do either, for we are told that the soul and the body are two separate and distinct beings—the inner man and the outward man. It is the outward or body-man that is affected by intoxication. Then he must, after all, be intimately connected with the inner-soul, else how can the fact of his thoughts getting confused be accounted for? How absurd soul immortality appears when common sense and reason are brought to bear on it, apart from the overwhelming proofs of Scripture against the theory. This brings us back to our starting-point, which is that the immaterial soul theory will not stand investigation. We believe that man-mortal man, was made from the dust of the ground and was so arranged and organized as to be able to carry on all the functions of life which the all-wise Creator intended he should manifest, and that notwithstanding he was made in the likeness of God yet he is not a spirit like God any more than he is omnipotent or omnipresent, and that God from whom all life proceeds is able and willing to bestow immortality on all who will faithfully comply with the conditions which he has laid down.

Our opponents limit the power of God when they deny by their theory of immaterialism that matter can not be made to think. Is not God able of the very stones to raise up seed unto Abraham? By a word he can turn water into wine, and what a grand and sublime thought, he can make the very dust of the ground to praise him and magnify his holy name. This is the God whom we worship, the God of love, mercy, and forgiveness, who can kill and make alive again, and who at the sound of the last trump can re-animate the dust and raise the corruptible to incorruption.

Then we shall fully realise what the Scriptures declare, that life and immortality are brought to light in the gospel through and by our Lord Jesus Christ whom God has ordained as the life-giver and the only way by which man can pass on to immortality. Then the dust man is reorganized, rearranged and animated with a life that knows no end being like his risen lord.—Blessed Hope Series.

From Bro. Woodruff's Scrap Book.

We were made originally for God, and it is impossible we can be satisfied without him. Not that we can be truly satisfied in the present state; perfect satisfaction awaits the one time when we get God in his fulness in the glory of the immortal nature. But in measure we get satisfaction now in getting Christ into our hearts the hope of glory. The present is a real experience, though not so palpable as the future will be when we come to possess Divine nature the incorruptible body. Let a man believe in God and his heart will be eased from trouble, even in the midst of the evil of present experience. David says truly, "Great peace have they that love thy law, and nothing shall cause them to offend. Paul says, "The peace that passeth all understanding shall till your hearts and minds. This peace comes from faith in glorious facts: the fact of God's existence, his upholding all things by the Word of his power, his infinite and unsearchable wisdom, and above all his great goodness manifested in a thousand different ways, calling out our faith in him and love toward him, leading to implicit confidence and trust in him as our Heavenly Father.

"Watchman, what of the night? . . . . Watchman, what of the night?" The morning cometh and also the night. The millennial day being represented as preceded by a morning, the period of time just previous to the breaking of the n. ... ng is appropriately to complete the figure, called the night. And we read in one Psalms, "His anger endureth for a moment; in his favor is life; weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning." "The night is far spent and the day is at hand," no doubt referring to the time of trial, "fighting," "struggling," "pilgrimage," absence from the Bridegroom, mixture of tares with the wheat, tribulation, sorrow, death, etc., etc.—such is forcibly designated as the night. The night is the lifetime of the world, the power of darkness. The "day" is the resurrection, in which will appear a new state of being rising out of the old,—fitly represented by the "morning," revealing the ever ascending glory of God, the literal perfection of a new day, spoken of throughout the Scriptures as the "Day of the Lord,"—The kingdom of God ushered in by the return of King Jesus.

What a glorious fact it is that there is one that can be held up before the eye of humanity as a pattern. There were lips that never uttered an untruth; there were eyes that never looked aught but love, and purity and bliss; there were arms that never closed against wretchedness and penitence; there was a bosom that never throbbed with sin, nor ever was excited by an unholy impulse; there was a man free from selfishness, and whose life was spent in going about doing good; there was one who loved all mankind, and loved them more than himself, and gave himself to die that they might live—went to the gates of death that we might not be held in its eternal embrace. Yes; there was one who lay in the grave to take away its coldness and chill, and its power, and taught humanity how it might ascend above the grave. There was one, who, though he walked on earth had his conversation in heaven, and took away the curtain that hid immortality from view and presented us the Father, God in all his love. Such an one is the standard held up in the church of Christ as the embodiment of all that is attractive, and lovely and glorious.

"Tithes a tenth part" and applied to the gifts made in the service of religion. The payment of tithes seems to have been a most ancient custom from Abraham giving the tenth to Melchisedek, and from Jacob promising to give a tenth to the Lord. The requirement was that people should pay one-tenth of their produce to the Levites—who were devoted to the service of religion and relied on this as the means for their support. The Levites in their turn were required to pay a tenth of what they received to the priests. In the time of Hezekiah the custom had fallen in a great measure into disuse and in his reign was restored. Disregard to these religious offerings was severely condemned by Malachi while a blessing was promised to those who should faithfully discharge the duty. At the time of Christ's advent the Pharisees were so scrupulous in regard to the payment of tithes that they devoted one-tenth of even their garden herbs. Christ does not rebuke them for this, but for relying on it as a ground of justification while regardless of the weightier matters.

Living by the Day.

One secret of sweet and happy Christian life is in learning to live by the day. It is the long stretches that tire us. We think of life as a whole, running on for years, and it seems too great for us. We cannot carry this load until we are threescore and ten. We cannot fight this battle continually for half a century. But really there are no long stretches. Life does not come to us in lifetimes; it comes only a day at a time. Even tomorrow is never ours till it becomes today, and we have nothing whatever to do with it but pass down to it a fair and good inheritance in today's work well done and today's life well lived.

It is a blessed secret, this of living by the day. Any one can carry his burden, however heavy, till nightfall. Anyone can do his work, however hard, for one day. Any one can live sweetly, quietly, patiently, lovingly, and purely till the sun goes down. And this is all that life ever means to us, just one little day. "Do today's duty, fight today's temptation, and do not weaken and distract yourself by looking forward to things you cannot see, and could not understand if you saw them." God gives us nights to shut down the curtain of darkness on our little days. We cannot see beyond, and we ought not to try to see beyond. Short horizons make life easier, and give us one of the blessed secrets of brave, true, holy living.—A. B. Miller, D. D., in "The Builder of Character."

An Interesting Lecture.

H. T. Baker who has spent several years in the service of the British Empire in India as a police officer, delivered a most interesting and instructive address in the Christian church Wednesday evening. He dealt with the social and religious customs of the people and held the closest attention of his audience. The subject is a comprehensive one and at the expiration of three quarters of an hour's lecture the hearers yearned for another opportunity of listening to him in regard to his observations in foreign lands. Before long he is expected to give an address on Mexico and the South where he has been engaged in missionary work.—Cedar Rapids, Iowa Record.

Information of a semi-official character is given that it has been decided to create a new office of the highest rank in the Protestant Episcopal Church in this country. It is to have the title of Primus, but, further than this no information is given, as the proceedings of the Commission to revise the constitution of the Church is kept rigidly secret. The Primus would, of course, be elected by the House of Bishops, and the suggestion is made that Washington, as the Capital of the country, should be the See of the Primus.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Poetry.

Evening Time is Best.

There are those who say that evening time is best
When everything in Nature sinks to rest;
While the morning hour is passing fair,
With warmth and beauty springing everywhere.
And Hope is bounding in the balmy air,
And dawning with glad smile anxious care.
Some may hold that evening time is best,
But well I know that evening time is best
For weary ones in need of rest;
For simply musing, with its rosy light Creeping back the curtain of the night.
Then the earth all beautiful and bright,
Bursts forth in one grand anthem of delight.
For evening and joyous Childhood is the best.
Ere I go home the evening time is best
For I go God and I sigh for home
Long beneath my Father's roof to rest,
To lean my head upon my Mother's breast
And the sun declining to the west,
Knowing that the evening time is come!

First Epistle to Korinthioi. Chap. 14.

1. Pursue after the love, and be emulous for the spiritual gifts but preferably that ye may prophesy.

2. For the one who talketh with a tongue, is not talking to men, but to God; for no one heareneth; but he is talking mysteries in spirit.

3. The one who prophesieth though, is talking to men for edification and help and consolation.

4. The one who talketh with a tongue edifieth himself; but the one who prophesieth edifieth a church.

5. Now I desire that ye all talk with tongues, but rather that ye prophesy; moreover the one who prophesieth is greater than the one who talketh with a tongue, unless he interpret that the church may receive edification.

6. But now brethren, if I shall have come unto you talking with tongues, what will I profit you, if I do not talk unto you in the way of revelation or in the way of comprehension or in the way of prophesy or in the way of teaching?

7. In like manner the lifeless things that give a sound, whether a flute or a cithern if they do not give rhythmic pensation to their sounds, how will any have comprehended that which is being fluted or played on the cithern?

8. Yea forsooth if a trumpet give an unrecognizable sound who will prepare for battle?

9. In this wise ye also if ye give through the tongue a word not well understood, how will that which is being talked be comprehended? For ye will be talking into the air.

10. So many kinds of sounds are there perchance in a cosmos, and there is nothing without sound.

11. I shall be a barbarian to the one who is talking, if indeed I shall not have perceived the intelligent force of the sound; and the one who talketh will be a barbarian to me.

12. Therefore let the one who talketh with a tongue offer votive-prayer that he may interpret.

14. For if I am offering votive-prayer with a tongue, my spirit is offering votive-prayer, but my mind is unfruitful.

15. What then is it? I should offer votive-prayer in the spirit and I should also offer votive-prayer with the mind? I should exalt the strain with the spirit, and I should also exalt the strain with the mind.

16. Since if thou art commending in spirit, how will the one who occupieth the place of the unlearned say the amen to thy thank-offering, when he doth not know what thou art saying?

17. For thou art offering thanks well, but the other is not being edified.

18. I thank God that I am speaking with a tongue more than you all;

19. But in a church I would rather have talked five words with my mind to make catechoumns of (or instruct by word of mouth) others than a myriad of words with a tongue.

20. Brethren, become not children in sense (common sense) but be child-like in evil, and become adults in sense, (your common sense)

21. In the law it hath been written, With other tongues and with others' lips shall I talk to this laity, and not even in this wise will they have hearkened to me, saith the Lord.

22. So then the tongues are for a sign, not for those who have faith, but for those who are unfaithful; but the prophecy is not for the unfaithful, but for those who are exemplifying faith.

23. If then the whole church be come together and all be talking with tongues and ignorant or unfaithful persons shall have come in, will they not say ye are crazy?

24. But if all be prophesying and any unfaithful or ignorant person shall have come in, he is being convicted by all and is receiving a preliminary examination by all;

25. The hidden things of his heart have become manifest, and in this wise he will fall upon his face and worship (do homage to) God, declaring that God is really in your midst.

26. What then is it, brethren? Whenever ye come together, each one hath a psalm, hath a teaching, hath a revelation, hath a tongue, hath an interpretation; Let every thing occur for edification.

27. Whether any one be talking with a tongue, by twos or at the most by threes, and by turn; and let one interpret.

28. But if there be no interpreter, let one remain silent in a church, and let him talk to himself and to God.

29. But let two or three prophets talk and the rest discriminate;

30. And if a revelation be made to another who is seated, let the first become silent.

31. For ye can all prophesy one by one, that all may learn and all be helped;

32. And spirits of prophets subject themselves to prophets.

33. For God is not a God of confusion but of peace as in all the churches of the saints.

34. May the women have remained silent in the churches; for it doth not become them to talk, but may they have become subordinate even as the law saith.

35. And if they desire to have learned anything, let them have asked their own husbands at home. For it is a shame for a woman to talk in a church.

36. Or did the Word of God go out from you, or hath it come unto you alone?

37. If any one seemeth to be a prophet or spiritual, let him recognize what I am writing as it is of the Lord.

38. But if any one is ignorant let him be ignorant.

39. So then my brethren, be emulous to prophesy and do not prevent talking with tongues.

40. But let all things take place in good form and according to direction.

CHAP. 15.

1. Now I am making known unto you with what Word I evangelized you, the evangel (or gospel) with which I evangelized you, which also ye received, in which also ye stand,

2. Through which also ye are being saved, if ye hold to it, unless on the other hand ye have experienced faith in vain.

3. For among the first things I committed to you and which I received, is that Christ died judicially for our sins, according to the Scriptures;

4. And that he was buried, and that he was awakened on the third day according to the Scriptures;

5. And that he appeared unto Kephas; then unto the twelve;

6. And that after that he appeared unto upwards of five hundred brethren at one time, of whom the majority remain until this present time; but some have lain down to sleep.

7. After that he appeared unto Jakobos; then unto all the apostles.

8. And last of all he appeared unto me also, one as it were not born at due time.

9. For I am the least of the apostles, I who am not sufficient to be called an apostle, because I persecuted the church of God.

10. But by God's grace I am what I am, and his grace hath not occurred unto me in vain; but more than they all have I toiled; and yet not I, but the grace of God with me.

11. Whether then it be I or they in this wise are we heralding and in this wise have ye experienced faith.

12. And if Christ is being heralded as having been awakened from among the dead, how do some among you say that there is no resurrection of dead people?

13. If indeed there be no resurrection of dead people not even hath Christ been awakened.

14. And if Christ hath not been awakened, in vain forsooth is both our heralding and vain your faith.

15. And we are found also to be God's false-witnesses, because we have testified against God that he awakened the Christ whom he did not awaken, if forsooth dead people are not awakened.

16. For if dead people are not awakened, not even hath Christ been awakened.

17. And if Christ hath not been awakened, vain is your faith, ye are still in your sins.

18. And moreover those who have lain down to sleep in Christ have perished.

19. If in this life alone we have hoped in Christ we are of all men the most miserable.

20. But just now (quite recently) Christ was awakened from the dead, a first-fruits of those who had lain down to sleep.

21. For since through man death was, through man also is there a resurrection of dead men.

22. For even as in the Adam all are dying judicially, so also in the Christ they all will have been made alive.

23. But each one in his own rank, a first-fruits Christ; after that those who are Christ's in his parousia (at his coming);

24. Then the rest (or the complement) whenever he shall deliver up the kingdom to the God and Father, whenever he shall work out all authority and all official-power and ability.

25. For he must rule as king until he shall have put all the enemies under his feet.

26. A last enemy abrogated (or wrought out) is death.

27. For he (God) hath put all things under his feet: but when he said, all things have been put under, it is evident that it was outside of the one who had put them all under him.

28. And whenever they all shall have been subjected by him, then will he the son subject himself to the One who subjected them all to him, that God may be all in all. (or all things in all persons).

29. Since what shall we do who are having ourselves baptized for the sake of the dead if the dead are not awakened at all? And why are we having ourselves baptized for their sake?

30. And why are we incurring danger every hour?

31. Daily am I being condemned to death, yea it is your boast, brethren, which I have in Christ Jesous our Lord.

32. If as a man I have fought with wild-beasts in Ephesos, what advantage is it to me, if dead people are not awakened? Let us eat and drink gluttonously; for tomorrow we are condemned to die.

33. Be not led astray. Bad associations corrupt good (useful good) manners.

34. Awake from your stupor in a right way: and sin not: for some have ignorance of God: (or no comprehension of God). To your confusion I say it.

35. But some one will say, How are the dead awakened? And with what sort of a body do they come?

36. Thoughtless one, What thou thyself sowest, is not made alive unless it shall have died;

37. And in what thou sowest, thou art not sowing the body that is going to be, (or lit. to become) but a naked kernel, it may be of wheat or of a certain one of the rest (of the grains usually sown).

38. And God giveth it a body even as he hath purposed, and to each of the germinal seeds its own body.

39. All flesh is not the same flesh; but there is one flesh of men and another of animals, and there is one flesh of flying-things, and another of fishes;

40. And there are celestial bodies and there are terrestrial bodies (meaning bodies designed to live in the air above us and bodies designed to live upon the earth like ourselves) moreover there is one glory of the celestial and another of the terrestial.

41. There is one glory of a sun and another glory of a moon, and another glory of stars; for star differeth from star in glory.

42. Even so also is the resurrection of the dead. There is sown in corruption; there is awakened in incorruption;

43. There is sown in dishonor, there is awakened in glory; there is sown in weakness; there is awakened in ability;

44. There is sown a soul-body, there is awakened a spirit-body; if there is a soul-body, there is a spirit-body.

45. Even so also hath it been written, The first man Adam became a living soul, (or came to pass in a living soul) the last Adam a life-creating spirit (or came to pass in a life-creating spirit).

46. But not first was the spiritual but the natural; (the organic soul-life meant) after that the spiritual.

47. The first man was of dust from earth; the second man from heaven (lit. from the canopy).

48. As was the one of dust so also are the ones of dust; and as is the heavenly one (or the one from the canopy) so also are the heavenly ones.

49. And even as we have borne (or carried) the image of the one of dust we shall bear also the image of the heavenly one.

50. And this I say, brethren, flesh and blood cannot have inherited God's kingdom, nor doth corruption inherit incorruption.

51. Lo, I am telling you a mystery. We shall not all have lain down to sleep: (that is there will be some Christians alive when this change here referred to occurs) but we shall all be changed (that is from flesh and blood bodies to spiritual or spirit-bodies—without incurring death if alive when the time of this change comes the change must occur whether we be alive or dead be means).

52. In an indivisible space of time, in the wink of an eye, at the last trump. For a trumpet will sound and the dead will have been awakened incorruptible, and we (Christians) shall be changed,

53. For this corruption must put on (as an under-garment or be endued with) incorruption, and this mortality must put on (same word as above) immortality (lit. deathlessness).

54. And whenever this corruption shall put on incorruption and this mortality shall put on immortality, then will come to fall the Word that hath been written, namely, Death hath been swallowed up in victory;

55. Where, O death, is thy sting? Where, O death, thy victory?

56. The sting of the death is the sin; and the ability of the sin is the law.

57. Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesous Christ.

58. So then, my beloved brethren, become grounded, immovable, abounding in the work of the Lord always, since ye know that your toil in the Lord is not in vain.

CHAP. 16.

1. Now concerning the collection for the saints, even as I have given directions to the churches of Galatia, in this wise may ye also have done.

2. Every Sabbatic-period let each one of you by himself put aside and treasure up whatever he may have been prospered with, that whenever I shall have come, the collections may then take place,

3. And when I arrive whomsoever ye shall approve through letters, these I will send to carry your favor to Herousalem.

4. And if it shall seem best for me also to go my way, they shall go their way along with me.

5. But I shall come unto you whenever I shall have gone through Mukedonia, for I am going through Mukedonia.

6. And perchance I may remain with you or even winter with you, that ye may send me forward wherever I may be going my way.

7. For I do not intend to see you just now in passing by. For I hope to remain with you some time if the Lord permit.

8. But I am going to remain in Ephesos until Pentecost;

9. For a door hath been opened for me, a great and energetic one, and there are many who oppose.

10. But if Timotheos shall have come, see to it that he be without fear with you, for he is engaged in the work of the Lord as am I also.

11. Do not despise him then; but send him forward in peace, that he may come unto me, for I am expecting him with the brethren.

12. And concerning Apollos the brother, I have exorted him many times to come unto you with the brethren, and there was no purpose at all to come now, but he will come whenever he hath a good opportunity.

13. Be wakeful, stand in the faith, be manly, control yourselves.

14. Let all your affairs take place in love.

15. And I exhort you, brethren, know the household of Stephanas, because it is a first-fruits offering of Achaia, and they arrayed themselves for menial-service (deacon-ship-service) to the saints;

16. That ye also may subject yourselves to such and to every one who worketh and toileth along with you.

17. I rejoice moreover in the coming of Stephanas and Phortounates and Achaikos because they have supplied our lack.

18. For they have given rest to our spirit and yours. Recognize such therefore.

19. The churches of Asia greet you. Akulas and Priska along with the church household by household of them greet you.

20. All the brethren greet you. Greet one another with a sanctified token of friendship (a kiss or embrace or hand shaking or other evidence of friendship).

21. Paul's greeting by my hand.

22. If any one is not friendly to the Lord, let him be anathema, Maran atha (devoted—to wither away).

23. The grace of the Lord Jesous be with you.

24. My love be with you all in Christ Jesous. Amen. Unto Korinthioi.

CHAS. GARDNER.

The Jerusalem Colony.

The readers of THE RESTITUTION will doubtless remember a ripping I sent, cut from the Chicago Post, with regard to this people. Recently myself and other brethren and sisters attended one of their services, held at their temporary home on Monroe St.

We found quite an intelligent community. One thing was decidedly noticeable, and that was their simplicity, and spirituality. love and affection, which prevails to a large degree among them. They have cultivated this spirit to the extent that it is now plainly visible upon their faces, which bear an holy expression. It is certainly refreshing to visit a body of people who truly love each other, and extend the same to whomsoever they may come in contact with.

After service they visited with us and their unaffected genial hospitable manner made us feel quite at home in their company. They also have artists among them, who have taken large photographic views of nearly everything of interest about the Holy City and the surrounding country. These they exhibited to us with pleasure and being so familiar with the points shown their explanations made the scenes quite real to us that it seemed almost like making a visit to that country.

Most of these people left Chicago thirteen years ago, to live in Palestine, that they might have a better opportunity of studying the signs of the times.

With regard to the rebuilding of the Holy City they read from the Prophet Jeremiah xxxi. 38, 39, 40, specific lines in which the building would take place, read it: "Behold the days come, saith the Lord that the city shall be built to the Lord. From the tower of Hananeel unto the gate of the corner. And the measuring line shall yet go forth over against it upon the hill Gareb, and shall compass about to Goath. And the whole valley of the dead bodies, and of the ashes, and all the fields, unto the brook Kidron, unto the corner of the horse gate toward the east, shall be holy unto the Lord; and it shall not be plucked up nor thrown down any more forever."

On arriving there thirteen years ago, they commenced to seek out the points named by the prophet on which "the city shall be built unto the Lord." "The tower of Hananeel," being the first point named in the prophecy, they commenced to make inquiry as to where they could find the tower? but no one knew anything about it. An aged Jewish rabbi picked out a spot near the Jaffa gate, he said he thought the tower was located there. Some time after, parties were excavating to lay the foundation of a building when they struck rock. This upon examination was found to be the base of the tower of Hananeel. A portion of this new building was actually founded on the base of this tower. The prophet said: "the city shall be built unto the Lord from the tower of Hananeel." The Word of the Lord was fulfilled to the exactness of even placing the first structure upon its very foundation.

Next by their own exertion they made the discovery of "the valley of the dead bodies and of the ashes." They found there a very large hill, composed entirely of ashes, which upon examination was found to be the ashes from the temple sacrifices. Nearly two-thirds of this hill of ashes has been used in the place of sand, for plastering houses built along the line indicated by the prophet. The Sultan of Turkey has also built a fine paved road along this line, thus we see how God uses men to accomplish his purposes whenever his own good time arrives.

They also investigated the points named in Zech. xiv. 10, "All the land shall be turned as a plain from Geba to Rimmon, south of Jerusalem, and it shall be lifted up and inhabited in her place, from Benjamin's gate unto the place of the first gate, unto the corner gate, and from the tower of Hananeel, unto the King's wine presses." They could get no information concerning "the King's wine presses." So they followed out the line indicated by the prophet "South of Jerusalem," and discovered the "King's wine presses," large vats cut out of stone, and constructed so as to be emptied into each other, and from thence into a large cistern. Since they have been in this city building has commenced on that line "south of Jerusalem."

During their sojourn in Palestine rain has increased to eight inches. In July, 1894, they say the dews commenced to fall. The land is now quite fruitful.

"For Zion's sake I will not hold my peace, and for Jerusalem's sake I will not rest, until the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth."

W. H. WILSON.

Guatemala and Mexico.

Although Guatemala has made great advances in recent years, and is now the largest, most populous, and richest of the Central American States, she is no match for Mexico. Her population, according to her most recent census, is 1,304,233, and her standing army consists of 3,718 officers and men who are, for the most part, Indians, and good fighters if well led. The Guatemalans claim that they can put 50,000 troops in the field if necessary, but even if this rather extravagant claim were to be allowed they could hardly stand up against Mexico's fine army of 45,000 men on a peace footing, and 160,000 in time of war, including 131,480 infantry, 25,000 cavalry, and 4,000 artillery. They, too, are for the most part Indians, but they are thoroughly drilled, well equipped, and compare favorably with any European army.—Boston Herald.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1895.

The Knight Templars Conclave will be held at Boston, Mass. during next August, and it will be of interest to Sir Knights and their friends to know that arrangements have already been successfully accomplished by the Nickel Plate Road providing for the sale of excursion tickets over direct lines, going and returning, or by circuitous route: i. e. going one line and returning another. By so doing many of the following notable resorts may be visited without additional expense; Chautauqua Lake, Niagara Falls, Thousand Islands, The Rapids of the St. Lawrence, Saratoga, Palisades of the Hudson, and the Hoosac Tunnel. The above arrangements will, no doubt, make the low rate excursion tickets offered by the Nickel Plate Road very popular.—Mar. 31.

The Glorious Vision.

"And behold, there talked with him Moses and Elias, who appeared in glory and spake of his decease." Luke ix. 30.

We can never, in our present condition, take in or realize that wondrous scene on the Mount of Transfiguration. It was a glimpse of that glory in which the Lord will come a second time without sin, (a sin offering) unto salvation; the restoration of all things, that is called the "glorious appearing of the great God and [or even] our Savior Jesus Christ."

His person will be glorious as on the mount. "The fashion of his countenance was changed." "His face did shine as the sun and his raiment was white as the light." Matt. xvii. 2. "A bright cloud overshadowed." Heaven kissed the earth and unearthly splendor wrapt the scene. So will it be at his second coming "in power and great glory."

His attendants will be glorious. Here were Moses and Elias—in immortal bodies, in converse with their Lord. He shall come again and "his saints with him." When he shall appear we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is—transformed into his glorious image. The society will be glorious. Here it was the distinguished Old Testament saints. There it will be the redeemed of all ages—from the east and the west, to sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of God. It will be good to be there—where the smile of the Lord is the feast of the soul.—Christian Repository.

OBITUARY.

Anderson Wilkenson died at his home in Macy, Ind., Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 19, 1895. Brother Wilkenson was born Jan. 21st 1813, hence he was at the time of his death over 82 years of age. He was born in Ross County, Ohio his ancestors were formerly from North Carolina. He came with his father to Miami Co. in 1836, and located in the northern part of Union, now Allen township, where he lived the remainder of his life. He was married three times, first to Hannah Rains, who died and left a family of eight children. He afterwards married Mrs. Martha Sutton, who was the mother of two children. She died and he afterward married Mrs. Hannah Baker. He united with the Church of God about 32 years ago under the preaching of Bro. Shafer, and ever since has lived a consistent Christian life. By his death Miami County loses one of its oldest residents, he being one of four brothers who made up what was called "The Wilkinson Settlement."

Brother Wagoner was called to attend the funeral, but being absent from home could not be reached.

The Christian Endeavor Convention for 1895 will be held at Boston, Mass., next July, and the Nickel Plate Road has effected arrangements by which the lowest rates will be offered, either going and returning same route, or by going one route and returning in whole or in part by different routes. The following points of interest may be visited without extra charge: Chautauqua Lake, Niagara Falls, Thousand Islands, The Rapids of the St. Lawrence, Saratoga, Palisades of the Hudson, and the Hoosac Tunnel.—Mar. 31.

Home-Seekers' Excursions South and Southeast via Pennsylvania Lines.

Special low rate excursion tickets with twenty day return limit will be sold March 5th, April 2d and 30th, from ticket stations on the Pennsylvania Lines to points in Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia. For details, apply to nearest Pennsylvania Line Ticket Agent, or address F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Any one desiring my services to hold meetings during the winter may address me at Galesburgh, Mich.

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a New Year gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

Restitution:

I like your weekly visits and am instructed by reading it in building up Christian character, and my prayer is, that you may in the future as you have in the past, make THE RESTITUTION the best religious paper in the world. May God's choicest blessing rest on it, and may it be the instrument of bringing many precious ones into the fold of Christ.

JAMES H. VOLIVA.

Dear Restitution:

Please find enclosed my subscription for another year. also 50 cents to send it to some other brother or sister as you think best. I cannot do without it. It is like an old friend, as I have taken it so long, nearly thirty years. I love to read the good letters of the dear ones of like precious faith, and may we all bear the welcome plaudit, "Well done." Pray for me that I may hold out faithful to the end.

Your Sister in hope.

N. J. PRUITT.

Dear Restitution:

As my time has expired I will send money for another year's subscription to the paper. I would have written sooner but was in Missouri sick, and am now just able to walk out. I must have the paper. It and the Bible are all the preaching that there is nearer than sixty miles, as we have no organization here. There are a few baptized believers here and I think if we had a preacher we would soon have more. We have a fine country and climate, it is never very cold nor very warm. We would be so glad if some good preacher and school-teacher would settle here.

WM. GOIN.

Editor Restitution:

In your issue of Feb. 13th, I find a question, and answer concerning Mark xi. 13, which called to mind an exposition of that Scripture that I heard from a learned Jew, a few years ago, and I thought it might be of interest, so here it is. He said, there were two kinds of fig trees in Palestine, that one of them leaves out before it blossoms, and the other blossomes before it leaves out and that upon the one that leaves out first there was an exudition among the leaves something similar to the glue on our peach trees, and that it came much earlier than the fruit and was very delicious, and that the people there used it for food, and that this was what Jesus expected to find although "the time of figs was not yet."

Submitted for what it is worth.

W. J. ORRM.

Dear Restitution:

Please find enclosed $1.50 for the renewal of my subscription another year for I value the dear paper next to my Bible, as the two furnishes us all the gospel preaching that we are privileged to enjoy although we have four churches here in Milan, Mich. Alas, how feebly the gospel is presented, but I can say of a truth that my faith in the blessed promises are growing stronger as I see the glorious advent day approaching. I earnestly desire an interest in the prayers of the brethren and sisters that my faith fail not.

MRS. MARTHA HOUSE.

Dear Restitution:

To the brothers and sisters that are scattered, I would say that I love to read your letters and articles in THE RESTITUTION, telling of your future hope of the coming King and the establishing of his kingdom upon the earth. Brothers let us examine ourselves, whether we are of the faith, prove ourselves. What foundation are we on? There is a solid rock and there is also a sandy foundation. I am standing firmly on the Rock, Christ Jesus, our dear Redeemer. We hope and trust that we will be faithful unto the end, and to hear the blessed words of our Master, "Well done, good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Like Paul we want to be "found in him, (Christ) not having my own righteousness, but that which is through the faith [illegible] of his resurrection and the fellowship of his sufferings being conformable unto his death, if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead. Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect; but I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus. Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended, but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." And we trust that we are daily putting down self, not in our own strength, but in the strength of our Lord and Redeemer. We look to him and trust wholly in him knowing that he is working all things together for good to those who love him and look for his appearing. We can see that the time is short, but let us be humble ever remembering that we are acceptable only in Christ our Lord.

Ere this letter reaches you I will be 1000 miles from home on a missionary tour. I go to Tempe, Arizona, where Brother C. A. Saylor lives, to baptize and to preach the gospel which Paul says is God's power to draw men to Christ. I will be gone about three or four weeks. Brethren pray for me that I may speak forth the words of truth as presented by Christ the prophets and apostles, and that I may boldly make known the mystery of the gospel.

JOHN FOORE.

Dear Restitution:

We have just closed one of the best meetings ever held in Lanark, Ill. Bro. Hudler began a meeting on Monday night, Feb. 18th and a goodly number came out to hear him on the "State of the dead" as a beginning of a series of lectures. Interest seemed to increase until on Saturday night when Bro. Hudler was taken down with LaGrippe, which put an end to our meeting for this time. On Thursday morning he was able to go on his journey, but was not well. His next place of meeting is Oregon, Ill. The Lutheran Church was kindly given them in which to hold their meetings, and wherever Bro. Hudler preaches the truth is ably taught by simplyfying the precious promises.

J. M. GLOTFELTY.

Dear Restitution:

I am truly thankful to the dear Lord for his loving kindness in providing means by which I am able to forward my yearly subscription, and to contribute a little to help those who cannot. If all the dear ones in Christ appreciate the weekly visits of THE RESTITUTION as I do, I pray God they may not be deprived of so great a source of comfort and edifying s rength in the things pertaining to eternal life.

I am alone, and yet not alone, for the lord is with me to provide for every want, and to save from every ill. I am trusting in his Word and watching and waiting for his coming. May the blessing of God be and abide with you in the blessed work of sowing seed. We who are isolated from the Lord's table know how to sympathize with one another, and long for the return of the Bridegroom. It will be joy unspeakable and full of glory.

I am greatly rejoiced to hear from the young ones who have recently put on Christ. Be faithful and press forward to the mark of your high calling in Christ Jesus.

Yours in the one faith and hope of eternal hope.

R. A. NEFF.

To the loved ones of like precious faith:

It is with a feeling of gratitude toward God that I pen you these lines

The Union Church is favored with one grand speaker, Bro. Hudler, who is a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, always ready to give an answer to any Bible question. We have preaching about every two months. How glad we are that we can have a minister that preaches the faith once delivered to the saints. Tongue cannot tell how it refreshes us, i- is like a beautiful rain coming down on wilted grass in harvest time. We love to read the letters that come from the dear brothers and sisters. I often think of Brother Hatch and of the good seed that he sowed, and hope that it fell upon good ground.

Dear brothers and sisters let us not be discouraged, let us fight the good fight of faith and lay hold of eternal life. How we rejoice to meet our brothers and sisters and friends in this world, but our joy is turned into sorrow, for we meet but to part, but in the world to come they that are faithful and true will never be parted. So let us do all we can for the Master's cause. Let us do what the Editor requested, send in our mite, and send THE RESTITUTION to some one that is not able to pay for it, it helped me and it will help others.

My prayer is come dear Lord.

A SISTER.

Editor Restitution:

We see by the date on our paper, THE RESTITUTION, that our time has expired so please find enclosed the money to pay for another year, would like to send more but cannot at present do so. We love to read the letters from the dear brothers and sisters of like precious faith. O let us hold out faithful a little longer.

Let not pleasure guide our footsteps
Rather let us suffer pain.
No good comes from serving pleasure.
Death is her eternal gain.

We see so many around us seeking the pleasures of this world, even in our own church. Did our Savior seek the pleasures of the world? We find him going about doing good. Then let us follow his footsteps that when he returns to gather his own we may be among the number to whom he will say, "Come ye blessed of my Father inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." O may he come, and come quickley.

Your Brother and Sister.

MR. & MRS. EDWIN GARTON.

Our first duty is to find out what is our duty.

Go on in the strength of the Lord, and put Christ's love to the trial; put upon it burdens, and then it will appear love indeed: we have not recourse by his love, and therefore we know it not.—Rutherford.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1895.

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

ALIDS TO BIBLE STUDY AND MISSION WORK.

Written and for sale by Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks - those not able to pay for their paper - will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Poetry.

The Wind.

Softly the evening breeze
Is coming now
Sighing among the trees -
Fanning my brow:
Now quickly flies away,
Mid other scenes to play.

But whither it doth go,
No one can tell;
Over hill and streams we know -
Through shady dell;
But where it findeth rest
No one hath ever guessed!

It may be that 'tis hot
Mid waving corn;
Or where Aurora fair
Awakes the morn
Where Night and Morning greet,
Or earth and heaven meet!

Its whispering tones are heard
Among the pines;
By it the leaves are stirred,
And flowers and vines;
And often we rejoice
To hear its merry voice.

But we can never find
Its dwelling-place;
Nor with surveyor's line
Its bound'ry trace!
That it doth come and go,
In all the wide we know.

Paul's Second Epistle unto Korinthioi. Chap. 1.

1. Paulos an apostle of Christ Jesous, through God's will, and Timotheos the brother, unto the Church of God that is in Korinthos, together with all the saints that are in all Achaia;

2. Grace be unto you and peace from God our Father and our Lord Jesous Christ.

3. The God and Father of our Lord Jesous Christ be praised, the Father of the feelings of pity and God of all comfort.

4. The one who comforteth us in all our tribulation, so that we are enabled to comfort those in any tribulation through the comfort with which we ourselves are being comforted by God.

5. Because even as the suffering-feelings of the Christ abound toward us, so through the Christ also our comfort aboundeth.

6. And whether we are enduring tribulation, it is for our comfort and salvation, or whether we are being comforted it is for your comfort that inworketh in patient-endurance of the same sufferings that we ourselves are suffering.

7. And our hope for you is assured; knowing as we do that ye are not partners in the sufferings even as also in the comfort.

8. For we would not have you ignorant brethren, of the tribulation that occurred to us in Asia, that we were burdened beyond our ability so that we did not know how even to live.

9. Moreover we had had within ourselves the answer of death, that we might not put faith in ourselves, but in the God who awakeneth the dead.

10. And who did deliver us from so great a death and will deliver, in whom we have hoped that he will again also deliver.

11. While ye also co-operate in your supplication for us that the gracious favor toward us may through many (supplications) have become gratitude for us from many faces.

12. For this is our boast, the testimony of our consciousness (or our conscious testimony) that in God's sanctity and sincerity, not in carnal wisdom, but in God's grace we have conducted ourselves in the cosmos, and especially toward you.

13. For we are not writing other things unto you than those ye are accustomed to read and fully comprehend, and I hope that ye will fully comprehend them unto the end,

14. Even as ye have clearly comprehended us in part, because we are your boast, even as ye also are ours, in the day of our Lord Jesous.

15. And in this assurance I wished before to come unto you, that ye might have a second joy,

16. And that through you I might go on into Makedonia, and return again unto you from Makedonia, and be sent forward by you into Joudaia.

17. In desiring this then have I used anything forsooth in a trifling way? Or in what I desire, do I desire it according to flesh, that the yea may be yea and the nay may be nay in my own estimation?

18. God is faithful that our word to you is not yea and nay.

19. For Jesous Christos the Son of God who hath been heralded through us among you, namely through me and Silouanos and Timotheos did not come to pass (or was born) yea and nay, but yea in him hath come to pass.

20. For however many promises of there may be, in him are they yea: therefore through him also is the amen unto God's glory through us.

21. And it is God who is assuring us along with you in Christ and who hath anointed us,

22. And who hath sealed us and given the earnest (bonus) of the spirit to be in our hearts.

23. And I invoke God as a witness to my own soul that I have never come to Korinthos sparing you.

24. Not that we are lording it over your faith, but that we are co-workers of your joy: for ye stand in the faith.

CHAP. 2.

1. And this I have decided for myself that I shall not have come unto you again in sorrow.

2. For if I myself grieve you, who forsooth is the one who giveth me joy unless the one who is grieved by me?

3. And I have written this very thing that when I come I may not have sorrow from those who ought to give me joy, since I trust in you all that my joy is the joy of you all.

4. For out of much tribulation and constraint of heart have I written unto you through many tears, not that ye may have been grieved, but that ye might know the love that I have exceedingly toward you.

5. And if any one hath caused sorrow he hath not caused me sorrow but you all in part that I may not be burdened.

6. Let this criticism which is by the majority be sufficient for such an one.

7. So that ye on the other hand may have shown him favor and consolation, lest somehow so-and-so may have become overwhelmed with his exceeding sorrow.

8. Therefore I exhort you to assure love toward him.

9. For unto this end even have I written that I might know your approved-value, whether ye are obedient in all things.

10. And to whom ye are gracious I also am. For in what I have been gracious if I have been gracious at all it is for your sakes in the person of Christ, that we may not have been overreached by Satanas: for we are not ignorant of his designs.

12. And when I came to Troas in the gospel of Christ and a door had been opened for me in the Lord, I had no rest for my spirit, because I did not find Titos my brother: and taking leave of them I went out into Makedonia.

14. Thanks be to God though, who always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and manifesteth the odor of his recognition through us in every place,

15. That we are an odor of sweet smell unto God in those who are being saved and in those who are being lost:

16. In these an odor from death unto death; but in those an odor from life unto life. And for these things who is sufficient?

17. For we are not as the many retailing out the adulterated Word of God; but as it were from a genuine source, but as it were from out God, in the sight of God in Christ are we talking.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MARCH 20, 1895. NO. 11.

Conversion, What is it?

That the Bible teaches that men and women should and must be converted in order to be saved and enter into the kingdom of God, there can be no dispute among Bible people. But what conversion is, and how brought about, and what its fruits are, are questions somewhat perplexing to many. Webster says, Conversion is turning from one state to another; change; transportation. Peter in his second discourse to the Jews, Acts iii. 19, commands them to repent and be converted that their sins may be blotted out when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord, or, so that seasons of refreshment may come from the presence of the Lord. (Dia.) Those addressed were sinners before God, who, by his servant Peter commands them to repent, reform their lives, and be converted—changed, or turned from a state of sin and alienation from God, to a state of righteousness and reconciliation to God, that their sins may be forgiven. And to be Scripturally converted to God, one must hear the truth, God's plan of salvation, and understand it, believe and obey it. All else is simply conversion to the corruptible creature man, and his enchanting and misleading fabrications, composed largely of deathbed scenes and loud and earnest pleading and praying in behalf of immortal, never-dying souls, which is a stranger to the Bible. And by long pleading and perseverance thrown thousands into spasms of excitement, where they lose their reason, and are easily led about by the mesmeric medium or minister, and made to believe that they are converted to God, when in reality God and his truth are not in it. I would thank some one a thousand times for a Bible precedent of apostolic proceeding like the popular, modern conversion of today, if there be any on record. The truth today as in ancient times, finds men and women all mixed up, and interwoven with this world and its institutions, serving the god of this world for hire. And where the truth is received into good and honest hearts, where there is congenial soil to grow in, there must necessarily be a wonderful change wrought, a turning from one state to another, a breaking up and tearing loose from former associations, a changing and turning about. "Let the wicked man forsake his way and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord who will have mercy, and unto our God who will abundantly pardon." But says one, you are too narrow, and would take away all our pleasure, and leave us nothing to think about. Listen to Paul advising his brethren, "Rejoice in the Lord always, and again I say rejoice. Let your moderation or gentleness be known to all men. The Lord is at hand." And again he says, "Finally brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." And it is certain if we would follow the Blessed Master, and his servant Paul it will surely convert us and change our hearts and affections from worldly combinations and all secret orders. From Satan where the natural and worldly minded find pleasure and profit to God and his service. And if our conversion is genuine and of divine origin and we are not deceived, not only our outward relationship to the world, but our lives, our characters, affections and habits will be so changed that we will be new creatures in Christ. And if there remains a hankering desire to live and walk as we once did, in the vanity of our mind when our foolish heart was darkened, we may well suspect our conversion. Thousands claim to be converted, and are baptized and join church, who have never lost their love for this vain world and its attractions; who have never been crucified to the world, nor the world to them, which is the legitimate result of evil men and seducers waxing worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived. If the love of God, as manifested in the gifts of his Son to dying men, is heard and heartily believed it most assuredly will work a reformation in our desires and conduct, so much so that by the time we are converted our love for this world is gone. Our continued hankering after politics, which is one chief element of this world, that we must be dead to, and which is a seething mass of corruption, "spiritual wickedness in high places," must be so changed that we will not worry nor fret over the results of election, which only tend to separate and divide friends and neighbors. And you bad as well try to mix oil and water, as to try to mix the pure and undefiled religion which never spots a man with the world, and the corrupt politics of the world. The spirit of the Master and the spirit of the world will not mix, there is no affinity. Then brethren, if our hearts and desires still go out after the flesh pots of Egypt, there is something wrong, our faith in God and his promises must be weak. And if we prefer to associate and affiliate with the worldly secret organizations of darkness, any of them, and cling to our heathenish customs rather than to the church of the living God, the called out ones, it is plain as to where we stand. Remember that we are, and will be largely what we make of ourselves here. Then let us quit with a rush all those worldly amusements, and lay apart all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness and receive with meekness the engrafted Word, which is able to save us. All this fiddling and dancing, and sickening play parties is of the world, and clearly shows forth the character of our profession and conversion. It reminds one of the churches trying to convert the world by going over to them. Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world. If any man love the world the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." I Jno. ii. 15-17.

A conversion that doesn't convert and change the heart and affections of its subjects from the love of sin to the love of holiness, from the love of this present evil world to the world to come, and from Satan and all his evil works, to God and his truth, can only be surface work, hardly skin-deep. If the heart and affections are wrought upon and changed by the truth of God which worketh effectually in them that believe, there must be a corresponding change in the life. The design of truth is to change us, or cause us to change sides for the kingdom of the Son of his love. And the time past of our lives ought to suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles. Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the Sons of God. Therefore (for this cause) the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not." The world knew Jesus as a man, but it did not understand why he was so odd, and always reproving sin and sinners. Just so the world knows not why it is that people are so very peculiar as to stay on one side of the fence or dead line, and then on the other. It is because they are converted and changed. Know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God? And Jesus consoles his people by telling them, I have overcome the world. And now he promises much to those who will overcome.

T. E. ADAMS.

Was She Dead?

Matthew, Mark and Luke give an incident in the life of our Savior which is generally spoken of as a miracle of "Raising the dead." While Jesus raised to life the widow's son, outside the gate of Nain, and also Lazarus near the city of Bethany, yet, it is a question whether the daughter of Jairus the ruler, was really dead.

After a careful examination of all the circumstances connected with this incident as recorded by the three writers above mentioned I am driven to the conclusion that the girl was not dead. My reasons briefly are as follows:—

1. Jesus who knew what he affirmed, after he arrived at the house declares, "The maid is not dead but sleepeth." This evidence is repeated by Matthew, Mark and Luke. See Matt. ix. 24; Mark v. 39; Luke viii. 52.

2. Jesus nowhere recognized her as being dead. Matthew in describing the incident says, "He went in and took her by the hand and the maid arose." Mark says, "He took the damsel by the hand and said unto her, Talitha cumi; which is being interpreted I say unto thee arise. And straightway the damsel arose and walked." Luke says, "He took her by the hand and called saying, Maid arise." Luke further says that when Jarius came to Jesus that she "lay a dying," an expression which can only be interpreted to mean that she was in a dying condition. Mark says that the ruler said, "My little daughter lieth at the point of death,"—not yet dead but near to death.

I am aware that the expression "her Spirit came again and she arose straightway," is construed to mean that she had already died, yet there are similar expressions in the Bible of the Spirit returning again and of reviving when the facts show death had not occurred only fainting. "And they gave him a piece of a cake of figs and two clusters of raisins and when he had eaten his Spirit came again to him." I Sam. xxx. 12. Here is the same expression "his Spirit came again" and yet no one in his sober mind will say that this young man combined a piece of a cake of figs and two clusters of raisins and lo dead all the time. See also Judg. xv. 19.

After Samson had drank the water "his Spirit came again and he revived" and he was a lively corpse for 20 years afterward.

This "wresting" of the Scriptures over the plain statement of Jesus that the "maid is not dead" has long served as a favorite text on funeral occasions to show that people are alive when they are dead in reality, but Jesus says positively that she was not dead, and if Jesus must be a corresponding change knew, and told the truth, the maid had fallen into that state of Coma or deep sleep where all the vital forces seem to come to almost a standstill but she was not dead in reality.

Nor does it matter that one came and told the ruler to not trouble the Master and that she had died; nor yet that the ignorant crowd should laugh to scorn the Great Physician when he diagnosed the case before him. His statement outweighs them all. "She is not dead but sleepeth."

3. Again, Matthew, Mark and Luke use the Greek word Kathudo, which is never used to express death, but always sleep. A few examples will serve to show its use, selected from Matthew, Mark, Luke and Paul who are the only writers who use Kathudo.

Matt. xxv. 5. "They (the virgins) all slumbered and slept."

Mark xiv. 40. "He found them asleep again."

Luke xxii. 46, "Why sleep ye? rise and pray."

I Thess. v. 7, "They that sleep, sleep in the night."

"She is not dead but sleepeth."

When the sleep of death is spoken of another and stronger word is frequently used. That word is Koimaomai.

Examples. Matt. xxvii. 52. "Many bodies of the Saints which slept arose" (Koimaomai.)

John ii. 11, "Our friend Lazarus sleepeth."

It cannot be urged that Lazarus was only asleep for Jesus says plainly "Lazarus is dead."

Acts vii. 60, "When he had said this, he fell asleep," (Koimaomai.)

I Cor. xv. 6, "But some are fallen asleep (Koimaomai.)

2 Peter iii 4. "Since the fathers fell asleep (Koimaomai.) Literal death is spoken of by this word in all these places. But Jesus did not use this word, he used katheda always used in the New Testament to express sleep.

That her sleep was not a natural sleep is readily admitted, but she had passed into that unconscious state, either of coma or trance or so near death, that her attendants thought she actually was dead, and so reported her condition; but that she was dead in fact we no not admit for the direct statement of Jesus is "She is not dead but sleepeth."

A. J. EYCHANER.

Selected.

Live for Something.

Thousands of people in this world pass off the stage of life and are heard of no more. Why? Because they never did any good in the world, and none were blessed by them; none could point to them as the instrument of their redemption; not a line they wrote, not a word they spake, called up, and so their light went out in darkness, and they were remembered not any more than the insects of yesterday. Will you thus live and die? Oh, live for something, do some good, help poor souls to Jesus. Oh, I look out on this beautiful world God has made, and think of the lonely hearts there are in it, and see many idle, careless people who might be a blessing, sitting down on the stool of do-nothing, my heart is stirred within me, and I say, O Lord, awaken the people on this line. Oh, the good we all may do while the days are going by. If a tramp or peddler comes into your house you should not allow him to leave without speaking to him about his soul. The Lord help you to do it. Live for something. I am living to glorify God; are you? The Lord help you to do something for Jesus, who has done so much for you.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for Anniversation.

The One Cherished Sin.

Often from my window on the seashore I have observed little boat at anchor. Day after day, month after month, it is seen at the same spot. The tides ebb and flow, yet it scarcely moves. While many a gallant vessel spreads its sails, and, catching the favoring breeze, has reached the haven, this little bark moves not from its accustomed spot. True it is that when the tide rises it rises, and when it ebbs again it sinks, but advances not. Why is this? It is fastened to the earth by one slender rope. There is the secret. A cord, scarcely visible, enchains it, and will not let it go. Now, stationary Christians, see here your state—the state of thousands. Sabbaths come and go but leave them as before. Ordinances come and go; ministers come and go; means, privileges, and sermons move them not—yes, they move them; a slight elevation by a Sabbath tide, and again they sink, but no onward, heavenward movement. They are as remote as ever from the heaven of rest; this Sabbath as the last, this year as the past. Some one sin enslaves, enchains the soul, and will not let it go. If it be so, make one desperate effort in the strength of God. Take the Bible as your chart, and Christ as your pilot, to steer you safely amid the dangerous rocks, and pray for the spirit of all grace to fill your every sail and waft you onward over the ocean of life to the haven of everlasting life.—Episcopal Recorder.

Mental Loafing.

It is considered a disgrace to be lazy. He who is too indolent to work for his own living becomes a byword or reproach. But there is a very common form of laziness which is not always noticed; it is that of the mind. We first become conscious of it in our young days when we "don't feel like study."

We dawdle over the book with our thoughts half asleep, and as a result give a fine exhibition of stupidity in the recitation room.

This sort of indulgence in youth is very dangerous, for it becomes a habit, and the mind grows rusty and dull in the very prime of life, when it should be at its best.

On the heels of this form of laziness comes another bad habit—that of intellectual loafing.

What loafing is in the common sense we all know; it is hanging about with no definite aim or purpose, idling away the time without profit. Well, there is mental loafing as well, and it is known in the dictionary as "reverie." It is a dreamy state of the mind, when the thoughts go wool-gathering.

This habit so common to young people is fatal to mental growth; many a promising youth is ruined by over-indulgence in it. It wastes time and enfeebles the mental powers. It is really a form of laziness, and it should be sternly corrected on the outset. The action of the mind should be kept under control. When the thoughts begin to wander it is time to whip them into order. A resolute will, will do it

Arizona has a greater number of varieties of forest trees than any of the other States or Territories of equal area west of the Mississippi River, a greater number than Michigan or California, and nearly 18 per cent of the species of the United States.

Stockings were first worn in Italy in the year 11,000. Before that period it was customary to swathe the feet and legs in bandages.

There is nothing laid down as a duty, but grace is promised to enable us to perform it.

Christians carry their joy with them, instead of seeking it, like the world.

"Of the 4000 criminals who passed through a reformatory, 38.7 per cent were the children of drunken parents, with the probability of 11.1 per cent to be added, making 49.8 per cent of the criminals who have been prisoners there the victims of hereditary alcoholism."

THE prevailing belief among Christians in the second century, in regard to the state of the dead is thus set forth by Dr. Geisler: "Till then, (that is the first resurrection) the souls of the departed were to be kept in the under world (sheol or hades, the receptacle of dead bodies) and the opinion that they should be taken up to heaven immediately after death was considered agnostic heresy."

SEVENTEEN fortunes offered for probate in England last year aggregated sixty-six million dollars, and five out of the seventeen were left by brewers, and one by a wine merchant. And at the rate at which liquor and beer are being consumed in this country, we would not be surprised if the proportion of those who have made their wealth out of these baneful articles were as great as in England. The brewers are notoriously rich at the expense of the notoriously poor.

OF Israel and the goodly land that Abraham walked the length and breadth of Isaiah lxi. 4, 5 says, "And they shall build the old wastes; they shall raise up the former desolations, and they shall repair the waste cities, the desolations of many generations. And strangers shall stand and feed your flocks, and the sons of the alien shall be your plowmen and your vine-dressers; but ye shall be named priests of the Lord; men shall call you the ministers of our God; ye shall eat the riches of the Gentiles, and in their glory shall ye boast yourselves."

AN English writer says the Freethinkers now express their hatred of the Creator, of his Book and those who love it, in the most open manner, and in the foulest language their vile hearts can lay hold of; even, with outstretched arms exclaiming, with the face uplifted to the sky, "if there be a God, let him strike me dead." Bold blasphemers in the most audacious and revolting manner harangue crowds at the street corners and public parks in fine weather. This is in Christian England, and in the world's commercial metropolis. Let us pray, "Thy kingdom come."

HERE is a condensed history of Israel by the Spirit in Amos iii. 4, 5:—"For the children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image and without an ephod, and without a teraphim. Afterward shall the children of Israel return and seek the Lord their God, and David their king, and shall fear the Lord and his goodness in the latter days." These bereavements have been fearfully literal and should this not assure us that the mighty change predicted to come over that people will be as literally fulfilled.

IN his Dialogue with Trypho, the Jew, Section 80, Justin Martin, A. D. 150, said:—"For if you have conversed with some that are indeed called Christians, and do not maintain these opinions, but even dare to blaspheme the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, and say that there is no resurrection of the dead, but that the souls, as soon as they leave the body, are received up into heaven, take care that you do not look upon them. But I, and all those Christians that are really orthodox in every respect, do know that there will be a resurrection of the body, and a thousand years in Jerusalem when it is built again and adorned, and enlarged, as Ezekiel and Essias and the rest of the prophets declare."

THE hearts of God's children in Cleveland have been cheered of late by seeing a goodly number of earnest listeners to the Word of life on Sunday evenings, and by learning that several have taken interest enough to come, Nicodemus like, to our house at night, to enquire into things pertaining to the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Anointed.

READER, do you wish to know who the future inhabitant of earth will be? If so, listen to the words of David: "For evil doers shall be cut off: but those that wait upon the Lord they shall inherit the earth; for yet a little while and the wicked shall not be; yea thou shalt diligently consider his place and it shall not be: but the meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace."

"The Earth is the Lord's."

Addressing the Son, the Father said, "I will give thee the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." He is coming soon to claim what belongs to him, to free the earth from the curse, beautify it for the habitation of his loved ones, and cleanse it from the defiling presence of the ungodly, by awarding death as the penalty of sin. The earth is the Lord's. If he were to post a notice that trespassers will be prosecuted, what would the inhabitants do? What could they do? They could only plead for mercy; because they could not get away from it!

SAY, reader, are you one of the heirs, or a trespasser? This is a momentous question. If you are an heir, you are an heir according to the promise,—an heir under or by virtue of the promise. And that title or claim must have been obtained by believing the glad tidings of God's kingdom, and immersion into the Anointed for the remission of trespasses. If this be your position, reader, all things are yours—the world is yours. If this be not so you are trespassing. look out.

Wonders of Nature.

"The wrecked animalcules are a familiar object to microscopists, who are fond of surprising novices by exhibiting them. It turns out that these infinitesimal creatures are endowed with almost incredible hardy of life. Their organization is exquisitely delicate. It would seem as if the slightest trial might annihilate them. But no: they are all but indestructible. After absolute desiccation for years, they will leap into revivification from the dust under the application of a drop of water. They have been subjected to experiments of tremendous tests, being imprisoned in a temperature of 200 degrees, and then plunged into a freezing mixture. But they survived it all. Only one agent seems baneful to these atoms of organization. They digest poisons cheerfully, and thrive on them. But at a drop of sewage water they drop motionless. They need good water well oxygenated. They may well teach us again the lesson that lies next to adoration, and what limit there be to reverent admiring, in face of the compressed wonders that lie before us in a colony of creatures swarming in the ocean of a drop, all full to the brim of their little being of the joy of life, the gift of God."

Brains For Sale!

It will be interesting to those who understand man to be organized to be and to do all we see him do, to know that a collection of 220 brains, carefully prepared and catalogued by Dr. Luys, of the Salpetriere Charite Hospital, has been offered to the Paris faculty of medicine. "They are," says the Doctor "Samples of lesions of human brains from the ordinary hemiplegy, the aphasia up to the most characteristic lesions of madness, and, as a foundation for the studies, hitherto an ill based, of mental pathology, a series of types of persons suffering from hallucination or monomania, and of those who are chronically delirious, with or without consciousness; and it presents also anatomical expressions in harmony with the symptoms observed. Types of which there there are four examples, which relate to periodic madness. These are the first examples of the sort ever collected and offered to the examination of the Medical public, and they show similar lesions which justly place them in a special nosologic category. Next comes brains of general paralytics, with granulated lesions and characteristic concomitant atrophy.

There are brains collected relating to idiocy, deafness and to deaf mutes. Others have been taken from persons blind of one eye, and from the wholly blind, and from the amputated, and they all show special atrophic lesions or injuries. The Doctor says he also has the brain of a hypnotized person, the only one in existence which he will add to the collection later. The collection is the result of 20 years investigation, and Dr. Luys looks upon it as his scientific heritage.

Saved by Law or Gospel—Which? No. 17.

THE COMMANDMENTS OF JESUS.

"If any man serve ME, him will my Father honor." John xii. 26. [All can see that the law of Christ is not a supplement to the law of Moses.] "Him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out." John vi. 37. "If a man love me, he will keep my words, and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." John xiv. 23. "Henceforth I call you not servants [or slaves] for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth; but I have called you friends; for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you." John xv. 15. [How perfectly free from the covenant that gendereth to bondage, were the friends of Jesus, who obey him because they love him?]

enter into thy closet." Matt. vi. 6. "After this manner, therefore, pray ye, Our Father who art in heaven." Matt. vi. 9. "Whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart." [How would it be possible to show more clearly the contrast between the law engraven on stones, and that of the prophet whom the Lord God raised up? One controls outward actions, the other the heart.] "Every branch in ME that beareth not fruit [the Father] taketh away: and every branch that beareth fruit he purgeth it that it may bring forth more fruit." John xv. 2. "Whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of MY words, of him shall the Son of Man be ashamed when he shall come in his glory, and in his Father's and of the holy angels." Luke ix. 26.

"No man having put his hand to the plough, and looking back is fit for the kingdom of God." Luke ix. 62. "Whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father who is in heaven." Matt. x. 33. "Verily, verily I say unto you, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he of God," John iii. 5. "If ye believe not that I am he ye shall die in your sins." John viii. 24. "Every one that hath forsaken houses or lands for my name's sake shall receive a hundred-fold and shall inherit everlasting life." Matt. xix. 29. "If thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off and cast them from thee, for it is better," etc. Matt. xviii. 8. "Enter ye in at the strait gate, for wide is the gate and broad the way that leadeth to destruction." Matt. vii. 13. "Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven." Matt. v. 20.

"EXCEPT YE BE CONVERTED, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." Matt. xviii. 3. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, MOSES GAVE YOU NOT THAT BREAD FROM HEAVEN, but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven. For the bread of God is he who cometh down from heaven and giveth light unto the world. I am

THE BREAD OF LIFE;

he that cometh to me shall never hunger and he that believeth in me shall never thirst." [Here the law by Moses is placed in juxtaposition with the law of Christ,—there was no life-giving bread in all the commandments on stones or parchment, because the life-giving covenant was given 430 years before; the law was added because of transgressions by the multitudinous and faithless seed, as proven in previous numbers.] "Take MY yoke upon you, and learn of ME, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls." Matt. xi. 28, 29 [This, taken in connection with the words of the spirit in Gal. v. 1. "Stand fast, therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage," is that when Jesus said "Take MY YOKE upon you, it was not an additional yoke, but one to take the place of the yoke they then wore. We regard this as an invulnerable argument; the idea of two separate laws, that of Moses and of God having been shown to be baseless.] "If thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone; if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother, but if he will not hear thee, take with thee one or two more," etc. see Matt. xviii. 15, "No man can serve two Masters;" for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon." Matt. vi. 24. "He that heareth MY Word and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life." John v. 24. As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must be lifted up, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." "The Word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day." John xii. 47. [Could we be more plainly told that his words comprise the whole duty of man? "Be filled with the Spirit—speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs." Eph. v. 19. "Giving thanks always, for all things." Eph. v. 20. "Submitting yourselves one to another, in the fear of God." Eph. v. 21. "Ye ought to say, "If the Lord will we shall live and do this or that." James iv. 15.

ABSOLUTE PROOF

THE SON OF MAN

"BE NOT UNEQUALLY YOKED

together with unbelievers... what part hath he that believeth with an unbeliever, wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate." Eph. iii. 17. "Set your affection upon things above, not," etc. Col. iii. 1-4. "Christ suffered for us, leaving an example that we should follow in his steps." 1 Pet. ii. 21. "Therefore be ye also ready," etc. Matt. xxiv. 44. "Be ye angry and sin not." Eph. iv. 26. "Put on as the elect of God bowels of mercies." Col. iii. 12, 13. "Bear ye one another's burdens." Gal. vi. 2. "Bless them that persecute you." Rom. xii. 14. Recompense to no man evil for evil. Rom. xii. 17.

Matt. vii. 15. "Give unto him that asketh." Matt v. 42. "Walk in the Spirit." Gal. v. 16-25. "Let the Word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom." Col. iii. 16. "Let the peace of God rule in your hearts." Col. iii. 15.

We promised to furnish enough of the commandments of Jesus to keep a person busy without any recourse to the law graven on stones,—we think we have done this, although scarcely a tithe of them has been given. We have given enough to make a person perfect, and to conduct him to all the glory and life of the world to come. We have disproved the two-law theory, and the existence of the law of the Sabbath from creation,—and without these Sabbatarianism cannot stand.

There is neither any mention or reference to the law of the Sabbath before it was given in the wilderness, while there are many more than a hundred references to it after that event.

We have the Word of the Lord himself for it, that Moses did not give them the bread from heaven, and therefore we find a host of Sabbath keepers on the day of Pentecost, crying out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" The answer given shows them to have been in their sins,—sabbath-keeping sinners.

Abraham was justified by faith before there was any Sabbath law; and, inasmuch as the adding of the law did not suspend the principle of faith and obedience (Gal. iii. 17) it was never given for salvation purposes.

Jesus prayed in behalf of his disciples, "Sanctify them through thy truth—thy Word is truth and John i. 17 says the law, not a part of it, was given by Moses, but favor and truth came by Jesus Christ. Plainly the favor of God is dispensed to those who are sanctified by the truth, and not to those who keep the law.

In dismissing this subject for the present, we ask our readers to bear in mind that we have positively proven that the apostles of our Lord never commanded Gentiles to be circumcised nor to keep the law, see Acts xv. 24-29. And this is in keeping with the apostolic teaching throughout. "Why tempt ye God?" says Peter, "to put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear? Ah, why, indeed, after having just said that hearts were purified by faith?

We trust our readers will see the importance of observing all things whatsoever Jesus has commanded; and that they will follow up the work of collating all the commandments of Jesus begun by us, so as to be familiar with them, and be able to turn to them for direction in every circumstance in life. It will richly repay them now, and land them in the kingdom by and by.

Selected.

An Expostulation.

"Surely I come quickly. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus!" — Rev. xxii 20.

Grandly solemn and inspiring words! The blessed assurance from the True and Faithful Witness that He will surely come again; and the devout response of the disciple whom He loved—"Even so, come, Lord Jesus." It is with the response I wish at present to dwell. That the Apostle John dearly loved his Master, and had intimate fellowship with Him, though He had gone into heaven, all of us firmly believe; and surely none who look at these warm words of the favored apostle can doubt that he fervently desired and longed for his Master's return. Yet there are declared disciples of Christ who say that the return of the Lord Jesus Christ to earth has become to them a matter of comparatively little anxiety; once they made much of it, but it is different with them now. For now, they have Christ dwelling in them. He is really with them night and day, and His presence fills them with ineffable joy and peace. They could not be happier though He were seated on the throne of David, reigning on the throne of His glory. And this fellowship with Jesus has purified their hearts so that, with them, sinning is a thing of the past; they are perfectly holy, and perfectly happy.

This is not a fancy sketch, I am sorry to say. Imagining one of them to be looking on this page, I would offer for his benefit, and that of the general reader, the following Expostulation.

Your state of mind, as described by yourself, is a very pleasing and comfortable one; and, assuming it to be true, I would, in all kindness, ask you to consider what I say. In your contentment, how do you fall in presence of the prayer which the Lord Jesus instructed His disciples to pray?—"Our Father who art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name: Thy Kingdom come: Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." You know very well that the name of our Father in heaven is not hallowed "by all beneath the skies" that even in our own country, and in our own city, for every hundred that love and revere His blessed Name, there is a thousand who have no fear of God before their eyes; thousands who never enter a place of worship, or call on the Father; while open profanity and gross impiety stalk abroad even at noon-day. That the same is true of the populations of the vast continents of Europe, Africa, Asia, and America. You are aware of this, and know also that, till Jesus comes, it shall ever be so; yet you are not anxious about his return, being perfectly satisfied in His absence.

So far is God's will from being done on earth as it is in heaven—the great mass of mankind, in Bible-lands, care nothing for it; while the millions, elsewhere, are ignorant of it—dwelling in regions of moral darkness and horrid cruelty. The return of the Lord Jesus is the only remedy, and yet you but faintly echo the cry, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus." The populations of earth are being swept along as in a darkly flowing river, onward to certain and irretrievable ruin. Sometimes one here and another there is rescued, and placed on the Rock of Safety; but the great mass are floating along to everlasting destruction. And so shall it be till the Great Deliverer returns; yet, from His banqueting house where you are feasting on fat things full of marrow—canopied by His "Banner of Love," you look out on this river of death, conscious of personal safety, but make little of His second appearing.

The promises of Jehovah are still unredeemed—at stake in hands of the infidel,—Israel still in dispersion, Jerusalem trodden down of the Gentiles; while the voice of the prophet reverberates in the air, "Ye that make mention of the Lord, keep not silence, and give Him no rest till He make Jerusalem a praise in the earth." "Behold the Lord hath proclaimed unto the end of the world, Say ye to the daughter of Zion, Behold thy Salvation cometh; behold His reward is with Him, and His works before Him. And they shall call them, The holy people, The redeemed of the Lord; and thou shalt be called, Sought out, a City not forsaken" (Isa. lxii. 6-12.) Yet you keep silence. Though all this waits on the coming of the Redeemer to Zion, you think little about that return, and seldom present it as an object of hope and earnest desire to those with whom you worship!

It was not always thus with you. Once you lamented that the coming again of the Lord from heaven was not oftener the subject of discourse in the church, and of address to the public. Think again, I beseech you, of the risks of your changed attitude towards the coming of the Lord. "To those who look for Him will He appear the second time unto salvation." A crown of righteousness will He award to "all who love His appearing." There must be something wrong in your process of thought when you give the fact of Christ dwelling in you as a reason for thinking and speaking less about His coming again. Else why that response of the Apostle John to the declaration of his Lord—the latest recorded words of the Lord Jesus, "Behold I come quickly."—"Even so, come, Lord Jesus!"

The Apostle Paul, also, who said, "I live, yet not I, but Christ dwelleth in me," wrote much and fervently of "that blessed hope." "Even we," said he, "who have the first fruits of the Spirit, even we groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, namely, the redemption of our body," which, you know, takes place when "the Lord shall descend from heaven with a shout."

I shall not pursue this line of reasoning further. I doubt if it would be wise to do so. If these words of mine, penned deliberately and in affection, tend in any degree to lead those who have read them more fervently to love His appearing—tend in any measure to touch a chord in their heart that vibrates in unison with that loving and memorable response of the disciple whom Jesus loved—"Even so, come, Lord Jesus"—I shall be exceeding glad.—W. Laing, in the Messenger.

For Boys.

Never speak harshly or cross to your mother, my boy. Remember that when you opened your eyes to the light of this rough, old world she was the first to greet you. Remember it was her who ministered to your wants during all the days and week and months and years of your babyhood. She has washed you, dressed you, fed you, ministered to you in sickness and watched by you through all the long hours of many a weary night, when there was no other to do it. You are older now, perhaps think you are a young man, and you can smoke and chew and swear, and think you are smart. But remember, my boy, a gentleman never does these things. Your mother is growing older. Her face is wrinkled, and her form is bent, and her hands are not so strong as twenty years ago when she helped and soothed and comforted you. She needs your help now; and you can be a world of help to her, if only you will try. Your hands and feet are strong, and you can well afford to bear half her burden. You have one of the very best of mothers, my boy. Tell her so—tell her every day. Go up to her in the morning, put your arms around her and kiss her dear old face. It is wrinkled and old and furrowed with care I know, but if you had born your share of the burden the last fifteen years the contrast would not be so great. Bring the water, sweep the floor, dust the furniture, make yourself useful generally and, above all, speak kindly and quit your fault finding and you will be surprised how her old face will brighten up and how your own heart will lighten up and how new joy will seem to have come to your life.

Another thing, my boy. Never make light of your companion and school-fellow who is the son of a laboring man. His hand may be rough and bony and brown, but it is a strong hand—an honest hand. His clothes and face may be smutty—may have plaster, paint, or coal-dust clinging to them. These are not dirt; they are simply the effects of his toil. He has been laboring, and labor is honorable. Love him because he is your companion, and, above all, because he is the son of a laboring man.—Exchange.

Speaking about giving, Dr. Fager, of Harrisburg, says: "If you cannot give more than a penny, give and God will bless it; but if you can give a nickel, and don't give it you will only get a penny blessing. God can't put a five-cent blessing in a penny man."

The time is short; eternity is near; yea, the coming of Christ the second time is at hand. Make sure of being one with the Lord Jesus, that you may be glad when you see him.—Robt M. M'Cheyne.

OUR CHILDREN.

Little Things.

It was only a little thing for Nell
To brighten the kitchen fire,
To spread the cloth, to draw the tea,
As her mother might desire.
A little thing, but her mother smiled
And banished all her care.
And a day that was sad
Passed bright and glad,
With a song of praise and prayer.

It was only a little thing to do
For a sturdy lad like Ned:
To groom the horse, to milk the cow,
And bring the wood from the shed.
But his father was glad to find at night
Such labors overall well done.
"I am thankful," said he
"As I can be,
For the gift of such a son."

Yes, little things, but they brighten life,
As we go it with care.
Yes, little things, but they mold a life,
For joy or sad despair.
Yes, little things, yet life's best prize,
The reward which labor brings,
Comes to him who sees,
And not abuses,
The power of little things.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 10.

THE BLESSINGS OF MOSES, COMPARED WITH THE BLESSINGS OF JACOB.

The last words of Moses are very much like the last words of Jacob. Shall we compare them? You will remember our other lesson better if we do. Go to the 33d chapter of Deuteronomy.

The first one of the tribes spoken of is Reuben; the words take the form of a prayer. It is "that Reuben may live and not die." The prayer will be answered. Reuben's name is on the gates of the city, both in Ezekiel and in Revelation, and in dividing the land in the future, one strip, long and wide will be given to Reuben.

Another prayer! It is for Judah. How many prayers have been made for Judah! "O Lord hear the voice of Judah, and bring him unto his own people." What a far-reaching prayer!

It skips over the time of Judah's prosperous sojourn in the Holy Land, it leaps beyond his first captivity; it passes the years of his wirming along in the Land of Promise, and looks upon him sad and desolate, and suffering in far-away regions. The people we call Jews, belong to what was once the kingdom of Judah. They have been exiled from their own country, for more than eighteen hundred years. Their beautiful temple was burned, and their Capital city overthrown by the Romans, about seventy years after the Savior went to heaven. Ever since then they have been scattered in all lands, and everywhere they have been hated and persecuted.

They are treated with awful cruelty still. You have read about the persecution of the Jews in Russia? They want to go back to the land of their fathers. It belongs to them and to Israel. God reserved this land for his people when he gave to the nations their inheritance in the days of Peleg.

You remember about the division? No other people has any right to Abraham's land. Moses knew how it would be with Judah. He knew what a voice of wailing and of entreaty would go up to the Lord from his lips, in the time of his adversity. He prays that "the prayer of Judah may be answered." It will be. The Lord will bring Judah to his own people again.

Judah did not know Jesus, (his brother Joseph,) as the long-expected Savior when he came the first time, he is looking for the Redeemer still. What a sad cry, —"Alas we have no Mediator!"

He will recognize Jesus at the next meeting.

But where is Judah's people or kindred, of the kingdom of Israel to whom he prays to be brought again?

The people of this kingdom, the ten tribes of Israel, were taken captive by an Assyrian king, and carried away to the kingdom of the Medes, 2 Kings xviii. 9, 10, 11. They never returned to their own land again.

They were worshipping idols and doing so many wrong things that God moved them away from Judah, to keep Judah pure, because Jesus was to come Judah, and besides this, he wanted to cure them of their idolatry, as Judah was afterward cured in the captivity at Babylon.

But, how are these tribes to be found? Who can tell where and who they are?

History has followed them from Media into Europe, and from Europe into the British Isles. They must be found if Judah is to be brought to his own people, and both kingdoms united in the land of promise, under Jesus their king.

We want that blessed time to come, so let us every day pray the prayer of Moses for Judah,—"Oh Lord, hear the voice of Judah, and bring him unto his own people."

Great numbers of Judah's tribes are settling in the Holy Land, and this is a sign that the coming of our Lord is very near.

Leaving Judah, Moses next takes up the tribe of Levi. He says, "as to their priestly office, they have neither father, nor mother, nor brethren, nor children, "meaning, that God places them in that office.

You have been asked what Paul meant, by saying "that Melchisedek, king of Salem, and priests of the Most High God, had neither father, nor mother, nor natural descent?" It is explained in the same way. God made him a priest.

The Levites were to be the teachers and the law-givers of their people, and Moses prays that the Lord may bless them and their work, and that all who rise up against them may be smitten. Simeon's blessing must come in here, though he is not named. Simeon was a teacher and law-giver too. "And of Benjamin he said, the beloved of the LORD shall cover him all the day long, and he shall dwell between his shoulders."

We must remember that these words are prophetical words, it will help us to understand them better. "The beloved of the Lord," is Christ, the beloved Son of God.

And so, the dear Savior, during his lifetime on earth, was to dwell in safety by Benjamin.

Dr. Wm. Smith's Dictionary of the Bible, article on Galilee, and Farrar's Life of Christ, tell us that all the apostles, except Judas, were Galileans, and that "there is very strong evidence that "the people" who "in those days in Galilee sat in darkness and saw a great light," were of the tribe of Benjamin. The homes of Jesus were in Galilee,—in Nazareth, and by the beautiful Sea that we sing about, where the fire of coals was seen on the sand. In Acts ii. 7, it says "Are not all these which speak, Galileans?"

History says that "the people of Benjamin settled in and over-spread all Galilee, after their return from, captivity in Babylon."

"Were they captives too? Yes. One hundred years after, the people of Israel had been taken to the country of the Medes, the tribes of Judah, Benjamin and Levi, having sinned against the Lord by worshipping Baal, the old Nimrod god, and by burning incense to the sun, the moon, and the stars, were carried off to the city of Babylon. You will find the story in 2 Kings 23rd, 24th, and 25th chapters. They were yet in Babylon when Esther, the Jewess was made queen. In the story of Esther, you will find them called "Jews,"—because they belonged to the kingdom of Judah. They were brought back to their own country in the time of Ezra and Nehemiah. Nebuchadnezzar was the king of Babylon, when they were made captives. Daniel was among those who were taken to Babylon. Read the story of Daniel, if you want to know more about Judah's captivity. Daniel was a Jew. He lived in Babylon, when Cyrus told the men of Judah to go back home and build the house of the Lord. He lived there still when Darius, the son of Ahasuerus, of Queen Esther's time was made king. The people of Judah were in captivity seventy years.

But we were talking about the blessing of Moses or Benjamin. God's dear Son was to dwell among this people in safety, and while there, "the Lord was to cover him all day long," as secure from all harm as if he were carried on his shoulders. We know that this prophecy was fulfilled. No harm came to Jesus until he "went down to Jewry." There is another prophecy that I want you to notice here, 1 Kings ii. 36, it is about "the light" that was given to David. David's tribe, was Judah. One tribe was given to the house or kingdom of Judah for a light. This light was always to shine. The tribe, taken from Israel and given to Judah, was the tribe of Benjamin. They saw the great light, that had come to the world by the Savior's advent. To "see" is to hear, and believe. They believed the gospel and became light-bearers to "the lost sheep of the house of Israel," and to the Gentile nations.

Paul the apostle of the Gentiles, was of the tribe of Benjamin. Judah, rejected the Savior, "He came to his own (tribe) and his own received him not."

With the exception of Judas, we know of no converts made by Jesus among the Jews, of the tribe of Judah. Judah rejected the gospel when presented by Paul. So it is through the tribe of Benjamin, that the gospel with all its wonderful blessings has come down to us. But, our lesson is already too long. We must go back to Moses another time.

I Will Give You Rest.

"Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Matt. xi. 28, 29.

Oh, how the heart of the weary sighs for rest sweet rest. The closing hours of this age is pre-eminently a period of agitation, and unrest, everything seems to be on the the upheaval; in the political world the cry is "uneasy the head that wears a crown," the people are dissatisfied with every existing form of human government, because oppression, misrule and corruption has fastened itself upon, and is eating into the very vitals of the body politic.

Legislative bodies have been corrupted by money kings to legislate in their interest, and at the expense of the people at large, and hence financial panics have ensued, and upset the foundation of trade and commerce, to such an extent that parties carrying on large business enterprises which furnish employment to the people scarcely know which way to turn. Some seek to economize by retrenching the compensation of their employes which is followed by disturbance, which are in turn subdued by armed soldiers. Hence, those who depend upon their daily toil to support themselves and families are deprived of an opportunity of so doing and this in turn is followed by deprivation, distress and starvation. Hundreds of thousands of people are vainly seeking for work that they may procure the means to perpetuate their existence. Failing to find it thousands seek relief by means of suicide.

Neither do the rich rest in their abundance. They are in constant fear by day and by night lest they may be deprived of it by some unforeseen financial panic, or perchance by fire, robbery or some ill-advised business adventure.

The rulers of the people have no rest for fear that some assasin, who may conceive the idea that he is responsible for the state of unrest and distress which everywhere prevails may remove him.

The liquor traffic is also a prolific source of unrest, fastening upon untold millions of people intense mental anguish, disgrace, poverty, and physical ruin, and is the direct cause of at least eighty per cent of the blackest and most fiendish crimes the evil heart of man could possibly devise. And yet this fearful evil is legalized and fostered by civil government, they receiving as compensation money and political preferment.

Under such a condition of things it is all a vain dream to expect rest, peace and prosperity. Rest will never ensue from any human devise. Men may rack their brains to formulate plans to bring about an era of rest and peace, but it will end in disappointment.

An era of rest and prosperity shall yet be inaugurated in this sin-cursed earth; but not until the curse is removed, for as long as the curse remains the present order of things will continue.

"There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God." Heb. iv. 9. This rest will be experienced only by "the people of God." Those who corrupt and spoil the earth will be rooted out of it, they cannot enter into this rest.

The "weary and heavy laden" are invited to come unto Jesus, and be refreshed, for he will relieve the "weary traveler of his burden" for says he, "I will give you rest." As this rest is provided only for the believing "people of God," it will be profitable to learn what they are required to place their trust in that they may be classed with "the people of God," and privileged to enter the rest provided for that people.

With regard to the Israelites who come out of Egypt under the leadership of Moses, he said: "To whom sware he that they should not enter into his rest, but to them that believed not. So we see that they could not enter in because of unbelief." Unbelief of what? Listen: "For unto us was the gospel preached as well as unto them: but the Word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it."

They failed to enter the promised "rest," through lack of faith in "the gospel." "So I sware in my wrath, they shall enter into my rest." "If Jesus (Joshua) had given them rest, then he would not afterward have spoken of another day. There remaineth therefore a rest for the people of God. "Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief." We are not left in doubt with regard to this, "example of unbelief," but are explicitly told, that "the gospel preached," "did not profit them not being mixed with faith in them that heard it." Implicit faith in "the gospel preached" by Jesus and his disciples is required of all who would enter the "rest" that still "remaineth" "for the people of God," who have faith strong enough to believe and obey it.

The rest Moses was leading Israel to, was centered in the covenants of promise made unto Abraham,—the gospel preached unto Abraham, but through lack of faith failed to enter into the enjoyment of the promised rest. "There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God," who are called out of all nations. The gospel preached unto Abraham has not been changed, an obedient faith in that gospel is still required of all who would enter that rest. "Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, and to seeds, as of many; but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ."

In the following quotations we have a much clearer title to our promised rest, than many who profess to rest a title clear to mansions in the skies: "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." "And if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." The reverse of this would be: For as many of you as have (not) been baptized into Christ have (not) put on Christ." "And if ye be (not) Christ's then are ye (not) Abraham's seed and (are not) heirs according to the promise." Hence, as a primary condition to the enjoyment of the promised rest, we must after a hearty belief of "that faith of our father Abraham," be "baptized into Christ," "for the remission of sins," otherwise we cannot be "Abraham's seed," and we should ever bear this one thing in memory that only "Abraham's seed" can be heirs to the Abrahamic estate. If our faith is defective at this point, then we are not legally qualified to enter the promised rest. It was by lack of faith in the good tidings proclaimed (to the Israelites in the wilderness) concerning this coming rest which was the prime cause of their failure. "Let us therefore fear least a promise being left us of entering into his rest any of you should seem to come short of it. For unto us was the gospel preached as well as unto them, but the Word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it." "Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief."

Let no one deceive himself by supposing that he can easily sail into the haven of rest without encountering contrary winds and rough seas. "Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest." The word "labor" carries with it the thought of hard work and wearisome toil, which will be more easily borne when we remember that in the sweet by and by our toil will cease, and we shall enter eternal rest. Oh, what a rest! Rest, sweet rest! Oh weary children of toil, who have to labor incessantly lest the wolf enter the door, and the children cry for bread; yea, they may even consider themselves happy, that they have the privilege of doing so, though at nightfall they may wend their way homeward with tired limbs and aching bones, seeing thousands upon thousands, yea, hundreds of thousands are deprived of this, and the hungry cry, "bread, bread, bread, oh, give me bread, my family perish from hunger." This bitter cold winter, the sad wail of the hungry is heard everywhere piercing the very hearers. We cry to heaven, "How long oh Lord? how long O Lord?" The sweet voice of him who longs to give the weary rest, comes like a soothing balm to those who "have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb," by being baptized in his name for the remission of sins. They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and lead them unto living fountains of waters: and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes," when they shall enter the eternal rest."

The phrase: "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes," signifies the removal of everything that may cause sorrow, pain, crying, and death will be unknown in the happy rest God has in store for those who love and obey him

O won't it be joyous to be continually associated with the pure and holy? who will never again know what it is to be sick, and suffer pain, "and there shall be no death," we will never again have to hide beneath the clods of the valley those upon whom we have set our dearest affection. Over the arch spanning the gateway to the city of rest will be written the words: No death, no sorrow, no crying, no pain, neither anything that loveth and maketh a lie, shall ever pass through these gates into the home of "the blessed and holy" "that hath part in the first resurrection."

In this beautiful city of rest there will be no hungry ones crying for bread, "For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne, (located in this home of the blest) shall feed them."

During the period of his earthly career the dear Jesus knew what it was to suffer hunger, he also had compassion on the hungry multitude and fed them. "Jesus answered them and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, ye seek me, not because ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves and were filled. Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of Man shall give unto you; for him hath God the Father sealed."

"I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me, shall never hunger; he that believeth on me shall never thirst," for all such he will take to his home in the beautiful city of rest. Are any weary and heavy laden, then let me beseech you to come unto Jesus in his own appointed way, and he will give you rest.

We that have come unto him are joyfully traveling the narrow way to the city of rest, gleefully singing, "we are homeward bound." Oh, sad and weary ones, burdened with a load of sin, throw it off, carry it no longer, and join us in our happy pilgrimage to the Holy City and we will help each other over the difficulties which may beset our path, and in the the sweet by and by Jesus will join us in his beautiful home, the City of Peace, and then the weary will be forever at rest, with the blessed Jesus ever in our midst. Oh, lay your burden down and come with us to the city of rest.

A Reason of The Hope.

"But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts; and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you with meekness and fear."

Dear brothers and sisters, this is a lesson for us all. I say lesson, because it requires study to prepare ourselves with an answer to give to every man that may ask us a reason of our hope. Now suppose one should come to you and ask a reason of your belief or hope that Christ is coming to earth to establish a kingdom and reign on the nations; have you the answer? If not then you hav'nt got your lesson well. The answer is contained in the words of the angel Gabriel to Mary. "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke i. 31-33. But again the enquirer sees that you have a hope of sharing with Christ in the inheritance of the earth and also of being sub-rulers with him over the nations. Have you a reason for this hope? Yes; in Psalms xxxvii. 29. "The righteous shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever." Christ said, "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth." Matt. v. 5. The next reason is that Christ said to John on the Isle of Patmos, "to him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I am set down with my Father in his throne." Rev. iii. 21. Notice the distinction between his throne and his Father's throne. He enquires if Christ is not sitting on his own throne now? When will he sit on his throne? "When the Son of Man shall come in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory, and before him shall be gathered all nations, and he shall separate them one from another." Here begins the work of ruling and judging the nations. And now, dear reader, suppose that your hope is a different hope, that you are hoping for a home in heaven, or to reign with Christ in heaven? I ask where can you find an answer? This is a question for you to answer. I cannot refer you to any thing in the dear old Book we call the Bible, that would be a reason for such a hope. There is one in Rev. v. 9, 10, that would do if a slight change could be made. If it could be made to say heaven instead of earth, but, thank God this passage harmonizes with all the rest. So, dear reader I will have to leave you to seek a reason for your hope in some other book Perhaps you can find it in the Hymn Book, or some other one outside of God's Word. When you do find it stop and ask yourself the question, is it true?

We are requested to write short articles so I will close. Your brother in hope of eternal life when the Master comes.

Backslidden Singers.

Not only is hypocrisy abhorred of God but it is distasteful to man; and there is something in the accent of conviction and sincerity which commends itself to the judgment and conscience of men and women, and the lack of which is easily detected even by the casual hearer. There are many men who when they speak produce no impression upon the people, except that they know not what they are talking about, and do not themselves believe what they say. Hence honest men refuse to hear the talk of hypocrites, and when it is settled that a person is wicked and corrupt, there are few who wish to hear him speak, however excellent his talk may be.

Now this accent of conviction, which carries conviction to the hearers, which comes from the heart and goes to the heart, is quite as necessary in singing as it is in preaching and praying. Sacred song may be either praise, prayer, or instruction, but in all these cases there should and must be the sincerity of an honest heart behind it. The hypocrite or backslider has nothing to do with prayer, praise, or religious instruction. His place is in the dust before God. The words uttered from his lips are frequently absolute falsehoods. He offers to the Lord prayers that are insincere, professions that are false; he describes emotions that he does not feel; and so his utterances are but like sounding brass and the tinkling cymbal.

Undiscerning persons may sometimes be excited by such music, especially if the songs are sung to rattling dance tunes; and if the words are so indistinct that no one can hear them, then as a mere musical performance their singing may pass; but it is not worship, it is not praise, it does not glorify God.

The Apostle says, "Is any among you suffering? let him pray; Is any cheerful? let him sing." But what has a man to do with praise when he is like the troubled sea that cannot rest, when he has no peace, when he knows not God, and obeys not the Gospel? What has an infidel to do with singing praise to the Most High God? What has a scoffer to do with taking the name God upon his profane lips? What have Christians to do with hiring godless worldlings to stand up in the house of worship and mock the Almighty with solemn words uttered by thoughtless tongues? True it is often said that Christians do not know how to sing; let them then learn, let them be trained, and especially let them be trained in heart to live joyful lives, and when they have learned to rejoice in God their Savior, their tongues will magnify the Lord, and their voices will sound forth His praises to all around.—H. L. Hastings. in the Messenger

Apropos of the above, the New York Sun recently reported Dr. A. T. Pierson as having said publicly in a sermon:—"I preached in a church in this city where the leading soprano was a woman you or I would not allow in our houses, and the leading tenor was her paramour. I also preached in a church where the members of the choir had to scramble out of a neighboring beer saloon to be in time for the closing hymn."

The New Books of Last Year.

During 1894, according to the Publisher's Circular, 5,300 new books and 1,185 new editions were published in England, an increase of some 200 over last year. The new books are classified as follows: Theology, 476; law, 120; medicine, 97; educational works, 615; political economy and trade, 141; arts, 98; voyages and geographical research, 282; history and biography, 250; serials in volumes, 328; juvenile works, 269; fiction, 1,315; poetry and the drama, 160; belles lettres, 270; and miscellaneous, 767. There is a slight increase over last year in theological books, a large increase in books on law, political economy, and belles lettres, and a slight decline in poetry. Educational works increased 15 per cent. In juvenile works there was a decrease of 400, which was about the increase in the number of works of fiction; this is probably due to the difficulty in drawing an exact line between the two classes of books; in the two taken together about as many were published as in 1893.

The Everlasting Arms.

One of the sweetest passages in the Bible is this one: "Underneath are the everlasting arms." It is not often preached from, perhaps because it is felt to be so much richer and more touching than anything we ministers can say about it. But what a vivid idea it gives of the divine support! The first idea of infancy is of resting in arms which maternal love never allows to become weary. Sick room experiences confirm the impression when we have seen a feeble mother or sister lifted from the bed of pain by the stronger ones of the household. In the case of our heavenly Father, the arms are felt, but not seen. The invisible support comes to the soul in its hour of weakness and trouble; for God knoweth our feebleness, he remembers that we are but dust.—T. L. Cuyler.

Fidelity in trifles and an earnest seeking to please God in little matters is a test of zeal, devotion, and love. Let our aim be to please our dear Lord perfectly in little things.

Unholy ambition, like a fever, burns out the noble virtues of the soul.

Faith is the backbone of endeavor.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1895.

[illegible]

Dear Restitution:

I see it is time to renew my subscription, so please find the enclosed amount. It seems that I cannot get along without THE RESTITUTION as it is all the gospel I have outside of my Bible. When my time expires please stop my paper, as life is uncertain, and death is sure. My dear wife died the 12th of Dec. 1894, but my loss is her gain, as she had been a great sufferer for three years with cancer, but she bore it all with great patience, with the blessed hope of having a part in the first resurrection, and I expect to be laid I ebber to await the return of my Lord I can say, Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly, as my days are few. "Teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." Ps. xc. 12.

My days are numbered with the Lord,
Although unknown to me.
So I'll cast my care upon the Lord
Until death shall set me free.

J. CANDALE.

Bro. Underwood:

I will just say, we have lost our entire crop of everything for the last two years. The season of 1894 was the worst that I have ever seen in Kansas since 1860. There are thousands in western Kansas who have not had a "square meal" for six months. You have no idea how things are here and I will not try to tell you now. There has been more snow here this winter than we have had for ten years, which promises well for a crop this season, but, brethren, we have no seeds to plant of any kind, and the object of writing this is to ask you to send us garden seeds. There are ten families of the church here that have no field or garden seeds. If those who have more than they need will send us some we will be thankful. I wrote to the agricultural department at Washington, but were not noticed by them. Send to me, as the congregation has put it on me to write to you.

Address me at Fair Haven, Norton Co., Kansas. Freight and Express Office is, Almena, Norton Co, Kansas.

Yours in hope,

J. P. GLENN.

Dear Restitution:

Permit us to say a few words through the Letter Drawer, to those of like precious faith. How cheering it is to read their letters. We are still clinging to the faith and often wish we could do more financially to aid in spreading the good news of the kingdom, but we have to content ourselves with doing small deeds, and perhaps we are doing more than we think we are. Have we added to our faith virtue, and to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and to temperance patience, and to patience godliness, and to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness charity? For if these things be in us and abound, we shall neither be barren or unfruitful. We are further assured if we do these things we shall never fall, but shall gain an abundant entrance into the kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

The poetry entitled "Unconscious Influence" is to the very point. The last verse is so good I will quote (with permission.)

'Tis the little deeds that we all can do.
That help in the hour of need.
Of wondrous results in the gathering time
Oft come from the tiniest seed.
And may we so scatter and naught withhold
That our harvest day shall return fourfold.

WILLIAM & AGNES DARBY.

Editor Restitution:

As the time of my paper has expired I will ask you to discontinue it for a few weeks or until I can renew which I hope to do soon, (the Lord willing) for I find comfort in reading thoughts from the brothers and sisters, seeing that so many are of one mind and spirit.

We are now at Belton, Missouri. I trust that sometime in the near future we can have a preacher of the gospel come and refresh our minds.

I want to say to the brothers and sisters, and to any others who may chance to read, that I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth.

About fourteen months ago Bro. Adams was at St. Paul, Neb, holding meeting. I went to hear him thinking I might be able to tell others where his mistakes were. I listened attentively took down notes, etc. I saw at once that it was I that was terribly wrong, and that God's precious words were true. Then came the thought,—"Can I leave the Baptist Church and its associations? Can I do anything that is so contrary to the will of my father and mother?" These words of my blessed Savior rang in my ears. "He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me" and "He that taketh not his cross and followeth after me is not worthy of me." I saw plainly what had been my fault, and knowing the gift of God and the suffering of his Son, our Savior, that we might have life, it made me to cry out, "Thy will be done." and I caused me "to turn from all to serve the true and living God and to wait for his Son from heaven whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus whom the heavens must receive until the time of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world beg n."

Dear brothers and isters I want to be one among the thousands that shall sing that new song, "Thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof: for thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred and tongue, and people, and nations, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth."

I have been separated from all the brothers and sisters since August, except a niece of mine, for whom I sincerely ask an interest in your prayers, and for myself also. May we all be overcomers, for "He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life; but I will confess his name before my Father and his angels." Precious promises, words of truth. "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; for he is faithful that promised."

Your Sister in hope of eternal life.

MRS. WALTER FOOTE.

To the loved ones of like precious faith:

When we receive our much prized paper we are eager to read its contents and our first attention is given to the Letter Drawer, for we do so love to read of the faithful ones and that they are trying to live according to the teachings of God's blessed Word. It cheers us on, making us more determined and strengthens us in doing our duty, for any one striving to become one of the number of the Bride, the Lamb's wife has a duty to perform. There is work all around us, we must occupy until the Lord comes. It seems that the world has closed the ear against the Word of the Lord as he has given it and want preachers to tell it and explain it to suit their views or they will not have it. Husband and I have been trying to read the Bible with the people here but it is very slow work to get them to read for as soon as we say, God means what he says, they will not have it that way. Some are believing, and rejoicing that they can understand and are very anxious to be baptized. Oh, if we could only get the world to see God's plan of salvation, how he has given it to us in types and anti-types during all the ages. When we read Gen. xxii. 13, how Isaac was placed in danger of death and the ram was offered in his stead, and so Christ was offered in our stead when we were in danger of the second death, and Christ was sacrificed for us. In Exodus xii. 12 13, we read that as the destroying angel passed over wherever he saw the blood applied he did not destroy the first-born of the Hebrew children so Christ was slain for our Passover lamb and his blood applied to us, God will save us, the first-born from the dead, now to become one of those who constitute the number that will make the Bride. We must obey what Christ and the apostles taught us. We must believe, repent, confess and be baptized for the remission of sins. Rom. vi. 3, "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death. Now if we have been baptized into his death we are partakers of his death and sufferings." As God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam he took a rib from his side and from it he made woman, and when Christ was in the deep sleep of death his side was pierced and forthwith came blood and water. Now the Bride the Lamb's wife is formed by partaking of what came from the side of Christ by being baptized into his death, and if we live according to Christ's commands we will never die on account of our own sins but we must die the Adamic death unless Christ comes to deliver us before that death overtakes us. O that Christ would come and begin to rule and reign and overcome all things that bring suffering and death upon us.

MRS. SARAH BUCHER.

Please write short articles. It is not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads two long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have a one of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What to write is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue have a love-feast all the year.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1895.

The method pursued by the Nickel Plate Road by which its agents figure rates as low as the lowest seems to meet the requirements of the traveling public. No one should think of purchasing a ticket until they first enquire what the rate would be over the Nickel Plate Road. Mar. 31.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all money for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

Home-Seekers' Excursions South and Southeast via Pennsylvania Lines.

Special low rate excursion tickets with twenty day return limit will be sold March 5th, April 2d and 30th, from ticket stations on the Pennsylvania Lines to points in Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia. For details, apply to nearest Pennsylvania Line Ticket Agent, or addres F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Knight Templars Conclave will be held at Boston, Mass. during next August, and it will be of interest to Sir Knights and their friends to know that arrangements have already been successfully accomplished by the Nickel Plate Road providing for the sale of excursion tickets over direct lines, going and returning, or by circuit-ous route; i. e. going one line and returning another. By so doing many of the following notable resorts may be visited without additional expense: Chautauqua Lake, Niagara Falls, Thousand Islands, The Rapids of the St. Lawrence, Saratoga, Palisades of the Hudson, and the Hoosac Tunnel. The above arrangements will, no doubt, make the low rate excursion tickets offered by the Nickel Plate Road very popular. - Mar. 31.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks who are not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application to them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and are some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION" Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

MISSING.

Late at night I saw the Shepherd
Toiling slow along the hill,
Though the flock below were gathered
In the fold so warm and still.

On his face I saw the anguish,
In his locks the drops of night,
As he searched the misty valleys,
As he climbed the frosty hight.

Just one tender lamb was missing
When he called them all by name;
While the others heard and followed,
This one only never came.

Up his voice rang thro' the darkness
Of that long long night of pain;
Oft he vainly paused to listen
For an answering tone again.

Far away the truant, sleeping
By the chasm of Despair,
Lay, unconscious of its danger,
Shivering in the mountain-air.

But at last the Shepherd found it
Found it ere in sleep it died -
Took it in his loving bosom,
And his soul was satisfied.

Then I saw the Eastern spaces
Part before a shining throng,
And the golden dome of morning
Seemed to shatter into song.

Love One Another.

"This is my commandment, That ye love one another as I have loved you. Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." John xv. 12, 13.

Deeply rooted in the human, moral sense, since the earliest dawning of civilization is the emulation of the spirit of constancy to friendship, of sacrifice even unto death, at the altar of earthly attachments. Remove this element of devotion to the good of others from the history of all peoples and only one greater loss could betide. What is best in poetry, song, or story has its mainspring in the highest quality of human affection. If we turn backward we find in our own Saxon and Danish ancestors this rudimentary principle hidden from sight in the bloody means by which the end of defense was accomplished. Still further back we have the proverbial story of Damon and Pythias in the classic setting surrounding Syracuse; each earnestly desiring to offer up his life for the other.

Again, nothing in the Old Hebrew life appeals to us with more pathetic charm than Jonathan's effacement of himself, often at the risk of bringing his father's dangerous wrath upon his own willing head, in order to shield the much beloved David. Instances are legion and might be re-called innumerably of martyrs to earthly friendships.

Christ says, "greater love hath no man than this," in connection with the command that, "Ye love one another, as I have loved you." Coupled with this selection of the highest sacrifice in devotion to this love, the Savior broadens the view in fixing the extent "as I have loved you." Still farther on, he seems to emphasize the fact that there is a love on a higher foundation than this merely earthly friendship and sacrifice, which after all is founded on selfish relations, in defining his friendship for them. Ye are all my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you. In order to prove farther that it is disinterested friendship he adds, "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you," then that they may not remain recipients of this free divine beneficence he passes on the chain of friendship in its unbroken dependence of common brotherhood. "I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain; that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you. These things I command you, that ye love one another."

Christ in his infinite wisdom and foresight saw in the near future the dangers and trials to beset his followers, urged upon them the support and aid afforded by this strengthening in mutual co-operation.

As everything in the physical world bears innate evidence of cause and effect, so in the moral and intellectual as traced through the history of man's deeds, there ever sounds through the march of the ages the steady tramp of design moving on to consummation. In its higher, or rather, highest sense, it is equally true in the spiritual world. There is an inner life in the Spirit which moves not without cause. No teacher ever followed the laws of cause and effect more logically than the Greatest of Teachers in his instruction and analysis of character. "Truly never man spake as this man spake." He gently proceeds here to lead them to the thought, although they may have the comfort of the love of friends, the great world outside will not recognize in them this principle of love and will from the instinct of self-preservation treat them as enemies.

He then softens the statement that they need take this hate as nothing beyond what is natural and might be expected under the conditions. "If the world hate you ye know that it hated me before it hated you. If ye were of the world, the world would love its own." We note with what consummate skill he doubles the effect of his first statement by the disjunctive comparison, "but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore, the world hateth you."

It was no easier in the days of the disciples to be reviled, hated and persecuted in this first century possibly, than it would be for us in this nineteenth. No doubt the Aramaic language contained a vocabulary which served to convey as biting sarcasms, and no doubt the narrow, ignorant and thoughtless made use of it as in our day. "But he reviled not again," was the dignified example of their pattern. This sympathetic, this kindest, most loving of friends, ready to die for them, is still the firm, inflexible Master. A still higher principle is to be inculcated. He goes back and takes up an unfinished thread. "Remember the Word that I said unto you. The servant is not greater than his Lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you; if they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also. How plainly, how forcibly, unmistakubly the stern voice of duty sounds through every word on to the end of the chapter, and still not once is it hinted in words other than in the example set before them, until in the triumphant closing words "And ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with me from the beginning. How much is included in the thought of bearing witness. Not the loving intercourse of friend to friend but of friend to foe. It meant carrying to a perishing world its own salvation. On this side a broader life, a better civilization, an uplifting of humanity unknown before. Over there divine companionship to those receiving the message. To the messengers it meant, beheading, scourgings, beaten with stripes, in prisons oft, brought before kings and rulers, betrayed by parents, brethren, kinsfolks and friends, hated of all men, and reaching the climax some of you shall they cause to be put to death. But beyond, as it is written, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him. This is the final out-growth of man's duty in relation to his fellow man or those that love him. Each earthly sacrifice for others is a round in the spiritual ladder which leads upward to the attainment of love to God. It is difficult for man, in the flesh to know God as he is. A thick veil of impenetrable mystery hides his perfection from the grosser senses, but through man's humanity to man, a glimpse of the divine attributes appear as a rift in the vail. The plan of salvation is founded upon the principle of doing, as well as believing. This state of accord with the divine love principle is not a state of sanctified inactivity and nothingness. Therein Christianity differs from other systems of Religion. In Buddhism and other Oriental teachings the highest end to be obtained is a passive consciousness which in fact is equivalent to oblivion. But, everywhere is urgent activity kept constantly before the true believer and follower of Christ. "Work while it is called today for the night cometh when no man can work." "The harvest is great but the laborers are few. Go work in my vineyard." Is there naught to be done in the vineyard of the Lord today? Truly the great harvest is whitening for the sickle, and who shall do the reaping? Shall it be said, as in the mournfully pathetic reproach of Ezekiel, "And they come unto thee as the people cometh and they sit before thee as my people, and they hear thy words, but they will not do them; for with their mouth they show much love, but their heart goeth after covetousness, and lo, thou art unto them as a very lovely song of one that hath a pleasant voice, and can play well on an instrument; for they hear thy words, but they do them not." More beautiful to contemplate are the words of the poet-prophet, Hosea. "But they knew not that I held them with cords of a man with bands of love." Identity lost in forgetfulness of self in helping work for humanity. This is the cord or band of love which uplifts to the throne of God.

If ye fulfill the royal law according to the Scripture, thou shalt do well. A great stumbling block would be removed from the rugged path of duty could the choice of neighbors be left to us. But, here the inexorable law again steps in to hinder the growth of selfishness. God is no respecter of persons is the pattern set before us. "My brethren have ye not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ with respect of persons. For if there come into your assembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, and there come in also a poor man in vile raiment and ye have respect to him that wearath the gay clothing, and say, unto him, Sit thou here in a goodly place, and say to the poor stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool. Are ye not partial in yourselves and become judges of evil thoughts? Hearken my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him?" James leaves no doubt as to who these neighbors are, and as to the limits of a saving friendship, as he farther continues the argument of practical Christianity, "What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath faith, and have not works?" Can faith save him? If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body what doth it profit? A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead, and by chance there came down a certain priest that way; and when he saw him, he passed by on the other side. And likewise a Levite, when he was at the place, came and looked on him, and passed by on the other side. But a certain Samaritan as he journeyed came where he was, and when he saw him had compassion on him, and went to him and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn and took care of him. And on the morrow when he departed he took out two pence and gave them to the host, and said unto him, Take care of him; and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee. Which now of these three thinkest thou was neighbor unto him that fell among thieves? And he said, He that showed mercy on him. Then said Jesus unto him, Go and do thou likewise." Nothing could teach more simply and plainly man's universal obligation to man than this parable. Here even the obligation to God is entirely ignored, for in accomplishing one the other is attained. Duty to man implies duty to God. This is more directly taught in the vivid resurrection scene painted in Matt. xxvi. 31-46. "Then shall the king say unto them, When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: and before him shall be gathered all nations: and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats: and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left. Then shall the king say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: for, I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered and fed thee? or thirsty and gave thee drink? When saw we thee a stranger and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee. Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison and came unto thee? And the king shall answer and say unto them, verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me. Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels: For I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsty and ye gave me no drink: and I was a stranger, and ye took me not in: naked, and ye clothed me not: sick and in prison and ye visited me not. Then shall they also answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee? Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily, I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me. And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal.

The Savior in talking to the Scribe even made the thought more final in answer to the question as to which was the first commandment, "And Jesus answered him, The first of all the commandments is, Hear, O, Israel: The Lord our God is one Lord: and thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: this is the first commandment. And the second is like unto it, namely this, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these. And the Scribe said unto him, Well, Master, thou hast said the truth: for there is one God: and there is none other but he. And to love him with all the heart, and with all the understanding, and with all the soul, and with all the strength, and to love his neighbor as himself, is more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices. And when Jesus saw that he answered discreetly, he said unto him, Thou art not far from the kingdom of God."

How much this love in duty to mankind is placed above mere natural ties of affection, is forcibly taught in his words upon many occasions as when he said: "Those who do my will are my father, my mother, my brother and my sister." Are we exhibiting this disinterested friendship and neighborly love is the question of primary importance to every earnest believer in future reward of the just made perfect, and having their robes washed in the blood of the Lamb. When the power which searches the inner record of men's thoughts is revealed, how will we find ourselves waiting? Will we be able to stand with that goodly company? Read Rev. xx. 11-8.

Some aspire to have their names emblazoned on highest mountain heights where never man climbed before, on walls and domes of great cathedrals, or down in the depths of the earth, that other following in their footsteps may know they have been preceded. Still others spend a life in becoming inscribed on rolls of parchment written with letters of gold and pictures of silver; written upon tablets of fame where many otherwise, noble lives have been wrecked. Others are written in deeds of love as citizens of a country still far away, but whose outline is seen even now through the signs of the near approaching kingdom. Is your name recorded there? Is my name there? if not, why not? Is it through lack of self denying and work on this side?

In closing I will read a poem illustrative of the principle taught in this morning's lesson.

"Abou Ben Adhem (may his tribe increase!)
Awoke one night from a deep dream of peace;
And saw, within the moonlight in his room,
Making it rich like a lily in bloom,
An angel, writing in a book of gold: -
Exceeding peace had made Ben Adhem bold,
And to the presence in the room he said,
"What writest thou?" The vision raised its head,
And, with a look made of all sweet accord,
Answered, "The names of those who love the Lord!"
"And is mine one?" said Abou. "Nay, not so,"
Replied the angel. Abou spoke more low,
But cheerily still, and said, "I pray thee, then,
Write me as one that loves his fellowmen."
The angel wrote, and vanished. The next night
It came again with a great wakening light,
And showed the names whom love of God had blest,
And lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest."

Selected.

The Kingdom of God.

1. The Gospel is good news concerning this kingdom.

"Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom of God," Mark i. 14.

2. It will be established upon the earth.

"The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and His Christ," Rev. ii 15.

3. It is the kingdom of Israel restored.

"I will gather her that is driven out .....will make her that was cast off a strong nation.....the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem," Micah iv. 6-8.

4. The kingdom of Israel was the kingdom of the Lord.

"Of all my sons, he hath chosen Solomon my son to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel," I. Chron. xxviii. 5.

5. The kingdom of Israel was overturned because of iniquity.

"Iniquity shall have an end .... I will overturn, overturn, overturn it, and it shall be no more, until .....Ezek. xxi. 25-27.

"The children of Israel shall abide many days without a king," Hos. iii. 4.

6. That kingdom is not overturned for ever.

"Afterwards shall the children of Israel return and seek the Lord their God, and David their king," Hos. iii. 5.

"It shall be no more until he comes whose right it is; and I will give it him," Ezek. xxi. 27.

7. It will be re-established.

"The Lord God will give unto him (Jesus) the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever: and of his kingdom there shall be no end," Luke i. 32, 33.

"The Lord shall inherit Judah his portion in the holy land, and shall choose Jerusalem again," Zech. ii. 12.

"Thou shalt arise and have mercy upon Zion," Ps. ci. 13.

"When the Lord shall build up Zion, he shall appear in his glory," Ps. ci. 16.

8. It will be set up in Israel's land.

"Thus said the Lord God: Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land; and I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel," Ezek. xxxvii. 21, 22.

9. Jerusalem will be its chief city.

"At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord; and all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem," Jer. iii. 17.

10 The Jews will be gathered from their dispersion.

"He shall assemble the outcasts of Israel and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth," Is. xi. 12.

"I will take you from among the heathen, and gather you out of all countries, and will bring you unto your own land," Ezek. xxxvi. 24.

11 All human governments will be overthrown.

"The God or heaven shall set up a kingdom.....it break in pieces and shall consume all these kingdoms," Dan. ii. 44.

"The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ," Rev. xi. 15.

12. The "dominion" of the kingdom will comprise the whole earth.

"His dominion shall be from sea to sea and from the river even unto the ends of the earth," Zech. ix. 10.

"The Lord shall be king over all the earth: in that day shall there be one Lord, and his name one," Zech. xiv. 9.

13 Christ will be king.

"Jesus of Nazareth, the king of the Jews," John. xix. 19.

"David....being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on on his throne," Acts ii. 29, 30.

14 The saints will be rulers in that kingdom.

"The saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom and possess the kingdom for ever," Dan. vii. 18.

"To him (that overcometh) will I give power over the nations, and he shall rule them with a rod of iron," Rev. ii. 26, 27.

"Thou hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests: and we shall reign on the earth," Rev. v. 9, 10.

15. The kingdom is the inheritance of the saints.

"God hath called you unto his kingdom and glory," I. Thess. i. 12.

"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world," Matt. xxv. 34.

16. The earth is the future dwelling place of the saints.

"The righteous shall be recompensed in the earth," Prov. xi. 31.

"Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth," Matt. v. 5.

17. The inheritance of the saints (the kingdom) will be a blessing to all nations.

"Wisdom and knowledge shall be the stability of thy times and strength of salvation," Is. xxxiii. 6.

"The nations shall bless themselves in him," Jer. iv. 2.

"In that day shall there be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek, and his rest shall be glorious," Is. xi. 10.

"To the law and testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."—Isaiah.

"Search the Scriptures."—Jesus.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MARCH 27, 1895. NO. 12.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end, the establishment of the kingdom of God on this earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the general resurrection of the dead; the final separation of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Malaria in Italy.

A malarial map of Italy has just been issued by the Government Bureau of Statistics, based on the deaths during the years 1890-'92, showing the intensity of the disease by modifications of color. In three years there were 50,000 deaths from malarial causes, or 54 in 100,000. The worst districts, where the mortality is as high as 8 in 1,000, are in Southwestern Sardinia, Southeastern Sicily, the Pontine marshes, the district at the head of the Gulf of Taranto, and the southeastern slope, from the Promontory of Garagno south to the Ionian Sea. Districts where malaria prevails, but not so intensely as to be fatal, are the lower reaches of the Po, Grossato in Tuscany, the mouth of the Tiber, and the district near Salerno and the temples of Paestum. In Rome itself malaria has sensibly declined; the deaths in 1881 were 650, in 1892 only 139. The general mortality from this cause in Italy has remained pretty constant; the average is 15 or 16 per 100,000.

The Eyes of a Bee.

Every bee has two kinds of eyes—the two large, compound ones, looking like hemispheres on either side, and the three simple or single eyes, which crown the head. Each compound eye (as one would naturally suppose from the term which designates it) is really an immense aggregation of eyes, each being composed of 3,500 facets, which means that every object seen has its image reflected 3,500 times in the bee's tiny brain. Every one of these facets is the base of an inverted hexagonal pyramid, whose apex is fitted snugly to the head. Each of these pyramid-facets may be termed a perfect eye, for each has its own iris and optic nerve.

Signs and Wonders.

The year 1895 will be a remarkable one, both from the astronomical and religious point of view.

On Good Friday next (April 12), the heavenly bodies which gravitate round the Sun will be in exactly the same positions they occupied in the firmament the day Christ died on the cross. It will be the first time such a thing has occurred since that great day, 1,862 years ago. That was thirty-third year of the Christian era, which dates from the birth of Jesus Christ.—Norwalk Sentinel.

It is one thing to know of Jesus, and another to know him.

THE greatest and most dangerous enemies to Christ are those who pretend to be his friends, but are not faithful to his doctrine.

IN all the departments of the world's social, civil, and ecclesiastical life, its devotion is exercised upon trifles light as air; and nothing but sentimental and comic trash is the pabulum of its existence."

"A MAN who is under the control of the Word gets quickly over little disturbances; they are quite transcient and accidental, and soon pass off; but if the mind is not under control of the Word, it is the other way."

THE world "do move;" a Catholic priest has been appointed to teach the philosophy of Saint Thomas in the Protestant University of Amsterdam; and the Catholic Lord Acton to be regius professor of modern history in the University of Cambridge in succession to the late Prof. Secley.

STILL they learn war. A new electrical gun, said to be one of the most destructive weapons recently tested, has been invented by one of the young men of the Y. M. C. A., whose name is withheld, but is supposed to be Dr. Henry Baldwin. A patent for the new invention has been applied for, and the uttermost secrecy is being used to keep it from the public. It is eight feet long, and is said that it will discharge 1000 shots per minute.

We were glad to notice a word of exhortation from Bro. Eychaner, recently, relative to Sunday School work. And we want to express our thanks to "Auntie Wince," for her untiring efforts to interest and instruct the young among the Brotherhood. But few have the faculty of presenting the truth to children in a pleasing and telling way. The Lord reward our dear sister in his own way and in his own time we pray.

THE Church in Cleveland had another joyful day on Sunday the 17th inst. Two more intelligent youths out of the Sunday School were baptized into the sin-covering name; making 27 in six years that have gladdened our hearts in the same way. For many years this field of labor was neglected, and the young, instead of having a little world of their own where the faith of their parents was taught and an influence for good exerted, were allowed to drift with the current, with disastrous results. The past cannot be undone, but we realize fully the deadly effects of that course,—and by the help of God this nursery of the church will be more faithfully tended than ever; —our labors thus far have been abundantly blessed.

THE "one, two, and five talents" are explained in Hebrews v. 11-14, and vi. 1-3, where some believers appear to have attained only to the knowledge of first principles; such are the one talent servants of the parable, and they are warned that they are in danger of losing even what they have:—"Ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles." Then the owners of the two and five talents are described in v. 14 as those who were of full age in the truth, who by use had their spiritual senses exercised to discover both good and evil, and had gone on to perfection. These had a deep insight into the Divine purpose and were rooted and grounded in the faith and mighty in the Scriptures. It is worthy of note that the mere possession of two or five talents does not secure salvation; and having only one does not necessitate condemnation. It is the right or wrong use which influences these results. If five talents be given it is merely the result of superior ability, and carries with it corresponding responsibilities. If only one be given it is a serious warning to its possessor that it will require the whole of their inferior ability to use it profitably."

"Christ is Coming! Do you believe it?

"Christ is Coming! Do you expect Him?

"Christ is Coming! Are you awaiting Him?

"Christ is Coming! Will he receive you?"

THERE is nothing besides Christ worth living for; all that we may achieve on our own account is not our own when done, because we have to die and leave it, whereas anything we achieve in Christ is eternal, because he is for ever.

THE present government of the world is a case in which a few rule the many to the detriment of all. These governments are fitly represented by beasts in the symbolic vision. Merciless beasts they are wherever they exist. The best of them are brutes, only a little less furious than their neighbors.

THE Presbyterian, of which Dr. S. A. Mutchmore, D. D., L. L. D. is a proprietor and editor, offers as premiums the ballads "Arm in Arm with Lizzie;" "Flirting in the Starlight;" "Hoppity Rickity;" "High and Low;" "Champagne Charlie;" "Tara-ra B. om Be-ay," and a number of other rollicking pieces. We think the hard times are telling heavily on the Presbyterian.

"BAPTISM is an act of obedience required of all who believe the gospel. It is a bodily immersion in, and not a face-sprinkling, or head-pouring with water. It is only enjoined on those intelligent enough to believe the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, and the things concerning the name of Jesus Christ. To such it is the means of present legal union with Christ preparatory to perfect assimilation at the resurrection; and therefore absolutely necessary to salvation."

Psalm xix. 7, 8, 9.

Name	Declaration	Purpose, Conversion.
1. Law of the Lord.	Perfect.	Converting the soul.
2. Testimony.	Sure.	Making wise.
3. Statutes.	Right.	Rejoicing the heart.
4. Commandment.	Pure.	Enlightening the eyes.
5. Fear of the Lord.
Judgments.	True.	Righteous.

There is blessing, warning and reward for the serious who keeps the Word of the Lord, verses 10, 11.

"COME my people, enter into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee; hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast; for behold the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity; the earth also shall disclose her blood and no more conceal her slain." Isa. xxvi. 21. Reader, does this mean you? Are you one of Jehovah's people? Have you become a citizen with the saints? Have you severed your connection with those whom the Lord is coming forth to punish? If not, make haste to Kiss the Son.

"The World's Birthday," is the meaning of the name of the first Book of the Bible—Genesis. It reveals the birth of the earth and the heavens,—the birth of the light; the birth of the atmosphere; the birth of the Great lights of heaven; the birth of continents and seas; the birth of mountains and valleys; the birth of planets, birds, fishes and quadrupeds, then the birth of man and woman; and, alas, the birth of sin and death by sin,—but thank God, also the birth of the Church of God, then the new birth of the earth after the flood, and the birth of the nations who re-peopled it; and lastly, the birth of the nation of Israel."

The Veil Over all People.

Is. xxv. 7 says, "And he (Jehovah of armies) will destroy in this mountain the face of the covering cast over all the people, and the veil that is spread over all nations." "What is this covering or veil? As far as Israel is concerned we know that blindness in part has happened to them. They failed to recognize in Jesus of Nazareth their Messiah. But what about the Gentiles? Jeremiah intimates (chap. xvi. 19) there is a veil, and the passage just quoted positively teaches that there is. The former prophet says concerning the period when Jehovah shall be the refuge of his people Israel in their affliction: "The Gentiles shall come unto thee from the ends of the earth, and shall say, 'surely our fathers have inherited lies, vanity, and things wherein there is no profit. Oh, how true this is! Profitless indeed, are the systems of fraud and greed passing under the guise of mercantile operations. Profitless all its arts of destruction by bayonets and cannon. What a stupendous blunder to think that shattered homes and fatherless children and weeping widows with the attendant poverty and wretchedness can benefit the family of man. But when the veil is found to cover those to whom the people seek for guidance in the ways of God, and they in cruel mockery of man's needs tell him he has no need of immortality,—that he has it now,—that he cannot die, and blindly on go teachers and taught until the ditch of death receives them both. Oh what a saddening spectacle does the world become,—perishing for lack of knowledge while they hold in their hands the God-given instruction.

God of heaven, we pray, soon send the Sun of Righteousness to pierce the gloom, disperse the darkness, remove the veil and bathe the world with light, and joy, and love. He will destroy the veil and give instruction to the world, not merely by words, but by deeds; for the next verse assures us that he will utterly destroy death forever; and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces; and the rebuke of his people shall he take away off from all the earth, for the Lord hath spoken it.

Not only to Israel as a nation do these words refer. Truly they are nationally dead as described by Ezek. xxxvii., but they will then be made alive again, their tears wiped away, and the reproach of the Jew will cease. But in a higher and more perfect sense, the words describe the saints of God from Abel's day till then. Their reproach will be taken away, their tears wiped from their faces, and as in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, they are changed,—mortals become immortals, corruptible ones become incorruptible, and a realized salvation finds vent in the outburst of joy—"Death is swallowed up in victory." In that day shall they say, "Behold this is our God; we have trusted in him and he hath saved us."

The Christian and His Echo.

The following beautiful lines were brought from England more than forty years ago; and we felt sure the spirit of obedience, and patience, and submission, and meekness, and trust, that pervades them would find a ready response in the hearts of the faithful in Christ Jesus.

True faith produces love to God and man.
Say, Echo, is not this the gospel plan?
—The gospel plan.

Must I my faith and love to Jesus show,
By doing good to all, both friend and foe?
Both friend and foe.

But if a brother hates and treats me ill,
Must I return him good and love him still?
—Love him still.

If he my failings watches to reveal,
Must I his faults as carefully conceal?
—As carefully conceal.

But if my name, and character he blast,
And cruel malice, too, a long time last;
And if I sorrow and affliction know,
He loves to add unto my cup of woe:
In this uncommon, this peculiar case,
Sweet Echo, say, must I still love and bless?
—Still love and bless.

Whatever wrongs ill I may receive,
Must I be patient still, and still forgive?
—Be patient still and still forgive.

Why, Echo, how is this? thou'rt sure a dove?
Thy voice shall teach me nothing else but love?
—Nothing else but love.

Amen! with all my heart, then be it so,
'Tis all delightful, just and good I know;
And now to practice I'll directly go.
—Directly go.

Things being so, whoever me reject,
My gracious God me surely will protect.
—Surely will protect.

Henceforth I'll roll on him my every care,
And then both friend and foe embrace in prayer.
—Embrace in prayer.

But after all the duties I have done,
Must I in point of merit, then disown,
And trust for life through Jesus' blood alone?
—Through Jesus blood alone.

Echo, enough! thy counsels to mine ear
Are sweeter than to flowers the dew-drops tear;
Thy wise instructive lessons please me well;
I'll go and practice them. Farewell, farewell.
PRACTICE them, farewell, farewell.

Not Bad As Speculations.

The Times-Herald's Washington correspondent sends the following:

Are Russia and Great Britain to come into collision in the far East? This question is now disturbing diplomatic circles here. Information reaches Washington, through private but wholly trustworthy channels, that the Russian government is supporting Japan in her demand for the cession of Port Arthur and Wei-Hai-Wei as part of the price of peace which China is called upon to pay. Japan would not dare to demand possession of such strongholds if she were not sure of the moral and active support of Russia, for the cession of these ports by China means nothing less than the continual domination by Japan over the gulf of Pe-Chi-Li, which is the waterway leading to Peking. With Japan holding these fortified ports, she would have a permanent pledge of peace. The hands of China would be tied. The cession of Port Arthur and Wei-Hai-Wei would signify the eventual dissolution of the great Chinese empire. Washington diplomats do not believe the Chinese government will consent to so great a sacrifice. They do not believe that the British government will stand idly by while Russia is enlarging her power with such tremendous strides as there in the far East.

The sympathy now existing between Russia and Japan is significant. The Russians are the only foreigners for whom the Japanese do not entertain hatred. Of all the foreigners, the English are the most hated, and even Americans, on account of their blood relation to the English, are hooted by the jingo, or war-mad populace of Japan. Great Britain stands behind China. Her money is lent and invested there by the hundred of millions. With Russia behind Japan and pushing the victors of the war on to exorbitant demands as the price of peace, Great Britain will be forced to show her hand. In the opinion of Washington diplomatists, England will be forced, in self-protection, to prevent the permanent acquirement of Port Arthur and Wei-Hai-Wei by the Japanese.

"Some of the most intelligent men in Washington—among them, I am informed, the Japanese minister, Mr. Kurino—believe that Russia is using Japan as a catspaw. The Japanese are thrust forward to secure the absolute independence of Corea and also the fortified ports which give command of the great gulf of Pe-Chi-Li and of the Chinese capital. While these acquisitions would, for the time being, appear to be an enlargment of Japan's influence, Great Britain would never forget that it is the power of Russia which emboldens the Japanese to ask for so much, despite England's frowning. There is intense anxiety as to the manner in which Great Britain will meet this situation.

"The peace negotiations now pending between China and Japan mark a crisis in the history of nations. If England throws herself into the breach and puts her power behind China in resistance to the demands of Japan, a collision between Great Britain and Russia is not improbable. If these two powers clash swords, the map of Asia will be changed. If, on the other hand, England fails to give her aid to China and permits the Russo-Japanese alliance to carry its point, from that moment Russia will succeed Great Britain as the controlling power in the East."

Living By The Day.

"My house was well built," said a farmer once to me, "for it was built by the day." That is the way in which the best, strongest, and happiest lives are built; they are not constructed "by the job," but one attainment in grace is laid upon another, like the blocks of granite in a solid house wall. Each day brings its duty to be done, its temptations to be met and conquered, its burden to be carried, and its progress to be made heavenward. There are 365 days in every year, but really there is only one working day, and that is to-day. Sufficient to each day is the labor thereof.

This is just the sort of living that I commend to my readers. God means to shut you up to this style of thinking and planning and doing when he makes his gracious promise,—"As thy days, so shall thy strength be." The journey made up a mountain is simply a succession of steps. If the climber attempts to leap upward he exhausts his strength, if he looks down he grows dizzy, and if he looks too far forward he grows discouraged by the distance yet to be surmounted.

So, in accomplishing each day's work, you have simply to take one step at a time, and to take that wisely is all that you need to think about. Take no anxious thought for the morrow. God never made a Christian strong enough to stand the strain of to-day's duties and all the load of to-morrow's anxieties piled on top of them. Paul himself would have broken down if he had attempted the foolish experiment. We have a right to ask our Heavenly Father for strength equal to the day, but we have no right to ask him for one extra ounce of beyond it.

My friend, learn to take short views. If you have money enough to-day for your daily wants, and something over for the Christ's treasury, do not torment yourself with the idea that you will yet finish up in an almshouse. If your children cluster around your table to-day, enjoy the music of their voices, train them for God and trust them to God, without racking yourself with a dread that the little ones may be carried off by scarlet fever, or the older ones may fall into bad marriages or some other disaster. Faith carries present loads, meets present assaults, feeds on present promises, and commits the future to a faithful God. Its daily song is:—

"Keep thou my feet; I do not ask to see
The distant scene; one step enough for me."

So we exhort you most earnestly to take short views. Let us not climb the high wall till we get to it, or fight the battle till it opens, or shed tears over sorrows that may never come, or lose the joys and the blessings that we have by the sinful fear that God may take them away from us. We need all the grace that he can give us for to-day's burdens and to-morrow's battles. I would not penetrate into the secrets which to-morrow hides if I could. It is far better to know whom we trust, and that he is able to keep all that we commit to him until the last great day.

"Why foretell the trials of life
With such sad and grave persistence,
And look and watch for a breed of ills
That as yet have no existence?

Strength for to-day is all we need,
For we never will see tomorrow;
When it comes the morrow will be to-day,
With its measure of joy or sorrow."
T. L. Cuyler, D. D.

"Whatever is right, whatever is wrong, in this perplexing world, we must be right in doing justly, in loving mercy, in walking humbly with our God; in denying our wills, in ruling our tongues, in softening and sweetening our tempers, in mortifying our lust; in learning patience, meekness, purity, forgiveness of injuries, and continuance in well-doing."

Little words are the sweetest to hear; little charities fly farthest and stay longest on the wing; little lakes are the stillest; little hearts are the fullest. Little books are the most read, and little songs are the dearest loved. And when nature would make anything especially rare and beautiful, she makes it little—little pearl, little diamond, little dew.

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects, by R. C. Bingley, is the title of a pamphlet of 68 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under different headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued calls for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonian Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1895.

Report of Labor.

Editor Restitution:

On Feb. 20, 1895, I left my faithful companion and my home, and boarded the train for Arizona. It was a long ride over hill, mountains, and beautiful prairies. I arrived at Bro. C. A. Saylors on the 2nd of March, very tired, and almost worn out. But the meeting with him and his family was a pleasant one, and after a long talk I retired, and when I awoke in the morning I looked out and saw horses, cattle, and hogs wading in Alfalfa up to their knees and fruit trees in bloom. It seemed like going from ice and snow right into Paradise. I cannot tell you half about this beautiful valley in contrast with the northern states, you will have to come and see for yourselves. We had quite a good deal of trouble in getting a house as the prejudice against us was strong. On the second evening three demanded baptism, and on the third night two more, and on Sunday night one more. We feel that God has blessed our feeble efforts here in the presentation of the truth and I am more and more convinced that we are to preach the Gospel of the Kingdom to the people, which Paul says, is the power of God to salvation unto every one that believeth, to the Jew first and also to the Greek. Bro. Saylor has been distributing tracts and giving THE RESTITUTION to his neighbors, and some of them are quite hungry to hear the gospel preached. There are but few here that are able to give any money, and if any one feels disposed to help answer this Macedonian cry it will be very acceptable. If any contributions are sent, send them to me in care of C. A. Saylor, Tempe, Arizona.

JOHN FOORE.

Dear Restitution:

On the 1st Sunday in January, by the request of his father, I spoke at the open grave of John Sunell, who was the mainstay of his aged parents. He was said to be a noble young man, of good moral character, and those who knew him best, loved him most. I talked from the text, "For the great day of his wrath has come and who shall be able to stand." We showed that the subject was prophetical and that the Author knew the end from the beginning, and at the second advent which was near, would usher in that great day, and that those who knew the Lord in the pardon of their sins, having been obedient to the gospel would be able to stand. Read 2 Thess. i. 3-12. "The ungodly shall not stand in the judgment." On the 2nd Sunday I had the pleasure of addressing a goodly number at the school-house where I have been teaching, near Oden.

Your brother in Christ.

Conference Report.

As previously announced the second quarterly conference of the Church of God, in Nebraska, met at the new Church, in Frontier Co., Mar. 8 to 10, 1895. The attendance from abroad was not as large as usual. Bro. J. W. Gamble preached on Friday evening on "The Promises." The president called the business meeting to order at 10 A. M. on Saturday.

The amount on hand and received as shown by the treasurer's report was $158.10, amount paid to evangelist $40, amount paid to assistant evangelist $56.03, balance in treasury $62.16.

Evangelist's report.—Received during quarter $125.85, expenses $28.80, amount less expenses $97.05. Discourses 50, No. baptized 10.

Assistant Evangelist's report.—Amount received not including expenses $61.00, days employed 61, No. discourses 33.

Report of Churches by letter from Moorfield, St. Paul, Blair and South Frontier, all good reports but will occupy too much space to give verbatim.

It was suggested that a constitution be drawn up to govern officers of the conference. After considerable discussion on the question, both pro and con, it was finally decided by a small majority in favor of it. The president, therefore, appointed the following committee to draft said constitution: W. A. Moore, Jason Welton, and M. Quinn.

It would seem that in the past the Bible has been a sufficient guide, and our brethren generally still considered it so. One verse, and that Matt. vii. 12, if followed fully would be enough without man's work added thereto.

On motion of Bro. Quinn the next quarterly conference to be held at Monrefield at call of president. Submitted in love for the truth.

OBITUARY.

Evaline, wife of I. S. Miller, was born May 7, 1837, and died March 1, 1895, aged 57 years, 9 months and 24 days. Deceased was born in Hampshire Co., West Virginia. Her maiden name was McDonald. She with her parents moved to Laporte Co., Ind., awhile before the late war. She then at the age of 21 married John W. Carlyle. To that union one child was born, which died when two years old. In 1864 her husband went into the army, and soon died, leaving her alone. Just at the close of the war the writer lost his companion and on June 17, 1866, was married to the object of this notice. Two children were born to this union, who are still left to share with me this load of grief. She has always proved to be faithful, devoted, and an earnest searcher after truth. Prior to our marriage she became interested in the truth and was baptized by P. W. Alberston, near Walkerton, Ind. Her faithfulness to God and his Word and to the Church, and with all she had to do, speaks volumns of praise, that many of us would do well to copy. A more generous, loving and affectionate companion and mother could not be found, and we surely miss her. We have lost a loving companion and a dear mother; the Church a faithful witness, the motherless a mother and a friend, and the tramp on the highway was not turned empty away. Ever desirous to lay up treasures to be rewarded. Luke xiv. 14. May God watch over the lifeless form with all his obedient children and bring us all to that inheritance which is incorruptible and fades not away. She was sick only nine days, her disease was catarrh of head and lungs. The longest sermon I ever witnessed was given by her on her dying bed which lasted one week day and night. One continuous discourse on the subject of God's promise to Abraham and his seed and to all the faithful. She told how this would be brought about by the sacrifice God had prepared. It seems to me while I am writing her words ring in my ears. She died in full faith that Christ would soon come and save his people, and commence the great work of restoration and blessing the nations. We joined her in her last prayer at her bedside, and prayed to our loving Father to hasten the time when this order of things would cease, when there will be no pain, no sorrow, no parting, no good by. And we pray now again, Come Lord Jesus and come quickly. Services conducted by Bro. T. E. Adams, assisted by Bro. H. M. Williams, after which we laid her away, to await the Life Giver, in the beautiful cemetery near Geuda Springs, Kan. The lonely ones.

The Original "Beautiful Snow."

The Omaha Republican gives the following history of the origin of this production, which the London Spectator has pronounced to be the finest poem ever written in America:

"During the early part of the war, one dark Saturday night, in midwinter, there died in the 'Commercial Hospital' in Cincinnati, a young woman, over whose head only two-and-twenty summers had passed. She had once been possessed of an evinble share of beauty, and had been, as she herself says, 'flattered and sought for the charms of the face;' but alas, upon her fair brow was written that terrible word—prostitute. Once the pride of respectable parents, her first wrong step was the small beginning of the 'same old story over again,' which has been the only life history of thousands. Highly educated and accomplished manners, she might have shone in the best society. But the evil hour that proved her ruin was the door from childhood, and having spent a young life in disgrace and shame, the poor friendless one died the melancholy death of a broken-hearted outcast. Among her personal effects was found in manuscript, 'The Beautiful Snow,' which was immediately carried to Enos B. Read, a gentleman of culture and literary taste, who was at that time editor of the National Union. In the columns of that paper, on the morning of the day following the girl's death, the poem appeared in print for the first time. When the paper containing the poem came out on Sunday morning, the body of the victim had not yet received burial. The attention of Thomas Buchanan Read, one of the first American poets, was so taken with their stirring pathos that he immediately followed the corpse to its final resting place. Such are the plain facts concerning her whose 'Beautiful Snow' shall long be remembered as one of the brightest gems in American literature."

O, the snow, the beautiful snow!
Filling the sky and the earth below;
Over the housetops, over the street,
Over the heads of the people you meet.
Dancing, flirting, skipping along,
Beautiful snow! it can do no wrong;
Flying to kiss a fair lady's cheek,
Clinging to lips in a frolicsome freak,
Beautiful snow from the heavens above
Pure as an angel, gentle as love!

O, the snow, the beautiful snow!
How the flakes gather and laugh as they go
Whirling about in their maddening fun,
It plays in its glee with every one—
Chasing, laughing, hurrying by,
It lights on the face, and it sparkles the eye;
And playful dogs with a bark and a bound,
Snap at the crystals that eddy around;
The town is alive, and its heart in a glow
To welcome the coming of beautiful snow.

How wildly the crowd goes swaying along,
Hailing each other with humor and song!
How the gay sleds like meteors flash by,
Bright for the moment, then lost to the eye!
Ringing, swinging, dashing they go
Over the crust of the beautiful snow—
Snow so pure, when it falls from the sky,
As to make one regret to see it lie
To be trampled and tracked by the thousand feet,
Till it blends with the filth in the horrible street.

Once I was pure as the snow, but I fell—
Fell like the snowflakes from heaven to hell;
Fell to be trampled as filth in the street;
Fell to be scoffed, to be spit on and beat!
Pleading, cursing, dreading to die;
Selling my soul to whoever would buy;
Dealing in shame for a morsel of bread;
Hating the living, and fearing the dead—
Merciful God! Have I fallen so low?
And yet I was once like the beautiful snow!

Once I was fair as the beautiful snow,
With an eye like its crystal, and heart like its glow;
Once I was loved for my innocent grace,
Flattered and sought for the charms of the face.
Father, mother, sister, all,
God and myself I have lost by my fall!
The veriest wretch that goes shivering by
Will make a wide sweep lest I wander too nigh;
For all that is on or above me I know
There's nothing as pure as the beautiful snow.

How strange it should be that this beautiful snow
Should fall on a sinner with nowhere to go!
How strange it should be when night comes again,
If the snow and the ice struck my desperate brain!
Fainting, freezing, dying alone,
Too wicked for prayer, too weak for a moan
To be heard in the streets of the crazy town,
Gone mad in the joy of the snow coming down;
To be sad to die in my terrible woe,
With a bed and a shroud of the beautiful snow.

Helpless and foul as the trampled snow;
Sinner, despair not! Christ stoopeth low
To rescue the soul that is lost in its sin,
And raise it to life and enjoyment again.
Groaning, bleeding, dying for thee,
The Crucified hung on the accursed tree;
His accents of mercy fell soft on thine ear;
Is there mercy for me? Will he heed my prayer?
O God, in the stream that for sinners did flow,
Wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.

Original.

Paul's Second Epistle to Korinthici. Chap. 3.

1. Are we beginning again to commend ourselves? or are we not using, as certain ones do, commendatory epistles to you or from you? No.

2. Ye yourselves are our epistle, written on our hearts, known and read by all men.

3. It is manifest that ye are Christ's epistle served (deacon-service) by us, written not with ink but with the spirit of a living God, not on stone tablets, but on fleshly tablets of hearts.

4. And we have such a persuasion in relation to God through the Christ,

5. Not that we are sufficient to reason out anything from ourselves, but as though of ourselves, because our sufficiency is of God,

6. Who hath made us to suffice as deacons of a new covenant not of letter, but of spirit. For the letter killeth, but the spirit maketh alive,

7. And if the deaconship of the death in letter represented in stones came to pass in glory, so that the sons of Israel could not steadfastly look at the face of Mouses, because of the glory of his face, that glory that was being abrogated, (or wroughtout)

8. How much more will the deaconship of the Spirit be in glory?

9. For if the deaconship of the condemnation be glory, how much more doth the deconship of the righteousness abound in glory.

10. Yea, for that which was glorified in this portion was not accounted glorious on account of the glory that surpasseth it.

11. For if that which is being abrogated is abrogated through glory how much more that which abideth, abideth in glory.

12. Having then such a hope we are using much boldness of speech,

13. And not even as Mouses placed a veil over his face, do we, that the sons of Israel should not steadfastly look unto the end of that which was abrogated;

14. Moreover their perceptions were blunted. For until the day of "to-day" the same veil remaineth over the reading of the old covenant, not being unveiled in respect to that which is being abrogated in Christ.

15. And whilst there is a "to-day," whenever Mouses is being read, a veil lieth over their heart:

16. But whenever it (their heart) shall turn unto the Lord the veil will be taken away:

17. The Lord moreover is the Spirit and where the Spirit of the Lord is there is liberty.

18. And we all while reflecting like a mirror the glory of the Lord in an unveiled face (Christ's face meant) are transforming (that is reforming the image in the mirror of ourselves) the same image from glory to glory even as though from the Lord's Spirit.

CHAP. 4.

1. Therefore since we have this deaconship, even as we have received mercy, we are not cowardly,

2. But have disowned the hidden things of the shame, not walking in subtilty nor counterfeiting the Word of God, but in the manifestation of the truth commending ourselves to every man's conscious knowledge (C. T. conscience) in the sight of God.

3. And if our gospel is veiled it is veiled unto those who are being lost.

4. In whom the God of this animate-age hath blinded their perceptive-faculties the perceptive faculties namely of the unfaithful, so that they have not gleamed with the enlightenment of the gospel of the glory of the Christ, who is God's image.

5. For we are not heralding ourselves but Christ Jesous as Lord; and ourselves as your bond-servants for Jesous' sake.

6. Because the God who hath said, light will shine out of darkness, is he who hath shone in our hearts to illuminate our comprehension of the glory of God in Christ's face.

7. And we have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the exceeding greatness of the ability may be of God and not of us.

8. We being in tribulation in every way, but not straightened, in perplexity, but not utterly perplexed.

9. Persecuted but not forsaken; cast down, but not lost;

10. Always bearing about the dying of Jesous in the body that the life of Jesous may have been made manifest in our bodies.

11. For we always though alive are being delivered up unto death for Jesous' sake, that the life also of Jesous may have been made manifest in our mortal flesh.

12. So then the death is energizing in us but the life in you,

13. And having the same spirit of the faith, according to that which hath been written, namely I have experienced faith; therefore have I spoken, we also are exemplifying faith; therefore we also speak;

14. Knowing that the One who hath awakened Jesous will also awaken us a'ong with Jesous, and stand us beside him along with you.

15. For all things are for your sakes, that the grace which hath abounded may make the thanksgiving to abound through the more people to the glory of God.

16. Therefore we do not weakly yield; but if our outward man be perishing by corruption, yet our inner man is being renewed day by day.

17. For the present light-weight of our tribulation is working out for us in a surpassing way unto a surpassing degree an eternel excessive weight of glory.

18. While we are not taking into the scope of our vision the things seen (lit. being looked at with the natural eye) but the things not seen: For the things seen are for the time being, but the things not seen are eternal.

CHAP. 5.

1. For we know that if our terrestrial house of the tabernacle be taken down (by dissolutionment), we have a way of being built of God a house not made with hands eternal in heaven (in the heavenly constitution of things meant).

2. For in this (tabernacle, the antecedent) we sigh, longing to have our under-garment clothed upon with our habilment from heaven.

3. If indeed we be clothed with an under-garment (the clothing of justification probably meant) and be not found naked.

4. Yea while in the tabernacle (of the flesh meant) we sigh being weighed down; though on this account we would not be unclothed (that is put off the tabernacle of flesh) but have our clothing (of justification) clothed upon, that the mortality may have been swallowed up by the life.

5. And the One who hath wrought us out for this very end is the God who hath given us the earnest of the spirit.

6. We take courage then at all times, since we know also that if we be indwelling in the body, we are outdwelling from the Lord;

7. For we walk by faith, not by sight—and are satisfied the rather to be out-dwelling from the body and indwelling toward the Lord.

9. Therefore we are emulous also whether indwelling or outdwelling to be pleasing unto him.

10. For we all must appear (be made manifest lit.) before the bema of the Christ (the bema is literally the step to the throne and where the advocate stands to plead) that each one may realize his deserts through the body according to the deeds he hath done whether good or bad.

11. Knowing then the fear of the Lord we persuade men and are manifest unto God; and I hope also we are manifest to your conscious-knowledge.

12. We are not commending ourselves again unto you, but giving you an opportunity to boast about us, that ye may have it for those who boast in face and not in heart.

13. For whether we are distraught it is for God or whether we are self-controled it is for you.

14. For the love of the Christ constraineth us,

15. Who have reached this conclusion, that surely all have died, because One hath died for all; and hath died for all, that those who are living may no longer live unto themselves, but unto him who died and was awakened for them.

16. So then we know no one from now on according to flesh; and we have known Christ according to flesh we know him now no more.

17. So then if any one be in Christ it is a new creation: the old things have passed away, lo, all things have become new,

18. And they (the all things) are of God who hath restored (changed back) us to himself through Christ, and hath given us the deconship-service of the restoration:

19. Since it was God in Christ who was restoring (changing back) a cosmos to himself, not accounting to their errors (stumbling-steps) unto them, and who hath put in us the Word of the restoration (the process of changing back).

20. We are acting then as ambassadors for Christ, as though God were exhorting through us; we beseech you for Christ's sake be ye restored (changed back) to God.

21. Him who knew no sin hath he made sin for us that we might become God's righteousness in him.

CHAS. GARDNER.

True Gospel and True Cure.

There is one true gospel—the gospel which Christ preached. The teachings of all other religious creeds carry with them elements of truth and are morally up-lifting, but only the true gospel has power to save. There is only one true method of cure for the ills of mankind—the simple hygienic method. The teachings of all other schools of medicine contain elements of truth, but none but the true system can cure.

The gospel which Christ preached is founded upon the firm foundation of the inherent mortality of man, and that he will recieve his reward on earth at the resurrection. The popular religious teachings of to-day are founded upon the false foundation that man is inherently immortal, and that he will recieve his reward at death in heaven.

The teachings of the popular medical schools of to-day are founded upon the false theory that the law of chemistry performs the functions of all living organisms and that disease is an enemy to mankind. The hygienic system of cure founds its teachings upon the firm foundation that every organism has within itself a vitalizing force that performs all the functions for the maintenance of life and health, and that disease is not an enemy, but a friend.

Only inorganic unorganized matter is under the law of chemistry. Vegitable and animal organized bodies all have within themselves a power for repairing and purifying. Examples are every day before us of this healing, repairing power in man, which is seen in the healing of a cut or the knitting together of a broken bone. This is reparation. This same inherent power also performs the operation of purifying the blood, and is called disease. This is purification.

As Christ was the Savior of mankind sent to lead the way to everlasting life, and existed in the purposes of God from the foundation of the earth, and through him only can we be saved; so this inherent power, this Christ principle, of purification and reparation (disease), has existed in animal and vegetable organisms from the beginning of creation to redeem man from his transgressions of nature's laws.

Then, if to get into Christ and be heirs of immortality requires faith in him and his teachings, repentance of our sins, the washing of our bodies with pure water, and then the daily walking in new paths and forsaking of the old; so it is necessary, if we would have health and keep it, that we must believe in the Christ (Savior) principle that exists within us for repairing and purifying, and the method of cure founded upon that true basis (the hygienic method), repent of the ways which brought us into the condition of unhealth (the transgression of nature's laws), be cleansed by the washings of pure water and other aids of that method of cure, and then walk in the new way and forsake the old.

Popular religous teachers would have us believe there is a short cut to glory; that it don't make much difference what you believe or whether you are baptized, only believe in Christ (?), be sorrowful and you will be saved. But to be "Christ's at his coming" requires us to forsake the pleasures and conformities of this world and go about doing good—walk as he walked and live as he lived as near as we can. Popular M. D's. would have us believe there is a short cut to health; that all it requires is for us to take this or that drug and health will come, and that it don't make much difference if we don't conform to the laws of health. But to get health and keep it we must go the road to health, and then if we would retain that condition of health we must obey health laws.

As the true gospel is so plainly revealed to mankind in all grades of life that "he who runs may read," and understand, and is not the hidden mystery which the learned only can understand, as is the prevailing opinion today; so is the simple hygienic method of cure plain to all, and the materials necessary for its application (except surgery) are to be found in every home—not put up in bottles, and sold by the ounce or quart.

It was a "little flock" that followed and is still following Christ, and ever will be a "little flock," despised and hated of men because their faith is of truth and their walks are in the straight and narrow way. It is a "little flock" today that believes in the true, simple methods of cure for the ills of mankind, and will ever be a "little flock," because the road to health it teaches is straight and narrow.

The drug schools have for their sheet anchors calomel and quinine. The hygeinic system has for its sheet anchors heat, moisture and motion, taken from nature. With these are associated proper food, dress and exercise, air, light, electricity, etc. In all nature we find these heat, moisture and motion—for it is necessary in all vegetable growths that the sun's heat, the rain's moisture and the wind's motion of swaying be brought to bear upon vegetable life if it would attain its greatest development. Other elements, as darkness, sunlight, fog, electricity, etc. enter into the assisting of this development.

By heat, moisture and motion nature cleanes the atmosphere in order that animal and vegetable life may be maintained. In the electric storm we have the heat of lightening to burn up the impurities, the moisture of clouds and rain to absorb their share of these impurities, and motion of the air and parting of the atmosphere by the lightning to assist in the work of cleansing.

Strong delusion has been sent to mankind, not only of a religious character, but of a secular also, the two greatest of which are drug medication and vaccination. Popular religions and drug medication are based upon false basic foundation, and just so long as they hold to these false theories there will be divisions and dissensions among them. As the world is getting worse steadily and new religious creeds are springing up and keeping pace with it; so, on the other hand, as the drug doctors are increasing in number an increase in disease is keeping pace with it.

Will this condition of things continue, we ask? Yes. And only in Christ's coming will there be a revolution, a change for the better. "Evil seducers are waxing worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived." Men are making merchandise out of the souls and bodies of mankind, and will so continue until Jesus comes to earth to take unto himself his great power and reign. May he soon come.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 11.

THE PRAYERS AND BLESSINGS OF MOSES CONTINUED.

Before we resume our study of the words of Moses let us look at the words of a man, whose name was Simeon, who was in the city of Jerusalem when Jesus was brought there by his parents to be presented to the Lord. Simeon with many of his people had been looking for Jesus to come, and God's Spirit had assured him that he should not die until his eyes had looked upon the Christ of God. The same blessed Spirit led him into the temple that he might be there when the child was brought in. Taking the little one in his arms, he blessed God because he had seen his salvation:—"the light that was to lighten the Gentiles, and be the glory of God's people Israel."

We sing, "the light of the world is Jesus." Jesus is indeed the light. But he never could have been a light to the world if there had not been people to tell others about him. God choose men to do this. He makes Jesus a light, through the light-bearers that carry the news of his salvation to those who have never heard. You remember the disciples were chosen in Galilee,—the seventy were taken from the same region, and five hundred brethren met in Galilee to see and talk with Jesus after he had been raised from the dead. But how were the Gentiles to be lightened? And how could Jesus be "the glory of his people Israel?"

It will help us some if we look a little at that word "Gentiles." We get out Young's Concordance, here it is; peep over my shoulder now, all of you; what do you see? What a clapping of hands! Hebrew, "goi" "a collective body," "a nation." Greek ethnos, "nation." How surprised you are! Well, we know that the sweet story of Jesus went to the nations through Paul and Peter, and other men of the tribe of Benjamin. And it went to the lost sheep of the house of Israel too, for Jesus told his disciples to "go to the lost sheep of the house of Israel," and said that he himself had been sent to those same wandering sheep. They were scattered among the nations, and God had promised to send fishers to fish for them, and hunters to hunt for them, and Jesus was the first of these fishers. "God meant to "take out from among the nations a people for his name." We have never been able to see this people under their right title, because we have always heard them called "Gentiles"—when instead of this they were "Israelites." God has taken them out from among other nations, both individually and nationally.

They were "lost" to their own land, but not lost to God. And their brethren, in the days of the Savior, knew where they were. Some of them were still in the land of the Medes; great numbers dwelt in Asia Minor, portions of the tribes had emigrated to Iberia, (now Spain) large bands were in other parts of Europe, and many had crossed the channel into the British Isles. Dan had come there in his ships, and other tribes had followed Dan.

Paul and other preachers from Rome traveled into Spain, and went from there to Great Britian to tell these people of Jesus. The tribes to whom the truth came held it fast, and numbers of them became martyrs for Jesus' sake. The gospel spread, and after awhile the Bible was printed so that all might read it. The Reformation came, and with it liberty and untold blessings. All this had to be.

Judah as a nation was about to fall, there would then be no nation to take care of the Bible and of the dear New Testament, that was then being written for men. God had long ago told the prophet Micah that he would "gather the remnant of Israel," and "put them together," "as a flock in the midst of their fold," that they "had broken up and passed out through the gate" (Pass of David, in gate of the Caucasus) that "their king should pass before them and the Lord at the head of them." Israel must be this nation. Into her hands must the keeping of the Holy Books be committed, that Jesus [illegible] that is to lighten the Gentiles and the glory of his people Israel." In no other way could he be their glory, until his time comes for him to reign. History tells us that the seven churches of Asia, Ephesus, Pergamos, Thyatira, etc., were of the ten lost tribes. We will now turn to the seventh chapter of Revelation. There we find that a great many people out of all the tribes were sealed as the servants of God,—even out of the tribe of Judah, there were as many as out of either of the other tribes. A little further on a great multitude that no man could number, of all nations and peoples and tongues were sealed. The angel that sealed them was only a symbol of the preachers who taught them of Jesus. Baptism was the seal or sign that they belonged to the Lord.

These people were baptized some time before the four leaders of the Turks began their awful wars, perhaps 682, or 687 years after Christ. A great many of them were put to death on account of their faith. His horns—or rulers—are to be like the horns of unicorns—they are to push other people to the ends of the earth. Again we think of the nation that has the lion and the unicorn on its seal. This pushing people are the ten thousands of Ephraim,—and the thousands of Manasseh,—they are a conquering people. As Joseph was separated from his brethren, so have the ten tribes been separated from their brethren of the kingdom of Judah. You must read these verses for yourselves, no poet has ever written anything half so grand and beautiful, uninspired of God. Deut. xxxiii. 13-18.

Of Zebulon, Moses said, "Rejoice, Zebulon, in thy going out, and Issachar in thy tents." The next verse also refers to these tribes, but its fulfilment seems to be yet in the future, as do also the expressions about "the enlargement of God"—Dan "leaping from Bashan,"—Naphtali "possessing the west and the south,"—and Asher's "shoes of iron." These texts must all refer to the future division of the land of Canaan among the tribes after the Savior comes.

Read the last part of the [illegible] chapter of Ezekiel, beginning at the 18th verse, and also the 48th chap. You will see that by and by the inheritance is to be given to the tribes of Israel in wide strips, reaching from the Mediterranean Sea to the River Euphrates and the Persian Gulf. When you have read these chapters you may read the 21st chap. of Revelations. The city in the midst of the holy portion in Ezekiel;—the tabernacle of God with men in Rev.—the names of the tribes on the gates of the city in Ezekiel,—the names of the tribes on the gates of the city in Rev.—the Lord in the city, in Ezekiel—God dwelling with men, in Revelation.

Editor Restitution:

I have been reading so very many nice and interesting letters in your columns, from the different brothers and sisters both old and young, that it has inspired me with the thought that perhaps I would be fulfilling a part of my duty by writing a short letter for this good paper. I am not ashamed to own that I am trying to live a Christian life. It has been six years since I made the start to obey Jesus, but am yet young in his cause and at times feel weak, but hope and pray to gain more strength for my Master. I am happy in Jesus, but it is with pain I write that I feel so very lonely. "Death always comes veiled in a mystery and draped in sadness." This is the cause of my loneliness. Since Dec. 1894, I have mourned the loss of a dear, loving sister, but we mourn not as those who have no hope. Sister was yet a child and Jesus says, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God. Oh! how needful it is to be ready for we know not how soon we are to taste of death. "To live is Christ to die is gain." Let us all live a pure, true, Christian life, for God has promised eternal life to all those who love and faithfully serve the Lord Jesus. I think the best thing that could happen the people of God's children would be the coming of Christ the Redeemer, to gather his loved ones into his everlasting kingdom and give to them life forever. It would put an end to the great amount of wickedness in the world, as well as all the sorrows and painful toils. Pray for me, my dear parents, and two brothers and sisters. Let us all pray, watch and live for the Lord, waiting his coming and seeking his glory.

Yours in hope.

DOVE BRASKOVER.

Dear Restitution:

I have been attending meetings at the different churches of our city this winter, and listened to a great many sermons. What one builds up the other tears down. [illegible] to be a boy." The Sunday following was, "How to be a girl." I am a little girl and do not have to be told how to become one. I am acquainted with Elder John Foore of Parsons. He says they should preach the "kingdom of God," and Paul says, "If any man preach any other gospel let him be accursed." If Paul tells the truth, will it not be "perfectly awful" for some of our preachers? I would like to read THE RESTITUTION and see if it can tell "how to be a Christian." Enclosed find forty cents which the preachers have not got hold of. I guess they do not think of my having it, or they would get it sure. Send me THE RESTITUTION for what time that will pay.

EVA BREWER.

Editor Restitution:

You were so kind as to furnish THE RESTITUTION free to my invalid sister (Miss Mary Horner), I write to thank you for the favor, and to say that she fell asleep in Jesus, Jan. 31, 1895, after years of severe affliction and suffering. We miss her sadly from our fireside and home, but we sorrow not as those without hope, for we believe that when Christ shall come to make up his jewels, she will be among the happy number that will hear the "well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." Her character was of the noblest type. Duty to God first and showing kindness and gentleness to all about her, sacrificing her own pleasure to minister to other's comfort. As her suffering grew worse and worse her faith grew stronger and brighter, and when pain caused sleep to forsake her eyelids she found comfort in repeating the precious promises of the Bible and the hymns of Zion. Even going down to the "Dark Valley" with prayer and thanksgiving on her lips. I wish now to say to the sisters who may read this, that this dear one who has left us was my favorite sister and as such I have waited upon her and ministered to her comfort cheerfully and willingly the past three months (the length of her stay with me) but I feel now that I did not do half that I ought to have done for her, and missed saying many kind, tender words that would have helped her to bear her sufferings better. And if there are invalids in your homes, brothers and sisters, oh, be very kind and patient with them. Helping them bear their burdens of pain and suffering by doing the many little acts of kindness and tenderness, and speaking words of cheer. I am not able to subscribe for THE RESTITUTION just now and neither am I entitled to it as a free gift; but I shall miss its visits and hope to be able to spare the money for it soon. I feel as if I knew many of the brethren and sisters who contribute to its columns, and trust that I shall meet them in the kingdom.

S. A. WEBSTER.

Dear Brother and Sister:

As I read the many dear letters that appear in THE RESTITUTION it makes my heart to rejoice. Although it seems quite a task for me to write, but with God's help I will try and say a few words for my dear Savior. I was baptized by Bro. Alonzo Adams last June. My hope is in the second coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead, for without this there is no hope, for Paul says, "If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantages it me if the dead rise not? Let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die." Brothers and sisters, let us all strive more earnestly to be like Christ, for soon he will come to set up his kingdom and take his throne and reign, and gather his jewels home, where there will be no more pain or sickness or dying. Oh, what a happy hour that will be for all that love his appearing. Seeing that we look for such things we should let our light so shine that the world may see our good works and glorify our Father which is in heaven. Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord. So we need to be always on the watch, that we may so live that we will be welcomed by our Lord when he comes for his own, is my prayer.

[illegible]

LUCY STEDMAN.

Dear Restitution:

Enclosed please find $1.50 to apply on our subscription to THE RESTITUTION. We cannot think of doing without the paper. It is all the preaching we have of our faith. Though there are but few of us here we still meet every first day for communion and Bible study. Although almost broken-hearted by the loss of our leader, my dear husband Elias Siple, we are still determined, the Lord helping us, to be faithful to the end, and be prepared to meet him when Jesus comes, which we firmly believe will not be long. Pray for us, dear brethren, that we may be faithful and that we may be successful in bringing the rest of our dear children into the fold. We very much desire to have some meetings here this winter, may the dear Lord send some one here to proclaim the Word, is the prayer of your sister in Christ.

ARLOY SIPLE.

Editor Restitution:

Enclosed you will find an order for $1.75 to pay for my only instructor in Bible truths, THE RESTITUTION, for the year 1895. Please send me such tracts as will do to hand to those who will read them. We have no preaching in this place of the one faith. Our time is spent in reading and searching the Scriptures, and calling the attention of others to the things concerning the kingdom of God, which by the help of God we have got some to reading and searching the Scriptures to see if God's kingdom was set up on the day of Pentecost or yet future. Let us pray that they see. Now, dear brothers and sisters, the eyes of our understanding being enlightened that we may know what are the riches of the glory of the inheritance of the saints, and what is the greatness of his power to usward who believe, let us strive to walk worthy of the vocation in which we are called; let us strive to help one another. Oh, it cheers and comforts me much to read those precious truths from the dear ones scattered abroad. Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised, and his greatness is unsearchable. I am trying and striving to be ready to meet my Lord when he comes.

Your sister waiting for the coming kingdom of our Lord.

SARAH BOWMAN.

Editor Restitution:

Please announce through THE RESTITUTION the following, viz., "The members of the Church of God in the States of Oregon and Washington, who are looking for the Lord Jesus from heaven; as many as are inclined to meet together on the evening of the fourteenth day of the first month (the 10th day of April, 1895,) to eat the Lord's Passover (to eat his flesh and drink his blood) with us, at my place of residence in Vancouver, Washington, at 8 o'clock, P. M. To the brethren in hope.

J. M. FIKE.

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put forgiveness on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Pause do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God's Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

The method pursued by the Nickel Plate Road by which its agents figure rates as low as the lowest seems to meet the requirements of the traveling public. No one should think of purchasing a ticket until they first enquire what the rate would be over the Nickel Plate Road. Mar. 31.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. C. Derwood, Plymouth, Ind.

Home-Seekers' Excursions South and Southeast via Pennsylvania Lines.

Special low rate excursion tickets with twenty day return limit will be sold March 5th, April 2d and 30th, from ticket stations on the Pennsylvania Lines to points in Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia. For details, apply to nearest Pennsylvania Line Ticket Agent, or address F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Knight Templars Conclave will be held at Boston, Mass. during next August, and it will be of interest to Sir Knights and their friends to know that arrangements have already been successfully accomplished by the Nickel Plate Road providing for the sale of excursion tickets over direct lines, going and returning, or by circuitous route; i. e. going one line and returning another. By so doing many of the following notable resorts may be visited without additional expense: Chautauqua Lake, Niagara Falls, Thousand Islands, The Rapids of the St. Lawrence, Saratoga, Palisades of the Hudson, and the Hoosac Tunnel. The above arrangements will, no doubt, make the low rate excursion tickets offered by the Nickel Plate Road very popular.—Mar. 31.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks those not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application to them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION of which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King or reign; and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a knowledge of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Too Tired to Trust.

"Too tired to trust and too tired to pray!"
So I said as the overtaxed strength gave way.
The temptation that thought by my mind possessed,
Was that God would give me, in my weakness,
It might be right to despair a little longer;
It might come if I may.
Without even trying to trust or pray?"
Without forgive you? Why, just think,
What dear heart.
Whose language be you was an unknown art.
Is a mother always so needed not,
So prone to pillow your on her breast?
Did she not want when you could not
Did she not her child an unequal task,
Or, did she cradle you in her arms,
And then guard your slumber against alarms?
No, even quick was her mother-love to see
The unconscious yearnings of infancy!
When you're grown to tired to trust and pray,
When overwrought nature has quite given way,
Look just drop it all, and give up to rest.
As you used to do on a mother's breast;
He knows all about it the dear Lord knows,
So just go to sleep as a baby goes,
Without even asking if you may;
God knows when his child is too tired to pray.
He judges not solely by uttered prayer.
He knows when the yearnings of love are there.
He knows you do pray, he knows you do trust,
And he knows, too, the limits of poor weak dust.
Oh, the wonderful sympathy of Christ
For his chosen ones in that midnight tryst
When he bids them sleep on and take their rest,
While on him the guilt of the whole world pressed
You've given your life up to him to keep.
Then don't be afraid to go right to sleep.

The Essentials of the Faith or Gospel.

I know of no way to decide as to what is absolutely necessary for the salvation of sinners during this gospel age, except by an appeal to the command of Christ to his apostles just before his ascension, (Matt. xxviii. 19, 20; Mark xvi. 15, 16;) and their recorded practice under that commission, as given in the Acts of Apostles. The apostles are the only appointed ambassadors of Christ, to whom were committed the "Word of reconciliation," or the gospel, 2 Cor. v. 18-20, therefore whatever they preached for salvation, and commanded sinners to do, must have been absolutely necessary. Besides, these men were not only divinely sent, but were guided and qualified for their work by the Holy Spirit,—for "they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the Word with signs following" Mark xvi. 20. Again, there has been no authoritative change made in "the Word of the truth of the gospel," since the apostolic age. There are men who profess to be ministers of the gospel, and acting under Christ's commission, but who are preaching another gospel, and showing men another way to be saved. Of such, beware! Read what the last apostle of Jesus Christ says of these perverters of the gospel, in Gal. i. 6-9.

As I understand it, the faith or the gospel which the apostles preached for salvation, embraced two propositions:—1st. The kingdom of God; 2nd. The name of Jesus Christ. See Acts viii. 12. Every sermon and act of the apostles and first preachers of the gospel, as recorded by Luke, conformed to these two items. I might take this very chapter as an illustration—Acts viii. We read in verse 4, that those disciples who were scattered abroad by the persecution which arose against the church at Jerusalem, "went every where preaching the Word." What Word? Verse 14: it is called the Word of God, which the Samaritans received and verse 12 tells us that they believed Philip preaching concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, and were baptized. In verse 25, it is called "the Word of the Lord," and the gospel, as preached by Peter and John; for verse 25 we read that Philip preached Christ to the Samaritans, and we know from verse 12 already quoted what is meant by that. In verse 35 it is said that he preached Jesus to the eunuch. All these varied expressions are included in the 12th verse, and are what Philip preached, and what the Samaritans believed before they were baptized—viz. "the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ."

I wish to reply here to an objection made by some, that Peter did not preach the kingdom to the Jews on the day of Pentecost, nor to the Gentiles in the house of Cornelius, and therefore it is not necessary now. I answer that, the Jews believed in the kingdom. They were looking for Messiah to come and establish his kingdom in their midst: and because Jesus did not do so, but allowed himself to be killed, they rejected him. Hence Peter preached to them Jesus as the Messiah, even as Philip did to the eunuch, who was a Jewish proselyte; and as Paul did in the synagogues at Antioch, (Acts xiii.) at Thessalonica, at Berea, (Acts xvii.) also at Corinth. (Acts xviii.) Paul reasoned with the Jews in their synagogues concerning Jesus as their Messiah, offering them life in his name. When Peter was specially sent to open the door of salvation to the Gentiles, in the house of Cornelius, a Roman soldier and officer, [illegible] a devout, pious, and benevolent man, yet unsaved, (Acts x. 2; xi. 14.) he did not preach the kingdom to him, but Jesus of Nazareth, whom God anointed with the Holy Spirit and power, but though rejected and put to death by the Jews, yet raised to life the third day after his crucifixion, by God, who has also ordained him the Judge of the living and the dead; and that whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins, through his name. But why did not Peter preach the kingdom to Cornelius, and his household? For the same reason that he did not preach it to the Jews at Pentecost—they knew about it. Read verses 36, 37 of chap. x. Cornelius had heard that "Word of the kingdom," which Jesus, the twelve apostles, and seventy disciples preached throughout all Judea, beginning from Galilee. Mark i. 14, 15; Luke iv. 14-21, 43, 44; viii. 1; ix. 1-6; x. 1, 9; Matt. xxiv. 14. Neither Jesus nor any of his disciples preached to the Jews about the death, burial, and resurrection of Christ before they were accomplished facts. Yet they preached the gospel.—the glad tidings of the kingdom of God. Both John the Baptist and Jesus preached the good news that the kingdom was at hand, and exhorted men to believe it, repent, and be baptized. When Jesus sent out his apostles the first time they were restricted in their preaching of the kingdom—gospel to the Jews. "Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: but go ye rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. And as ye go, preach, saying, the kingdom of heaven is at hand." Matt. x. 5-7. And though they knew and confessed Jesus as the Christ, they were forbidden to publish it. Matt. xvi. 20; Luke ix. 20, 21. Not so, however, when they were sent upon their last mission. "Go," said their risen Master, "teach all nations," etc.: and "Go ye, therefore, and preach the gospel to every creature," etc. And in addition to preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, they preached Jesus as the Christ, that he "died for our sins, according to the Scriptures, was buried, and rose again the third day." I Cor. xv. 1-4; and offered salvation in his name to every obedient believer.

The essential or necessary things to be believed, as preached by the apostles and evangelists of our [illegible] are what to substantial, are

1. The kingdom of God. Acts viii. 12; xix. 8; xx. 25; xxviii. 23, 31. The kingdom was preached by Jesus before his death, and was called the gospel. Luke ix. 1, 6;—no other gospel was preached to the Jews than this. It was the good news concerning the re-establishment of the kingdom and throne of David, of which Jesus was the royal heir. He was born "the king of the Jews," and crucified for confessing this truth. Luke i. 31, 32, 33; Isa. ix. 6, 7; Matt. ii. 1-6; John xviii. 37; i. 49; xii. 12-16; xix. 19-22, etc. And during the 40 days between his resurrection and ascension, he conversed with his disciples concerning the things of the kingdom of God; and they being much interested in that kingdom, about which they preached, and of which they had read and heard so much, and which had been promised to them, asked Jesus, saying, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" Acts i. 3-6; Luke xii. 32; xxii. 28-30. And as the poor in spirit, but rich in faith, and those who are persecuted for righteousness' sake, are [illegible] of the kingdom which God promised to them that love him, it is necessary to read and understand what God has revealed about this kingdom, through the prophets of Israel. There is much in the Old Testament to be read and studied in connection with the kingdom, in order to make us "wise unto salvation," and to induce us to "seek first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness," in preference to worldly things. Matt. vi. 33; v. 3, 10; Acts xiv. 22; Jas. ii. 5. The prophets tell us that this kingdom of the Lord was once in the hands of David and his sons, 2 Chron. xiii. 5; 2 Sam. vii. 12, 13 16. But the throne was cast down, and the kingdom overturned, on account of the wickedness of the kings and tribes of Israel, and to be no more until the righteous heir should come. Ezek. xxi. 25-27. The heir—Jesus—"came to his own, but his own received him not," John i. 11; Matt. xxi. 33-40; and him they killed; and if God had not raised him up from the dead, their hope would have been completely lost, as well as the hope of the world. This deferred the kingdom until the times of restitution. Acts iii. 19-21. It is a literal kingdom—not the church as some believe. It is connected with the restored houses of Israel and Judah, when they will be united again as one nation and one kingdom in their own land, and have one king. Ezek. xxxvii. 21-28. Let this suffice as to the kingdom which the God of heaven will set up, as revealed in Dan. ii. 44; vii. 23-27; Rev. xi. 15; and which must be believed in, by all who enter it.

2. The name of Jesus Christ. Salvation is through this name. Acts iv. 12. Jesus means Savior. Matt. i. 21. Christ means Anointed (king.) God anointed Jesus at his baptism, Acts x. 38; Luke iv. 18; Acts iv. 27; and made him both Lord and Christ after his resurrection, Acts ii. 36; so that now he is a Prince and a Savior, to give repentance and forgiveness of sins, Acts v. 31; xiii. 38, 39. Repentance and forgiveness were also sent to the Gentiles, specially by Paul, Acts ix. 15; xxii. 21; xxvi. 16-18. Forgiveness of sins to believers of the gospel of the kingdom was promised in the name of Jesus Christ to all who would repent, and be immersed, whether Jew or Gentile. Mark xvi. 15, 16; Luke xxiv. 46, 47; Acts ii. 38; viii 12, 16, 35-39; (note that Philip in preaching Jesus to the eunuch told him of baptism, and in preaching Christ (ver. 5) to the Samaritans he told them of the kingdom and baptism.) Paul washed away his sins in baptism. Acts xxii. 16. So also all primitive disciples. 1 Cor. vi. 11; Rom. xi 14, 15; Eph. v. 26; 1 Pet. iii. 21. There was no other appointed way for obtaining pardon. No one unbaptized was prayed for, or told to pray for forgiveness in these days. How is it now? Has God changed his plan? Let the preachers answer. The apostles offered life through the gospel and the name of Jesus to the perishing; those who accepted and obeyed, were "justified by faith and had peace with God, through our Lord Jesus Christ." Rom. v. 1. This justification leads to eternal life; hence those who refuse this "Word of reconciliation," "preaching peace by Jesus Christ," judge themselves "unworthy of everlasting life." Acts xiii. 46. And thus the apostles were then and are even now, "unto God a sweet savor of Christ, in those that are being saved, and in those that are perishing." 2 Cor. ii. 15. Let it be remembered that the gospel is designed to save sinners from perishing, and to give to the obedient eternal life. See Acts v. 20; John iii. 14-17, 36; xvii. 3; xiv. 6; v. 40; vi. 38; x. 27, 28; Rom. vi. 23; 1 John ii. 25; v. 11, 12. Hence the doctrine of natural immortality is [illegible] of God, and contrary to the doctrine of Christ and his gospel. Those therefore who believe this tradition of men, make void the gospel; for "Christ has abolished death, and has brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." 2 Tim. i. 10. And this comes only to those who seek for it by a patient continuance in well doing, and through the resurrection. Rom. ii. 7; 1 Cor. xv. 42-57; 1 Thess. iv. 13-18. "The gospel is the power of God for salvation to every one that believeth," Rom. i. 16; and by that gospel the apostles preached "Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God." 1 Cor. i. 23, 24. Hence Christ is our hope of life from the dead—even as he said, "I am the resurrection and the life." John xi. 25, 26. Reader, beware of counterfeits! No gospel is genuine, except the apostolic—and none has heaven's stamp but that.

Paul's Second Epistle to Korinthioi. Chap. 6.

1. And co-operating with you we also exhort you not to have accepted the grace of God in vain.

2. For he saith, In an acceptable time (period) have I heard other and in a day of salvation have I responded to thy cry for help; lo, now is a truly acceptable period, lo, now is a day of salvation;

3. Giving no cause of stumbling in any way, that the deaconship (service) may not have been blamed.

4. But in every way commending ourselves as God's deacons with much patient-endurance in tribulations, in necessities, in straits,

5. In blows, in imprisonments, in seditions, in experiences of toil, of wakefulness, in fastings, in purity, in comprehension, in forbearance, in useful-goodness, in sanctified spirit, in love unfeigned.

7. In a word of truth, in God's ability through the weapons of the righteousness on the right-hand and on the left,

8. Through glory and dishonor, through bad report and good report, as though erring and yet true;

9. As though unknown and yet fully known; as though condemned to die, and lo, we live; as though chastened and not put to death;

10. As though grieved, but always rejoicing; as though beggars, but making many rich; as though having nothing and yet possessing all things.

11. Our mouth hath been opened toward you, O Korinthoi; our heart hath been made broad;

12. Ye are not straightened in us; but ye are straightened in your feelings of compassion.

13. And may ye have made broad also the same return of wages—I am speaking as though to children—

14. Become not unequally yoked with unfaithful ones, for what participation hath righteousness with transgression? Or what partnership hath light with darkness?

15. Or what agreement hath Christ with Belial? Or what portion hath a faithful one with an unfaithful one?

16. And what assent has hath God's inner-sanctuary with idols? For we are a living in God's inner-sanctuary even as God hath said, I will take up my abode in them and walk about in them; and I will be their God and they will be my laity.

17. Therefore come out of their midst and be ye separated from them, saith the Lord, and touch not an unclean one (or thing); and I will accept you,

18. And I will be unto you for a Father, and ye will be unto me for sons and daughters, saith the Lord Omnipotent.

CHAP. 7.

1. Having these promises then, beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all pollution of flesh and spirit, perfecting sanctification in God's fear.

2. [illegible] us; we have wronged no one; we have treated no one selfishly.

3. I am not speaking in the way of condemnation; for I have previously said that ye are in our hearts to die along with and to live along with you,

4. Much boldness of speech is mine toward you, my boast about you is much: I am filled with the consolation; I exceedingly abound with the joy over all our tribulation.

5. For when we come into Makedonia, our flesh had no respite but we had tribulation in every way, fightings without, fears within.

6. But the God who comforteth the lowly comforted us in the coming of Titus;

7. And not only in his coming, but also with the comfort with which he was comforted in respect to you, telling us of your longing desire, of your lamentation, your zeal for me, so that I rejoiced the more,

8. And even if I did cause you sorrow in the epistle, I do not regret it, if forsooth I did regret it. For I see because that epistle did cause you sorrow, though for an hour,

9. Now I rejoice, not that ye were made to sorrow, but that ye were made to sorrow unto repentance. For ye sorrowed according to God, that in no respect ye might suffer loss from us.

10. For the sorrow that is according to God worketh a repentance unto salvation not to be regretted, but the sorrow of the cosmos worketh out death.

11. For lo this is very sorrowing according to God, how great a diligence it wrought out in you, yea apology, yea vexation, yea fear, yea longing-desire, yea zeal, yea requital: in every way ye commended yourselves to be pure in this matter.

12. And if forsooth I did write unto you it was not for the sake of the one who had done the wrong nor for the sake of the one who had suffered the wrong, but that your diligence for us might become manifest to yourselves in the sight of God.

13. Therefore were we comforted, and we rejoice the more exceedingly in our consolation, on account of the joy of Titus in that his spirit found rest from all of you.

14. Because if I had boasted to him at all about you I was not put to shame; but as we had talked everything in truth even so our boast to Titus became truth;

15. And his tender feelings are exceeding toward you, when he calls to mind the obedience of you all, how ye accepted him with fear and trembling.

16. I rejoice, because in every way I am encouraged in you.

CHAP. 8.

1. And we are making known unto you, brethren, the grace of God that hath been given unto the churches of Makedonia;

2. How that in a great test of tribulation the excess of their joy and their way down deep poverty hath abounded unto the riches of their simplicity;

3. How that according to their ability and beyond their ability, I testify, they were takers upon themselves,

4. With much comforting help beseeching for us the grace and the partnership of the deaconship service which is towards the saints;

5. And not even as we had hoped, but they first gave themselves to the Lord and to us through God's will,

6. To such an extent that we exhorted Titus, that as he had already begun even so should he also complete it toward you and towards this grace.

7. Moreover even as ye abound in every way, in faith, and Word and comprehension and all diligence and in the love from you toward us, would that ye abound in this grace also,

8. I speak in the way of commandment do I speak, but through the diligence of others and to test the nobility of your love.

9. For ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christos, how that for your sakes he became a beggar though he was rich, that ye in his beggary might become rich.

10. And I am giving an opinion in this matter; for this is profitable for you who began a year ago first not only to do, but to will also.

11. And just now may ye have finished the doing also, that even as was your readiness to will so forsooth may the accomplishment be from what ye have.

12. For if the readiness be present it is acceptable even as one may have, not as one hath not,

13. For tribulation on your part is not that there may be respite to others: but on the principle of equity, that your abundance in this present period may be for their lack,

14. And that their abundance may be brought about for your lack, so that equity may occur,

15. Even as hath been written, The one who had much did not have too much, and the one who had little did not have too little.

16. And thanks be unto God who giveth the same diligence for you to be in the heart of Titus;

17. Because he received the help and being more diligent he went out of his own will, unto you,

18. And we sent along with him the brother whose praise is in the gospel throughout all the churches;

19. And not only this, but also as our fellow-traveler elected by the churches for this grace that is being ministered as deacons by us for the glory of the Lord and for our readiness;

20. Charging ourselves with this that no one may blame us in the matter of this largest that is being ministered by us as deacons;

21. For we anticipate good things not only in the sight of the Lord, but also in the sight of men,

22. And we have sent along with them our brother whom we have many times in many ways proved to be diligent, and just now much more diligent by reason of his much confidence in you.

23. Whether it be for the sake of Titus, my partner and co-worker for you, or whether it be our brethren, apostles of churches, it is Christ's glory,

24. That we be showing forth the display of our love and of our boast concerning you in the sight of the churches.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Going Home.

The following cut from the Chicago Daily Record, will be of interest to all who love "the blessed hope."

"M. Elie Scheid of Paris, the administrator-general of Baron Edmond de Rothschild's colonies in Palestine, during his recent stay in Constantinople obtained authority to transport to Syria 1,000 Jewish families for settlement on lands at Goulan and in the neighborhood of Damascus. M. Heim Cohen has been appointed to take charge of these territories."

"Thus saith the Lord: Behold, I will bring again the captivity of Jacob's tents, and have mercy on his dwelling places; and the city shall be builded upon her own heap, and the palace shall remain after the manner thereof. And out of them shall proceed thanksgiving and the voice of them that make merry." Jer. xxx. 18, 19.

How marvelously God does verify his sacred Word. Oh, how blind are many of those who profess to know God, and yet fail to believe that he will ever verify his Word to his ancient people, when he said: "Therefore fear thou not, O my servant Jacob, saith the Lord; neither be dismayed, O Israel, for, lo, I will save thee from afar, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and shall be in rest, and be quiet, and none shall make afraid."

Does it not look like return, in good earnest when arrangements are made to transport to Palestine, "one thousand Jewish families?"

God always means just what he says, and will verify his promises to the very letter every time. It is marvelously strange to me to find people who profess to reverence both God and his Word, and yet cannot believe that he will perform his covenants with Israel, when it is even now being done on a large scale like the transportation of one "thousand families," which means between four and five thousand persons. He has sent again the rains and the dews, and the land yields her increase once more, and is now capable of sustaining a teeming population. "The Lord doth build up Jerusalem: he gathereth together the outcasts of Israel. (Yes, praise the Lord, it is being done now). He healeth the broken in heart, and bindeth up their wounds." Rejoice and be glad, we will all be at home soon.

W. H. WILSON.

Popularity is equally as bad as wealth in its tendency to destruction. How many, while unnoticed by the multitude, have lived lives of uprightness, sincerity, and devotion, who, when exalted and applauded by the public, have became dizzy with their own greatness, and have ignominiously fallen to the depths of wickedness and degradation. Children are ruined by overpraise and exaltation in their own homes. Young people are often ruined forever by their classmates in the same way. None but those of the greatest integrity and purity of character are to bear without injury much popularity.

"In our schemes of retrenchment let us be careful not to begin by cheating God. The benevolent Henry Thornton London, subscribed ten pounds to a religious object, but soon afterward having met with a great loss, sent fifty pounds to the treasurer with the remark, 'I don't want to lose this also.' The safest loans are loans to the Lord; he repays with compound interest."

☞ The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

We see by the Grand Rapids Herald that our venerable Bro. E. Hoyt has been raising a breeze among the ministers of that town by reading a paper to them at their conference, on "The End of the Age,—The Age to Come, and the Great Events connected with them." The papers speak of it as a masterly effort, and that it provoked a lengthy discussion. *

"THE difference between a man and a monkey is never so apparent as when a monkey is dressed up, and made to act the part of a man. So the inherent absurdities of some theories are never so manifest as when they are made to do sober duty in the concrete. Our scientific speculators think it very shallow to read:—"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth." Their own poor wisdom appears in its shallowness and ugliness when they are asked to take the place of Moses and give us an account of creation in accordance with their predictions." *

TRULY many are running to and fro and knowledge is increasing. Another proof that the time of the end is upon us is furnished by the discovery of a new element in the atmosphere, which chemists thought they knew all about, and could analyze and decompose, and resolve into its original elements, and dogmatize upon to astonished students. This new gas has set at defiance all the standard works on chemistry; and weakened faith generally in that science. Prof. Doremus says that a machine to condense the newly discovered Argon costs about $20,000. Argon is of a white color, and is not unlike cheese. *

Dr. A. T. PIERSON was recently by the New York Sun to have said church in this city where the leading soprano was a woman you or I would not allow in our houses, and the leading tenor was her paramour. I also preached in a church where the members of the choir had to scramble out of a neighboring saloon to be in time for the closing hymn. Apropos of the above H. L. Hastings says:—"What has a man to do with praise, when he knows not God, and obeys not the gospel? What has an infidel to do with singing praise to the Most High God? What has a scoffer to do with taking the name of God upon his profane lips? What have Christians to do with hiring worldlings to stand up in the house of worship and mock the Almighty with solemn words uttered by thoughtless tongues?" We reply, nothing at all. And moreover, we say, Christians do no such hiring. *

What advancements have there been in the fulfillment of Prophecy,—This matter was discussed at the Bible class at the Kennington Meeting London and we compile a summary from the Fraternal Visitor.

It was pointed out that there were four elements which specially presented themselves. These were

1. The Jewish National Movement.

2. The general advance in preparation for war.

3. The Social Element.

4. The waning of the power which treads down Jerusalem.

The Daily News of Oct. 31st had the following: "The stream of Jewish emigration from the Baltic provinces to Argentina continues unremittingly. Last week another party of 600 Hebrews embarked at Libau for Bremen, where they will be transhipped to a transatlantic liner. The agents of Baron Hirsch's enterprise are exercising a greater discrimination in the choice of emigrants. The representative of a Jewish forwarding now states that the Hebrew emigration from Russia in 1864, voluntary and assisted amounted to about a quarter of a million souls.

There are now 120,000 Jews in Palestine, and this is almost three times as many as returned in the [illegible] Ezra ii. 64, 65; Neh. vii. 66, 67. At present it is mostly the heads of families who have returned to Palestine, so that we may expect that those dependent on them will shortly follow. It is interesting to notice the position of the Jews in Russia now as compared with Egypt in times gone by. They are now huddled by Russian restrictions for the most part in what is called the "Pale," which is in the extreme Southwest of Russia, at the part nearest Palestine. Surely there must be the hand of God in that fact. Goshen, where they were in the days of Moses, was in the extreme Northeast of Egypt, at the part nearest Palestine. The fare into Palestine now from the "Pale" is only twenty shillings, or five dollars.

Last year saw great advance in railway enterprise in Palestine. There is the proposed line from Damascus to Beirut, then along the coast southward with branches to the interior and to Suez the most important waterway in the world; and Suez would then be well called the port of Palestine.

There has been formed the Syrian Ottoman R. R. Company to build a road from Acre to Damascus, of about 150 miles. It is expected that the portion from Acre to the Jordan will be open by June this year, and the whole length to Damascus early next year. Besides the line from Beirut to Damascus there is another under construction from Damascus into the great grain district of Hauran, some 15 miles distant.

About the middle of last year the Turkish government gave orders to repair the aequeduct of Solomon. It is eighteen miles long, coming from about a mile from Bethlehem. The cost is upward of $100,000. It has been in disrepair for 2,500 years but was still in working order in the time of Christ.

The Jews are preparing the land, and the land is being prepared for the Jews. The Morning Star says the latter rains are now being given with their benign influence.

Throughout Europe it is thought that the recent Armenian atrocities perpetrated by Turkish soldiers and officials, will prove another severe blow to Turkey.

The times seem ripe for the silent coming to gather his Household. Oh, we must gird up, and have our light burning, and be eagerly waiting. *

"Where the Worm Dieth Not."

"Questioner" is quite mistaken, we think, in supposing that Mark ix. 44 teaches that all men are immortal. We think it teaches the very opposite of that. Our Lord quoted this passage from the 66th chapter of Isaiah and the 24th verse. The prophet says "they shall go forth and look upon the carcasses of the men that have transgressed against me; for their worm shall not die, neither shall their fire be quenched, and they shall be an abhorring unto all flesh." It is easy to see that both the fire and the worm are alike external to and distinct from the subject on which they prey, and also that what the fire and worm prey upon are not the living but the dead; not living souls but the carcasses of transgressors who had been slain. Isaiah frequently employs the image of the worm, but always in connection with death, as in chapter 50 and 8th verse: "The moth shall eat them up like a garment, and the worm shall eat them like wool;" one text explains the other; and the idea is that death and the grave are the cleansers of the world by the utter destruction of the wicked. Those words of Isaiah are endorsed by Christ, who teaches an endless death and destruction, not an endless life in misery. "Questioner" should read carefully from the 5th verse of Is. lxvi. to the end, to get the locality and circumstances and preceding events, and see that the Lord is coming to render his anger with fury, and his rebuke with flames of fire, and plead with all flesh by fire and sword and the slain of the Lord shall be many, see v. 16, and it is the carcasses of these slain ones, that those who come to Jerusalem to worship shall see, and whose worms shall not die nor their fire be quenched till the carcasses are annihilated, and then the fire goes out for want of fuel, and the worm dies for want of food. The most casual reader can see that no traces of the orthodox hell can be found in either Mark ix. 44, nor Isa. lxvi. The word rendered hell in Mark ix. is Gehenna, meaning the valley of Hinnom near Jerusalem just where the worshippers shall witness the destruction of the carcasses. The unquenchable nature of the fire does not mean that it will burn for ever,—it is used in the same sense as Sodom and Gomorrha are set forth in Jude vii. as suffering the vengeance of eternal fire. That fire is not now burning, although called an eternal fire. It is the destruction that is eternal; the fire is eternal in its effects. Consult Heb. vi. 2 where we read of eternal judgment,—it will not be for ever in session; but the decision will be for eternity. *

Distress in Kansas.

We are pained to learn how much suffering there is in Western Kansas, owing to unpropitious seasons, but we are glad that Bro. Glenn, at the request of the ten families of the Household at Fair Haven, Norton Co., has given the faithful in Christ Jesus the blessed privilege of ministering to the wants of his body. We have every confidence that the sufferings of these members will be promptly mitigated, because it is a divine command to bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ. We are confident there are those yet who love in deed and in truth, and aim to keep his commands.

We were struck with the statement of our brother that he had written to the Agricultural Department at Washington, but no notice was taken of it. It goes to confirm the opinion that that department is used for political purposes. The members gain friends by prudent distribution of seeds, and in some cases the seeds may be of special benefit to the recipients; but despatches from Washington last week disclose the fact that some of the members have been base enough to barter their quota of seeds for money; and that expenses were to be made shortly. Corruption seems to be universal, —unjust men cannot administer a just government—we must hope on *

Why were They Re-baptized?

Some weeks ago Bro. Eychaner asked three questions bearing upon the one heading this article; and asked for sincere, Scriptural answers. This is right; questions and answers should both be sincere. We know of no positive Scriptural answer as to when the twelve men mentioned in Acts xix. were re-baptized, and by whom? Under these circumstances we may be allowed to suggest that they were not baptized by John, nor in the time of John, because Jesus was baptized by John and needed no re-baptism. It is almost, if not quite certain, that Jesus selected his disciples out from among those whose sins had been remitted through baptism by John, because "all the people and the publicans," were baptized of him, except the Pharisees and the Lawyers, who rejected the counsel of God against themselves being not baptized of John. We know that Andrew was one of John's disciples, see John i. 35, 37, 40. As the publicans were baptized of John and, Matthew was a publican, or tax-gatherer, it is safe to infer, we think, that he too was a disciple of John. And all can see from Acts i. 21, 22, where all of the apostle's religious history commenced—viz. at the baptism of John. But we have still stronger evidence that they had been baptized, and that Jesus did not consider it necessary to re-baptize them, when he said to Peter, "He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit; and ye are clean, but not all; see John xiii. 4-12. Their case was unique; it can never occur again; and to us the conclusion is inevitable that John's baptism was altogether valid until Pentecost, no longer.

After the resurrection of Christ, baptism into the name was imperative; but we see plainly from Luke xxiv. 46, 47 that this could not be until he had suffered and been raised from the dead. The fact that the twelve men had to be [illegible] convinces us that they had been baptized with John's baptism when it was no longer valid, because superceded by baptism into the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins,—that being then and onward the ONE baptism.

We think the careful reading of the 4th and 5th verses of Acts xix. show that the key hangs close to the door. Paul takes it for granted that these men had been baptized into Christ, and enquires if they had received the Holy Spirit since they believed. This brings out the fact that they were not in Christ, or they would not have been ignorant as to the Spirit. They had been baptized into John's baptism. On learning this Paul said, "John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Jesus Christ; and when they heard this they were baptized in the name of Jesus Christ," of course according to the commission of Matt. xxviii: and for the purpose stated in Acts ii. 38, obtaining the name and remission of sins. In our judgment this explains why their baptism was defective. They had not been Scripturally baptized, because their faith was defective not believing the new revealed but long concealed things of the name, as taught to the Samaritans by Philip, Acts viii.

As far as our information goes there was no disagreement or controversy in apostolic times in regard to the form of baptism,—the word baptizo occurs 79 times and means to dip, or plunge, or immerse. They neither used cheo, to pour, nor rantizo for a sprinkle, but baptizo for immersion. *

Blind Leaders.

The Chicago Sunday Tribune propounded three questions to the leading ministers of the city. They were these: 1. What becomes of the soul immediately after death? 2. What constitutes the joys of heaven? 3. What constitutes the punishment of hell? For the benefit of our readers we condense first the answers given, by the most influential clergyman of that city and some remarks.

Dr. H. W. Thomas of the Percle's church said, "We may reasonably suppose that going out of the body makes no change in the soul. Self-consciousness is not affected. —memory, reason, love are the same. . . . There is no reason to believe the body will ever rise again. The spirit has its own body. Death is resurrection. . . . I do not see why prayers for the dead should not avail as much as prayers for the living. We should think of our dead, not as in their graves, not as dead, but as consciously living in the world of spirits. Our age of mercy revolts at the fact of a thoughtless erring girl in a school of reform, being chained for a night or a day upon a hard mat upon the floor. Do preachers realize what it means to charge upon God the cruelty of endless torture; to say millions of souls may grow worse forever? What are the joys of heaven? The harmony of the soul with the world order. It is this life with its struggles past; this life with all that is dear carried over into the world beyond."

Is it not painful to see him start out with a supposition and talk as if he never heard of a revelation from God respecting our destiny,—assuming that the real person leaves the body,—and that no change in the real person, called the soul, takes place, that memory, reason and love is the same, in the face of the fact that God has said (Eccl. ix. 5, 6. 10) that "the dead know not anything;" that their love, and their hatred and their envy is now perished;" that there "is no work, nor device, nor wisdom in the grave whither thou goest." Painful, indeed, is it to read the word of puny man, "That death is resurrection." Could the apostacy from the faith be more complete? "Death is resurrection," says he. There is no reason to believe that the body will ever be raised." Then the words of Jesus in John v. 28, 29 are either unknown to him, or if known, of no practical value, unless, indeed, what he calls the soul is in the grave where the body was placed. If both are together in the grave, what need was there of leaving the body. He plainly shows he believes the soul to be the seat of memory, reason, love; and we ask the Rev. Dr. Thomas if, upon his hypothesis, the soul must not be in the grave if it hear the voice of the Son of God and came forth? If the body does not come forth the soul must, unless the Doctor convict Jesus of either ignorance or wilful falsehood.

We ask the Doctor if Jesus does not repudiate what he calls the soul, when he says John vi. 40, "And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son and believeth on him may have everlasting life, and I will raise him up at the last day?" Now, it is he who sees the Son and believes on him that is here now, and it is the same person who is to have everlasting life, and the same person who has the promise of being raised up at the last day.

Plainly the Doctor must deny the authority of Jesus, or else admit [illegible] and God in the world. I went to searching the Scriptures and found that I was wrong. They had preached to me sky-kingdom, dying and going to heaven and that was all I knew. But we are told that there be blind that will lead the blind, and they will all go into the ditch together. How many are travelling the same road that I did? Dear readers, I would say to you, take the Sword of the Spirit which is the Word of God. It will teach you all things, holding fast to the faithful Word as you have been taught that you may be able by sound Doctrine both to exhort and convince the gainsayers, for if it is with you like it is with me you will have lots to do for they have turned away from the truth and turned unto fables. Let us not be deceived, but work out our own salvation with fear and trembling for Jesus is a faithful rewarder to them that diligently seek him. Let us be ready at all times to give an answer for the hope that is within us, ever looking to Jesus who is the Author and Finisher of our faith. Let us labor therefore, to enter into that rest least any man fall after the same example of unbelief. So, when Jesus comes to make up his Jewels that we may not be found wanting for, straight and narrow is the way and few there be that find it.

We do not take THE RESTITUTION but Brother Grant and Brother Simson are kind enough to let us read theirs. I am anxious always to see the new paper. It encourages me to read it as it is so full of truth concerning the kingdom and the final home of the saints. O may we be strengthened and kept in God's love, and the Lord bless and keep us is my prayer.

Yours in the one faith.

ANDREW GRUBB.

Dear Restitution:

Some kind friend, I know not who, has sent me THE RESTITUTION, and if they knew what a comfort it is to me they would be satisfied. For a long time I felt like Elijah, the prophet, "Lord, they have thrown down thine altars, have slain thy prophets with the edge of the sword, and I, even I only, am left and they seek my life."

Two years ago I had satisfied myself from the Word of the Lord, that there was no promise of any one going to heaven, and the Bible was silent about a road from earth to heaven, and so taught the people, and also taught that when the Master comes again he would bring the reward with him, Rev. xxii. 12, and we were to inherit the earth, were to reign with Christ a thousand years. Those of the Christian Church were highly offended, called it a new doctrine, heresy, and every ugly name in the catalogue, demanded an acknowledgment for wrong doing, and finally withdrew their fellowship from me, because I could not acknowledge my position was wrong, and I have been alone in this place ever since. But I am blessed with having THE RESTITUTION come to me with the glorious news that, "I have left me, seven thousand in Israel," and they are all over this land teaching the people in some way to be looking for Christ to come. The churches seem to think that Christ will come some time, but it is so far in the future that we need pay but little attention to it. "While the Bridegroom tarried they all slumbered and slept." The midnight cry will come upon them when they least expect it, "Behold, the Bridegroom" they will awake to find their lamps out, and no oil in it, then it is too late to go in with the Bridegroom to the marriage. Oh, how much will lose by not watching.

Dear brethren, let us be watching, the morning draweth nigh, a glorious time is awaiting the faithful few who are waiting and keeping their garments that they walk not naked. Brethren pray for me, that I may not be overcome.

Yours in hope of the kingdom.

S. D. SPEAR.

To the loved ones of like precious faith:

I have been reading the many good letters in THE RESTITUTION from the dear ones scattered abroad. Yes, you are all dear to me that belong to the Body of Christ, and although we are strangers in the flesh we trust we are all one in [illegible] looking for the appearing of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ, who will change our vile bodies and fashion them like unto his glorious body. Oh that he may come soon to receive his Bride is the prayer of your humble servant.

Dear brothers and sisters may God help you one and all, to overcome, for, "to him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne." Yes: it is the overcomer that receives the great blessing. Let us therefore watch and pray, lest we be drawn away after diverse teaching and doctrine of men and not after God. Paul says, "Study to show thyself approved unto God a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth." Oh, how necessary it is that we should obey Paul's language here for, we are living in perilous times, for the time has come when people will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts they heap to themselves teachers having itching ears, and they turn away their ears from the truth, and turn unto fables. But, beloved, watch thou in all things, endure affliction, do the work of a disciple of Christ, and prove thy discipleship and thou shalt have a crown that fadeth not away.

Beloved brethren, we are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people, that we should show forth the praises of him who brought us out of darkness into his marvelous light, and delivered us from the powers of darkness and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son, and he is the head of the body, the church, who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead, that in all things he might have the pre-eminence. We are all the children of light and the children of day, we are not of the night, nor of darkness, but, let us who are of the day be sober, putting on the breast-plate of faith and love, and for an helmet the hope of salvation, for God hath not appointed us to wrath, but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ. Blessed be his name forever.

I will give you a little history of the church at Ainsworth, Neb. We have a membership of about forty, and most of them are strong in the faith. Nearly two years ago, Bro. Almus Adams came by request and commenced to preach the gospel of the kingdom, and many accepted the faith. He has done a fine work here and may the Lord bless him and his labors, and receive him with the redeemed at last.

We are in the drouth-stricken district, and some of the brethren are very needy as far as this world's goods are concerned, in fact some of them are destitute and need help very much, and I do not see how they are going to get along without help from some source. Now, brethren, remember, that if part of the body suffer the whole body should suffer with it. Now brothers and sisters if you have anything to spare that a family could use it would be thankfully received. We need money to buy fuel. We are commanded to help one another and thus fulfill the law of Christ. May God, the Father, soon send his Son Jesus to deliver us from this sin-cursed earth and translate us into his kingdom, is my prayer.

Your Brother in love of the truth.

CHAS. H. SHUTLZ.

Letter Drawer.

Editor Restitution:

We send our subscription to our paper that we so much love to read. We can say to the brothers and sisters that we are striving and laboring for our Master in our weak way as best we can. At times the way seems long and dreary, but, beyond we behold the portals of peace and the Eternal City. We take new courage and press on to victory, and our prayer is that we can say, when Jesus comes, as Paul did, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the Righteous Judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only but unto all them who love his appearing."

Your brother and sister, in hope.

MR. & MRS. S. A. STORY.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

The letter drawer is especially dear to the isolated ones who cannot meet with any of the one faith. But we have our dear Bibles and the paper and thus we go on nearing the blessed time when Christ shall come and sin and sorrow shall be done away. We had hoped to to have Bro. John Foore come to us to baptize one of our family and see if he could not start a little

Poetry.

Count up Your Mercies.

Count up your mercies and set them in line,
Count them up daily and make life divine!

Rise in the morning and turn to the east;
Nod till the sunbeams, the largest and least!

Colors of grandeur and colors subdued,
Blend in a beauty that's ever renewed!

Drink in deep draughts of the wonderful air—
Courage will come from this vintage so rare:

Filling the veins with a transcendent thrill,
Filling the spirit with a masterful will!

Greet in the morning the friends that appear—
Greet them with gladness and greet them with cheer!

Friends are a part of your mercies, you know,
Count them all up, the high and the low!

Think of your shelter, your clothing and food,
They are for you, and are doing you good!

Thank the All Giver for thinking of you,
Pledge him your services as faithful and true!

Close to your heart hold the love that is pure,
Cherish it ever that it may endure!

Curse that may come will be banished from sight,
Only keep counting your blessings as bright!

Write your own calendar—write it all plain,
Note all the sunshine and keep out the rain!

Lay it up there in the wall in your room,
Read it mornings and nights and at noon!

Let down
day, gladness that comes every
Soon all your li- ll be ordered that way!

Shadows will flee a- you welcome them not,
Grace and its sunshine w- order your lot!

Currents of joy will flow in as
And life will become an afternoon cool!

Count up your mercies each day and each hour,
Count all the trifles, for each has a power!

Wonder will come with the lengthening list,
And still you will know that many are missed!

Moments will grow to the mercies of night,
Glowing forever with love and with light!

Life in its pages will surely unfold,
Days of the years writ in letters of gold!

Count up your mercies and set them in line,
Count them up daily and make life divine.

Did the Holy Spirit Come to Stay?

Some of the papers that are vigorous exponents of Adventism, and the doctrine of the second coming of Christ, and the establishment of his kingdom here on earth, are exercising themselves considerably over the above question.

Imagine if you can, the apostle Peter, or James, or John entering into an elaborate and labored argument on the day of Pentecost, or immediately thereafter in order to prove to, and convince the people; or to convince themselves—those upon whom this baptism of the Holy Ghost was administered, that it was a reality, that they actually had received it. What would the enemies of Christ have said to such an exhibition of weakness on their part? I tell you it needed no argument on the part of the disciples, because it was a self-evident fact. It was a fact that they could very easily demonstrate, not only to the eye, as the people beheld the tongue of fire, but to the ear as they heard them speak with other tongues as the spirit gave them utterance, and to all the senses as they discerned the powers which they possessed of performing wonders, signs and miracles, according to the will of God. Can you doubt that the same cause today would produce the same effect? Can you doubt that if the Holy Spirit was poured out upon a company of believers today as it was upon the day of Pentecost, under the same circumstances, that it would be followed by the same demonstrations, and that the same gifts and powers would be bestowed upon them? I surely cannot. God is the same being in all ages. Mal. iii. 6, "For I am the Lord, I change not." His spirit has the same power today when given in the same degree, and in the same measure. Look at the wonderful powers Jesus possessed, whence came they? The record says, John iii. 34, "For God giveth not the spirit by measure unto him."

The disciples were baptized with holy spirit. Do you claim the same? They could demonstrate the fact by speaking with tongues, by signs and wonders and divers miracles and gifts of the Holy Ghost. Can you who claim to have received this baptism of holy spirit do the same? You may waste column after column of valuable space in your church papers trying to convince the world; yea and trying to convince your own members, the body of which Christ is the head, that you have tasted of the powers of the world to come; but if you cannot demonstrate it they will not believe it. That God's spirit is in his true church today, that his spirit is in every true believer, and has been ever since the day of Pentecost, we verily believe. That the spirit of God, or holy spirit was in God's prophets of old, that it was in the disciples and Christ before the day day of Pentecost, we also believe, but no such outpouring of God's holy spirit was manifested hef re or since with tongues of fire and demonstrations of power.

There were two baptisms of holy spirit with an interval of perhaps seven or eight years between them—upon the Jew first, and also upon the Gentile. These occurred during the changing from the law, to the gospel dispensation, and they were given for a purpose, and and that purpose was to bear witness with Christ and his disciples, that the things which they spake and taught were true, and to establish their word as the Word of God. How was Nicodemus convinced? Jno. iii. 5, "Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God, for no man can do these miracles that thou doest except God be with him." John sent two of his disciples to ask Jesus whether he was the one that should come or do we look for another? Mat. xi. 4, "Jesus answered and said unto him, Go and show John again those things which ye do hear and see. The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them. Proof that Jesus was the Christ, proof that it was from God, and that the Word which Christ and his disciples taught was the Word of God, that the gospel which they preached was the gospel of God. Believing that the Bible teaches that, that was one object in the giving of the spirit to confirm the Word. While it may be very commendable in Christians to pray for a Pentecostal outpouring of the holy spirit, yet we cannot do it with any degree of faith because we fail to find any promise which God has made that will reach us, and be applicable at the present time. I know they will quote Peter's words to me which he spake to the Jews on the day of Pentecost. Acts iii. 39. "For the promise is unto you and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." Peter was addressing the house of Israel, 36 verse, to you and to your children would mean referring to the prophecy by Joel—Israelites and their children. And Peter says chap. iii. 25, "Ye are the children of the prophets, and of the covenant which God made with our fathers," so that applied to them and at that time. But the latter clause: how will we get around that? Well, we don't want to get around anything. If there is a promise of a baptism of the holy spirit that will reach the Gentiles of this generation we certainly desire it; but to have the name without the power to manifest it to the world, or to demonstrate it, as did the apostles and Christ: or even to know it as a certainty seems an empty honor. Peter undoubtedly was referring to the calling of the Gentiles as a people, and the baptism of holy spirit which was afterwards poured out upon them as a people in the case of Cornelius, and those believing Gentiles that were with him, Peter referring to this, uses this language, Acts xv. 8, And God which knoweth the hearts bare them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us, and put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith. Paul uses the same language as Peter in writing to the Ephesians, 2nd chap. 13 v., But now in Christ Jesus ye who some times were afar off are made nigh by the blood of Christ. 17 v., And came and preached peace to you which were afar off and to them that were nigh. How many were called? The Jews, which were said to be nigh, and the Gentiles, which were afar off, and they both received a baptism of holy spirit as a witness.

Thus you see, this was all fulfilled in the days of the apostles. Christ said to his disciples, that the comforter which is the holy spirit whom the Father would send in his name: "He shall teach you all things," "and bring all things to your remembrance whatsoever I have said unto you." Now this was literally true of the disciples; things were revealed to them by holy spirit direct from heaven. How is it, Christian friend, with you, who claim to have received this gift, you who claim to have been endued with power from on high? If the comforter, the Holy Ghost, has taught you all things, or anything independent of the Scriptures, why don't you speak out in these days of doubt and uncertainty, and make them known. God will surely hold you responsible for what he has revealed unto you. "He will show you things to come." Has he? He did to his holy apostles. What has he shown you, except through the writings of Prophets, Apostles and Jesus Christ? I believe you can truly answer, nothing. Some conclude because we do not believe that Christians receive a baptism of holy spirit, that we do not believe there is any such thing in the Church as holy spirit. The spirit of God pervades all space, it is everywhere and in the beginning the spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters, and when God said let there be light, there was light. And while it is a fact that the child of God is led by it, and the sinner is convicted and converted by it, yet we ask the question how? How is the mind of the spirit conveyed to the child of God so that it may control him? How is it conveyed to the sinner in order that it may convict him of sin and then convert him? Through the medium of God's Word, which is the Word sent down from heaven by the holy spirit. Rom. x. 17. Faith comes by hearing the Word of God. And is safe to say that if God's Word never reaches the ear, either by reading or preaching, it will never find a lodgment in the heart, neither will there be a conviction or a conversion, for by God's law is a knowledge of sin. This comforter is not given to the world, nor to the unbeliever for Jesus said, Jno. xiv. 17, Even the spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him, but ye know him for he dwelleth with you and shall be in you.

How did the spirit convict on the day of Pentecost? The Jews did not believe in Jesus, but put him to death. Peter preached the Word to them which was sent down from heaven by the Holy Ghost. First he refers them to Joel's prophecy, and accredits the wonderful phenomena, which they were witnesses of to its fulfillment. Then he preached to them Jesus and the resurrection, and the things concerning the kingdom of God as spoken by David. And God's oath to David, that of the fruit of his loins he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne, and that this same Jesus whom they had taken, and with wicked hands had crucified and slain, was the Christ of the prophets, a man approved of God among them by miracles and signs and wonders, which God did by him in the midst of them. All these things together with the fact that his disciples were able to speak with other tongues as the spirit gave them utterance, made the evidence too strong for them to resist, and mightily convinced them that this same Jesus was the Christ—hence that they were murderers, and forced them to cry out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" But how is it now, seeing that these miraculous demonstrations of the spirit have ceased. Peter says—1 Peter i. 22, "Seeing ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth through the spirit. They simply obeyed the truth which came to them through the spirit, that is God's Word, the obedience to which purifies and cleanses. 23 v., Being begotten again not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible by the Word of God which liveth and abideth forever. Jno. xv. 3, "Now ye are clean through the Word which I have spoken unto you." Jno. vi. 63, "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life." Not that his words were literally spirit, but they were the words of the spirit, and if obeyed gave life. Jno. says —1 Jno. ii. 27, "But the Anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any man teach you, but as the same anointing teacheth you of all things, and is truth and is no lie, and even as it hath taught you, ye shall abide in him. While this was literally true of the disciples, yet the disciple or learner of today must go to God's Word to be taught of him. 1 Jno. ii. 20, The disciples had "an unction from the Holy One" and knew all things, but we hear Paul admonish Timothy even in his day. 2 Tim. ii. 15, "To study to show himself approved unto God a workman that needeth not to be ashamed rightly dividing the Word of truth," he also said, 2 v. "And the things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men who shall be able to teach others also. You see that Timothy who had not received a baptism of holy spirit, this anointing spoken of by John found it necessary to study and to commit to faithful men that they might be able to teach others also. He didn't know all things, only as he learned them, and I believe that the most godly and devoted Christians of the present time find it necessary to do the same. Yet no man will deny that the spirit of God dwelt in Timothy. Peter said, "There is a more sure Word of prophecy whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place until the day dawn and the day star arise." In your hearts, knowing this first, that no prophecy of the Scripture is of private interpretation.

If the sinner hears God's Word, which never reaches the ear of any man, only as it does so through the medium of the holy spirit, and believes it being convicted of sin, and repents or turns away from his sins and is obedient to the Word, arises like Paul and is baptized, and washes away his sins, calling on the name of the Lord, abiding faithfully unto the end, we have the divine assurance that he shall be saved.

If God's spirit cannot enter and abide in the child of God without his having received a baptism of holy spirit, I very much fear that he will never enjoy its presence, or at least not till the Christ comes in his glory. Let us not expect more than God has promised, and we can rest assured that we will never be disappointed.

WALKER PERRINE.

Some years ago a steamer was coming up the Firth of Clyde on a stormy night. Careful watch was kept, and all was going well till suddenly a dim, flickering light appeared right over her bows. In another instant the steamer went crushing into a ship which was lying at anchor. Several lives were lost, and much damage was done. What was the cause of the accident? The anchored ship had allowed her light to grow dim for want of oil. It was only neglect! This is just what many Christians do; they forget to read the Word of God, to meditate upon it, and to watch with prayer, therefore their light is almost out to the injury of themselves and others. "Ye are the light of the world." Christ's churches are golden candlesticks, planted in a dark world. They are to hold forth the word of life. Dear young Christians, watch and pray, and see to it that your lamps are trimmed and burning, and ye yourselves like "men that wait for their Lord."

You need not break the glasses of a telescope, or coat them over with paint, in order to prevent you from seeing through them. Just breathe upon them, and the dew of your breath will shut out all the stars. So it does not require great crimes to hide the light of God's countenance. Little faults can do the same.

OUR CHILDREN.

The Dead Bird on a Bonnet.

I was a happy mother bird,
With tender nestlings three,
Till hunters came, with greed aflame,
And, ruthless, murdered me.

Our nest my brilliant mate and I
Built in a tropic tree,
And lullabies, 'neath tender skies,
Trilled to the nestlings three.

By turns the precious nest we left,
And hungry little breast;
While one would sing on the wing
The other sought their food.

To brood with enfolding mother wings
Above those treasures three,
On moonlit eves, 'mid spicy leaves,
Was just in heaven to be!

One morn on happy quest I flew
Mid saddest of all days!
For far below my mortal foe
Watched with his greedy gaze.

He saw the flashing of my wings
Against the tropic sky;
Their softened play of color-ray
Doomed me, alas! to die.

He shot with quick unerring aim;
Down from the sunlight sweet
My bleeding form, still fluttering warm,
Fell at his cruel feet.

"The cattle on a thousand hills"
Are God's peculiar care;
From large to least, both bird and beast
His love and bounty share.

Yet millions of my kind are slain
To please a passing whim,
Barbaric taste, sweet life to waste
To deck a bonnet's brim!

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 12.

THE SOJOURNING AND THE AFFLICTION.

We will now begin the study of the first chapters of the book of Exodus.

How our little nation has increased. The land is filled with them. The time of trouble has come. God measures off the years that are to pass over his people, and when the set day and month has been reached the thing promised happens, just as he has foretold.

You may turn back and read the fifteenth chapter of Genesis now, for Israel is about to feel the horror of darkness and affliction that was typified by the darkness that fell upon Abraham at the time when God gave him a deed to the land of Canaan. Gen. xv. 12, 13, 14; Ex. xii. 40; Acts vii. 6; Gal. iii 17. But why does it say in Exodus and in Galations that the time of their sojourning was 430 years and in Genesis and Acts that it was 400?

Maybe some one else will help us out on this puzzling question. We shall be so glad if they will. Put on your thinking caps and see what you can study out for yourselves. Get gal. iii. 17. Is not God counting here just how long a time it was between the giving of that great deed of Canaan to Abram, and the giving of the law to the Hebrews on Mt. Sinai? I think he is.

Now read Exodus xii. 40, and you will see that here no measures to another point,—it is to the exact time when the Hebrews go out of the land of Egypt, and the 430 years will reach back from that period to the very time when God called Abram out of the Chaldees. So their sojourning takes in all the time that was spent in Canaan, as well as that that was spent in Egypt. But what about the 400 years?

Gen. xv. 13, "And they shall afflict them 400 years." Acts vii. 6, "avil entreat them 400 years." The affliction seems to be what God is measuring here, so thirty years are dropped off. But the Hebrews were only in Egypt 215½ years, so part of their trouble must have come while they were yet in Canaan. It seems to begin with Isaac's fifth year. Canaan was not yet theirs, it had not yet been put into their hands, so that no one could take it away. It would not be, till Jesus should come and be their King.

It would be an affliction to the people of God even to be under the rule of strange kings, when such glorious promises had been given them of God. But it seems as if one nation was to cause all their trouble. Were they under the rule of Egyptian kings even when in Canaan? It may have been. Thirty-seven years before Abram left Ur of the Chaldees, Salatis, the first of the Shepherd kings of Egypt, built Hebron in the land of Canaan. He could not have built this city unless he was ruling in Canaan at the time it was built, and there is no other hint of this in the Bible, yet, monumental history assures us that this was so.

Moses only tells us that "Hebron was built seven years before Zoan in Egypt."

Salatis and his people were of the race of Shem. They went into Egypt and conquered it and settled in the land of Goshen, just where Joseph afterwards placed his father and his brethren. A great many Hittites and Phenicians went with Salatis to Egypt. It was this king who built Zoan—Tanis. He made it his Capital city. He must have had control of both Upper and Lower Egypt, for the Pharoah of whom we are about to learn so much, when he came to be king, set up a stone-tablet in a temple at Zoan, says that "he had come to the throne just 400 years after Zoan was founded by the king of the Upper and lower Country, "Set-na-pehti-neb-ti." In history, this hard name is shortened to "Set-nakt," or "Set-neb," but they are all names that belong to Salatis, the founder of the "Set" Dynasty, or Shepherd race of kings, who ruled in Egypt for a period of 260 years.

If Salatis was such a great king in Egypt,—if he had control over so much of that country, might he not also have had control of Canaan? He certainly did. Abram went down to Egypt directly after he came into Canaan but he did not go to the court of these Shepherd kings for there were other kings ruling in some part of Egypt at the same time. These kings belonged to the XII. Dynasty of the Pharoah's. Amenemhu I. was the first king of this dynasty. He reigned sixteen years. Usertisin I. was the next king of this line. He reigned thirty-two years. It was during his reign that Salatis and his people came into Egypt and built Zoan. Amenemhu II. reigned six years after Usertisin I. Then Usertisin II. took the throne, and Abram and his retinue came into Egypt to escape the famine that was in Canaan, Gen. xii. 10. It was not till we come to the XVIII. Dynasty of the Pharoah's that these Hykaos, or Shepherd kings were expelled from Egypt. Ahmes the first Pharaoh of this line drove them out just about the time that Joseph was sold to the Ishmaelites. So the land of Goshen was left empty, ready for occupation by Jacob and his children. But we were trying to find out about that affliction-period of 400 years;—we can see that it reaches back to these foreign—Shepherd kings, and can guess that they were in some way connected with part of Israel's trouble, but that is all. We will keep our eyes open for other buried tablets may soon be found that will tell us more about it. We know this much, that the Egyptians hated this shepherd race of people, with a fierce and deadly hatred, and we therefore infer that they were hard task-masters and that they oppressed the people of all the countries that were under their control. Hagar who mocked at Sarah was an Egyptian.

Which is the Gloomy Doctrine?

The sleep of the dead is often designated a gloomy doctrine, and many refuse to listen to the testimony of the Bible on this subject, choosing rather to remain "ignorant concerning them which are asleep" than to consider the stern realities of death and the grave. "Your doctrine," say they, "is chilling, repulsive, forbidding. The sleep of the dead! why, the very idea is enough to freeze one. But the immortality of the soul, and the reward of the saints at death, this, this is the very marrow and fatness of the gospel; this is indeed that blessed hope."

But stop, friends, a few moments. It may be, but you are blinded by prejudice. Be not too hasty. If you are not willing to devote the needed time for weighing this subject in the balances of the Scriptures, will you not wait long enough to try the justice of this objection in the balances of reason?

You say that the doctrine is full of gloom, and that the departed saints have experienced a bitter disappointment in being consigned to the cold grave for long ages, instead of going straight to the presence of God. You think the idea full of gloom to the living, and dreadful to the dead. But you forget that, if the doctrine be true, there is no chill, no gloom, no darkness, no disappointment, no lapse of time, no waiting through long ages to the dead. The interval between their decease and their resurrection will be to them no time at all. The twinkling of an eye, in which the righteous will be changed to immortality, will be as long to them as the whole period during which righteous Abel has slept in death will be to him. And to him, so far as his own knowledge of the case is concerned, it will be precisely as though he entered Heaven at the very moment he was slain.

You say that this helps the matter a little; but that, for all this, the sleep of the dead will no more compare in consolation with the soul's immortality and the reward at death than the desert of Sahara will compare in beauty with the garden of Eden. Do not be too hasty, friends. You may discover facts that will change this opinion. You find great consolation in the thought that the soul is immortal, and that men are rewarded as they die. Answer me a few questions. How large a part of mankind lead lives of holiness, and die with good evidence of their acceptance with God? Truth compels you to answer that a minority are all that can be said to do this. What becomes, then, of this great majority of men who have died out of Christ, and entered their reward? Oh! they have gone into the furnace of fire, where there is wailing and gnashing of teeth. What is the condition, then, at this very moment, of the greater part of the dead, according to this cheering doctrine of yours? You have to answer, they are in unspeakable torment. You admit that this dreadful fact somewhat abates the consolation you have hitherto found in this doctrine. But I want you to answer one question more. If the soul is immortal, as you affirm, how long are these impenitent men thus to suffer? You answer again, and this time surely with a shudder, they must suffer to all eternity. Before we part, will you not own that yours is the gloomy doctrine? Is it not a relief to your mind to think that men are to be judged before they are rewarded or punished? and that till the day of judgment men wait for their reward? And is not that doctrine best which teaches that immortality is the gift of God, and that it is given only to the righteous?—Signs of the Times.

PROPHECY.

And they sang a new song—saying, "Thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof, for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood out of every kindred and tongue, and people, and nation hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth." Rev. v. 9.

"I was in the spirit on the Lord's day." John i. 10. Old Version. that is John was carried forward in vision to the day of the Lord's coming, "that great and notable day of the Lord." Act ii. 20. "The day of the Lord cometh." 1 Thess. v. 2.

The Greek gives "en pneumati"—in spirit—not "en to pneumati" in the spirit, as in O. V., in other words John was not in a trance on the Sabbath or first day of the week, but he saw in spirit (or by spiritual insight) occurrences that would precede, herald and follow the second coming of Jesus the Christ.

In this state he saw a door opened in heaven and heard a voice saying, "Come up hither and I will show thee things which must be (or occur) hereafter." "A throne was set in heaven, one sat on the throne—there were twenty-four elders, four beasts, seven lamps, and a sea of glass before the throne. The four beasts and the elders sang a song as above before the Lamb.

The writer understands this to be the setting of the scenes. The Revelations themselves being in the seals, trumpets, vials, thunders, and accompanying explanations and visions following as shown and described by the angels. This preliminary scene was before the translation of the saints, which occurs under the seven h seal, seventh trumpet and seventh vial.

The saints were not present and the elders in the song did not claim that they were redeemed and would reign on earth as the O. V. makes it appear, but referred to the saints. The R. V. makes this clearer, "For thou wast slain and didst purchase unto God, with thy blood (men) of every tribe and tongue and people and nation and madest them (to be) unto our God, a kingdom and priests, and they reign upon the earth. And the Diaglott reads, "Didst redeem (us) to God a royalty and priesthood, and they shall reign on the earth."

The events of the 6th seal, 6th trumpet, and 6th vial seem to correspond with Matt. xxiv. 29, The great sound of a trumpet (v. 31) corresponding with the 7th trumpet which heralds the gathering of the elect.

6th Seal (Rev. vi. 12) earthquake, sun black, moon blood, stars fall, heaven parted as a scroll, mountains and islands moved, kings, princes, rich men, captains, mighty men, bondmen and freemen hid themselves from the face of him in the throne and the wrath of the Lamb." For the great day of his wrath is come."

6th trumpet (Rev. ix. 13), angels in Euphrates loosed, seven thunders. Time announced to be no more (when the 7th trumpet sounds) and the mystery of God finished. x. 67. Measuring of temple, the witnesses prophecy, are killed and resurrected, great earthquake.

J. S. Harsh.

"I have generally found that a man is not better than he looks, and if a man's outward life is not right, I shall not be bound to believe that his inward life is acceptable to God. 'Ah, sir,' said one in Rowland Hill's time, he is not exactly what I should like, but he has a good heart at bottom.' The shrewd old preacher replied, 'When you go to the market and buy fruit, and there are none but rotten apples at the top of the basket, you say to the market-woman, 'These are a very bad lot.'

Now, if the woman replied, 'Yes, they are rather gone at top, sir, but they are better as you go down,' you would not be so silly as to believe her, but would say 'No, no, the lower we go the worse they are; for the best are always put on the top.' And so it is with men's characters; if they cannot be decent, sober, and truthful in their daily life, their inner parts are more abominable still; the deeper you pry into the secrets, the worse will be the report."—Spurgeon.

When the hand of prosperity seems to be ever open, one is led to think he is usually secure, and danger is scarcely thought of. "Why, see! Is not every thing in my favor? Am I not getting on well?" but the good book says to us "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall," thereby warning us of danger of self-confidence. Satan is on the watch-tower, at such times. He knows the weakness of the human heart, and it is at just such times in the experiences of men that he is most sure of a bountiful harvest. Only Christ dwelling within is able under such circumstances to turn to account the benefits of one's position for good. He, only, can save from the snare of the enemy.

Please write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put lovesalve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into The Restitution for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

Wanted—Several Hundred New Subscribers for The Restitution for 1895.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks—those not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to The Restitution office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Wanted—Several Hundred New Subscribers for The Restitution for 1895.

Poetry.

[Selected by Mrs. Minim Brooks.]

Judgment of the Just One.

The Pharisee a sinner brought.
And to Jesus made this plea:
"Shall we, as our Fathers taught,
Take her life, or set her free?"
But the Savior, who discerned
All the evil that they planned,
No answer to their plea returned,
But, stooping, wrote upon the sand.

Then they said, "The law divine
Bids us punish such as she;
But we wait for word of thine;
Shall we stone, or set her free?"
Then these words the plotters heard,
In the Savior's eternal tone,
"Let the man who never hath erred
Be the first to cast a stone."

And, again, he, stooping, wrought
With his finger in the sand,
And each saw his inmost thought
Written by the Master's hand.
Ah! how often, Lord, do we,
Like those Jews of olden times,
Bring our erring friend to thee
To be judged for all his crimes.

Saying, "Lord, this man hath done
Evil things against thy name;
Let him for his guilt atone."
Still the judgment is the same
As those ancient Hebrews heard;
He to whom all hearts are known
Answer's, "He who ne'er hath erred
Be the first to cast a stone."

Original.

Paul's Second Epistle to Korinthioi. Chap. 9.

1. Concerning the deaconship-service towards the saints though it is superfluous for me to write;

2. For I know your readiness, of [illegible] Achaia was prepared a year ago and that your zeal hath stirred up the majority.

3. And I sent the brethren, that our boast concerning you might not be shown to be an empty one in this portion, that even as I have been saying that ye were prepared,

4. We might not somehow, should Makedonians have come along with me, and find you unprepared, be put to shame, we (may we not say ye) being in this state of things.

5. I have thought it necessary accordingly to exhort the brethren to go to you beforehand and get ready beforehand so that this pre-announced blessing of yours might be ready in this wise as a blessing and not as an of selfishness.

6. And this is as follows, The one who soweth sparingly will also reap sparingly; and the one who soweth in the way of blessings will also reap in the way of blessings.

7. Each one as he hath preferred in his heart; not of sorrow nor of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver.

8. And God is able to make all grace abound toward you so that always in every way having all sufficiency ye may abound unto every good work.

9. Even as it hath been written, He hath scattered, he hath given to the needy; his righteousness abideth forever, (as long as he lives).

10. And the One who furnisheth seed to the sower and bread to eat, will supply and multiply your sowing, and increase the products of your righteousness;

11. While ye are being enriched in every way unto all sincerity that worketh out through us gratitude toward God.

12. Because the deaconship-service of this public-ministration is not only filling up the deficiencies of the saints, but also aboundeth through many thanksgivings unto God,

13. While ye glorify God through the approved value of this service in the subjection of your confession unto the gospel of the Christ, and in the sincerity of your partnership toward them and toward all,

14. And in their supplication for you, while they long for you because of the surpassing grace of God in you; though it is God's grace in his inexpressible way of giving.

CHAP. 10.

1. And I Paul myself exhort you through the meekness and gentleness of the Christ, I who to your face am lowly in your midst, but when absent am bold towards you.

2. And I pray that my not being present may have emboldened your confidence which I account to have been daring toward certain ones who account us as though walking according to flesh.

3. For though we do walk in flesh, we are not warring according to flesh;

4. For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but enabled by God for the tearing down of strongholds,

5. While we tear down reasonings and every high thing that exalteth itself against one's comprehension of God, and while we lead captive every perception unto the obedience of Christ,

6. And hold them in readiness to requite every disobedience, whenever your obedience hath been made full.

7. Are ye looking at things face to face? If any one hath trusted himself to be Christ's, let him reason again in respect to himself, that even as he is Christ's, so also are we.

8. For if indeed I may boast [illegible] given for your building up and not for your tearing down, I shall not have been put to shame.

9. May I not seem as though frightening you through the epistles;

10. Because the epistles, say they are weighty and strong; but his bodily presence weak and his speech contemptible.

11. Let such an one account that as we are in word through epistles when absent, even such are we in deed when present,

12. For we do not dare to judge ourselves with certain ones who are commending themselves, but who measuring themselves with themselves and comparing themselves with themselves, do not understand.

13. And we will not boast ourselves in the things unmeasured, but according to the measure of the canon which God hath distributed to us for a measure, of having arrived as far as unto you.

14. For not as though we were not arriving unto you are we stretching ourselves beyond. For unto you indeed have we reached in the gospel of the Christ;

15. Not unto the parts unmeasured boasting ourselves in other people's labors, but having a hope, when your faith hath increased, of being magnified in you unto a superfluity, to the extent of the gospel being announced in the parts beyond you,

16. To the extent of our boasting ourselves not in things made ready with an alien canon;

17. But let the one who boasteth boast in the Lord;

18. For that one is not of approved value, who commendeth himself, but the one whom the Lord commendeth.

CHAP. 11.

1. Would that ye might bear with my folly a little; yea forsooth bear with me;

2. For I am zealous for you with God's zeal: for I would make you ready to be joined as a pure virgin to a husband, to stand you beside the Christ;

3. But I fear lest somehow as the serpent deceived Eva with his subtility, he may corrupt your perceptive faculties away from your simplicity and purity toward the Christ.

4. For if the one who cometh herald another Jesous whom ye have not heralded, or ye receive another's spirit that ye have not received, or another gospel that ye have not accepted, ye do well to forbear.

5. For I account myself to be in no respect inferior to those who above [illegible] are pre-eminently apostles.

6. And even if I am an unprofessional in the Word yet I am not in the comprehension; but in every way have we been manifest among all toward you.

7. Or have I committed a sin in having humbled myself that ye might be exalted, because I have announced to you the gospel of God without price?

8. I have taken spoil from other churches in having obtained supplies for your ministership-service; and when present with you, even though I suffered deprivation, I did not make myself burdensome to any one.

9. For the brethren who came from Makedonia supplied my lack; and in every way I have watched to keep and shall watch to keep myself from being burdensome.

10. Christ's truth is in me, that this boast in regard to me shall not be circumscribed in the climes of Achaia.

11. Why? Because I do not love you? God knoweth.

12. And what I am doing I shall also continue to do that I may cut off the pretext of those who desire a pretext, that they may be found even as we are in what they boast.

13. Such deceitful workers, who transform themselves into apostles of Christ.

14. And no wonder, for Satanas himself is accustomed to transform himself into an angel of light.

15. It is not a great thing then if his deacons also transform themselves to be as it were deacons of righteousness, whose end will be according to their deeds.

16. Again I say let no one think me to be a person without sense. But even if one should, and should ye accept me as a person without sense, I fain would boast a little.

17. What I am going to say, I am not saying according to the Lord; but as it were in the way of folly, that is in this state of boasting.

18. Since many are boasting according to the flesh, I also will boast.

19. For gladly do ye bear with the thoughtless, though ye are thoughtful yourselves:

20. For ye bear with it, if any one reduceth you to bond-service, if any one devoureth you, if any one taketh, if any one exalteth you, if any one smiteth you to your face.

21. To our dishonor I say it, since it is because we have become weak. And in whatever any one may be daring, I say it in the way of folly, I also am going to be daring.

22. Are they Hebraioi? I also am. Are they Israelites? I also am. Are they Habraam's seed? I also am.

23. Are they Christ's deacons? I am speaking as one disregarding good sense—I the more. In labors exceedingly, in prisons exceedingly, in afflictions to a surpassing extent in deaths many times;

24. Under the way of Joudaians five times did I receive forty less one;

25. Three times have I been beaten with rods, once for all was I stoned, three times have I been ship-wrecked, a night and a day have I spent in the deep;

26. In journeyings many; in dangers of rivers, in dangers of highwaymen; in dangers of race, in dangers of nations, in dangers in city, in dangers in the wilderness, in dangers on the sea, in dangers among false-brethren;

27. In suffering and toil, in wakefulness many times; in famine and thirst; in fastings many times; in cold and nakedness;

28. Besides the things outside the daily duty imposed upon me, namely the anxious care for all the churches.

29. Who is getting weak and I do not grow weak? Who stumbleth and I do not burn (with shame)? [illegible]

30. If it be befitting to boast, I will boast of my weakness.

31. The God and Father of the Lord Jesous, the One to be commended for the ages, knoweth that I lie not.

32. In Damaskos the ruler of the nations of Aretas the king was guarding the city of the Damaskenes to take me by violence;

33. And I was let down in a wicker-basket through a window in the wall, and escaped his hands.

CHAS. GARDNER.

CHARITY.

"Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass, or tinkling cymbal. And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not love, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be buried, and have not love, it profiteth me nothing."

Brothers, sisters, let us all weigh these statements in the sight of God, before whom we shall all stewardship. We will have it to do. Cornelius was a good man, he prayed to God and gave much alms to the people, are we as zealous as that? are we as good as he was? No doubt he had love for God, he had love for his fellowmen, or he would not have given his goods to the poor, and yet if he was lacking in love, his alms would not have come up as a memorial before God.

Oh brother, sister, what a monument stands before us, yes, before you and I. What? give all our goods to feed the poor and give our bodies to be buried, and understand all mysteries and have all knowledge and all the good qualities that Paul names, and after all that is said and done if we lack love we are no more than a sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal? Is it possible! My God, what a picture, Oh what a searching of hearts, and what a looking within, what examining of ourselves. Dear ones, let our minds run back through the years and taking Paul's looking glass, let us look at ourselves from his standpoint. How do we look? how do I look? have I treated my brother and my sister as I should? has love been my ruling passion? have I told the truth at all times? have I misrepresented my brother, have I left a wrong impression on the minds of any one? has love been without dissemination? have we been kindly affectionate one toward the other? with brotherly love, in honor preferring one another? have we been fervent in spirit serving the Lord? have we blessed them that persecuted us? have we rejoiced in hope? have we been patient in tribulation continuing instant in prayer distributing to the necessity of the saints, given to hospitality? have we rejoiced with them that rejoice, and wept with those that weep? If we write for the paper, let love be in all our articles. If we preach, let our words be seasoned with love, and if we exhort, let love be in all our exhortations, and if we pray let it be the fervent, effectual prayer of God's children. O let us see how much good we can do in this year, if the dear Lord spares our lives, and let our articles be short and full of love, and may our "love feast" continue. Let us not, dear ones, rely on our own strength, for if we do we will fail. Let us say like Paul, "When I am weak, then am I strong." Yes, when we can feel our weakness the most, then we become strong in the Lord. Let us grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ. The Master is at the door, and as James says, "Behold the Judge standeth at the door." Let us keep in mind what David says in Psa. xix. 13-14, "Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins; let them not have dominion over me; then shall I be upright, and I shall be innocent from the great transgression. Let the words of my mouth and the meditations of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my Redeemer." Brethren, let us try and live out those two verses all along the journey of our lives, then all will be well.

Wisdom versus Ignorance.

That "experience maketh wise the fool," has been abundantly illustrated all through the history of the human race. Man, in his native, untried state, is proud and lofty, full of assumption and presumption, and though he may claim to be the subject of "wisdom" he is yet a fool; not, perhaps, in the sense that man would call foolish, but from the divine standpoint he is such. Born, perhaps, in affluence and prosperity and surrounded by its calm serenity into a stupefaction that can only be awakened and obliterated by the dark shadow of night which, hovering over him, eclipses the beams of his day of prosperity and health, and leads him for the first time to reflect on the infinitude of uncertainties that pertain to and visit humanity with pain, disease and death. He then, mentally, wades through the many and various ills to which all are constantly in danger of being subjected to; none being exempt—realizes that what he had considered as tangible substantialities were but ephemeral and visionary, and that to put his trust in them was but "foolishness" and "vanity." Alas! too late with some, adversity has not visited them nor disease afflicted them till every offer has been rejected, every exhortation spurned; not till their last chance has passed away for ever are they brought to see "How frail they are"! Death seizes them at a moment when least expected, and plunges them for ever with all their ambition into the darkness and oblivion of the tomb; like as the imperial and autocratic denizen of the forest (who, defiant at all alike, scours his vast domains in search of prey, meets with an evil day and his majestic sway is brought down, caught, caged, and tamed), so man's monarchic arrogance and self-dependent spirit is crushed by adversity, and he realizes (perhaps for the first time during his lifetime) his own helplessness and worthlessness. He can now find time to reflect on the vastitude and grandeur of the universe and its Creator, and absorb himself in the study of subjects that had previously never troubled him—outside of himself. This is the finest chance a man has of exhibiting that spirit that is opposed to the "lionic," viz., the "lamb-like."

Many illustrations of how men have been roused from their lethargic slumbers to see that "the Most High ruleth in the kingdoms of men," could be cited, who have been forced to see their own helplessness by being brought low. Many there are at the present time who, like Nebuchadnezzar of old, forget what they are and ignorantly extol their own praises, instead of ascribing it to God. Many who, like Saul, are persecuting the church of God with a mistaken zeal, who have to be shown the position they stand in ere they can clothe themselves in the garment provided for the sinner. Man (according to the words of Christ) cannot enter the "Kingdom of God" unless he become as a little child. Is it not reasonable then, that before such a state of mind can be produced, that the subjects of this child-like disposition should previously be shown their utter worthlessness and nothingness in the universe! This is especially applicable to the rich; they have to thank God that they have been brought low. The poor sees in the Gospel a glorious emancipation from all that afflicts and crushes, and from all the poverty and degradation that at present is impregnable by human agency, and an elevation to the millennial splendor that shall result from the re-appearance of Christ on the earth. The degraded form of humanity, sunk into the depths of immorality, vice, and debauchery is offered (as his last resource) the magnetic and healing influences of the gospel which, if responded to, will lift him out of his chaotic whirlpool and cleanse him by its purifying process from all his loathsome and destructive diseases. Those who are gifted with high moral attainments will find in the Truth and indispensible acquisition to their knowledge and moral attainments and acknowledge that "Man being in honor, and understanding not, is [illegible] the knowledge that maketh wise, was of no value as regards their eternal existence, and find a store of precious and enlightening teaching that will add to the pleasure they have derived from their previous exercise of their mentality in a good direction.

God, in the gospel, has arranged for all. He is no respecter of persons; but there is something for each one to do. This gospel we bring before your notice, and whichever of the classes mentioned here you belong to, we beseech you not to let this call pass you unheeded, but set your heart to seek for the Truth and rest not till you have found it.

We are sometimes stigmatised as uncharitable, but we answer, that there is no charity in filling your mind with hopes that can never be realized. One phase of true charity lays in helping your fellows to see The Truth, and especially so when their eternal welfare is involved. The Word of God says that "Man is "mortal," liable to death and extinction of being, and holds out for his acceptance a life that is to be eternal. (This can only be conferred upon those who fall in with God's conditions.) When men tell you that you are deathless and destined to ascend to the habitation of God, or to be "thrust down to bottomless perdition, there to dwell in adamantine chains and penal fire," they are not embodiments of true charity, but, in contradistinction, they are destroyers of men's souls." Although they may think they are charitable, Christ did not pander to the false ideas of the ecclesiastical dignitaries of his day, but stood out boldly against the corruptions and traditional crustations of centuries that were loved and revered by their supporters; and yet he manifested the love of God in a way unparalleled in human history. Even the disciples could scarcely comprehend his meaning when he said, "It is hard for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of heaven," which brought forth the exclamation, "Who then can be saved?" They had yet to learn that wealth and affluence could not purchase a position there. Not less so have millions now to learn that what God requires is "obedience." If the searcher and seeker after "The Kingdom" be of the type referred to in the begining of this article, he has to exchange arrogancy for humility, pride for meekness, self-dependency for reliance on God, vice for virtue, intemperance for sobriety, disobedience to Divine commands for grateful submission to the will of God—and the result will be, wisdom will displace ignorance, light take the place of darkness, and a calm serenity invest him that he never before experienced; his mentality will be used to the glory of God, and his intellectual talents blended with the love-diffusing tendency of "The Truth," will be spent in a service that shall bring more satisfaction and joy than all the wealth in the world could offer him. Our counsel to you is: "Lay hold on eternal life"; do not put it off till a more convenient time, for though God is merciful, he is not to be mocked. Cling to this great offer of life as tenaciously as you would cling to a floating spar were you drowning, and with prayer to the Creator you will find rest and peace for your souls of a real tangible nature, and rest on a rock that no force can move. Fill your minds with the abundance of light that has been shed forth in the world by a merciful God. Wait not, linger not, but straightway accept the only offer worth acceptance, and then, if faithful, you will receive that immortal nature that only the wise shall receive and that can only be bestowed through Christ, "Wherein the wise shall shine as the brightness of the stars

The Unquenchable Fire.

The wrath of God is often compared to fire, sometimes in a figurative sense see Deuteronomy xxix. 23, and Isaiah xxxiv. 9 to end; for for the real sense see Isaiah xxix. 14. There it is asked, "Who among us shall dwell with the devouring fire?" who among us shall dwell with everlasting burnings?" "Truly, we believe, none, for in verse 12 it is said, "The people shall be as the burnings of lime: as thorns cut up shall they be burned in the fire." Surely we all know the action of fire upon dry thorns and briars—when once lighted, the flames burn them up in an unquenchable manner; to show this is the true sense, it is said of the wicked in Psalm cxviii. 12, they are "quenched as the fire of thorns," therefore the fire is only unquenchable so long as the thorns are unconsumed. Who can deny this?

The thorns and chaff are not cast into the fire to be preserved but to be consumed, Malachi. iv. 1-3; so also, the refuse brought out from Jerusalem and cast into the Gehenna fire which was kept constantly burning, it was cast into the fire to be utterly consumed—not to be preserved. Hence, the wicked, as the chaff, are to be burned up with unquenchable fire, for the transgressors shall be destroyed together, Psalm xxxvii. 38, not kept for ever burning, for "our God is a consuming fire" to the wicked; He will not preserve the life of the wicked, therefore they must share in the second death: but Christ gives to all true believers in him, eternal life—they shall never perish.—T. Edwards.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APR. 10, 1895.

The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

STEIGER says the words of men are like the leaves of a tree; when there are too many they hinder the growth of the fruit.

IT is said the water is still in the depths of the sea; the heaviest grief is born in silence; the deepest love flows through the eyes and touch; the purest joy is unspeakable.

"Of the 12,000 saloon keepers in New York City, no less than 5,000 have served terms in the prisons. This is the class of men the government licenses to undo all moral work."

SOME one has said: "As flowers never put on their best clothes on Sunday, but wear their spotless robes and exhale their odor every day, so let your Christian life, free from stain, ever give forth the fragrance of the love of God.

THE activity of the nations everywhere their commerce, their political revolutions, their social transformations are all so many elements in the preparation of the earth for the transfer of its government to Jesus and his brethren in the day of his arrival.

"O LORD, how manifold are thy works! In wisdom hast thou made them all; the earth is full of thy riches,—so is this great and wide sea." We recently saw it stated that flowers are so varied in distribution that botanists can construct a floral clock out of wild flowers in England, and tell the hour of night or day by their opening or closing.

AN English paper says:—"On a recent Saturday a census was taken of those entering one saloon in the Old Kent Road, London, from half past seven A. M. to awful result: Men, 1,230; women, 2,242; children, 1,120; babies, 353; a sickening total of 5,260 persons. Within a distance of a hundred yards there are forty-five dram shops."

THE Rev. Thos. Dixon, Jr., for six years pastor of the Twenty-third Street Baptist Church, New York, has resigned and formed an independent church, in order (as his letter of resignation states) "to proclaim this as the hour in which the gospel of Jesus must have its social fulfillment if society be saved from anarchy. That the State is even now the outline of the kingdom of God, bring the only organ through which the people can act as one man in the pursuit of righteousness, and that political action is a sacrament." What next, we wonder?

THE question is asked, "Did Paul believe in the destruction of the wicked?" In reply we would say it will be safe to conclude that as there is but one faith, and one hope, Paul believed the same about this matter as did James and John. If they disagree on this they could hardly agree about anything else relating to man's destiny. John says, "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life [Zoen] and he that believeth not the Son shall not see life [Zoen]. John iii. 36: James says, "For what is your life" [Zoe]? It is even a vapor that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." James iv. 14. Paul says, "To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory and honor and immortality, eternal life." [Zoe.] Rom. ii. 6, 7. Now let us see what Paul meant by destruction;—see whether he meant loss of life or not. "If any man destroy [Gr. Phtheirie] the temple of God, him shall God destroy," [Phtherie] 1 Cor. iii. 17. The same Greek verb first rendered "defile" is then rendered "destroy." The first is the sinner's act; the second is God's punishment by destruction. This verb in its composite form has also the same two senses, while it intensifies their force. [Diaphtheiro] It signifies to "destroy utterly," "to kill," as well as "to lead astray," and "corrupt."

A writer in the Watchword says:—"With good reason do we find the apostles iterating and re-iterating their testimony to the resurrection from the dead as a fact preliminary, in the nature of things, to entrance into the kingdom of God. Already the saints have passed covenantly from death unto life. But flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God. We must be reborn,—this natural body must become a spiritual body; this corruptible must put on incorruption." Now he who hath wrought us for this self same thing is God, who hath given us the earnest of the spirit."

A contemporary says, "Now is the time to make others happy.

"One little rosebud will do more to cheer the living than a cart load of flowers can do for the dead.

One smile upon a living face is better than a hundred tears over it after death.

One kind word will bring the flush of joy to a living face, but a thousand cannot change the pallor of a dead one.

One little word of praise to the living will do him more good than a eulogistic sermon after death.

Many sought the dead Jesus with sweet spices, but only one anointed the Living Christ with precious ointment.

Many wept at the feet of a crucified Savior, but only one bathed his feet with tears while living.

Loads of flowers follow the dead to the grave which should have strewn their pathway in life."

PAUL Judsons wrote a series of articles in the Jewish World in 1884-5 in which he endeavored to prove that the teaching attributed to Christ was in reality taken from the Talmud. "We fearlessly assert" wrote he, "that all he (i. e. Christ) taught, in so far as it was good, was but a reflex of ourselves and our views." The much talked-of Mrs. Besant says the same thing. And those who accept as proved the theory of evolution, assert that the teaching of Christ shows only a slight improvement on the teaching of the rabbis, as shown in the Talmud. The Jewish writer mentioned above gives the Sermon on the mount in parallel columns and it is at first rather surprising to see how similar the statements are. But when it is remembered that the Jerusalem Gemara was compiled about 300 years after Christ; and the Babylonian Gemara, (by far the most voluminous) not until about 500 years after Christ, the claims of the Jewish writer do not seem so very formidable. Indeed, instead of Christ or the evangelists having copied from the Talmud, it looks very much as if the compilers copied from the despised Nazarine in order to acquire a reputation.

THE answer to the question, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do," is always appropriate; to some it is, arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins. But this answer is only addressed to hearty believers of the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. Acts viii. 12. No one believes in Jesus Christ who does not believe in the gospel of Christ. To believe he died instead of you, so that you may escape from your body at death and wing your way to realms on high and there reside forever, is not believing the gospel of Christ. Nothing is more impossible than to believe that and also to believe the gospel of the kingdom Jesus preached, because they diametrically oppose each other. Both cannot be believed, because one contradicts the other, and therefore both are not true. If you would like to get rid of the Bible because of its worthless and contradictory character, you will have good ground for this desire, whenever you can show one plain promise of the far away haven of rest, because there are scores upon scores of passages that say it is on earth. This false impression about clapping the glad wings and towering away to mingle with the blaze of day, grows out of what the serpent said, "Thou shalt not surely die." Belief of that made it necessary to at first wish to go off there. Then to believe they would go there, and then teach it for God's truth, whereas it is the serpent's lie, and nullifies the gospel of life from the dead offered by Jesus. He who believes the serpent disbelieves God.

The Kingdom of God.

"The kingdom of God is to have a King, and he is to have associate kings and rulers to assist him in the government of the nations: for we read, "He that ruleth over men must be just, ruling in the fear of God." And to the Jewish people it is said, "I will make thine officers peace, and thine exactors righteousness." The call today is to God's kingdom and glory. When Peter was brought before his Jewish brethren, charged with preaching the gospel to the Gentiles, James stood up and said: "Simeon hath declared how God at first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name: and to this agree the words of the prophet, as it is written, "After this;" after what? After visiting the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name. "After this, I will return and build again the tabernacle of David which is fallen down, and will build up the breeches thereof, and will build it as in the days of old." Acts xv. 13. Amos ix. 11. For what purpose? "That the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles upon whom my name is called saith the Lord, who doeth all these things." When the disciples of Jesus were sent to preach the gospel they were told to preach the kingdom of God. This is what all true believers of the gospel believe and teach, a real kingdom, Jesus the king of kings and Lord of lords.

The kingdom of God is to be an everlasting kingdom; and we are told by Daniel that the time came that the saints of the Most High took the kingdom and the dominion under the whole heaven. It was to be an everlasting kingdom that should never be destroyed nor left to other people. Other people had to leave their kingdoms, for they were mortal; but when the Lord Jesus and his risen saints take the kingdom they and it will endure forever. God's kingdom was to be the means of blessing all the families of the earth, but as yet it is not done, because it is only in embryo; when the Lord Jesus takes to himself his great sumes the government of the world and pours out the judgments upon the nations, foretold in the Book, then the people will learn wisdom at the rebuke of the Lord; "for he shall rebuke strong nations afar off, and they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks, . . . neither shall they learn war any more." At this time there will be no necessity for one to say to his brother, "Know ye the Lord, for all shall know him from the least to the greatest." Every man shall sit under his own fig tree, none daring to molest or to make him afraid. "The knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea." Blessed Em.

Blind Leaders.

Another of the blind leaders of the people at Chicago is Bishop Samuel Fellows, of the Reformed Episcopal Church. He said:—"In the first place death is not an entity; it is simply a term we use to indicate the separation of the soul from the body. The soul remains conscious, preserves its identity, and enters immediately upon the life for which it is fitted, being just as much adapted to that new world or state of things as it was adapted at birth to this world and to its earthly conditions. Of course what that new life is we do not know, but the soul is fitted or correlated to it as in this world."

We are curious to know what value the Bishop puts upon these statements. He says "death is not an entity; it is simply a term we use to indicate the separation of the soul from the body." This is a positive statement, and it looks as if he expects us to take his word for it and ask no questions. Like the Doctor who preceded him he has no use for the Bible and intends that we should use him instead of the Bible. He speaks as one having authority; but whence came his authority for this statement? And when he goes on to speak of the identity and consciousness of the soul, does he mean that he has had a revelation from heaven about this, or has he had any experience in these things? As no mention at or reference to the Scripture is made, it must be as a bishop he speaks, and thinks we have no right to ask his reasons for using the word death to indicate the separation of the soul from the body. We are glad, in one sense, he said we use, and does not make the Bible responsible for such use. We hope our readers will remember the Bishop is ignorant of the new life. He continues:—"What will constitute the joys of heaven?" naturally varies with the temperament, the culture, and the surroundings of the one making the reply to that question. My idea of the joys of heaven is that of service, the harmonious exercise of all the powers of being; no needless friction, no undue prominence of one faculty over another. That service, I think will consist in the acquisition of knowledge and in the using of that knowledge for the good of others. All that makes the music of heaven."

Oh, Bishop, what if your idea be not the true one? and then what if you induce others to embrace a false hope on the strength of your statement? Why do you not show first that heaven is somewhere promised, and failing of that you would not have to depict its joys. Your idea is it? Where did you get it? How did you get it? Did you get it from the Bible? If so, why not show us where? If not from the Bible what good is it? You think the heavenly service will consist in the acquisition of knowledge for the good of others. Then do you expect ignoramuses to get there? So ignorant that they are incapable of acquiring knowledge without monitors? or do you think that heaven will send them out to other worlds as missionaries, after old earth is blotted out? Say, Bishop, what did Jesus mean when he said, "Where I go ye cannot come?"

In regard to what constitutes the punishment of hell, he says:—"It consists, in my judgment in an abridgement of one's power first, to gain knowledge and, second, to use knowledge. It consists in the shriveling instead of the enlarging of the soul. In other words, it is the want of life in the fullness of not necessary to believe there will be physical pain inflicted as extra. There will be the consciousness, I think, of this diminution of power to be and to do. That will bring mental pain and sorrow and remorse. That is the essence of the separation of the soul from God, because he is ever working for the good of his creatures, and when they are out of harmony with him they must be in a state of misery."

How inexpressibly poor and naked and blind are the leaders who do not know what the penalty of God's law is, or what the reward of the righteous! We are glad however, they do not blaspheme God with the fire and brimstone forever, doctrine.

Scientific Gleanings.

It has often been claimed that the science of astronomy contradicts the Bible. Gen. xv. 5, plainly teaches that the stars cannot be counted. For a long time astronomers asserted that they could be counted; but they now admit that they cannot be counted. If their former statements had been true, we would have had no guarantee that the promises to Abraham would ever be fulfilled; but seeing the stars cannot be counted there need be no fear but what the purposes of God will in due time be accomplished.

The early astronomers gazing at the skies of Chaldea and Arabia counted three thousand in each hemisphere, six thousand in all; and down to the time of Galileo, this was supposed to be the whole number. But Galileo's little eye-glass showed that number to be only the beginning, and hardly that; behind them were other thousands that had been shining unseen from the dawn of creation. Galileo's glass revealed four stars where one had been counted before; but a larger and better instrument doubled the number again, and as improvement of telescopes went on astronomers had to stop counting and content themselves with estimates. Twenty-four years ago the number was placed at twenty millions; ten years later the estimate was doubled, and the multiplication process did not stop even there,—for photography has come to the aid of astronomy, and the camera has produced on the sensitive gelatine plate, swarming of points of light, so faint and minute as to have escaped the keenest vision of the searchers. Photography has pushed back the confines of the stellar universe in seven years so as to multiply the number five hundred-fold and substitute millions for millions in astronomical calculations. The distances are absolutely inconceivable and the attempt to grasp the number staggers the mind.

The cannon ball illustration, however, will enable us to form some idea of the stellar distances. A ball starts from the muzzle of a rifled gun at the rate of one thousand miles an hour, which is the speed of the earth's axial rotation at the equator. If one of these balls could maintain that velocity in a straight line without being arrested by the attraction of the heavenly bodies and if it were fired straight at Alpha centaur, the chief brilliant in the constellation of Centaur, and believed to be the nearest fixed star to the earth; and if some daring adventurer could mount the ball as it left the cannon, in ten days he would be abreast of the moon, in six years and six months the explorer would reach and cross the orbit of Mars, and enter a region infested with glaucoids, or air stones, and other cannon balls; if he passes through these safely, in forty-eight years more he will cross the track of the sun; sixty years later will bring him to the orbit of Saturn; and in one hundred and thirty years to that of Uranus, and will find it getting pretty dark; in one hundred and forty-five years he reaches the orbit of Neptune, the first-born, and most distant of the solar family. He is at last on the frontier of the solar system, four hundred and ten years from the start, having traveled twenty-eight hundred million miles, or thirty times the distance of the earth from the sun; but to his utter amazement he discovers that he has taken only one step in the prodigious journey. The Centaur's chief brilliant is no larger nor than when he started. And no wonder,—before him stretches an abyss eight thousand times as wide as he has traversed. It would take that ball three million years to cross it, and Alpha Centaur is our nearest neighbor of the fixed stars.

When we survey the starry vault and think of the Almighty hand that created them, we are lost in wonder and amazement; but how much more when we contemplate the wonders of his love as manifested in the gift of his Son that we may live forever. Death reigns through sin, but life is offered through the righteous One provided by a loving God, who willeth not the death of a sinner. God offers life eternal, through a belief of the promises made to the Hebrew fathers. Paul says to the Galatians "Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. . . . And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abrahm's seed and heirs according to the promise." And oh dear reader, the so-called Scientists of a few years ago have been balked again. The stars cannot be numbered; and again we say God's Word was never known to fail. He cannot lie who has promised. His love proves him worthy of your confidence.

Sin Covered.

In the thirty-second Psalm we are told that the man is blessed whose transgression is forgiven and whose sin is covered. How is this done? The answer is, by the Name of Jesus Anointed. Paul declares, "Ye are washed, ye are sanctified, ye are justified, in the name of the Lord Jesus and by the Spirit of our God." Peter, also, "That through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." For the name to be of any value to any child of Adam, it must become his. This is accomplished by union with him who bears it. Baptism is the ordained means. "As many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ." Having put on Christ, he is covered with the sin-covering name. Not only does Christ then become his life, but has become of God to him "wisdom and righteousness, and sanctification and redemption." Covered with the name of Christ, he is covered with "the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit." Into this triple name every believer is commanded to be baptized. "Baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." This titled name cannot be credited intelligently without bringing before the mind him in whom the fulness of the Godhead dwelleth bodily, God manifest, the Father and Son in union by means of the Holy Spirit.

When by belief and obedience, a transgressor is by baptism introduced into this name, the only name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved, being covered by it he is consequently blessed. Receiving remission of sins thereby, he has life through his name. He is then entitled to bring his offering to the Altar Christ, and eat thereof. "He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him." In this way is the obedient believer covered by him who is the altar. This is equally true both in life and in death, for even in death to God he lives, and lies underneath the altar, sleeping in Jesus, dwelling in dust. All, thus conditioned are awaiting the welcome words, "Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust." Surely such an one is truly blessed indeed.

Report of Labor.

We are home on a furlough, but thank God we are not discharged from service and that in dishonor. If these ladies would not wear out so easily and refuse to do what the heart most longs for. Whether from some unconscious fault of ours or not, here I am at home resting from sheer necessity. God grant it may not take long to accomplish the needed rest, for I am anxious if God wishes it, to join my husband again and help in telling the news of salvation to all the "way of life." Since my coming home the Elder has again visited the dear ones in Ohio, at "Old Baker," strengthening the lovers of the truth, and persuading men by the gospel. He spoke to good congregations, but could not have the house as long as desired on account of previous appointments which our brethren were not aware of when writing us to come. Coming here after some over a week's absence, hoping we could both go to Southern Michigan to work, but as I was not able to go he went alone. He had some difficulty in getting hold at Fulton, so came home after another week's absence, promising (D. V.) to return at some future time. The truth was entirely new to most of the listeners. Some were much elated over it, while others "would not believe such stuff if they knew it was true." And so the world walks on past, and beyond the blessed knowledge of salvation, running after the "beautiful lie," told so many centuries ago by Satan. Thank God it will not always be so, for when he comes they must believe. Dear ones of earnest believing prayer, pray for us that the work may not be hindered by our infirmities, but that we may have strength to help in building up his cause. May God keep all the loved ones is our earnest prayer.

OBITUARY.

Fell asleep in Jesus Nov. 6, 1894, at Reigleville, Pa., Bro. Spencer Hudnut aged 77. Bro. Hudnut was compelled to yield to the enemy by suffering from cancer, which terminated his mortal life after days of excruciating pain. He went down with the armor on, and when compelled to yield he could point to the triumphant glories conqueror and say, "Because he lives I shall live also." Bro. Hudnut was a member of the little church in Philadelphia. He was a consistent Christian, a kind-hearted gentleman and one that waited for the kingdom of God. He leaves a son and daughter by a former wife, also a widow and sister to mourn his loss. The writer endeavored to comfort the afflicted speaking from 2 Thess. iv. 14-18. The sermon was followed with appropriate remarks by the Pastor of the Reformed Church of which the daughter was a member, after which we laid our brother in his bed of earth to wait for the life Giver, and we think he has but a little while to wait. May the God of all comfort give grace and consolation to our bereaved sister who sorrows not as others who are without hope for she believes that Jesus died and rose again from the dead, even so will God bring them with him that sleep in Jesus.

QUESTIONS.

Will some one through THE RESTITUTION please explain the last chapter of Malachi in regard to Elijah coming before the great and dreadful day of the Lord. Christ says in Matthew iii. 1-4, John the Baptist is the Elias which was first to come; and in Matthew xvii. 11, that "Elias truly shall first come and restore all things," then he says Elias has come already.

Now, when is he to restore all things? He did it not when on earth. Is he to come again before the coming of Christ? Now is not Christ to restore all things? Has not that chapter reference to what is to come to pass at the second coming of Christ? are we to of Christ?

MRS. WM. WISTER.

From Cairo, Egypt, comes news that will interest the whole world. It is the discovery at Dasehur, under the auspices of the Egyptain Antiquarian Society, of two death chambers from the eleventh and twelfth dynasty, being the burial place of Queen Knumits and Princess Ida. Several mummies in elaborate gilded caskets were found, with a collection of gifts, consisting of vases, boxes of perfumery, and even the remains of food.

The most valuable of the objects found, aside from the historical value, are the costly burial garments, a curiously-wrought crown of gold ornamented with jewels, a hair ornament of gold in the shape of a flower wreath, and a dagger of bronze with a handle of inlaid gold and a head of lapis lazuli.

The Nickel Plate Road can offer to the Sons of the American Revolution reduced rates to their convention at Boston, Mass., April 30th. Remember we operate through sleeping cars direct to Boston.—a 10—17.

The church needs not to worship less, but to serve more. It may be we have been too much for ecstacy and to little for service. At some points it looks so. Our choir sings rapturously, but their harmonies do not drown the drunken ribaldry of the saloon, or the curses of gamblers, or the groans of the murdered woman and starving children. Is the church doing what it can to put an end to these monstrous evils? God would do unspeakable things in co-operation with a church perfectly consecrated to him and to the salvation of men. If we could put ourselves in God's hands absolutely and without reserve, the world would be shaken with moral earthquakes until every citadel of evil would be leveled with the dust. We would have a church resonate with praise and heroic in service which would be the instrument of a mighty renovation.

Before purchasing your ticket ascertain the rate via the Nickel Plate Road.—a—10—17.

A Picture.

There's a neat little cottage 'neath ever-green trees,
Where soft waving branches sweep low-spreading eaves;
And the music is sweet that the wind whispers low,
As it speeds on its way through each list'ning bough.

There's a well-tended orchard and low-purling creek,
The old-fashioned flower in each sunny nook,
Sweet williams and primroses, nodded and [illegible]
Where beauty and quietness still do exist, [illegible]

The old red barn, with its trimmings of white,
The field of the wheat-field, all golden and bright;
The sloping pasture, where cows quietly graze,
And under the trees through the long summer days.

But this is not half of the picture I see,
There's one who is the best, just enter with me,
To the open door where the sunlight streams through,
And then will the picture I'll open to you.

There's a sweet little woman, whose bright silver hair
Tells softly a love that is tender and fair;
Whose children take their color from the blue sky above,
And crowned with the beauty of heavenly love.

As it were the companion, who through many years
Has wedded her joys and shared all her tears,
Knit patient and loving, through weal and through woe,
Has clasped hand, heart to heart, on life's journey they go.

Six sacred pearls are the children, each loved, earnest look
Is fastened on "Auntie," as she takes the Good Book,
And reads o'er again the sweet story of old,
Whose beauty and sweetness can never be told.

The picture grows brighter, the angels are there,
As they kneel down together in evening prayer,
And lift grateful hearts to the Father above,
For his manifold blessings and never-ending love.

May this picture of beauty remain in "Sweet Brier Cottage" and my memory's chain,
And when time from earth shall the picture remove,
May the loved group be found in Christ's King-dom of love.

Take Courage.

Are we discouraged when we see the small results from our effort to spread the Gospel?

Do our hearts grow sad when we see so many of the few that do embrace the truth either turning back to the world entirely, or else falling into that luke warm condition from which it is impossible to arouse them?

These are the conditions which we meet here at Scholls Ferry, Or., and I presume the experience is the same where ever the gospel is proclaimed.

Yes it causes every true Christian much anxiety—many hours of sadness. We long to have our friends embrace the gospel, which is able to make them wise unto salvation, and strive with us to gain an entrance into that soon coming Kingdom—and yet we rejoice that a few honest workers are being added to our number.

Let us take courage, and arouse our selves to the work that is before us. The gospel work is not play—neither is a pleasure from a worldly stand point.

Consider the trials through which the Apostles passed, and yet they counted these trials not worthy of consideration compared with the glory that should be revealed in them.

We can conceive of no more noble calling than the work for Christ, and I would that we could more fully realize the responsibility that goes with that work—the responsibility of searching for truth—of searching earnestly and prayerfully.

Let us heed the warning of our Saviour and of his Apostles—consider the position we occupy in these last days as believers and teachers of this word, and then with a realization of the responsibility go to work with renewed energy, so that our lamps may be filled and burning when the Bridegroom cometh.

Consider the parable of the sower Matt. 13, 18. "When any one heareth the word of the Kingdom, and understandeth it not, then cometh the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart. This is he which received seed by the way side but he that received the seed into stony places, the same is he that heareth the word, and anon with joy receiveth it; yet hath he not root in himself, but dureth for awhile; for when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by he is offended. He also that receiveth seed among the thorns is he that heareth the word: and the care of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful. But he that receiveth seed into good ground is he that heareth the word, and understandeth it; which also heareth fruit."

The fruitful sower is not wholly responsible for the falling away of those who have received the word.

We should remember that the wicked one is actively at work, and the result is just as fatal to the deceived ones of to-day as it was in Eden six thousand years ago.

"Beware of the false prophets, which come unto you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their works. Matt. vii. 15.

We would not naturally expect to find false prophets among those who profess to be Christians, particularly so when to outward appearance they are godly men. With this warning before us we can not be to watchful lest we be deceived.

An outward profession is not a sufficient test. "By their works ye shall know them."

It seems as though we are certainly living in the "perilous times," of the last days when evil men and seducers are waxing worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived. 2. Tim. iii. 2 Tim. iv. 3. "For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables."

We are indeed living in perilous times when the very elect will be deceived if possible, so while we watch, and wait, giving careful attention to the truth so that we may not be deceived, we should not be discouraged if those around do turn from the truth unto fables.

If we warn the sinner faithfully, then his blood is upon his own head and we are free.

But little head is paid to the Bible even by professed Christians of today. Any thing but the truth seems to be the golden rule, and were it not for the fact that the Scriptures tell us these times must come, we might falter.

I believe the articles from the pen of Bro. Joblin recently have met a long felt want. There is so much error being presented that it becomes our duty to investigate these matters. Our safety depends upon searching individually for the truth, and more, we should not hesitate to expose error when ever it is found. We can show no greater love to our brethern than by showing them where they are straying from the paths of truth.

Take heed unto thy self, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee. 1. Tim. iv. 16.

Let us read and profit by the language of the Apostle Paul as recorded in Acts. xx. 26 to 32.

"I take you record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men. For I have not shunned to declare unto all the council of God. Take heed therefore unto your selves, and to all the flock, over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the Church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood.

For I know this, that after my departing shall grevious wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Now the fact to be most regretted, and most dreaded, ver. 30. Also of your ownselves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them. Therefore watch, and remember, that for the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears.

"Watch for the time is short;
Watch while 'tis called today
Watch, lest temptations over come;
Watch Christian watch and pray.
O now is thine accepted time,
Watch, Christian watch and pray.

God Bless Mother.

A little boy with flaxen hair,
And eyes all eyes as sweet and fair,
Who kneels, when twilight darkens all,
And fears no evil, [illegible]
He says the prayer
"God bless" and bless my mother!"

A youth upon life's threshold wide,
Who leaves a mother's side,
Yet keeps contained within his heart
Her words of warning and the love
And whispers in temptation's hour:
"God bless my mother!"

A white-haired man who sees his
Wane, life's weary, backward track,
And sees one face long deepest in
Bless words of light that lit aright
And prays with reverential brow:
"God bless my mother!"

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 13.

BIRTH OF MOSES.

Do you know the name of the good Pharaoh, who was so kind to the people of God? It was Thothmes. He was the third king of that name. His father and great grandfather had the same name. He was the great, great grandson of Ahmes, who founded the XVIII. Dynasty. We have said nothing about the kings of Egypt, who belonged to the dynasties between the XII. and the XVIII. because they seem to have no connection with our story.

We have reached the time when Joseph and his brethren and all that generation are dead The kind Thothmes III. is no more. He has reigned fifty-four years; a long and peaceable rule, good for his people, and good for Israel. Four kings of his dynasty succeed him; his son, Amenhotep II., his grandson, Thothmes IIII., his great-grandson, Amenhotep III., and his great-great-grandson Amenhotep IIII. The last of these kings whose names appear in the monuments of Egypt. This period of trouble follows when rival kings set up their thrones in different parts of the land of Egypt. This period lasts twenty-two years then the XVIII. Dynasty comes to an end. Joseph had died in the eleventh year of the reign of Amenhotep III. so it was fifty-nine years after his death, when the XIX. dynasty was set up. You had always supposed that the very next Pharaoh after the one who had the strange dreams was the wicked oppressor, had you not? I had, but we might have known better. It takes a long time to forget a man like Joseph.

Some chronologists think there was a quarrel among the Israelites after Joseph's death, as to who should have the headship of the tribes. You remember that Jacob in blessing his sons gave the scepter to Judah. The claimants would then be Pharez and Zarah, the sons of Judah. It is very probable that there was trouble, because the children of Zarah seceded from Israel about this time, and disappear thereafter from the sacred records.

Some strange things had all this while been happening. Esau's family had been driven into Egypt by the famine. They too had multiplied and become great. Zarah had allied themselves with Esau. The house of the Thothmes and Amenhotep's was overthrown to give place to that of Esau or Edom. Esau was to be revenged for the loss of the birthright. Gen. xxvii. 40. Rameses I. whose other name was Thordan. was the beginning of the dynasty. He was a great grand-son to Isaac and Rebekah. He only reigned 1½ years. His son Seti I. then ascended to the throne, reigning seven years by himself, and five years in company with Rameses II. This Rameses is the Pharaoh who was so cruel in his treatment of the Israelites, but his grandfather no doubt began the persecution. It was Seti I. who was so alarmed on coming to the throne by finding that his hated relatives, the descendants of Jacob, were more and mightier than the Egyptians. He made them slaves, and set them to building his treasure on triple cities. Tradition tells us that his fright was greatly increased by learning from the wise men that a conjunction of Jupiter and Saturn had taken place in the constellation of the Fishes. It was the constellation claimed by the Israelites. A conjunction of planets foretold the birth of some great and wonderful person. Its happening in the sign of the Fishes, made them sure some wise leader was to be born among the Hebrews. It is supposed that this starry sign led to the slaying of the Hebrew children, just as it did in after years to the murder of Bethlehem's innocents at the birth of our Savior. If such a child should be born among this numerous people it would be an easy matter for him to seize the country and the throne, and displace the Edomite rulers. The king concluded such a thing should never happen. He would have all the little Hebrew boys put to death, and there would be no danger but what the right one would be gotten out of the way. The Hebrew women would not mind him, they saved the lives of the babes, and then the Egyptians were commanded to throw the little ones into the river. But whatever the design of the king, you will soon learn how it was thwarted by our dear heavenly Father. A little child was born in the house of Amram and Jochebed. He was a Levite, and the very one who afterward blessed the tribes. His mother saw that he was no common child, and hid him away for three months. Paul says in the 11th chapter of Hebrews that he was "hidden in faith." The time of the promise had drawn nigh. Acts vii. 17. God had told Abraham that his people would be afflicted in a strange land for four hundred years; that the nation whom they served would be judged, and the Hebrews come back to the land of Canaan with great substance. Gen. xv. 1-13, 14. 15, 16.

Amram and Jochebed knew of this promise. They believed God. The time of their oppression was nearly over. God had whispered to them that this little child was to be the deliverer of their people, and they were "not afraid of the king's commandment." Heb. xi. 23. have been chosen of God (Margaret reading of Acts vii. 20.)

When he was three months old his childish wail after the dear, vanishing mother, endangered his safety; she could hide him no longer. God must have told her what to do. She went and gathered some bulrushes and wove them into a cradle for her babe. She made it water-tight with slime and pitch, placed the child therein and laid it in the flags by the river's brink.

Dear Restitution:

Please find enclosed $5.00 for the helping fund. The dear Lord has been very good to me the past year in blessing us with good crops, and while I am so blessed I know that many are not able to pay for our dear paper, The Restitution, and if they miss its weekly visits as much as I do when it does not come they will appreciate our little help in having the paper sent to them. I am trying to live so that when the dear Lord comes I may be owned and blessed by him. When I look around me and see the trouble and wickedness there is in the world, I feel as though we can but pray, "come Lord Jesus, and come quickly."

Mrs. Sarah Hayden.

Dear Restitution:

If you will allow me space in your paper, I would like to say a few words. I love to read the encouraging letters from those of like precious faith. I hear very little Bible used by the ministers around here, and what does preaching amount to if it is not in accordance with the Bible? I have heard Bro. Brant deliver a few discourses in the past year and it does no good to hear him. There are but few of us here, but, our blessed Master has said, "Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom," Luke xii. 32. We as a people are generally put upon but we soon put them to flight with the Bible for the time has come when they will not endure sound doctrine. Christ says, "Blessed are ye when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake. Rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy: for, behold, your reward is great in heaven," Luke vi. 22, 23. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I am sit down with my Father in his throne." Rev. iii. 21.

Your Sister, in the faith of Christ coming to establish his kingdom on the earth.

Mrs. Mollie Gilmore.

Dear brothers and sisters:

As I have been a reader of this dear old paper for many years I thought I would write a few lines to the household of faith.

Dear brothers and sisters, I love to read your letters, they comfort me in my lonely hours. The grand thought of there being so many of the Abrahamic faith makes my heart rejoice. I would love to see you face to face and talk of the goodness of God, but, will not be permitted in this wicked world, but my prayer is, that, we may all sweep through the gates of the New Jerusalem. I expect to meet all the dear ones there, where we will part no more. Is that not worth living for? By the grace of God I expect to so live that whether dead or living when Christ comes to be caught up to meet the Lord in the air.

Your humble servant.

J. W. Simpson.

Dear Restitution:

I feel that I have great reason for thankfulness that I have ever learned the truth as it is in Jesus, and also the knowledge of the soon coming kingdom which certainly is the most important of all subjects at this time of the world's history or any other time, and I am hoping in all my ignorance to inherit with the saints of all ages in the coming glory. I have never received but little encouragement from friends or relatives, yet I never will give up truth for speculative. [illegible] I have taken great pains and care in his writings on the "Law or Gospel Which." The Lord be praised that we have brethren well able to handle these subjects. I was rejoiced to read Bro. Hatch's article on the "Everlasting Gospel," which is to my mind the right way of "rightly dividing the Word of Truth."

Submitted in love.

Mrs. M. J. Mansfield.

Dear Restitution:

As so many of the brothers and sisters are writing letters, we thought it only fair that we should write also. With this we send $3.00, credit half of it to the paper, and the other half to the "Helping Fund." When I say we, I mean my wife and I. We often rejoice when we think of the time the Lord sent Elder Richard Corbaley to preach in our neighborhood, in Sonoma County, Cal.

We had been enquirers after truth and we found in the so-called orthodox churches a wide difference yet, all claiming to be right. Bro. Corbaley labored with us and finally persuaded us to subscribe for The Restitution for one year, saying that if we were not satisfied with it at the end of the year that he would refund the money. That was seventeen years ago and we have never asked him to return our money, and I dont think we ever shall. We have been a subscriber ever since and want it to come to us as long as we are able to read it. My wife and I were baptized and received into the "Church of God," Nov. 1878. We removed to Lake County, California, where Bro. Corbaley organized a church with fifteen members, but soon after he moved to the State of Washington, and that left us without a preacher as some of our most influential members went with him while others moved to other parts, and some have fallen asleep. Consequently our church organization is broken up. We have no minister in this state now. We have not heard a sermon of our faith for twelve years, and yet, we hold to the faith for it is well founded on the teachings of God's Word in the Bible. There are a few others here and quite a number throughout the state who hold to the same views. Now, I would propose through our valuable paper to those who, are scattered that we endeavor to get an Evangelist in the state of California. I do not think we have many rich ones on our side, but I think we have enough that can and are willing to do something towards getting a preacher. If this should meet the eye of any brother or sister in California want you please write to me or send me your address, and thus by corresponding we can become acquainted if we do nothing more. We want a strong man here for the orthodox churches are so zealous and so jealous, and their are so many 'ologies and isms to contend with that we want a preacher with the "Sword of the Spirit" ever drawn and ready to defend the Bible, which we find with The Restitution very able advocates of our doctrine. If any wish to write to us, our address is, D. T. Seeley, Lakeport, Lake Co. Cal.

Your Brother and Sister, in the blessed hope of eternal life.

Mr. & Mrs. D. T. Seeley.

The Glory in store for Jerusalem.

In the 3rd chapter of Jeremiah, at verse 17, we read: "At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord, and all nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem: neither shall they walk any more after the imagination of their evil heart."

What time is referred to here for the accomplishment of these good things to the house of Israel? A time yet in futurity. This is evident from the mere reading of the testimony. For not yet is Jerusalem made "the throne of the Lord"; not yet do "all nations gather unto it"; and not yet is the time when the "nations shall not any more walk after the imagination of their evil heart:" But in God's own good time, and according to his determined will and purpose, these blessings will become a reality. These prophecies are not representations of a condition of things to obtain in the heavens above. It is not a Jerusalem above the stars, beyond "the bounds of time and space"; but the Jerusalem of old—literal Jerusalem—where once resided David, Prophets, and Apostles, and which was hallowed by the footsteps of the Redeemer of men, that is referred to in the testimony quoted.

The same Jerusalem then that has for centuries been the despised of men, is the destined metropolis of the whole world. It has witnessed great and mighty wonders in the past, but they all will be eclipsed by the mightier wonders yet to come. Once again, and in the immediate future, will it be encompassed with mighty armies; kings and nations will encamp around it, and again will its people be sent back into captivity. But he that sitteth in the heavens shall laugh; the Lord will have their enemies in derision. Then shall the Lord go forth and fight against those nations. He shall speak unto them in his wrath, and vex them in his sore displeasure. He will rule them with a rod of iron, and dash them in pieces like a potter's vessel, and Jehovah will set his King upon the holy hill of Zion. Then will Jerusalem have become the throne of the Lord, for "Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of Hosts shall reign in Mount Zion and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously," Isa. xxiv. 23.

Then will all nations be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord to Jerusalem, for "It shall come to pass, that every one that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem, shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the Lord of Hosts, and to keep the Feast of Tabernacles Zec. xiv. 16."

Then will they walk no more after the imagination of their evil heart, for "Then shall Jerusalem be holy, and there shall no strangers pass through her gates any more, Joel iii. 17."

As part of the new heavens and new earth to be brought into being by the word of Jehovah, Jerusalem will a be rejoicing, and her people a joy, a habitation of justice, a mountain of holiness, a perfected holy city, into which there shall no more come the uncircumcised and the unclean. As the dwelling place of the Lord of Hosts, it will truly become the city of the Great King, the Zion of the Holy One of Israel, and thenceforth a blessing to all nations, the joy of the whole earth, for the name of the city from that day shall be—the Lord is there.

Prophecy and its Fulfillment. Rev. XIII. 17.

The following decree passed in the year 1163, at a Council held at Tours, under the presidency of Pope Alexander III., illustrates the passage of Scripture at the heading of this paragraph. It is quoted in Dr. Rule's History of the Inquisition, the Council at which it was passed being called by that "Head of the church" because of a great religious awakening which had taken place in those provinces we now call the South of France and North of Spain. There is nothing of the Spirit of Christ in such a decree. There is no toleration in Papish ecclesiastics where they have the power to suppress the so-called heretic. Force is their weapon. Suppression is their policy. No free enquiry. If that were the case others might be enlightened. Therefore ostracise the delinquents. Exclude them from all the comforts this life can afford. Exterminate them if you can. Such is the spirit of Anti-Christ, wherever it is found. Here is the decree: "A detestable heresy has broken out of late in the parts of Toulouse, spreading itself by degrees, like a cancer into the neighbouring places, and now infests great numbers in Gascony and other provinces." Then, after descanting on the "insidious and destructive character" of the new heresy, the assembled cardinals, bishops, abbots, and priests thus proceed.—"Wherefore we command the bishops and all the Lord's priests dwelling in those parts, to keep watch, and under pain on anathema, to prohibit that where followers of that heresy are known, anyone in the country shall dare them help. Neither shall there be any dealings with such persons in buying or selling; that all solace of humanity being utterly lost to them, they may be compelled to forsake the error of their life. And whosoever shall attempt to contravene this order, shall be smitten with anathema as a partaker of their iniquity. But they, if they be taken, shall be taken, shall be thrown into prison by Catholic princes, and be deprived of all their goods. And forasmuch as they frequently assemble together from various parts into one hiding place, and have no reason why they should be together, except their consent in error, and yet dwell in the same abode, let such conventicles be closely searched, and if the persons be found guilty let them be retained with canonical severity."—Concilium Turonense, A. D. 1163. J. B.

The End of The Wicked.

The Lord preserveth all them that love him: but all the wicked will he destroy.—Psa. cxlv. 20.

Let the sinners be consumed out of the earth, and let the wicked be no more.—Psa. civ. 35; lxxiii. 27.

The wicked is reserved to the day of destruction: they shall be brought forth to the day of wrath.—Job. xxi. 30; Matt. iii. 11, 12.

For we are unto God a sweet savor of Christ, in them that are saved, and in them that perish: to the one we are the savor of death unto death; and to the other the savor of life unto life.—2 Cor. ii. 15, 16.

Whoso despiseth the word shall be destroyed: but he that feareth the commandment shall be rewarded. -Prov. xiii. 13.

But the wicked shall perish, and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs: they shall consume; into smoke shall they consume away.—Psa. xxxvii. 20.

The place where we have to be decides what we wish to be.

The Second Coming of Christ.

All the doctrines of the New Testament beautifully agree and fit in with each other. This one false view concerning the nature of man puts them all out of joint, and makes the truth of none effect. The hopes of religious people nowadays are set on going to heaven to be with Jesus, instead of on His return to come and dwell with them. Matters should be reversed. The true believer looks for Christ's return, and it is "unto them that look for Him that he shall appear the second time without sin unto salvation" Heb ix. 28. He Himself said to his disciples, "If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself" John xiv. 3 Many of His parables had reference to this return. Those who are his servants are commanded to "Watch" constantly for it, for they "know not at what hour their Lord cometh." When he ascended to heaven from the midst of his disciples assembled on Mount Olivet, and they stood gazing with wondering eyes into the clouds where he had disappeared, the first truth to which their minds was directed was that he should come again. "Behold, two men (angels) stood by them in white apparel," and said, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven" Acts i. 11. From this time forth the disciples looked for this event. Their hopes were fixed upon it. On it resurrection, eternal life, and future glory all depend.

Christ was the first fruits from the dead, and after the first fruits comes the harvest. When? "At his coming." 1 Cor. xv. 23. Writing to the Collossians, Paul says, "For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory" Col. iii. 3, 4. Because of fans who heard the truth from Paul, and believed it "turned to God from idols, to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven; whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus" Thess. i. 10. How strange these words would appear to them if like many religious people now—they were not expecting his coming at all, but believed that he was waiting for them. But there are constant references made in this epistle to the great event upon which their minds were set. ch. ii. 19, 20; iv. 13-18; v, 1-11, 23. It is the same in all the epistles, and in many of the addresses given by the Apostles, and we make a profound mistake if we think Jesus has gone to heaven to stay there for ever, for he will stay there only a short time. God will yet "send Jesus Christ,".....whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy prophets since the world began" Acts iii. 20, 21.—Divine Teaching.

Our prayers should be frequently examined to see whether we are asking for what we really want, or only for the things we have an idea we ought to want. There is too much of this unreality and practical dishonesty current both in the closet and the public prayer-room. People get into quite a glow of pleasurable devotional excitement as they pray; their imagination works finely, they have a good flow of language, and become somewhat heated with their own rhetoric, and as the fine phrases roll trippingly off the tongue they ask for things which they would not only be much astonished to receive, but actually sorry, in their cooler moments, to get. What we sincerely desire, we shall be willing to pay the price for, and there is always a price attached—that is, a condition, If we want to sit on the right hand of Jesus, we must be willing to drink of his cup. There is much more of piety than of piety in some prayers. They sound well, but the Lord, who knows the heart, does not find satisfaction in them. "Lip prayers are lost prayers." Don't pray cream, and live skim-milk."—Zion's Herald.

OBITUARY.

Eunice Benjamin, Alvard was born in Yates Township, Orleans County, State of New York, Mar. 8, 1813, and died at her home in Mendon, Mich., March 4, 1895, aged 82 years and one day. She was married to Ensign D. Alvard, at Clarkson, N. Y., Oct. 21, 1833. As the result of this union eight children came to gladden their hearts, two of whom were given a sacrifice for our beloved country in the late rebellion. Six remain to mourn the loss of a faithful, loving mother. In 1833, she with her husband moved to Michigan, settling for a time in Oakland Co., afterward moving to Calhoun Co., thence to Mendon, where for years she shared the joys and sorrows with her family and friends with true womanly tenderness. In 1878, her husband passed away. She with her husband embraced the gospel faith under the labors of Bro. Ephraim Miller nearly fifty years ago, and has ever been a faithful consistent Christian and follower of the dear Master, having taken our beloved paper, THE RESTITUTION, which she prized so highly, under its several names since its first publication. Thus we are reminded of the shortness of our life as we see the pioneers drop off one by one, but we will not sorrow as others which have no hope, there is to be a grand reunion soon. O may we all be among the gathered ones is my prayer.

The writer being absent at the time of the funeral doing some work in Ohio, Rev. J. W. McDougal, the Methodist minister read the 90th Psalm, text 1 Cor. xv. 13, after which she was laid to rest in the Mendon cemetry by her husband, there to wait the resurrection morn.

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects, by R. C. Bingley, is the title of a pamphlet of 68 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under different headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued calls for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonian Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

Vandalia Line Low Rate Excursions.

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a New Year gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

Pleasure Trips.

Whether the tourist's fancy directs him to the New England States or the Atlantic seaboard; to the South; or to the lake region of the North; or to the Rocky Mountains and the wonderland beyond the Mississippi, he will be given opportunity to indulge his tastes at a small cost for railroad fare this year. There will be low rates to Baltimore over the Pennsylvania in May, account the American Medical Association; to Decatur, Ill., account the German Baptist (Dunkard) meeting, and to Pittsburgh for the Presbyterian General Assembly. There will also be low rates over these lines to Meridian, Miss., account the General Assembly Cumberland Presbyterian Church the same month. In June excursion tickets will be sold over the Pennsylvania Lines to Omaha account the National Jr. O. U. A. M.; to Chattanooga, Tenn., for the International Convention of Epworth leagues; to Cleveland, Ohio, account the National Republican League Meeting, and to Roanoke, Va. for the German Baptist meeting. Excursions for July include low rates over the Pennsylvania to Baltimore for the Baptist Y. P. Union Meeting; to Asbury Park for the L. A. W. meeting, and to Boston for the Christian Endeavor Convention, and to Denver, Col., account the National Educational Association meeting. In August excursion tickets will be on sale over the Pennsylvania Lines to Boston, account the Knights Templer Conclave. The sale of low rate tickets will not be restricted to members of the organizations mentioned, but the public generally may take advantage of them.

The Asbury Park excursion will doubtless attract many to that delightful ocean resort. Atlantic City, Cape May, Long Branch, and all the famous watering places along the New Jersey coast are located on the Pennsylvania Lines, hence this will be a desirable opportunity to visit the seashore. The Denver excursion will be just the thing for sight-seeing jaunt through the far West, as tickets will be honored going one way and returning, different routes, beyond the Mississippi and Missouri rivers. Variable route privileges will also be accorded Boston excursionists, enableing them to visit Niagara Falls, Montreal, Thousand Islands and St. Lawrence Rapids, the White Mountains, the Hudson River territory, and to return by steamer on long Island Sound, after sight-seeing at Newport, Narragansett Pier, Nantucket and the Cape Cod resorts to New York, and thence through the agricultural paradise of the Keystone State, along the Susquehanna and Juniata rivers, over the Alleghenies, around famous Horse Shoe Curve, through historic Johnstown and the coke and iron regions of Western Pennsylvania. It is also expected that Boston excursionists over the Pennsylvania Lines will be privileged to return via Baltimore and Washington if they so desire.

In addition to the above, there will be plenty of other cheap excursions over the Pennsylvania Lines to various points. As the season is some weeks away, arrangements in detail have not been consummated, but it is certain that no railway will offer better inducements than the liberal concessions in rates and privileges that may be enjoyed by travelers over the Pennsylvania Lines. This fact may readily be ascertained upon application to any passenger or ticket agent of these lines, or by addressing F. VAN DUSEN, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1895.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks those not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfillment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the funds now in the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

The Restitution.

The Restitution advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ; and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

He Comes Again!

"He comes again!" So angels said,
To those who watched the Lord depart;
And, like a gladdening sunbeam, sped
The message through each drooping heart.

"He comes again!" What words but these
Can yet avail to cheer our gloom?
He comes! before him darkness flies,
And light breaks forth even from the tomb.

"He comes again!" Nay doubt it not,
Though weary seems thy hope's delay;
These waiting hours will be forgot
In presence of eternal day.

"He comes again!" Oh, by this beam
To cheer through wildest storm of night!
To mark, secure, this heavenly gleam
Till morn arise and all grow bright!

Talmage's Sermon.

"POINTS OF THE COMPASS." NO. 1.

"And they shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, and shall sit down" Luke xiii. 29.

Here he quotes only a part of his text, and stops not even at a comma. The part of the verse omitted is "in the kingdom of God." Throughout his discourse, he does not mention the kingdom of God, in which those who are gathered shall sit down, and makes no mention of the context. The previous verse reads, "There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets in the kingdom of God, and you yourselves thrust out." (Because they had been "workers of iniquity.") Mark xiii. 26, 27, shows clearly the time of the great gathering. "And then shall they see the Son of Man coming in the clouds with great power and glory. And then shall he send his angels, and shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from the uttermost part of the earth to the uttermost part of heaven." The testimony of the apostle Paul is similar. He says, "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man (shall be made alive) in his own order: Christ (was made alive) the first fruits; afterwards they that are Christ's (will be made alive) at his coming." 1 Cor. xv. 22, 23. Again, (1 Thess. iv. 13, 16, 17, 18) "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring (from the dead) with him. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord." "Wherefore comfort one another with these words." These words are not used to comfort the afflicted as much in our day as in apostolic times. But what will transpire after that great meeting of patriarchs, prophets, apostles, and millions of martyrs "in the air"? See Zech. xiv. 4, 5. "And the Lord my God shall come and all the saints with thee, and his feet shall stand in that day upon the Mount of Olives, and the Lord shall be King over all the earth." Before his birth the angel Gabriel was sent to inform his mother that the "Lord God would give to Jesus the throne of his father David and that he should reign over the house of Jacob forever." Luke i. 32, 33. "Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion in Jerusalem gloriously." Isa. xxiv. 23. He is the true Nobleman who has gone to a far country to receive a kingdom and return, when he will reward his fellow-heirs to the kingdom that God has 'promised to those who love him." It is customary to go and meet celebrated men as presidents, governors, kings, etc., that they may be seen and heard. But, who can count the millions of risen saints who will go up to meet "the King of kings and Lord of lords, and escort him to the Mount of Olives, and Mount Zion." But suppose there should be a revelation from heaven, as well authenticated as the many Scriptures that affirm the second advent, that Washington, and the martyred presidents Lincoln and Garfield, who did so much for their country, would shortly revisit this land, clothed with immortality, who would not desire to meet and see them? But Jesus the true Messiah has done, and will do when he returns, far more than all the philanthropists that ever lived. Just before Paul's martyrdom at Rome, he says, "I have fought the good fight, finished my race, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown and not for me only, but for all who love his appearing." 2 Tim. iv. 8. "Putting on the breastplate of faith and love, and for a helmet, the hope of salvation. For God hath not appointed us to wrath but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that whether we wake or sleep, we should live together with him." 1 Thess. v. 8, 9, 10. "For what is our hope, or joy, or crown of rejoicing?" "Are not even ye in the presence of our Lord Jesus Christ at his coming?" Though dead, Paul writes, "Your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Col. iii. 3, 4. Again, he says, our citizenship is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ; who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." Phil. iii. 20, 21. Surely, we should love with all our hearts, the second glorious appearing, and strive earnestly to be ready for it. The Doctor says, they "will not be embarassed when they sit down in heaven, if on one side is a seraph and on the other an archangel!" But the angels do not go with a great sound of a trumpet to gather the saints, living and dead when they die one after another, but at the resurrection of the just. It is said expressly when they see the Son of Man coming in the clouds he shall send his angels to gather his elect from the four winds."

The Scriptures quoted, show beyond a reasonable doubt, that Dr. Talmage has made a great mistake in reference to the time of the great gathering of the "blessed and holy," which will surely be, not at death but at the coming of Christ and the first resurrection." Then they will reign with Christ in the kingdom of heaven during the millennial, or one thousand years. See Rev. xx. 6. After that age forever in the new earth, where there will be no more sin, pain, or death, or curse upon the ground—no more night, or light of the sun, for the Lord God giveth light, and they shall reign forever and ever." Rev. xxii. 2, 5. The Apostle Peter writes, "We, according to his promise, Look for new heavens and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." 2 Pet. iii. 13. The prophets of the Old Testament agree with the inspired words of the New, in reference to the place of the kingdom, as well as to the time of setting it up. Read the 2nd chapter of Daniel and you will have the history of four universal kingdoms written beforehand—Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greek, and Roman. They have all risen and fallen, except the last end of the Roman in its divided state. "And in the days of these kings, the God of heaven shall set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." In the 7th chapter of Daniel, the same four universal kingdoms are represented by four savage beasts, and the fifth universal kingdom will follow the overthrow of the fourth. The Prophet says, "I saw in the night visions, and behold, one like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the ancient of days, and they brought him near before him, and there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom that all people, nations, and languages should serve him. His dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." He is told that the four beasts mean four great kingdoms which "should arise out of the earth." But the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom forever and ever. Daniel desired to know the meaning of the ten horns on the head of the fourth beast, and of the little horn which came up among the ten, and before which three of the ten fell. This horn had eyes, and a mouth that spake very great things, whose look was more stout than his fellows. "I beheld and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them until the Ancient of Days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High, and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom." And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High." "But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and destroy it unto the end. And the kingdom and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under (not above) the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all the dominions shall serve and obey him."

Is not this fifth universal kingdom as literal as the preceding four? The prophecies relating to the rise and fall of Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece, (set up by Alexander the Great) and Rome (by the Ceasars) have been fulfilled literally, as every one knows who has compared prophecy with history. At the end of the days of these literal kingdoms, the God of heaven has promised to set up a real kingdom "that shall never be destroyed," with the Lord Jesus on David's vacant throne—then "the law will go forth from Zion and the Word of the Lord from Jerusalem. And many nations shall say, "Come and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob. And he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths. And he shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall (as the result of this judgment and rebuke) beat their swords into plow shares and their spears into pruning hooks: nations shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Micah iv. 2, 3; Isa. ii. 2, 3, 4. "For behold, the Lord will come with fire, and with his chariots like a whirlwind, to render his anger with fury, and his rebuke with flames of fire. For by fire and sword will the Lord plead with all flesh: and the slain of the Lord shall be many." It shall come, that I will gather all nations and tongues, and they shall come and see my glory. And I will send those that escape of them unto the nations and isles that are afar off, that have not heard my fame, neither have seen my glory, and they shall declare my glory among the Gentiles. And it shall come to pass that from one new moon to another, and from one sabbath to another, shall all flesh come to worship before me saith the Lord." This is God's plan for bringing an end of war, and converting the world. If you spiritualize the fifth universal kingdom, to be consistent, you should turn the other four kingdoms spoken of in connection into spiritual kingdom also, and thus blot out a large part of the history of the world. John the Baptist came preaching "repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." "And Jesus went about all the cities and villages preaching the gospel of the kingdom and healing every sickness," and sent his twelve disciples to preach the kingdom at hand in the same sense that the Roman was at hand next after the Grecian. The prediction of Jesus that the Jews with their city would fall by the edge of the sword and many be led captive into all nations until the times of the Gentiles were fulfilled" that has been literally fulfilled. "And there shall be signs in the sun, moon and stars: and upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity: the sea and the waves roaring, men's hearts failing them for fear and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of the heavens shall be shaken. The powers of the atmospheric heaven have been shaken by the cyclones, and "upon the earth has been distress of nations, with perplexity, also the sea and waves roaring." "And then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud, with power and great glory." "And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads: for your 'eternal blood bought' redemption draweth nigh." What is to be redeemed? Paul writes to the church at Rome, (viii. 23) that he was "waiting for the redemption of his body, for we are saved by hope." "So likewise when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." We shall not need to pray "thy kingdom come," much longer. Our Savior after giving us the signs of his coming, has left us a solemn warning, "take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be over-charged with surfeiting, and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares. Watch ye therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man." Luke xxi. 24-36. The kingdom of God, like other kingdoms, will have a king and subordinate rulers —those who have part in the first resurrection, and alive and ready for the second coming, will be changed from mortality to immortality. The subjects of the kingdom will be all mortal Jews and Gentiles who obey the law of the King. "They shall not build and another inhabit, they shall not want and another eat, for as the days of a tree are the days of my people, and mine elect shall long enjoy the work of their hands. Not bring forth children for trouble. The wolf and the lamb shall feed together," etc. Isa. lxv. 22, 25. "They shall not hurt or destroy in all my holy mountain. The cow and the bear shall feed and their young ones lie down together," etc. Every kingdom must have territory. God said to Abram, "I will give unto thee and to all thy seed after thee all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession." Gen. xvii. 8. "And the Lord shall be King over all the earth." Zech. xiv. 9. "And the seventh angel sounded and there were great voices in heaven, saying, "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord, and of his Christ and he shall reign forever and ever." Rev. xi. 15.

E. HOYT.

Signs of Christ's Second Coming.

Have we any reason for believing that Christ will soon return to earth to reward every man according to his works?

Uriah Smith says, "We are drawing near to the day of God. The decisions of eternity are upon us. The Master standeth at the door. The day of the Lord is not an uncertain object in the dim and distant future; but it is, to him who reads aright, the page of prophecy and history, a vivid reality, even now throwing the lurid glare of its approaching glory and the light of its consuming fires upon a slumbering world. It comes not without a numerous array of precursors and heralds; yet it will come to many suddenly and unexpectedly, with what real and unfeigned surprise will multitudes awake to their condition as the terrible realities of this coming day burst upon them. So different from what they expected! So contrary to all their plans! So fatal to all that they had hoped for or believed! What astonishment, what amazement, what terror will seize them! At once they find themselves in the unrelaxing grasp of eternity, its irrevocable decisions upon them and they among the lost!" What a terrible condition to be in! Is there anything in the Scriptures which would lead to such a conclusion? Are there any signs given whereby we may know that we are drawing near to this time? I answer, yes. Is it reasonable to believe that the Lord would warn the world of the flood, the fall of Sodom, and the first Advent, and then say nothing of the second Advent, the most important of all? We may not know the exact time for in Mark. xiii; 32. we read, Of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father; but we may know when it is nigh, yes, even at the doors.

In the first place, there were to be signs in the heavens. In Matt. xxiv; 29, we read, "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from Heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken."

What was to follow all these signs? In the next verse, we read, "And then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in Heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."

Have any of these prophecies been fulfilled? If they have, we may know that we are nearing the time of Christ's second advent. On May 19, 1780. the sun was darkened, candles were lighted, fowls retired to roost, and it was the general opinion that the day of Judgment had come. The darkness lasted about fourteen hours, and was so intense that people were unable to read common print without the light of a candle.

The evening following, it was so dark that, in some instances, horses could not be compelled to leave the stable when wanted for service. About midnight, the clouds were dispersed and the moon and stars shone brightly.

Did not this fulfill the prophecy, "The moon shall not give her light?" Again we notice that, "The stars shall fall from heaven." In Rev. vi. 13. John says, that, in his vision, "he saw the stars of heaven fall unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind."

On Nov. 13, 1833, there was a shower of stars which covered a large part of the earth's surface. It has been said that, "Those which appeared in the east fell toward the east; those which appeared in the north, fell toward the north; those which appeared in the west, fell toward the west: and those which appeared in the south, fell toward the south. They fell not as the ripe fruit falls—far from it; for they flew, they were cast, like the unripe fruit, which at first refuses to leave the branch. In Luke xxi. 20 to 32, we find the words of Christ. He says, "Behold the fig tree, and all the trees; when they now shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand. So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." How plain it is that we are nearing the time of the end. How can any one be so blinded as not to awake to their condition.

It seems to me that this must be the time to which the prophet Isaiah refers in the sixtieth chapter and second verse, when he says, "Darkness shall cover the earth, and gross darkness, the people."

In the second place we notice that there were to be signs in the earth. In Rev. vi. 12. John says, "And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and, lo, there was a great earthquake." Here was to be another sign. Has it ever been fulfilled? On Nov. 1, 1755, there occurred an earthquake, which extended over a tract of at least 4,000,000 square miles. It pervaded the greater portion of Europe, Africa, and America. At this time the city of Lisbon, which contained about 150,000 inhabitants was entirely destroyed. Every church and convent, almost all of the public buildings, and over one-fourth of the houses, fell at the first shock. Afterward fires broke out in different parts of the city and consumed the other buildings. In the 25th, and 29th. verses of the 21st. chapter of Luke, we read that there was to be upon the earth distress of nations, and that men's hearts would fail them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth. Could this ever be fulfilled more literally than it is at the present time? Was there ever a time when man was so worried, and undecided, and when there was such a lack of confidence as there is now.

Well what does Christ say we may expect after this time? In the 27th. and 28th. verses he says, "And then shall they see the Son of Man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh.

From Matt. xxiv. 3, we learn that as Jesus sat upon the Mt. of Olives, his disciples came to him privately, saying, "Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and the end of the world? Listen to the Savior's answer.

After telling them that there would arise many false Christs; that there would be wars and rumors of wars; that there would be famines, pestilences, and earthquakes; and that they would be hated and cruelly persecuted; He said, "And this gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come.

He did not say that the world would be converted, but that the Gospel would simply be preached for a witness.

The Gospel, which was first preached in Asia has moved steadily westward until it has finally belted the world. What does Christ say? He says, "And then shall the end come." These are only a few of the many signs which show that Christ will soon return and take the throne of David, which is upon Mt. Zion in Jerusalem.

Let us, therefore, watch and pray that that day may not overtake us as a thief. Let us not be among those that Peter describes in the 3rd. chapter and 4th. verse of his second letter, who shall say, "Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation: for in 1 Thess. v. 3, we read that, "When they shall say, Peace and safety; then sudden destruction cometh upon them."

Let us therefore give all diligence to make our calling and election sure, and when our Saviour appears, may we all be ready to say, "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him and he will save us."

HENRY M. GORDON.

Reason of the Hope.—No. 2.

Dear readers of our much loved paper, I desire to look into this important question a little farther. I have a hope that I call a blessed hope, which I claim is based on the promises found in the Bible. Now, dear reader, if we have a hope and we cannot find a reason for it in the Bible then we should abandon such a hope, but if we have a hope founded on God's Word, then let us rejoice in it. I have a hope that when Jesus comes to earth to judge and reward every man according as his works shall be, that if I have been faithful to my charge, that I will be so changed in my very nature that I can live on through the ages and be equal unto the angels, to die no more. I believe this change will take place not at death, but at the resurrection, or at the last trump. Do you ask me for a reason of this hope? Turn to Luke xx. 35, 36. "But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage, neither can they die any more, for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God being children of the resurrection."

Dear reader, we are told that in the mouth of two or three witnesses let every truth be established.

Read 1 Cor. xv. 51-55 carefully, and you will find something more important than all else to you and I. This is a complete change of our physical nature, this mortal being made immortal, or truly a child of God. We are now in the begotten or, developing time, we are yet mortal and liable to become a castaway, or an abortive. Now, dear reader if your hope is different, if you think you are in possession of an immortal nature at the present time, or think the great change comes at death then I must leave you to find a reason for your hope, as I cannot help you any. I hope all will investigate this important subject and if it is not as I have stated please give us light on it. Let us study God's Word, that we may have our answer ready to give every man that may ask us a reason of the "Blessed Hope."

H. F. CORDELL.

The Tree of Life.

The Tree of Life, will be restored or brought back to its former position, and be in the middle of the garden of Eden, because it is spoken of by the Holy Prophets. Where will it be located? Ezekiel says, "Four hundred cubits east of the east gate," Ezek. xlvii. Rev. xx. 1, says, "In the midst of the street of it," or on the island will be the Tree of Life, being on an island it can be on either side the river. Job says, "Though a tree die and the roots thereof wax old in the earth, yet through the scent of the water it will bud and bring forth boughs." Ezek. xlvii. 9, says, "Every thing shall live whither the river cometh." It will be by the living waters that the tree of life will bud and bring forth boughs. The Tree of Life will certainly be near Bethany.

ERRATUM.—The last word in the item on Man and Monkey in the No. for April 3rd, should have been predilection instead of prediction.

THE Church in Plymouth had the pleasure of having Bro. Fred. Austin, of Michigan, (but at present attending school at Valparaiso, Ind.,) with them over last Sunday. He preached both morning and evening to good audiences. If all is well he will be with us again the 1st Sunday in May. Bro. Wince is expected to be with us over next Sunday.

THE funeral expenses of the late Sir John Thompson, which were defrayed by the Canadian Government contained an item of $1000 for masses for the repose of his soul, and a contemporary remarks, "This is a part of what the Pope means when he writes to the American people and asks for the favor of the laws and the patronage of public authority.'"

"Shut and long for the dawn of that morning, and the breaking of that day of the coming of the Son of Man, when the shadows shall flee away. Persuade yourselves the King is coming. Read his letter sent before him, it says, "Behold I come quickly." Wait with the wearied night, watch for the breaking of the eastern sky, and think not of a morrow of trouble."

FOR "H. T."—"A conscious living being is the equivalent of the word personality or soul. Both consciousness and life of a human being end when the breath leaves the body; hence the soul or self of the person is then no more. "As her soul was in departing, is in literal Hebrew, the [illegible] the going out of herself;" a going out similar to the going out of the last flickering of a feeble candle-light."

A DESPATCH from Washington April 5, says, "Urgent orders have been cabled to Admiral Kirkland to assemble the ships of his command on the coast of the Holy Land to prevent a threatened massacre of Christians." It seems that the Desolator of the Covenanted Land is trying to provoke interference that is sure to be at his expense. Experience teaches that power nothing. Whatever the outcome of the recent atrocities may be, we sincerely hope Jerusalem will not be trodden down much longer.

FOR B. M.—We think you quite astray upon Luke xx. 37, 38. If that passage proves that Abraham and the patriarchs are now living in a disembodied state [illegible] it proves too much. Had [illegible] the object of the statement, the Sadducees would probably [illegible] torted at once, "If then, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are living [illegible] not dead; and if they are not dead, there can be no resurrection of the dead." But it was the resurrection of the dead that was called in question. The argument in proof was this:—Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are dead. The Lord calls himself their God while dead. God is not a God of the dead. Therefore they must rise from the dead to live unto him."

A NEWS item dated Niles, Ohio, April 5, says that Rev. Harper of M. E. Church of Mineral Ridge has been stirring up the Disciples and Baptists of that section by a sensational sermon, in the course of which he said, "If the Disciples go to heaven, I go to hell," and "If John the Baptist was to walk our streets today he would be jailed as a lunatic," Very probable; and what would they do to the One greater than John the Baptist, who made and baptized more disciples than John? We know of no charge but "baptism" against him, and if that deserved jailing as a lunatic in him, Christ would doubtless be served the same fare. We think Rev. Harper feeds his hatred expensive fare, when he takes hell instead heaven to gratify it.

"The young friend" who wants a little clearing up done, need not be afraid that God's Book that has withstood all the assaults of the power of darkness, for thousands of years, will fall because Gen. xxi. 1, says, in the Authorized, or King James's Version, "God did tempt Abraham, and James i. 13 says, "God tempteth no man." Dr. Young, a very eminent Hebrew scholar, renders Gen. xxii. 1, "And God hath tried Abraham;" and the Revised Version reads, "And God did prove Abraham;" and Dr. Adam Clark renders the passage thus: "And the Elohim he tried this Abraham:.....the word nasah means no more than to prove or try." He then paraphrases it as follows: "It is a great honor on Abraham by giving him this opportunity of showing to all ages the nature and efficacy of an unshaken faith in the power, goodness and truth of God." Jamieson, Fausset and Brown furnishes similar testimony. We think our "Young Friend," if he is at all teachable will see nothing contradictory in these passages. If he prefers contradiction to harmony, however, it is very likely he will have it. Without knowing him or his antecedents, all we can do is to hope he will never give up God's wonderful revelation of his will.

Thankfulness.

We might name the 107th Psalm, "The Thanksgiving Psalm." Again and again the Psalmist breaks out with the words, "O that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men." He seems to have felt that those who were the constant recipients of his bounty took it as a matter of course, that there was a lack of recognition of the goodness of God, which in trouble and distress they were eager to avail themselves of, but which they forgot to acknowledge in the days of deliverance and safety.

Ingratitude is a feature of human nature often observable at the present day,—often between man and man and very often between [illegible] calamity threatens, or when death stares a man in the face, he will humble himself before God, and cry for deliverance, and make solemn resolves to lead a better life if his prayers are but answered. But his resolutions are often forgotten when the calamity is past. These facts cause us to doubt the genuineness of death-bed repentances; and certainly if all desire to be in harmony with the Divine will, we shall daily recognize mercy and cultivate the spirit of praise and gratitude toward him to whom can be traced every good, and upon whom we depend for life and breath and all things we enjoy."

Seven Phases of Faith.

We transcribe from the Reformed Visitor the following items respecting faith:

1. Faith Repenting.—"And when he came to himself, he said, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger! I will arise and go to my father, and will say to him, Father, I have sinned against heaven and before thee." Luke xv. 17, 18.

2. Faith Resting.—"Whither thou goest I will go, and where thou lodgest I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God, my God; where thou diest will I die, and there will I be buried." Ruth i. 16, 17.

3. Faith Working.—"And they said, Let us arise up and build. So they strengthened their hands for this good work." Neh. ii. 18.

4. Faith Resting.—"I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day." 2. Tim. iv. 7, 8.

5. Faith Fighting.—"Put on the whole armor of God, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness, and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all, take the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked, and the helmet of salvation, and the Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God." Eph. vi. 14–17.

6. Faith Conquering.—"He that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations and he shall rule them with a rod of iron, as the vessel of a potter shall they be broken to shivers," Rev. ii. 26, 27.

7. Faith Rewarded. "I will not blot his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my father and before his angels." Rev. iii. 5.

Scientific Gleanings.

"Where is the way where light dwelleth?" Job xxxviii. 19. On one occasion, when Dr. Buckland, George Stephenson, and Sir William Follett were on a visit to Sir Robert Peel, the party had just returned from Church, and were standing together on the terrace near the hall, when they observed in the distance a railway train dashing along, throwing behind it a long line of white steam.

"Now Buckland," said Mr. Stephenson, "I have a poser for you. Can you tell me what is the power that is driving that train?"

"Well," said the doctor, "I suppose it is one of your big engines!"

"But what drives the engine?"

"Oh, very likely a canny Newcastle driver!"

"What do you say to the light of the sun?"

"How can that be?" asked the doctor.

"It is nothing else," said the engineer; "it is light bottled up in the earth for tens of thousands of years, light absorbed by plants and vegetables being necessary for the condensing of carbon during the process of their growth,—if it be not carbon in another form,—and now after being buried in the earth for long ages in fields of coal, that latent light is again brought forth and liberated; made to work, as in that locomotive, for great human purposes."

Like a flash of light, it illuminated in an instant, an entire field of science.

At a meeting of the British Association, Sir David Brewster exhibited a piece of chalcedony within [illegible] which minute [illegible] can be seen. If kept in total darkness for four hours this marvelous picture vanished, but reappeared as vivid as ever on ten minutes' exposure to the sunlight, proving that not only could a design be mysteriously insinuated into the interior of the mineral, but that light could be restored up therein, and produced at will. It was surmised that this effect had been produced by the action of nitrate of silver, salts of silver being, as all photographers know, very sensitive to the influence of light.

The Holy Spirit.

The great pulpit orator of New York, Dr. Talmage, recently said before thousands, that the Scriptures can be understood by no one unless by the direct influence of the Holy Spirit. Before High Heaven we aver that this is untrue. There is not a word of truth in it; and the reason this assertion is made is this:—Ideas have been imbibed that will not square with the Scriptures, and something must be done. They will not abandon their theories and accept the Word as it reads. That is not to be thought of. But they nullify the Scriptures by saying they do not mean what they say; is figurative, needs interpreting, and to exculpate themselves any that no man can interpret it without the direct influence of the Holy Spirit.

Let us take in the whole situation. It is the Spirit's word to commence with. He moved holy men to write it, and then stamped what was written with his approval, and asserted its sufficiency for salvation purposes, and under pain of everlasting condemnation forbade any additions to it, or subtractions from it; and yet 1800 years later, we are confronted with men, who, to cover up their apostasy from the faith, teach that it does not mean what it says. As they assume to teach what it means, it follows that they claim to be under the direct influence of the Holy Spirit when they expound them. And yet, strange to say, 'hardly two of these inspired expounders tell the same story. Do they not falsify their claims to inspiration when they contradict each other? and also when they represent the Spirit as impressing them to teach what is diametrically opposed to what he moved holy men of old to write?

Imagine the Spirit now saying, that all men are immortal, when he has been on record for ages as saying, that God only hath immortality. Imagine the Spirit now saying that the saint's everlasting home is above the skies, when he has put it on record through Moses, the prophets, psalms and the apostles and Jesus, that the earth is to be the scene of their triumphs and the theatre of their glory!

Would to God our fellows could be reached with the glad tidings that the gospel of Christ is God's power to save all who believe it, and that they can believe it if they will. If it is, we repent, to convert their disbelief of man's nature and destiny, and the inheritance revealed in God's Book that they claim it does not mean what it says, although commanded to search it. Their honesty will not mitigate the consequence of being blind. It is faith—simple faith in God's propositions they lack, and deceive themselves and others when they say the Spirit has to interpret his own words. This doctrine gives the clergy a monopoly of interpretation.

Blind Leaders.

Clinton Locke, D. D. another blind leader, says: "In regard to the future state, very much has been left by revelation very vague, for the simple reason that it could not possibly be understood by us, who are living in entirely different conditions. The writers of the Bible when describing heaven or hell use such words as trumpets, a city of pearl, white robes, palms, worms gnawing, unquenchable fire, etc., but these can only be figurative words, human language having its limitations.....We cannot think that the glory of heaven or the wretchedness of hell are bound up in such earthly things....Holy Scripture as interpreted by the Catholic priests, which I as an Episcopal clergyman am sworn to hold, teaches the following things: [illegible] may be) of each human being goes immediately after death to 'the place of departed spirits....which has grades and divisions...based upon his acts in this life. In this place all remain until the resurrection and the final judgment..... Great changes may take place in the condition of beings in this state. They may improve. They may deteriorate....After the judgment all will be assigned to heaven or hell....I do not know explicitly what the joys of heaven will be... I have my own theory, and I have the expressed opinions of the Church (Catholic Church)....I no more believe in material fire in hell than I believe in trumpets in heaven....I did it impossible from the text of Scriptures to understand the full meaning of the words "everlasting death."

This is new to us. We did not know Episcopal ministers were as interpreted by Catholic priests. But why should they not? Is it not mother and daughter? But what drivellings to come from a doctor of Divinity! We are glad for some reasons, that the newspaper made them expose their ignorance; it may cause some to take the Book as the revelation from God, and bethink them of how Catholic priests obtained a monopoly of interpretation; and it may warm with gratitude the hearts of some to realize how they have escaped by accepting the simple truth as it is in Jesus.

Just think of the confession, "I do not know explicitly what the joys of heaven or the punishments of hell will be." Indolent shepherd! Why does he not ask the Catholic priest, if they are infallible expounders,—and if they are not, he ought to be ashamed of himself to swear to hold what they teach. We seriously say to the Doctor, it is none of his business to speculate about the joys of heaven. It will make no difference to him be they what they may. Had he begun one step further back, and said, "I do not know explicitly that any of the human race will ever go to heaven," he need not have made such an exhibition of himself.

When he says very much has been left by revelation very vague, for the reason that it could not be understood by us who are living in different conditions, it villifies God. This is amongst the silliest of all silly apologies for spiritual blindness we ever read! Do not the words, "Thou shalt surely die;" and "dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return," mean the same in every age, state, or condition? Various states and conditions and dispensations had existed between Adam and Christ; but he came announcing life from the dead,—a resurrection from the death state—the very state introduced by the sin of one man. This ought to show the Doctor there is nothing vague about death. The remedy consists in being raised up out of the pit of corruption at the last day. Why, then, does not the learned doctor understand and know about it. Why, indeed; it is patent to all. He does exactly know, what man at the beginning did. What was that? He believes the serpent in preference to God. He is on good terms with the serpent, and takes everything he said, literally, and sticks to it like a leech; but mystifies all God says so that they might not conflict, and consequently, Dean of the Diocese that he is, he thinks "trumpets" and "palms" and "white robes," etc., are the only clues to the joys of heaven, and gnawing worms and unquenchable fire the only dim intimations of hell torment, not literal; and he has never been able to understand from the text of Scripture the full meaning of the words, "everlasting death." We have never yet, to our knowledge, met with that text, but he ought to know there was nothing about everlasting death in the penalty, because if there had been, God would not have sent a Savior who could raise man out of death, as he did. When he believes death is not death, no wonder he is puzzled over "everlasting death."

1. Cor. xiv. 34.

Dear Restitution:

As some articles have been written by some of THE RESTITUTION readers concerning 1 Cor. xiv. 34, with your permission I will add a few remarks on the same subject. 34th verse reads as follows: "Let your women keep silence in the churches, for it is not permitted unto them to speak; but (Italics left out) to be under obedience, as also saith the law."

The above has been a subject of much controversy, and in some churches a bone of contention. I used to read and re-read the 1st letters to the Corinthians and like a number of others could not understand the Apostle's reasoning, and perhaps do do not at this time, but as the prophet Isaiah has said, "Come let us reason together," I came to the following conclusion, and which I think is a correct way to understand a written epistle. 1st, Who is the writer, 2nd, the person or persons addressed, 3rd, the subject matter of the correspondence. We have in this letter, 1st the apostle Paul the writer, 2nd, the church at Corinth the recipient of the letter, 3rd, the subject matter of the epistle is the setting in order, and correcting the errors and abuses which had crept in and caused much confusion among them. Now of the Apostle is addressing the church. Who or what composes the membership? Are they all men? Oh no, says one, they are a body of believers both men and women, which I presume no one will dispute. Then in the above verse 34 we have the apostle writing to a church composed of men and women, and says to the same church let your women keep silence in the churches; for it is not permitted unto them to speak. Then the question, who are the women referred to? In the 35th verse we have this, "And if they (the women) will learn anything, let them ask their husbands at home." This proves that they were unlearned in the way of life in the gospel, were unbelievers and had no part in the order of the church. In the 34th verse the apostle says they were to be under obedience as also saith the law, which they were yet under, and not under grace, consequently had no part or lot in gospel matters.

In verse 31 the apostle says they (the church) may all prophesy or teach one by one, that all may learn and all be comforted. Why this order? In verse 33 we find that God is not the author of confusion but of peace, as in all churches of the saints.

If the understanding of many is correct we would have the apostle contradicting himself. With the understanding that the apostle is addressing a church composed of men and women believers, and that the women spoken of in verse 34 are yet under the law, I can see no difficulty. While more could be said, I wish to make my article as short as possible as space in THE RESTITUTION is valuable. Hoping that what I have said may be received in the same spirit as it is written, by one of love for the truth.

"What say the Bible, the blessed Bible?
The book I my only question be.
Teaching—if man question unheed us,
What say the Book of God to me?

What say the Bible? See 1 Jn. 2:3.
What say the Bible? study it well.
Keep the commandments, all the commandments.
Look for the coming Savior too.

Submitted for the truth's sake.

Visit to the Isle of Patmos.

Bishop Newman in New York Christian Advocate: Situated in the Ægean Sea, south of Smyrna, and less than twenty-five miles from the mainland of Asia Minor. Patmos is ten miles long, five wide, and less than thirty in circumference. A narrow isthmus divides the island into almost equal parts north and south, with Port Scala on the east and Port Merika on the west. Here stood the ancient city, and here St. John landed. The coast is deeply indented. The cliffs rise as if out of the sea. The valleys are deep and solemn. The mountain peaks attain an altitude of 1,000 feet, from which we had a view of islands and islets, of bay and sea, of vale and summits whose magnificence is beyond the limits of language. Here and there the [illegible] the mulberry, the cypress and the oak, the almond and the pine, adorn the island and give industry to the people. Five thousand people dwell there in peace, industrious and quiet. Order reigns, and one policeman is the guardian of life and property. Patmos is one of the "fortunate isles." No Turk has trodden its soil; no mosque shadows its landscape. The small government tax of $2,500 is annually carried by the deputy to the Pasha of Rhodes. It has never had piracy nor slavery nor the plague. The air is clear, pure, and heavenly. The people are Greek Christians, gentle, intelligent, and happy. As we passed through the streets they came to the door and saluted us with genuine hospitality.

From the entry down till our arrival, the bold, massive, southwestern cliffs of Patmos, like some hugh cyclopean wall rising from the sea, appeared to view, and against this dark background a solitary sail was seen, white in the morning light, moving slowly in the light breeze toward some neighboring island. The approach was enchanting; hour after hour in the stillness of the dawn we drew nearer nearer; the illusion fo and nearness was fascinating, yet deceptive. The winds and the waves had indented the rock-bound shore and carved out many a grotto which resounded to the voice of the deep. Now Mt. Elias was distinctly seen, a thousand feet from sea level, crowned with a white temple to the prophet, and anon the white city appeared on the distant hills. Soon we entered the quiet harbor of La Scala, land-locked, describing two-thirds of a circle wherein ships were at anchor. The lower town, the Village of Scala, the principal port, is on the east side of the isthmus, on the shores of a quiet little bay, wherein one-third of the people live, mostly merchants, who deal in figs, grapes, and other fruits. The upper town is on a lofty hill, half an hour's ride up a steep road paved with huge round stones, hard to the foot of man or beast. Our arrival excited the little village. Men, women, and children looked upon us wonderingly. Crowds followed us, gave us flowers, and welcomed us to their homes.

"The Millennial Dawn."

A correspondent writes us asking if we have seen a work called "The Millennial Dawn," and if we have, he would be glad if we would give an opinion of it in these columns. We have seen the work, and once or twice have warned our readers concerning it. We can only repeat what we have before said. The work is so craftily written that the unsuspecting are liable to be led astray by it. A deal of Scripture is quoted, and unless you are on your guard, you will swallow the poison with it. It is premillennial in its teachings, but at the same time it is rank Universalism. The author believes that all men will be finally saved. Entering a home, not long since, we found the three volumes comprising the work, and explained their character. The man of the house said that he was afraid of the result of such teachings. But a large number of the books are in circulation. Money is used freely to scatter works which deceive and lead away from God. O that the professed people of God would use their money as freely to scatter the truth. "The Millennial Dawn" is not worth the paper it is printed upon. Josh Billings said that "Rum was good in its place, and hell was the place for it." The book referred to is good in its place, but a blazing hot fire is the place for it. We hope that none of our readers will be deceived by its false teachings.—Herald of the Coming One.

Minister's Conference.

A large attendance was present at the regular meeting of the minister's conference than was at the meeting of the previous week. The paper of the afternoon was read by the Rev. Edwin Hoyt, on the subject of "The End of the Age, the Age to Come and Great Events Connected With Them." Mr. Hoyt quoted quite a little scripture in his paper and apologized for his doing so by saying that the apostle Paul spoke of that as his custom. His subject led him to deal to a great [illegible] ecy. The foretelling of the destruction of Jerusalem and its occurrence A. D., 70, was also spoken of. The persecution of the Jews which has been going on since the destruction of Jerusalem, was spoken of and he said that the time when that should come to an end might be near at hand. The description of the affairs of the world which were designated in the scriptures were pointed to and read. The paper was a masterly one from the view dealing in the technicalities of religious teaching. A great deal of interest was taken in the paper by the ministers present, who discussed it to some length. No important business was done by the conference. —Grand Rapids Paper.

Our Helping Fund.

Herewith we give names, and amounts donated by each, for the purpose of helping to create a fund to be used in sending papers and tracts to those too poor to pay. This fund will be used only for those who themselves state their needs and circumstances, or whose case is presented by some one known to us as trustworthy.

[Selected by R. W. Woodward.]

Read with Care, then Practice.

If a sister be in error, why should we the story tell
Of her faults to other people, who will spread the tale as well.

How we ought to gain by speaking words amiss of a sister's name,
Will it make our own the brighter if we cover hers with shame?

What though she has sinned, and sinning has become a thing of scorn,
And soon lost beyond redemption, was she not a sister born?

Will it make her any better if we point the finger too?
Will it be as you would wish that she would render unto you?

We know not how hard the burden sin has placed upon her soul,
We know not how fierce the conflict ere she started for its goal.

We know not how she may suffer with her sorrow sin and care,
Or that she may with true repentance lift her voice to God in prayer.

Should we add them to her burden, should we press her lower down,
Will it make us rise the higher if we spurn her with a frown?

Can we speak no word of cheering why then need we speak at all,
Since we know not her temptation, nor her sorrow at her fall.

If we always speak with kindness we shall tarnish no fair name,
If we cannot speak in praises let our silence hide her shame.

We may wrong our erring sister and ourselves no honor win
If we tell her faults to others who will unmurmuring her sin.

OUR CHILDREN.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 14.

MOSES IN THE HOME SCHOOL OF PHARAOH, IN THE SCHOOL OF GAIL.

The little daughter of Jochebed is placed at some distance from the spot where the baby is hidden. Her mother bids her "watch and see what will be done to him." She knows that Thermuthis, the daughter of Rameses (Seti I.) comes there to bathe. God must have told her what will happen when the princess finds the child. Ther- [illegible] walks along by the side of the hill; she sees the little ark, and commands one of her maids to fetch it. The cries of the little one, when the ark is opened, melt her heart, his beauty captivates her eyes. Though belonging to the hated Hebrew race, his life must be saved. The young watcher is dispatched for a nurse,—it is Jochebed, his own mother, to whom the little Moses is entrusted.

His early education is exceedingly important. He must know the true God, he must learn of the precious promises made to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, of a future Redeemer, through whom his people will inherit endless life in a restored Eden. He must understand that the restitution of all things is to come through the One, who is to be born of his people. His own mission, as the future deliverer of his nation, must be indelibly stamped upon his youthful mind. All these things he learns while under his father's roof. He is then taken to Pharaoh's daughter, and becomes her son. The star-foretold leader is a member of Pharaoh's own family, a prospective heir to the throne! The plans of Rameses have been thwarted by his own child! How wonderful are the ways of God! Seti had taken his son Rameses II. into partnership-rule with himself, when Moses was only two years old. Five years later Seti dies, and the stone-hearted Rameses becomes sole ruler of Egypt.

I wonder if Moses was sent to school at Heliopolis? That was the city where the wise men of Egypt lived. They were the teachers of the children. We talked about them in a former lesson. Can you tell me what they knew? The Bible says, "Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians." So Rameses, or his foster-mother, Thermuthis, must have given him the best possible chance for an education. He must have learned astrology, astronomy, higher mathematics, physical science, botany, zoology, history, geography, and political economy.

I said in lesson twelve that the children of Zarah had seceded from their father's tribe, and had gone over to the children of Esau, or Edom. You mind that Phares and Zarah were the twin-sons of Judah? Some famous young men belonged to the seceding faction of Zarah. Peculiar favor was shown them by Pharaoh. They too were taught with Moses in the highest schools of learning. Their names are Chalcol, and Darda and Heman. They are great-great grand sons of Judah, and became the founders of Greece and Troy and Tyre. Chalcol is called Cecrops in your histories, and Darda takes the name of Dardanus. A son of Chalcol married a grand-daughter of Rameses II., thus uniting the families of Zarah and Esau. History follows this line from Egypt to Greece, from Greece to Spain, and from Spain to Ireland, where Eochaidh, a son of William the Conqueror of Ireland, belonging to this line of Zarah is united in marriage to Tea Tephi of the family of Phares.—Tea Tephi was a daughter of Zedekiah, the last king of David's line who reigned over Judah. Zedekiah and his people were carried captives to Babylon. Jeremiah, the prophet, took Tea Tephi to Ireland.

Zarah and Phares and Esau all blended into one royal family. For Chalcol son's wife was of Esau's race, Chalcol of Zarah's, and Tea Tephi from Phares. There can be no more quarrels now between Jacob and Esau about the birthright blessings, for both have a share in the temporal rule of God's great people. And yet it remains true that the pre-eminent favor was sold from Esau forever, for not from his race springs the dear Savior, the Redeemer of men. And if Pharez and Zarah quarreled about the headship of the tribes, the quarrel is at an end. The two houses have become one house, and that house is reigning over the children of Joseph in the isles of Great Britain. Moses has grown up a prince in the palace of Rameses. Honors have been showered upon him. Like Joseph he has been given a place among the great magi of Egypt. But he is not satisfied. He knows there are higher things to be won than the throne and palace of Egypt can give,—things that will be as enduring as the days of heaven. God [illegible] than that which waits upon the sun—God Hosts of Heliopolis and he longs to begin the service whereunto he has been called. The sweet, home-stories of a far-off land are ringing in his ears. The mountains and vales of Canaan with its bright cascades and luscious grapes are ever before him. It is to be an everlasting inheritance. He is to lead his people there, and there—there the coming Christ will be born!

Pharaoh is making the lives of his people very bitter, he pities them in them in their cruel bondage; they are God's people, and his choice is made; he will reject the throne for the coming glory; he will suffer affliction with his brethren, rather than enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; the reproaches of Christ will be greater riches than the treasures of Egypt; he has respect unto the recompense of the reward. Heb. ii. 24, 25, 26.

His age is forty years; he imagines that the time has come for him to enter upon his mission as "the prince and judge of his people," but God sees otherwise. He must have a forty's-year-course of schooling in the land of Midian to make him meek enough and patient enough to bear the murmurings of the Israelites. Yet the Lord permits him to make his first trial as a Leader and Deliverer. He slays an Egyptian who is abusing an Israelite, and endeavors to make peace between two quarrelsome Hebrews. His own brethren resent the interference. They do not accept him as a deliverer. They reject him just as the Jews rejected Jesus, at his first appearance, "Who made thee a prince and a judge over us?" was their query. They would not endure it, and report his conduct to Pharaoh. Rameses seeks to kill him and he is forced to flee to the land of Midian. He will come back again, and will save his people, just as Jesus is to return to save his own.

A CORRECTION.

Dear Children:

In our "Story of Israel," No. 11, a few lines have been left out. They were about Joseph's tribes. You can easily supply them. They would have come in after this sentence in the second column,—"A great many of these people were put to death on account of their faith." Turn to Deut. xxxiii. and read from the 12th to 18th verse, beginning "and of Joseph he said," etc.

We must thank Bro. Joblin for his kind words.

Letters to a Methodist Minister. No. 1.

Please read and consider the following: Once or twice during your meetings, you have mentioned the blood of immortal souls, will give you a few quotations which will prove man is not immortal yet, and when he is made immortal, it does not say he will have blood. "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God, neither doth corruption inherit incorruption." 1 Cor. xv. 50. "For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." 1 Cor. xv. 53. "It is sown a natural body it is raised a spiritual body and so it is written the first man Adam was made a living soul (not an immortal soul) the last Adam a quickening spirit. Now be it that it was not first which is spiritual but that which is natural and afterwards that which is spiritual." 1 Cor. xv. 44, 45, 46. Turn to Luke xxiv. 39, and you will see that when our Savior was raised from the dead, he had flesh and bones but not blood. We consider this proof, that when we are made immortal we will be quickened by the spirit instead of the blood. Let us look at the condition of Adam and see what we are, and what we would have remained, if our Savior had not poured out his soul (life or blood) unto death that we might live. Turn to Gen. ii. 7, and it says, "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and man became a living (not immortal) soul." The place you make the mistake is in the 3rd chapter of [illegible] knowledge Adam and Eve ate of, instead of the tree of life. And the Lord God commanded the man saying, "Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat, but of the tree of knowledge of good and evil thou shalt not eat of it, for in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Gen. ii. 16, 17. But they did eat. So he "drove out the man and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden Cherubims and a flaming sword which turned every way to keep the way of the tree of life." Gen. iii. 24. Why did he want to keep the way of the tree of life? The 22nd verse says, "lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life and eat and live forever." Then would have made him an immortal sinner, but he did not eat of the tree of life, so he returned to the dust as it is written, "For dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." Gen. iii. 19. "And the serpent said unto the woman ye shall not surely die." This we believe to be the only text to prove man's natural immortality independent of a Savior. The phrase immortal soul is not between the lids of the Bible. The word immortal is used but once in the Bible it is in 1 Tim. i. 17, and is applied to God. It reads, "Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God be honor and glory forever and ever. Amen." And the word immortality is used but five times in the Bible. The first place is Rom. ii. 7, and proves we have to seek for immortality. It says, "To them who by patient continuance in well doing seek for glory, and honor, and immortality, eternal life." Second place is in 1 Cor. xv. 53, and tells us we are mortal. It reads, "For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality." Third place is in 1 Cor. xv. 54, and says, "So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption and this mortal shall have put on immortality then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, death is swallowed up in victory." You will find the fourth place by reading 1 Tim. vi. 15, 16, "Which in his time he shall show who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings and Lord of lords, who only hath immortality dwelling in the light which no man can approach, unto whom no man hath seen nor can see to whom be honor and power everlasting. Amen." Fifth place is in 2 Tim. i. 10, and it reads, "But is now made manifest by the appearing of our Savior Jesus Christ who hath abolished death and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." This proves the only way we can get immortality is through the gospel.

We will prove next that the wages of sin is death but the gift of God is eternal life. How would it sound to say, "the wages of sin is eternal life in the fire." Malachi iv. 1, reads, "For, behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly shall be stubble and the day that cometh shall burn them up saith the Lord of hosts that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. And ye shall tread down the wicked for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this saith the Lord of hosts." For evil doers shall be cut off but those that wait upon the Lord they shall inherit the earth. For yet a little while and the wicked shall not be, yea thou shalt diligently consider his place and it shall not be." Psa. xxxvii. 9, 10. "But the wicked shall perish and the enemies of the Lord shall be as the fat of lambs they shall consume into smoke shall they consume away." Psa. xxxvii. 20. The 28th verse says, "For the Lord loveth judgment and forsaketh not his saints, they are preserved forever but the seed of the wicked shall be cut off." (Not preserved forever). Please read Psalm xxxvii. 35, 36; xcii. 7, 9; and xcvii. 3. "And to you who are troubled rest with us when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, who shall be punished with everlasting destruction (not torture) from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power." 2 Thess. i. 7, 8, 9. The wicked are compared to chaff in Job xxi. 18; Isaiah v. 24; xxxiii. 11, 12; Hosea [illegible] is in his hand and he will thoroughly purge his floor and will gather the wheat into his garner, but the chaff he will burn with fire unquenchable." If a house was burning and they would say the fire was unquenchable, would that prove the house would burn through the everlasting ages? Certainly not. Obadiah verse 16 says, "They shall be as though they had not been." Enough to prove our God is a God of love. Read Isaiah xxvi. 14. "Who is God like unto thee that pardoneth iniquity and passeth by transgression of the remnant of his heritage he retaineth not his anger forever, because he delighteth in mercy." Micah vii. 18. "And every creature which is in heaven and on the earth and under the earth and such as are in the sea and all that are in them heard I saying blessing, and honor, and glory, and power be unto him that sitteth upon the throne and unto the Lamb forever and ever." Rev. v. 13. "For as much then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood he also himself likewise took part of the same, that through death he might destroy him that had power of death that is the devil." Heb. ii. 14. What is said of the righteous dead? Psalms cxv. 17, says, "The dead praise not the Lord neither any that go down into silence." Psa. vi. 5, says for in death there is no remembrance of thee, in the grave who shall give thee thank. Put not your trust in princes nor in the son of man in whom there is no help, his breath goeth forth he returneth to his earth in that very day his thoughts perish." Psa. cxlvi. 3, 4. Eccl. iii. 18 to 21, says, "I said in mine heart concerning the estates of the sons of men that God might manifest them and that they might see that they themselves are beasts, for that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts even one thing befalleth them, as the one dieth, so dieth the other, yea, they have all one breath so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast for all is vanity all go unto one place all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again. Who knoweth the spirit of man that goeth upward and the spirit of the beast that goeth downward to the earth?" Eccl. xii. 7, says, "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." Eccl. ix. 5, 6, says, "The dead know not anything. Also their love, and their hatred, and their envy is now perished." Verse 10 says, "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave whither thou goest." When Jesus died he did not go to heaven, see 81. John xx. 17, "Jesus saith unto her, touch me not for I am not yet ascended to my Father, but go to my brethren and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father, and to my God and your God." David did not go to heaven at death, see Acts ii. 29, 34. "Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David that he is both dead and buried," etc. "For David is not ascended into the heaven, but he saith himself, the Lord said unto my lord sit thou on my right hand," etc. Read Isa. xxxviii. In John iii. 13, it is Jesus that says, "And no man hath ascended up into heaven, but he that came down from heaven even the Son of Man which is in heaven." In John xiii. 33, we read, "Little children, yet a little while I am with you, ye shall seek me and as I said unto the Jews, whither I go ye cannot come so now I say to you." Rom. vi. 23, says, "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life." Now if we already possess eternal life God's gift is of no more value than confederate money. "And this is the promise that he hath promised us eternal life." 1 John ii. 25. "Like David I shall be satisfied," etc. Psa. xvii. 15. But when do we get eternal life? The answer to this question is found in 1 Thess. iv. 13, 14, 15, 16, 17. "But I would not have you to be ignorant brethren concerning them which are asleep that ye sorrow not even as others which have no hope for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him, for this we say unto you by the Word of the Lord that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall [illegible] with the voice of the archangel and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them to meet the Lord in the air and so shall we ever be with the Lord. In St. John v. 25, we read, "Verily, verily I say unto you the hour is coming and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear shall live." "Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel, and ye shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves, and shall put my spirit in you and ye shall live, and I shall place you in your own land (not heaven). Then shall ye know that I the Lord have spoken it and performed it saith the Lord." Eze. xxxvii. 12-14.

Dear Restitution:

I have not written for the paper before, although, I have read your pages many times with interest. I wish to say that I have just closed a very interesting meeting at Pleasant Hill, Wash. Had to close on account of my health. The last night four came forward for baptism. While here we made the acquaintance of several of the readers of your paper and had the pleasure of baptizing E. J. Trammel and wife. This is a good field. I expect to return in June, (D. V.) and hold a meeting of length. There are quite a number here who believe the truth. We organized a band of 37 at Oakdale. We have invitations to visit various points to hold meetings. This gospel of the kingdom of God and kindred truths seems to take better now than in prosperous times. Lest I may weary you I will close. I hope to meet with the redeemed of ages in the coming kingdom.

Your's in Christ.

JAMES A. ORCHARD.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I thought I would tell you through THE RESTITUTION about the interesting and encouraging meetings we have been having. It seems to me that they must be only a foretaste of the meeting in the kingdom of God. Brother Almus Adams has been with us about nine days, preaching to us the blessed truths of God's Word, and pointing out the way of salvation. After he had preached eleven discourses four more desired to connect themselves with the people of God, and were baptized into the all-saving name of Christ. We rejoice to know that, in spite of persecutions and trials the good work still goes on, and the gospel is still the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth.

Yours in the blessed hope.

REXA M. GORDON.

Dear Restitution:

I want to write for THE RESTITUTION. It does me so much good to read the pieces of the dear ones of the faith. It helps us all so much in our every-day life, and cheers us on our pathway. I look for and welcome this dear paper as I would an old friend, and I try to get others to read and take it. I know it has done me so much good. I am striving to walk in the way that he would like to have me. There are so many trials and temptations to bear. I ask an interest in your prayers that I may be more faithful, and be ready to meet Jesus when he comes. I know we all want to meet in that beautiful home where there shall be no death, sorrow or tears, and to be with Jesus forever. O what a glorious time that will be for the ones that are ready. I want to meet you all in that beautiful home. Pray for me.

Your Sister looking for Jesus.

GERTRUDE EYER.

Dear Restitution:

After reading so many good letters from the dear ones of like precious faith, I feel like joining them and adding a word for the Master. I am still trying in my [illegible] way to make my calling and election sure. Although trials, afflictions and disappointments beset my pathway I am striving to be an overcomer that I may win Christ, for failing in this I have lived in vain. I fully believe in the promises made to our father Abraham and his Seed, Christ, and the Church of whom he is the head. He is also head of the new creation and Savior of all those that come to him. We read that all the families and kindreds of the earth are to be blessed through the Seed of Abraham, and this has never been done. In reading Brother and Sister Woodwards report of labor I was made to rejoice greatly to learn of their success in bringing souls to Christ. May the Lord reward them for their labor of love and sacrifice for the gospel. And our dear Brother Joblin how I love to read and meditate upon his good articles. May he be spared until the coming of the Lord. Your Sister in the one hope.

S. V. REGAL.

To the loved ones of like precious faith:

I want to tell you this morning that I abound in love to God and his Word. Being one of the isolated ones, my Bible and THE RESTITUTION are my daily companions.

I had to wipe away the tears this morning when reading in the paper of the hungry crying for bread, while thousands have it stored away and feel no hunger, no need of anything in this life. No wonder we are constrained to cry out, how long, oh Lord, how long? for the earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof and they that dwell therein. He only knoweth the appointed time but until then the enemy of all good will usurp his power in the earth.

Dear brothers and sisters, we need to be watchful that we remain firmly grafted into the vine, that we can receive our daily strength therefrom, for in these last days perilous times will come. Let us hope and pray for a righteous government which shall not be until Jesus reigns upon David's throne, which time seems to be very near, even at the door. For us it is a time of rejoicing, but oh, for the thousands who reject God's plan of salvation, and will not comply with his laws of adoption, but as the Master says, climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber, yea, they rob God and our Savior of the glory they owe unto them and themselves, eternal life. We have those who are dear unto us in the flesh, who reject baptism for the remission of sins and thereby put on Christ. But, listen, dear reader, if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection. Dear brothers and sisters this is what we want to live for. Yes, raised in immortality, born of the spirit, so as to appear and disappear as Jesus did after the resurrection while on earth, as he told Nicodemus, John iii. 8.

Dear reader, have you ever given the life of Jesus any particular thought? How lonely he went about doing good, rejected and disowned yet, loved every one, spent the time teaching and going from place to place weary and tired, and when night came did not have a pillow on which to rest his aching head. We read that he went out and abode in the Mount of Olives. The Son of Man hath no where to lay his head, and yet, heir of all things. The time seems very near when he will not only be heir but will come into possession of all things, and take unto himself his Bride and reign on the earth. Amen and Amen.

Present Age Realism.

Whatever romance and poetry were in olden times associated with pilgrimages to places reputed sacred are rapidly being destroyed by the prosaic spirit of this very progressive and matter-of-fact age. Thus those who with pious intentions now visit the Holy Land are transported by rail from Jaffa to Jerusalem, where a funicular line conveys them to the summit of the Mount of Olives, while comfortable hotels on the American plan are to be found at Bethlehem and on the site of the [illegible] and now a hydraulic elevator has just been established at Marseilles for the purpose of hoisting pilgrims to the much-visited shrine of Notre Dame de la Garde, perched on the summit of the highest rock overlooking the city and bay, and to which sailors and travelers on starting out or upon returning from sea voyages have from time immemorial been want to ascend by the thousands of steep steps, usually on their knees.—New York Tribune.

The lives lived by the Moors are, without perhaps any exception, the most precarious and miserable that can be imagined. The poor man is thrown into prison for sums he never possessed and can never pay; the rich to be squeezed of all he possesses, while those only can hope to escape who are members of families sufficiently powerful to arouse the fears of the local Governor, should he attempt extortion, and not sufficiently powerful to stir up the jealousy and avarice of the Sultan. Even the Governors of the provinces suffer themselves as they make others suffer, for just as they squeeze the agriculturist and the peasant, so are they in turn squeezed by the Sultan and his viziers, and should they fail by constant presents to maintain a good opinion at the court they can expect only imprisonment and often death.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Original.

Paul's Second Epistle to Corinthiol. Chap. 12.

1. It is necessary to boast, though not a profitable thing; and I will come to visions and revelations of the Lord.

2. I know a man in Christ, fourteen years ago, whether in body I know not, or without the body, know not God knoweth that such an one was caught away into a third heaven.

3. And I know such a man, whether in body or without the body God knoweth,

4. That he was caught away unto the Paradise and heard unutterable oracular words, which it is not lawful for man to talk.

5. Concerning such an one I will boast, but concerning myself I will not boast, except in my weaknesses.

6. Though if I should choose to boast myself I should not be without sense, For I should speak truth: but I refrain, lest any one should reason in respect to me above what he seeth me to be or heareth from me.

7. And by reason of the excess of the revelations, that I might not exalt myself there was therefore given unto me a thorn in the flesh, an angel of Satanas to buffet me.

8. Three times I besought the Lord about this, that he might remove it from me.

9. And he said unto me, My grace sufficeth thee, for the ability is being perfected in weakness, most gladly then will I boast in my weakness, that the ability of the Christ may tabernacle over me.

10. Therefore am I satisfied in weaknesses, in contumptions, in treatment, in necessities, in persecutions, in straits for Christ's sake; for whenever I am weak, then am I enabled.

11 I have become lacking in good sense; ye have compelled me. For I ought to have been commended by you; for I have proved myself inferior in no respect to those who are par-excellence apostles, even though I am nothing.

12. The signs of the apostle have been wrought out in your midst in patient-endurance and with signs and prodigies and works of ability.

13. For in what respect have ye been belittled more than the rest of the churches, except in that I myself have not been burdensome to you. May ye have been gracious to me for this wrong-doing.

14. Lo, this third time am I holding myself in readiness to come unto you, and I shall not be burdensome; for I am not seeking yours but you. For the children ought not to treasure up for the parents, but the parents for the children:

15. Most gladly will I spend and be spent for your souls. If I love you exceedingly am I loved the less?

16. But be it so, I have not burdened you; but being crafty I have taken you with deceit.

17. Have I over-reached you through any one of those whom I have sent unto you?

18. I exhorted Titus and I sent the brother along with him. Did Titus over-reach you at all? Have we not walked in the same spirit, in the same footsteps?

19. Again think ye that we are defending ourselves to you? In the sight of God in Christ are we talking; and the things (said) are all for your edification.

20. For I fear lest somehow when I shall have come, I may not find you such as I desire, and that I myself may not have been found also such as ye desire; lest somehow there may be strifes, envy, passions, contentions, contradictions, whisperings, puffed-up feelings, seditions;

21. Lest when I shall have come again my God may humble in relation to you, and I may have to sorrow for many of those who have previously sinned and who have not repented of their uncleanness and fornication, and loose conduct which they have practiced.

CHAP. 13.

1. This third time am I coming unto you. At the mouth of two witnesses and three persons will every spoken word have been established.

2. I have previously said and I am saying beforehand, as when present the second time, and though absent now, to those who have previously sinned, and to all the rest, that if I shall have come back, I shall not spare.

3. Since ye seek proof of the Christ talking in me, who is not weak toward you, but is showing ability in you

4. For though he was crucified on account of weakness, yet he liveth on account of God's ability. Yea we ourselves are weak in him, but we live along with him on account of God's ability

5. Try yourselves, whether ye are in the faith, prove your own selves, or do ye not fully know your own selves that Jesus Christ is in you? Unless indeed ye are rejected ones.

6. And I hope that we shall know that we are not rejected ones.

7. And we pray God that ye may not commit any thing evil, not that we may appear approved, but that ye may do that which is good, even though we be as rejected ones.

8. For we are not entitled to [illegible] against the truth, but for the truth.

9. For we rejoice when we are weak, and we are enabled; and this we are praying for, namely for your perfecting.

10. For this reason the absent [illegible] that I, when present, may not use severity according to the authority which the Lord hath given me for building up and not for tearing down.

11. As for the rest, brethren, farewell; train yourselves, comfort yourselves, think the same thing, be at peace and the God of the love and peace will be with you.

12. Greet one another with a sanctified token of friendship; all the saints greet you.

13. The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ and the love of God the common participation of partnership in the sanctified spirit be with you all.

Poetry.

Can it Be?

Can it be that I rose in the morning
And took up the work of the day,
With no reverence and no reverse solemnity
Without kneeling a moment to pray?
Can it be that I took of life's blessing
With no thought of my God's loving care
That the day is about me,
Without even one moment of prayer?

Can it be that at noontide, when resting
From the burden and heat of the day
I stood, shady place by the way-side,
Even there I forgot, too, to pray?
And at night, when my day's work was ended,
As I rested from toil and from care,
That I never once turned my face upward
To commune with my Father in prayer.

Now, maybe the day seemed so lengthened,
And it burdens so heavy to bear,
And I—impatient and fretful
When I offered not one word of prayer,
God pity the soul that is living
So far from his Father away,
That in all of life's cares and its blessings
He never once thinketh to pray.

The Doctrine of Atonement or Reconciliation.

"And not only so, but we also joy in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom we have now received the atonement." Rom. v. 11.

The word atonement occurs only once in the New Testament, as it reads in the above passage, and there it ought to be translated by the word Reconciliation, as in the margin. The old English sense of at-one-ment means the reconciliation of two parties who have been at variance. In the Old Testament, chiefly in connection with the law, the word atonement is of frequent occurrence. Two Hebrew words kipporim, a covering, and kaphar, to cover are used, and translated atonement. The cover of the Ark of the Covenant, called the mercy-seat, is thus designated. Thus the sense of the word atonement is expressed by covering—of sins or of things. The atonements of the law were made for sins of people, and priests, for houses, tabernacle, altar, etc., and were effected by blood, mercy, prayer, incense, slaying sinners, etc. Lev. iv. 20; xvi. 6, 16, 20, 30; xiv. 53; Exod. xxix. 33, 36, 37; xxx. 10, 12-16; Num. xxxi. 50; Lev. i. 4; Exod. xxxii. 30-33; Num. xvi. 46, 47; xxv. 8, 11-13; Lev. xvi. 10, 21. If the reader will take the trouble to read these references he will be amply repaid.

But our present design is to consider more especially the meaning of At-one-ment or Reconciliation as found in the New Testament. The word suggests that parties who have been at variance are at-one again, are reconciled, and at peace with each other. In the light imparted by Divine revelation let us inquire as to the parties at variance and separated from one another, the cause of this estrangement, and the means by which reconciliation must be effected.

1. The parties at variance. Who are they? The answer is—the Creator and the creature; the righteous God and sinful man. As far as the ever-blessed God is concerned, he has no enmity in his nature, but is "merciful and gracious, long-suffering, and abundant in goodness and truth." Exod. xxx. 6. His mercy endureth for ever—he changes not. Still he "will not justify the wicked;" but "the soul that sinneth, it shall die." Yet "the Lord is righteous in all his ways, and holy in all his works; and true and righteous are all his judgments." This being God's character, how is it with man? "God made man upright"—"in the image and glory of God," but he has defaced that likeness, both morally, mentally, and physically. Our first parents broke the law of their Creator in Eden, and in consequence was expelled therefrom. Gen. ii. 15-17; iii. 14-19, 22-24. The apostle Paul writes—"by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned:" (Rom. v. 12); and "all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God." Rom. iii. 23, 10-12; Psa. xiv. 1-3. Man is in a state of alienation and rebellion against God. The apostle describes the Gentiles as walking "in the vanity of their mind, having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the hardness of their hearts." Eph. iv. 18. This produces enmity and wicked works. These works are enumerated in Rom. i. 28-31; Gal. v. 19-21; and all persons who do such things are said to be "worthy of death;" in fact, are under sentence of death. "The wages of sin is death;" and "because of these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience." Again, we read that to be "carnally-minded is death"—that "sin when it is finished brings forth death"—and "the end of these things is death." Such is the uniform teaching of the Bible. Man is at enmity with God, and is in danger of perishing, unless a reconciliation can be effected.

2. The cause of this estrangement. It has already been mentioned that sin is the disturbing and separating element. The prophet Isaiah says "Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear. But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear." Isa. lix. 1, 2. It is man who has made himself God's enemy by wicked works. Col. i. 21. God has not veiled his face with wrath, because of offended justice, as some theologians teach; but he is pitiful and kind, unchangeable in mercy, and waits to be gracious. Hear his voice through the prophet—"Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord God; and not that he should return from his ways, and live?" Ezek. xviii. 23; xxxiii. 11. "The Lord is long-suffering to usward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." 2 Pet. iii. 9. It is sinful man that is at fault, and is in rebellion against God. And, we say with the apostle, "O man, despisest thou the riches of his goodness and forbearance and long-suffering; not knowing that the goodness of God leadeth thee to repentance?" Rom. ii. 4. The character of God, the Father, is beautifully set forth by Jesus in his parable of the prodigal son, as given in Luke xv. The father is full of pity and compassion to the returning and repentant prodigal. He hastes to meet him, and receives lovingly his lost son. He has no reproaches for him, but a hearty and royal welcome, giving him the best his house can afford. This parable illustrates God's kindly attitude, and forgiving love towards all repentant sinners. While the sinner is rebellious, and wanders away from God, there can be no reconciliation. The way is open for his return, and the Lord waits to be gracious. "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." Isa. lv. 7. On the part of the sinner it is unbelief, stubbornness, hardness of heart, ignorance, and love of sin, that estranges from God. Before a reconciliation can take place, all these separating influences must be removed, and the sinner submit to the terms proposed by his offended Creator.

3. The Reconciliation—how effected.

As soon as man had sinned, an intimation was given that the tempter, the cause of man's disobedience to Divine law, would be destroyed by the Seed of the Woman, at some future time. Gen. iii. 15. And from the reference we have in Heb. xi. 4, to Abel's sacrifice of the firstlings of his flock being more acceptable than Cain's offering of the fruit of the ground, as related in Gen. iv., we properly infer that the death of an animal was required, and accepted by Jehovah, if offered in obedience to his law, as an atonement for sin. Abel's innocent lamb was typical of the sinless lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world. And so it may be said of all the lambs and animals offered in sacrifice under the law, and according to the law. Still it was impossible for animal blood to take away sins. Heb. x. 4. If those sacrifices which they offered continually could have made the comers thereunto perfect, would they not then have ceased to be offered? because that the worshippers once purged should have had no more consciousness of sins. Heb. x. 1, 2. In the offering of an animal sacrifice for sin, the shedding of blood was a confession of the sinner's mortality, and of the sin which causes death. This was a sign of repentance, and of obedience to God's law, and therefore was a means of obtaining pardon. See Lev. v. 1-6, 16; vi. 1-7. But the law made nothing perfect—its sacrifices which were offered daily and yearly, did not cleanse the conscience—and its priests were also imperfect, and were removed for another priest, of the order of Melchisedec, the Christ, the Son of God. This high priest, though a Son, yet learned obedience by the things which he suffered; and being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." Heb. v. 8, 9. This Captain of salvation, and high priest over the house of God, was perfected through sufferings, and can be touched with a feeling for our infirmities, being tried like us, yet did not sin. Heb. iv. 14-16; v. 8-10.

According to the intimations, promises, prophecies, types and shadows of former ages, the Apostle Paul writes, "When the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, born of a woman born under the law, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." Gal. iv. 4, 5. "The Word became flesh, and dwelt among us." John i. 14; "that holy thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God." Luke i. 35; "made of the seed of David, according to the flesh." Rom. i. 3; 2 Tim. ii. 8; Acts ii. 30; Rev. xxii. 16. This born Son of God, was divinely named Jesus—this Jesus, when thirty years of age was immersed by John in the Jordan, and on coming up out of the water, the Father anointed him with the Holy Spirit, and acknowledged him as his beloved Son. Matt. iii. 13-17; Luke iii. 22, 23; iv. 18, 19; Acts iv. 27; x. 38. This beloved Son of God, Jesus Anointed, was sent to preach the kingdom of God to the lost sheep of the house of Israel. Luke iv. 43; Matt. x. 5, 6; xv. 24. As the heir to the inheritance, he was sent to receive the rental or fruits thereof. Matt. xxi. 33-46. Jesus, the Christ, was the legal heir to the throne and kingdom of David, and "the King of Israel," and "King of the Jews." Luke i. 32, 33; John i. 49; xii. 13; xviii. 36, 37; Acts ii. 30. This was the good confession which he made before Pontius Pilate, and for which he was crucified. 1 Tim. vi. 13. His enemies, the priests, said it was blasphemy for him to claim to be God's Son, and therefore he ought to die. John xix. 6, 7; Matt. xxvi. 63-66. The law condemned blasphemers to be stoned to death. Lev. xxiv. 16. But as the Romans had taken the power of inflicting death from them, they handed Jesus over to Pilate on the charge of treason, so that he might suffer death according to the Roman law, viz., by crucifixion. Jesus had foretold that the chief priests and scribes would condemn him to death, and deliver him to the Gentiles to mock, scourge and crucify. Matt. xx. 17-19; Luke xviii. 31-34.

The apostles did not understand their Master when he talked with them about his death and resurrection. At one time Peter began to rebuke Jesus for speaking of these things, saying, "Be it far from thee, Lord; this shall not be unto thee." But he was sharply reproved for his unwise rebuke. Matt. xvi. 21-23. At another time, when passing through Galilee, Jesus spoke to his disciples about his death and resurrection. "But they understood not." Mark ix. 30-32; Matt. xvii. 22, 23. And even after his death and resurrection he censured them for their unbelief. (Mark xvi. 14;) and to two disciples traveling to Emmaus, he said, "O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken: ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?" Luke xxiv. 25-27, 44-48. Jesus showed the apostles that the prophets "testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow." 1 Pet. i. 11; Psa. xxii. 6-8, 14-19; Isa. liii. And then commissioned them to go and preach the gospel to every creature—to preach repentance and remission of sins in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. Mark xvi. 15, 16; Luke xxiv. 47. But they were to wait in Jerusalem until the Holy Spirit should come upon them. Acts i. 4, 8. This came on the day of Pentecost, and then they were baptized with the Holy Spirit, and were able to speak the Word of the Lord with power. Acts ii.

The Apostle Paul, speaking of himself and fellow apostles, to whom "the Word of the truth of the gospel" was entrusted, says, "that God who has reconciled us to himself through Jesus Christ, has given to us the ministry of the reconciliation; namely, that God was by Christ reconciling the world to himself, not counting to them their offences; and has deposited with us the Word of the reconciliation. On behalf of Christ, therefore, we are ambassadors; as if God were inviting through us, we entreat, on behalf of Christ,—be you reconciled to God! For him who knew no sin, he made a sin-offering on our behalf, that we might become God's righteousness in him." 2 Cor. v. 18-21. The sinless Christ having made peace through the blood of the cross, has made it possible to reconcile both Jew and Gentile unto God in one body, preaching peace to those afar off, (the Gentiles,) and to those that are nigh, (the Jews) Eph. ii. 13-17. The gospel of peace was first preached to the children of Israel by Jesus Christ, when he published the glad tidings of the kingdom of God in Judea and Galilee, (Acts x. 36-38; Matt. iv. 23;) calling upon the people to "repent, and believe the gospel." Mark i. 15. At the close of his ministry, he said, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations." Matt. xxiv. 14. Then when the hour came for the Good Shepherd to give his life for the sheep—"to give himself a ransom for all," John x. 11, 15; Matt. xx. 28; 1 Tim. ii. 6; the sacrifice was made, and "propitiation was made for the sins of the people. Heb. ii. 17; 1 John ii. 2. God accepted the sacrifice by raising his Son Jesus from the dead, giving him immortality and making him Lord over all. Then "the gospel of salvation"—"the word of reconciliation," was committed to the apostles, with the conditions on which sinners can be saved or become reconciled to God. They are the only authorized ambassadors of Christ. They alone can truly answer the question, "what must I do to be saved?" as Peter did to the Jews at Pentecost, (Acts ii. 38,) and Paul to the jailor at Philippi, (xvi. 31, 32.) None can truthfully say that these men did not preach the gospel, or teach correctly "the way of salvation." Philip also preached Christ to the Samaritans; and those who heard him and saw the miracles he did, gave heed to his Word; for we read that "when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." Acts viii. 5, 6, 12. There is only "one Lord, one faith, one baptism." Eph. iv. 5. The one Lord, is the crucified, risen, and exalted Jesus, in whom alone is salvation; for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Acts iv. 12; 1 Tim. ii. 5-7. The one faith is the one gospel which the one Lord commanded his apostles to preach to all nations for obedience of faith; Rom. i. 5; xvi. 26; "the faith once delivered to the saints," Jude iii. that gospel which Paul preached for salvation at Rome, and everywhere. Rom. i. 15, 16; Acts xxviii. 22, 31. The one baptism is an immersion in water of a penitent believer in the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins. Acts ii. 38; x. 43, 47, 48; viii. 30, 38, 39; xxii. 10, 16, etc.

If we would "be reconciled to God" we must receive "the Word of reconciliation" brought to us by Christ's ambassadors the apostles—they alone can dictate the terms of peace. The Anointed Jesus, the men, appointed these men to offer pardon to all men in his name. The terms are as above stated; viz. A belief in Christ and the kingdom—sincere repentance, or ceasing to do evil, and learning to do well—and being immersed into his name for the remission of sins. Those who thus die to sin, and rise to walk in a new life, become new creatures in Christ—are saved, reconciled, have peace with God, being justified by faith, and are sanctified. "Therefore, there is now no condemnation to them who are in the Anointed Jesus." Such are adopted children of God, Gal. iii. 26, 27; iv. 4-7; therefore heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ, Rom. viii. 17; heirs of eternal life, Titus i. 2; iii. 7; 1 Pet. iii. 7; heirs of salvation, Heb. i. 14; heirs of the kingdom, James ii. 5.

In conclusion, dear reader, how thankful to God we ought to be for his mercy, as manifested toward a world of sinners, condemned to death, in giving his only begotten Son that we might not perish, but have everlasting life through him. John iii. 14-17; Rom. v. 8-11; 1 John iv. 9, 10. And not only the Father, but the Son also loved us, and "gave himself for our sins, that he might deliver us from this present evil world, Gal. i. 4; and "gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity." Titus ii. 14; etc., etc. Let us accept God's proffered mercy, and be reconciled to him by receiving the gospel, and becoming obedient to its requirements, that all of its promised blessings may be ours. Amen.

B. WILSON.

Fulfillment of Scripture.

"Today hath this Scripture been fulfilled in your ears." Luke iv. 21. R. V.

With one point excepted the prophecy of James v. is being fulfilled today under our own eyes.

1. Gold is hoarded (here for preservation or policy, in the Old World for war purposes) and is cankering (or corroding) in bank vaults.

2. The cry of the laborer is heard throughout the world because his hire is kept back by fraud, on pretence of hard times or scarcity of money.

3. The rich are living in luxury (wantonness) and delicately they have nourished their hearts in a day of slaughter, i. e. of the poor through want of the necessaries of life, want of proper medical care and sanitary provision, and other causes consequent on privation.

4. The howlings of the rich have not yet commenced, for their miseries are not yet come upon them (v. 1) and soon, for in verse 8 we are told, "the coming of the Lord draweth nigh," or as the Greek gives it "the (parousia) presence of the Lord (eyyike) has approached, that is to say when these predictions are fulfilled.

5. Under these circumstances Christians are warned to be patient, and to stablish their hearts (i. e. remain firm) "unto the coming of the Lord," and to take example by the prophets and Job who were faithful under affliction and suffering. We may note two facts here—the righteous will share to some extent in this suffering, and that this hoarding of treasure (which causes the present distress) is "in the "last days"—against the time of wars culminating in Armageddon, and the coming of the Lord "which is at hand."

Again Isaiah viii. Confederation is the order of the day. The nations of the world are "girding" (or arming) and "banding themselves" by "alliances" and "taking counsel" together (against nihilism, socialism and anarchism) yet it shall "come to nought" and they "shall be broken in pieces." The people are "associating" in societies, lodges, brotherhoods, trusts and combinations as never before, it is a day of trusts and secret societies, but the Lord's people are told, "Say ye not" a confederacy "to all them to whom this people shall say a confederacy,"—in plain language they are forbidden to join all such combinations because "they are not of the Lord," but God is with them and will protect all who rely on him alone, and they are not to fear for the future.

"But the foolish pass on and are punished," for "they shall pass through it" (the troublous times) "hardly bestead and hungry," and "shall fret themselves and curse their King and their God (the anti-christ) and look upward" for help. "And they shall look unto the earth" (the world) and behold trouble and darkness, dimness of anguish; and they shall be driven to darkness." Just now the world seems to be tottering on the very brink of this abyss.

2 Timothy iii. gives further details of these "last days" that accord with present experience. Men are described as selfish, covetous boasters, proud, etc. Our daily press is sufficient evidence of this. The papers strive to out-vie each other in self-praise and fulsome laudation of the energy, pluck, push, smartness, strength, wisdom, wealth, and so-called "braininess" of themselves, popular men, their own particular city and their own citizens generally. To hear them one would suppose this country and its vast resources was the result of their own work and that God had nothing to do with it. Men seem to have lost their bends in self-adulation, and their boastings have become ludicrous and drawn the sneers and ridicule of the world. Yet Herod was smitten "because he gave not God the glory."

Our Christians also have a form of godliness without the power. This is evident and needs no comment. "The law is slacked and judgment doth never go forth, for the wicked doth compass about the righteous, therefore wrong judgment proceedeth." A better description of our courts could hardly be given in so small a compass. In chapter 2, the rich are described as proud, having a selfish greed that can never be satisfied, "that gathereth unto him all nations and all people," (by emigration to keep down wages), "Neither keepeth he at home." The prophecy is exact in describing affairs in this country. The oppressed taunts them with coming woe and ask derisively how long this state of affairs can continue, and we are told that "they will rise up suddenly that shall bite thee (the oppressor) and awake (to vengeance) that shall vex thee and thou shalt be poor booties unto them." That is robbery accompanied by violence. This assures a violent termination of our chronic labor troubles. "The vision is for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak and not lie, though it tarry, wait for it, because it will surely come, it will not tarry," i. e. delay after the signs come to pass.

The Oxey movement followed by what the military chiefs styled "armed rebellion against the government" is but a shadow of coming events. It is now as in the days of Noah, the earth is filled with violence, the rich feasting and scoffing at all warning; but "they (the destroyers) shall all come for violence, and they shall scoff at the kings, and the princes shall be a scorn unto them, they shall deride every stronghold, for they shall heap dust (with dynamite) and take it." Habbakuk i. 10. "Then shall his mind change, (the anarchist) and he shall pass over and offend imparting this his power unto his God" (antichrist). Much like French in the days of the Revolution.

Our Lord's account in Matthew is a summary of these prophecies, and he tells us "except these should be shortened (for the sake of the elect who will share in the trouble)." This points to something terrible beyond all man's former experience, and justifies the worst forebodings of our statesmen.

In an article in THE RESTITUTION Sept. 13, 1893, the writer stated his belief that China, Japan and the far countries were reserved against the last days. Since then Japan has become a power, and has been officially recognized as a civilized nation. Events move quickly in these times. The Holy Land is waking from the torpor of centuries. India is a giant renewed with wisdom and strength. China no doubt will profit by her lesson. These countries will not become Christianized, but will profit by civilization its knowledge and appliances, and will turn these weapons against Christianity, law and order. That is how Rome fell, enervated by self-conceit, pride, luxury and wealth. There is nothing new under the sun.

Before the kingdoms of the Old World will fall before anarchy. War, pestilence and famine will follow. "Before him (Christ Conqueror) went the pestilence, and burning coals went forth at his feet." Habakuk iii. Hordes from the North under or confederated with Gog (Russia) will overrun Europe, weakened by disorder and violence. Our own country will be rent by civil war, complicated by anarchy and religious dissensions. We shall have to destroy the vipers we have warmed on our hearth. All these wars will be of an exterminating character, probably with no quarter for man, woman or child. "There will be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time," and the slain of the Lord will be from one end of the earth even unto the other end thereof. Apparently but few will eventually escape. Russia (Gog) stands for despotism, heathenism and ignorance; the old Roman Kingdom for the Scarlet Woman, the False Prophet; atheism, anarchy and the Lawless One; the Anglo-Saxon race for civilization, Christianity, law and order. The opening scenes of the coming struggle will end in sharply defining the outlines of each, by annihilation of the defeated. The closing scene will show the Anglo-Saxon race and the Jews fighting for self-preservation at Armageddon. H. T. HAINES.

The Restitution.

THE RESURRECTION of Jesus the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the established order of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immediate translation of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Gospel in Verse.

"Thus said my God to Abraham,
'Blessing, I thee will bless.
And multiply thy seed, and then
The land thou shalt possess.
And not alone shalt thou be blessed,
A blessing thou shalt be;
For all the nations of the world
Shall find their help from thee.
A seed of promise shall be born,
And peoples shall rejoice
To see the glorious light he shed,
To hear his loving voice."
O God how sweet to have thy smile,
And words of good from thee;
But add this other joy, I pray,
A blessing let me be."

WHEN John sums up the highest prospects of believers, he makes their fullest satisfaction and rapture depend on seeing Jesus as he is.

OLSHAUSEN in his comments on 1 Cor. xv. 19, "If in this life only we have hope in Christ," says the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and the name are alike unknown to the entire Bible."

"PRAYER that is not based on God's promises and offered in the name of Jesus is like the clicking of a telegraphic instrument that is unattached to the transmitting wire. The sound is all right and the petition may be understood on earth, but it will not be transmitted to heaven."

WE quote the following paragraph from the Messenger and commend it to the attention of young people especially:—"Keep out of debt. Avoid it as you would war, pestilence and famine. Shun it as you would the devil. Hate it with a perfect hatred. Abhor it with an entire and absolute abhorrence. Do anything that is honest and useful rather than run in debt. Do ion. Pass it by as you would a leper. Yes; if you desire to live a happy and contented life, keep out of debt."

APRIL the 14th was another day of rejoicing to the Church of God, in Cleveland; the occasion being the addition of another obedient one to the Body of Christ. After many months of investigation and conflict, Sister Silzenstock, formerly a Methodist, put on the sin-covering name. We thank God and resolve to labor on. May the babe in Christ feed on the sincere milk of the Word and grow strong enough speedily to take more substantial aliment and grow up into Christ her living head, and finally shine in the Great Salvation.

IT has been said that Christians are epistles to be read. The world reads them all. How important that this living gospel which walks and trades and stirs about in public places should be correctly printed? Yet how many of these living epistles have been printed from battered type and mixed fonts, on spotted paper and in dim ink. But after all, Christianity is an upright, open-eyed, warm-handed, advancing thing, not the flat flimsiness of a mere programme, to put away on the shelf for safe keeping; it is always alive, alert and growing; it is not dead Latin, but vital mother tongue; it is not steepled in church, cadenced in ritual, or robed at the altar but hearted in living people, and radiated in work-day duties."

WE think the following stray lines will strike a sympathetic chord in every believer's heart, and therefore transcribe them.

HYMN OF THE LAST DAYS.

Will thou be long, Lord Jesus?
Two thousand silent years
Have nearly closed upon us,
Full-filled with blood and tears.
We strain our aching eyelids
To gaze into the night;
And yet no sign of advent,
No dawning of the light.

Will thou be long, Lord Jesus?
The summers come and go—
Days busy, nights of sorrow,
Like rivers, on they flow.
Sometimes, when suns are golden,
We slack to watch and pray,
But when the night falls round us,
We weary for the day.

Will thou be long, Lord Jesus?
The "little while" so long!
The bitter tongue of mourning,
The cruel tide of wrong.
Our sins and fierce temptations—
All weigh our souls with care;
Wilt thou be long in coming
And making all things fair?

Will thou be long, Lord Jesus?
Master, we would see thee!
The night is very strong,
And very weary we:
We yearn to hear thine accents—
"Peace! Fear not, it is I;"
We long to see thee coming
Before we faint and die.

Wilt thou be long, Lord Jesus?
Thy home is very fair
To hearts disheartened, spirits
High mustering in despair.
Will thou be long, Lord Jesus?
Our cry is low, or we;
Our expectation, painful;
Our longing, agony.

Lord, thou art very patient,
And all impatience we;
Lord, thou art very loving,
And cold our altars be;
Dear will not leave unfathered
One of thy foreknown bride;
We wait, then, the Omega
Thine advent to decide.

A Rift in the Clouds.

For a number of days past a "Bible Study Conference" has been in session at the Second Presbyterian Church in Cleveland. On the 12th inst., we were surprised and gratified to learn by the daily papers that the Rev. E. F. Strueter, Ph. D. who has been working among the Jews in New York City for the last year came out clear and strong in advocacy of the literal interpretation of prophecy, and the physical return of Christ to the physical Jerusalem, for the establishment of an everlasting kingdom. When questioned as to what extent his interpretation was accepted by others, he said he thought all the company present at the conference believed as he did. He showed clearly that all the purpose of God in reference to the Jewish nation could not possibly be fulfilled at the first coming of Christ, and hence there must be a second.

It looks very much as if intercourse with devout Jews had completely changed his views about the kingdom of God, because the papers say he made suggestions of missionary work among Jews,—pointing out what course must be pursued to be successful, and what methods would prove entirely ineffectual.

It is refreshing to see a rift in the theological cloud, may it grow wider and wider so that we may gain the attention to this subject, of honest-hearted religionists.

Another Blind Leader.

THE Rev. (?) Williard Scott, pastor of the South Congregational Church of Chicago, says, "I understand that the future life will be in a real sense the continuance of this, in which we shall carry forward to fuller lengths what we have here begun. I do not understand that its form and place are distinctly revealed, or that they are important. The Gospel of Jesus Christ lays great emphasis on the present. Of that it is constantly speaking, while the future life it considers at the resultant of this. Death is not a magician who does surprising or inconsistent things. It changes the scene, and in some respects the form of life, but not its characters. The main things remain as they were..... He who loves light here will inherit light there; while he who loves darkness rather than light now, shall not see light hereafter. This seems to be revealed in the constitutions of nature and of man, and in the Word of God, and to be reasonable."

The above is no improvement on what has gone before. He has no testimony to offer. He understands so and so, especially that we shall carry forward to fuller lengths what we have here begun. Without any information as to form, place or environment, he is certainly not qualified to say that what is begun here shall be carried to fuller lengths in the future, unless God has said so.

He does not understand that the form and place are distinctly revealed, or that they are important. Then, we ask, what motive to faith and obedience does God offer? Does he simply say, If you will do well I will give you something? And is it this indefinite something that Peter calls exceeding great and precious promises? Could the gentleman apply the phrase, exceeding great and precious promises to something not distinctly revealed, and that he has to guess at and reason out? What is his hope? And why does he hope for it?

The words "form of life" sound as if he was writing of something he was ignorant of. "Form of life." We wonder if the words, "The Gift of God is Eternal Life" would help him any? Why does the poor man say the form and place are not distinctly revealed? Does not John distinctly say the life was manifested, and distinctly say he will bear witness, and show unto you that Eternal Life which was with the Father? Does the gentleman's creed lead him to discredit John's testimony who says he has seen and heard what he testifies to? Why will he not take the resurrected Jesus as a specimen of the future life for the saints. It says they shall be raised by his life. It says he is their life. That life is to be enjoyed in the kingdom of God on earth.

Follow Christ.

"That is what is expected of us brethren and sisters! "He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life," and following him, we have what the apostle terms "the Spirit of Christ," and to such it is said, "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me, and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him and manifest myself to him." There is a world of suggestion here. Doing, we see, and as we keep on doing, we are the more certain that we see and the more perfectly understand. We know what the will of the Lord is, and in doing it faithfully we become strong men in Christ Jesus, being renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created us; freed from false thoughts, base passions, wrong aims, unsan deeds, and the spirit of the old man of the flesh. In doing we attain to the highest position to which as men we can aspire, for the inner man fashioned after the similitude of Christ is developed in us. We [illegible] aspirations, and of the wellings up of eternal life, and feeling thus we act as becometh saints. If we grasp the full significance of our high calling,—if we fully realize that we are the sons of God, the sense of that glorious fact must fill us in every faculty. God is, in a word, immanent, in us, and he reveals himself as Father and Redeemer, so that we are sure of him and his saving work in us, and produces in us the assurance of faith, and we are persuaded that neither death, nor life, norangels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

But this involves a good deal. This persuasion is the outcome of a living, active, firm faith in God, and the mind of Christ dwelling in us richly. That is what causes the in-flow of the pure God idea. Christ is the center, the crown, the Alpha and Omega of God's purpose in human history. But faith of this sort will only grow as it is used; and assurance only increases as we experience the divine love and care; and here is the man Christ Jesus, the Desire of all nations, the Goal of all the centuries, the Light of life and immortality, and the Hope and Assurance of glory. Let us take his life as the ideal of living and willing, and his character as the pattern of our lives; and as we see all the lines of history converging towards him, let us believe and live,—and living let us adore, and obeying let us enjoy sweet communion with the Father of mercies.

What if we cannot compass the Eternal! That is no hindrance to our enjoyment of him through Christ. We are not required to understand all mysteries, but we do need to follow on to know God as he is revealed in Christ. This knowledge is sufficient for our spiritual wants. It causes new hopes to spring in the breast, implants higher aims within us, inspires us to holier and loftier thoughts and actions and makes us long for that closer spiritual union with the Father that is held out to us in the gospel, when we shall delight forevermore in the effulgent glory of his presence.

The truth demands a constant and personal devotion to his precepts and discipline. If we yield this then God will write his law in our inward parts, incorporate it with the very structure of our being by the operation of the Spirit of Christ upon our hearts and minds. Having been weaned from the rudiments of the world, and became new men in Christ Jesus men after a divine pattern, every honest effort to imitate our great Exampler brings us nearer and nearer to him, and Christ and God in him nearer to us until we feel, as the apostle puts it, that we have our fruit unto holiness and in the end everlasting life.

Brothers and Sisters, what do we think of Christ? Do we think enough of him to emulate his firm resolve, his earnest purpose, his absolute faith? Can we say with the Psalmist, "I will love thee Oh, Lord my strength? "If so we have drunk deep of the wells of salvation, and our path is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. Meanwhile, beloved, we must possess our souls in patience till the dawn of the morning light when our thirst shall be satisfied with the sight of Jesus as he is."

TEMPERANCE.

The Two Workmen.

Two workers in one field
Toiled on from day to day;
Both had the same hard labor,
Both had the same small pay.
Both had the same sky above,
The same green earth below,
One soul was full of love,
The other full of woe.

One had a flower-clad cot
Beside a merry rill,
Wife and children near the spot
Made it sweeter, fairer still.
One a wretched hovel had,
Filled through, dirt and din
No wonder he seemed mad,
Wife and children starved within.

Still they worked in the same field,
Toiling on from day to day;
Both had the same hard labor,
Both had the same small pay;
But they worked not with one will,
The reason let me tell:
In the one drank at the rill,
The other [illegible]

The Story of Intemperance.

A few years ago a noted wild-beast trainer gave a performance with his pets in one of the leading London theaters. He took the lions, tigers, leopards and hyenas through their part of the entertainment, awing the audience by his wonderful nerve and control over them. As a closing act to the performance, he was to introduce an enormous boa-constrictor, thirty-five feet long. He bought it when it was only two or three days old, and for twenty-five years he had handled it daily, so that it was considered perfectly harmless and completely under his control. He had seen it grow from a tiny reptile, which he often carried in his bosom, into a fearful monster.

The curtain rose on an Indian woodland scene. The weird strains of an Oriental band steal through trees. A rustling noise is heard, and a huge serpent is seen winding its way through the undergrowth. It stops. Its head is erect. Its bright eyes sparkle. Its whole body seems animated. A man emerges from the heavy foliage, and their eyes meet. The serpent quails before the man—man is victor. The serpent is under control of a master. Under his guidance and direction it performs a series of frightful feats. At a signal from the man it slowly approaches him, and begins to coil its heavy folds around him. Higher and higher they rise until man and serpent seem blended into one. Its hideous head is reared aloft above the mass. The man gives a little scream, and the audience unite in a thunderous burst of applause, but it freezes on their lips. The trainer's scream was a wail of death agony. Those cold, slimy folds had embraced him for the last time. They had crushed the life out of him, and the horror-stricken audience heard bone after bone crack, as those powerful folds tighten upon him. Man's plaything had become his master. His slave for twenty-five years had now enslaved him.

In this horrible incident is portrayed the whole story of intemperance. The man who has taken the first glass of intoxicating liquor has the boa of intemperance in his bosom. If he throttles the monster now, it is easily done. But if he permits it to live, feeds and nourishes it, he may control it for even twenty-five years, but it is continually growing, and some day its soul-destroying folds will encircle him. The unchangeable decree of Almighty God is, that "no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God."—Contributor.

Wasted Money.

"Boy at head of class, what are we paying for liquor as a nation?"

"Nine hundred million dollars annually."

"Step to the blackboard, my boy. First, take a rule and measure this silver dollar. How thick is it?"

"Nearly an eighth of an inch."

"Well, sir, how many of them can you pile in an inch?"

"Between eight and nine."

"Give it the benefit of a doubt and call it nine. How many inches would it require to pile up these [illegible]?"

"One hundred million inches."

"How many feet would that be?"

"Eight million three hundred and thirty-three thousand three hundred and thirty-three feet."

"How many rods is that?"

"Five hundred and five thousand and fifty rods."

"How many miles is that?"

"One thousand five hundred and seventy-eight miles."

"Miles of what?"

"One thousand five hundred and seventy-eight miles of silver dollars laid down, packed closely together, our national liquor bill would make."

Now add the $[illegible],000,000 we are paying for tobacco annually, to the liquor miles of silver dollars, which is two-thirds as much, or 1,052, and we have 2,632 miles of silver money packed closely together for our nation's one year's grog and tobacco bill. Let these same silver dollars be laid flat, touching edge to edge, and they would make a continuous ring around the earth.

Reader if you need facts on this question, nail this to a post and read it occasionally. It would scoop shovels to throw away money as fast as we are wasting it for grog and tobacco.—Anti-Tobacco Gem.

Is There Anything in Christianity?

This sometimes falls on our ears and perhaps comes from one that has labored for a number of years. It is a discouraging remark, especially to the young beginner. Oh thou of little faith, have you enough to save you? when the thick clouds of adversity roll up before you, have you the firmness to stand? Our faith is to be tested. We say we are looking for it, then why shrink from it when it comes? True faith cannot be shaken by every whirlwind. Let us examine ourselves and see whether we be of the true faith. To say we believe God's Word and not have our actions correspond shows our faith is weak. This has always been a great mystery to me, to think of the grand reward that is promised the overcomer, why we do not put forth a greater effort to overcome? I verily believe that it is owing to lack of faith, not having enough to deny ourselves of the pleasures of this world, fearing lest we loose both, but this one thing is true, we either have to put down the old man with his deeds or he will drag us down to death. We cannot serve two Masters. The unforbidden fruit we must let alone if we expect to taste of that in the new garden that is to be restored. Do not be tempted. Let us profit by our forefathers' experience. If we believe then that Christ is soon coming for his bride, we will begin to make preparation. Yes, we will begin to dress ourselves for the event, but look! Christian, what kind of a robe he requires his bride to wear. A white raiment, pure and spotless, will she not have to be very careful? Yes, she will need to make a wide sweep lest her skirts become tarnished with the filth that has accumulated in this sin-cursed earth. The seven Christian graces make up this beautiful apparel. Faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly-kindness and last of all charity. Adorn yourselves with these, brothers and sisters, and the Lord will receive you. In conclusion I will send this little poem.

[illegible], for a faith that will not shrink,
Though pressed by many a foe;
That will not tremble on the brink,
Of poverty or woe.

That will not murmur nor complain
Beneath the chastening rod;
But in the hour of grief and pain,
Will lean upon its God.

A faith that shines more bright and clear
When tempests rage without;
That when in danger knows no fear,
In darkness feels no doubt.

A faith that keeps the narrow way,
By truth illumined and led,
And with a pure intent obeys
Light upon light, and bread.

Lord, give me such a faith as this,
And then, whate'er may come,
I'll take it to my home—the blissful home
Of an eternal home."

"In Christ Shall All be Made Alive."

The above inscription is cut on the monument of Gen. Hillyer, near the entrance to Spring Grove Cemetery, Hartford, Conn. The foundation of the Christian hope written to the Church at Corinth so many centuries since near the entrance of a Christian burial place in this new world is beautiful "For as in Adam all die even so in Christ shall all be made alive." But every man in his own order, Christ the first fruits, afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming. Then come the end.

OBITUARY.

Died April 9th, 1895, of cancer of the stomach, Maggie, wife of Ira Forbes, aged 30 years, 1 month, and 6 days. Deceased was born in Annapolis County, Nova Scotia, on Feb. 29, 1856, and at the age of nine months was left a motherless child, being then brought up by her grand-parents, who were Methodist Church going-folks, and very naturally tried to teach her that sprinkling was Scriptural baptism, but being of a naturally keen perception she readily discriminated between truth and error, and following her convictions of truth she united with the Baptist Church; but as years rolled on she heard the truths of the gospel that Jesus and his apostles preached, when her keen perception again discerned that she was not immortal, but only an heir of immortality, and that death instead of being the gate to glory, is in reality an enemy to be destroyed and swallowed up in victory at the resurrection; and following the dictates of her conscience, she was planted in the likeness of her Savior's death that she might be also in the likeness of his resurrection.

On Oct. 5th, 1880, she was married to the writer, with whom she lived as a faithful companion in tribulation and patience for fourteen years and six months when death severed the union. Her illness was of a most painful character, and lasted forty days, during which she never uttered a murmuring word, but patiently bore her affliction, until she fell asleep in full assurance of faith in a glorious resurrection to immortality and eternal life, when the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, to bring from the dust his sleeping saints to meet him in the air. Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.

Maggie sleeps beautifully and peacefully waiting for the dawning of the endless day, when there shall be no more pain nor death, and when tears shall be wiped from off all faces, and when her eyes shall behold the King in his beauty, and she shall be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white, for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints. May it be the blessed privilege of reader and writer to share in the glories of Paradise restored. As there is no minister of the faith here, Pastor Fash of the Baptist Church assisted by Pastor McQuen of the Congregational Church performed the burial service; after which we laid her away in the Brooklyn Cemetry to repose until the early dawn, when Jesus will come in a thief-like manner for his sleeping saints.

She leaves a husband and a sister, with a host of relatives in Annapolis to mourn her loss, but we sorrow not even as others which have no hope. Sleep on dear Maggie, and take thy rest till eternity shall dawn on thy bright vision blest. Till then we bid thee adieu.

Japan has a banking house that has been in business without a break for over 300 years. It began with Yechigo No Kami, an improvised feudal noble of the Province of Ise, who broke away from the traditions of his caste and went into the liquor trade, manufacturing saki from rice. One of his sons established a bank, which two centuries ago was removed to Tokio, the present capital, and from the name of the principal at the time took the name by which it is now known of the Mitsui Bank. Like the Rothschilds, the whole family is engaged in the business, a marked feature of which is that the capital belongs to all in common, while no one member can claim a separate share. The most competent individual is chosen President. The Bank has now over thirty branches and is the largest private bank in Japan.

A highly interesting study of what a hundred years of war have cost France in human life has just been made public by Dr. Lagneau, member of the Academy of Medicine of Paris, and is found in the Lancet. When the revolution broke out France's effective army was only 120,000 men. For the wars waged during ten years in Belgium, on the Sambre, the Meuse, the Rhine, the Alps, the Pyrenees in the Vendee, and in Egypt there were called out 2,500,000. At the census made in the ninth year of the republic there remained of these only 677,598. In killed and in dead by disease the wars of the first republic cost France 2,122,402 men. From 1801 to Waterloo 3,757,398 men scarcely sufficed to fill the blanks which, in an incessant war against combined Europe, France incurred at Austerlitz, Jena, Auerstadt, Friedland, Saragossa, Eckmuhl, Essling, Wagram, Taragona, Smolensk, Moscow, Lutzen, Bautzen, Dresden, Leipzig, and Waterloo. Under the restoration, Louis Philippe, and the second republic, in spite of the war in Spain (1823), the conquest of Algiers (1830), and the taking of Antwerp, France passed through a period of comparative calm. The army numbered about 213,748, and the mortality averaged 22 per 1,000. In 1853-5 commenced the epoch of the great wars—the Crimea, Italy (1859-60), China (1860-61), Mexico (1862-3), and the disasters of 1870. In the Crimea, out of 300,208 men 95,615 succumbed; in Italy, out of 500,000 there died 15,673; in China, 1860; and in Cochin China 48 per 1,000. The second empire cost France about 1,600,000 soldiers. According to Dr. Lagneau's demographic tables the century from 1795 to 1895 witnessed the death in battle or by disease of 5,000,000 French soldiers.

OUR CHILDREN.

Jesus and the Children.

(Read Mark x. 13-16.)

Jesus loved the little children,
Laid his hand upon each head;
And we whisper softly, gently,
Tenderly, the words he said:

"Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not for of such is the kingdom of God."

Jesus Blessed the little children
With the blessings of his love,
And it seems he still is saying,
While he lives in heaven above:

"Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God."

Blessed Savior, kind Redeemer,
Lay thy hand upon my head;
Bless me as thou didst the children,
When these loving words were said:

"Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God."

MOSES SENT.

You see, dear children, how much people thought of Christ in those olden days, nearly two thousand years before his birth. They looked on death as a dreadful thing. The Great God had promised them a Savior, who would be able to raise them from the dead. They worshipped God in hope of this Savior; all their sacrifices to God were made looking forward to the precious blood that would atone for their sins. Moses knew he would be laughed at for giving up the throne and its pleasures; he knew he would be reproached and reviled for believing in a Savior so far away, but he wanted the everlasting life, and the everlasting country that his mother had pictured to his youthful eyes, and he was determined to secure them, no matter what the cost. O how Auntie wants you to be like Moses. How much she prays that you may all set your affections on Christ, as he did, and may value the life and the land, as highly.

When Moses reaches the land of Midian, he sits down by a well. Seven daughters of a priest, or prince of the country come and draw water for their father's flock. Some wicked shepherds who want the water without the trouble of drawing it, drive them away. Moses is indignant, he becomes their champion, and waters their flock. The incident is related to Jethro, their father; Moses is invited to the house, remains, marries Zipporah, and becomes the father of two sons.

But why did Moses marry a woman who was not of his own nation?

We cannot tell. She was not a Canaanite as Judah's wife was. We think she belonged to the race of Shem. If so, she was distantly related to Moses, can you find out how?

You remember about the Midianites who carried Joseph down to Egypt? Did you notice when you were reading the story that these Medanites, or Midianites are twice called Ishmaelites? Gen. xxxvii. 25; xxxix. 1. Why is this? The Chaldee has Medanites in the place of Arabians in this text. "Arabian" means "mixed." So the Bible makes no mistake when it calls this trodden down people, by all the three names of the sons of Abraham, Ishmael, Midian, and Medan. They were a mixed people. Their home seems to have been in Gilead, Gen. xxxvii. 25, or perhaps they only went there to purchase the spices they were carrying to Egypt. You will find Midian marked across the head of the Persian Gulf, on your maps of Ancient Geography.

Moses traveled a long way to get away from Pharaoh, did'nt he?

Have you guessed who Zipporah was?

If the half-brothers Ishmael, Medan, and Midian, congregated together in this land of Midian, she may have been of their race. There is a Reuel among Esau's sons, but he has no son called Hobab, and this Jethro, or Reuel had such a son.

Some think Zipporah was an Ethiopian woman.

Can you trace the lineage of Moses back to Abraham? It is a good way to learn. Write the names on a little slip of paper in this way:—

Abraham,
Isaac,
Jacob,
Levi,
Kohath,
Amram,
Moses.

If Zipporah were of Ishmael's line we would follow it in the same way:—

Abraham,
Ishmael,
Bashemath, a daughter of Ishmael.
Reuel,
Zipporah.

But this does not seem to be her genealogy, so we will leave it, or, shall we look a little farther? I think this would be best.

Open your Bibles and read Judges i. 16; iv. 11, 17; v. 24; 1 Sam. xv. 6. Then Jethro's people were Kenites and not Arabians? It seems so.

And they settled in Judah among the people of Israel. Our theory about Zipporah being related to Moses falls to the ground, but we will continue our lesson. It will show you how to study best, as it is while keeping the sheep of his father-in-law, Moses crosses to the other side of the desert, and comes to the Mountain of God in Horeb. It is Mt. Sinai, in the south-western part of Arabia, not far from Rephidim. And now, what a strange sight appears; a bush close by, seems to be all in flames. Moses is bewildered, for the bush is unharmed,—what can it mean? Shall I tell you? The people of Israel are to pass through all manner of troubles. After a period of prosperity in the land of Canaan they are to be made captives, their beautiful temple and city is to be destroyed, and their country become desolate. Other nations will hate and rob and persecute them. Myriads of them will be slain, but they were God's people, and as a race they will never perish. "The ordinances of heaven may not depart, neither shall the Seed of Israel cease from being a nation before the Lord forever." Jeremiah xxxi. 35.

The angel of the Lord appears to Moses in the flame of fire out of the midst of the bush. God speaks to Moses through the angel. His people are even now in the fires of affliction. The time has come for their deliverance. "Come," he says to Moses, "I will send thee unto Pharaoh, that thou mayest bring forth my people out of the land of Egypt."

Moses is afraid, he has not forgotten how Pharaoh sought his life. He makes excuses, "Who am I," he says, "that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt?"

It did look like a hard thing for one man to do, did'nt it? But the dear Lord strengthens him with comforting words. He assures him that he will be with him. As a token that he has sent him he tells Moses, that he and his people people shall serve God on that very mountain. He is to say to the gathered Elders of the children of Israel "that the Lord God of their fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob has appeared unto him,—that "he has visited them," and has "seen what is done unto them in Egypt," and will bring them up out of their affliction to a land flowing with milk and honey."

They will hearken to his voice. He must then go to Pharaoh, with the message that "the Lord God of the Hebrews has met with them," and must beseech him to let this people go three days journey into the wilderness, to sacrifice to the Lord their God." Pharaoh will not listen. Great signs and wonders will follow and the people will then be set free.

AUNTIE WINCE.

Dear Restitution:

I thought I would write a little letter to THE RESTITUTION, as I have been reading it ever since I was old enough to read. I am now nine years old. Mamma has taken the paper twenty-three years. We have but few that believe as Papa and Mamma does. We have been living in a hotel for the last six years, but now we have moved to the farm. I have not been here long enough to know how I will like. Uncle John Poore, as we children call him, was here two years ago and made us a visit of two days. He is the one who taught Papa and Mamma the gospel, and baptized them in Neosho River, Kansas. I like to read Auntie Wince's pieces in the paper, but some things I do not understand very well. I was named for her.

Letters to a Methodist Minister. No. 2.

It is very strange if heaven is ever to be our future home, that there is not a verse in the Bible that says something about when we get home to heaven. But it says a great deal about us inheriting the earth or land. Isaiah xlv. 18, says, "For thus saith the Lord that created the heavens, God himself that formed the earth and made it, he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited." Here is a verse however, that may seem to prove that we will go to heaven for our reward. It is St. John xiv. 2, it says, "In my Father's house are many mansions, if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you," but the next verse makes it perfectly plain, it says, "And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also." Another that might seem to prove we go to heaven is 2 Cor. v. 1, it says, "for we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens," (not eternally in the heavens). The next verse says, "For in this we groan earnestly, desiring to be clothed upon with our house which is from heaven," so you see the house will be from heaven, instead of in heaven when we are clothed with it. Did God Almighty swear to Abraham that he would give to him a home in heaven or in the land? Let us read and see. Gen. xiii. 14, 15, 17, says, "And the Lord said unto Abram after that Lot was separated from him. Lift up now thine eyes and look from the place where thou art, northward and southward and eastward and westward, (but not upward) for all the land (not sky) which thou seest, to thee will I give it, and to thy seed forever. Arise, walk through the land in the length of it and in the breadth of it, for I will give it unto thee." If any one doubts that the land was what was promised to Abraham, let us read Psalm cv. 8 to 11. It says, "He hath remembered his covenant forever, the Word which he commanded to a thousand generations. Which covenant he made with Abraham, and his oath unto Isaac, and confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant, saying unto thee will I give the land of Canaan the lot of your inheritance." But he did not come into possession of it then, for it says, "and he gave him none inheritance in it, no not so much as to set his foot on," yet he promised that he would give it him for a possession, and to his seed after him. Acts vii. 5, "And I will give unto thee and to thy seed after thee, the land wherein thou art a stranger, all the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession." Gen. xvii. 8. In the 28th chap. of Gen. when Isaac blessed Jacob, he says, "and give thee the blessing of Abraham to thee and to thy seed with thee: that thou mayest inherit the land wherein thou art a stranger, which God gave unto Abraham." Gen. xxiii. 4, tells us, "Abraham spake unto the sons of Heth saying, I am a stranger and a sojourner with you, give me a possession of a burying place with you that I may bury my dead out of my sight." This proves Abraham did not then possess the land, but as God has promised to give it to him, and confirmed it by an oath, it would be a terrible thing to say that Abraham will not possess the land in the future. Then the location of Abraham's future inheritance is in the land of Canaan and as of course Abraham and all his faithful followers will get into the kingdom of God, that also proves the kingdom will be on this earth. "And I say unto you that many shall come from the east and west and shall sit down with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of heaven." Matt. viii. 11. "The heaven even the heavens are the Lords but the earth hath he given to the children of men." Psalms cxv. 16. Will you accept this gift? "And blessed be his glorious name forever. And let the whole earth be filled with his glory." Psa. lxxii. 19. "For I know that my Redeemer liveth and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth." Job xix. 25. "Sing and rejoice, O daughter of Zion, for lo, I come and I will dwell in the midst of thee saith the Lord. And many nations shall be joined to the Lord in that day, and shall be my people, and I will dwell in the midst of thee and thou shalt know that the Lord of hosts hath sent me unto thee, and the Lord shall inherit Judah, his portion in the holy land, and shall choose Jerusalem again." Zech. ii. 10, 11, 12. "And the Lord shall be King over all the earth, in that day shall there be one Lord and his name one." Zech. xiv. 9, "O worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness, fear before him all the earth, say unto the heathen that the Lord reigneth. The world also shall be established, that it shall not be moved, he shall judge the people righteously. Let the heavens rejoice and the earth be glad Let the sea roar and the fulness thereof. Let the field be joyful and all that is therein, then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice before the Lord for he cometh, for he cometh to judge the world with righteousness and the people with his truth." Psalm xcvi. 9 to 13. "And the kingdom, and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him." Dan. vii. 27.

"This know also that in the last days perilous times shall come." 2 Tim. iii. 1. "Knowing this first that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." 2 Peter iii. 3, 4. "Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness. Looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat? Nevertheless, we according to his promise look for new heavens, and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness." 2 Peter iii. 11, 12, 13. "Rejoice and be exceeding glad for great is your reward in heaven." Matt. v. 12. Will we have to go to heaven for the reward, or will he come and bring it with him? Rev. xxii. 12, says, "And behold I come quickly and my reward is with me, to every man according as his work shall be." You quoted, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord," and said this means happy are the dead which die in the Lord We don't think blessed and happy have the same meaning. For instance it would not seem so in Matt. v. 4 where it says, "Blessed are they that mourn." We could hardly say "happy are they that mourn." The Lord don't expect the world to be converted in the present age. "Many are called but few are chosen." In this age he is taking out a people for his name, that are to be rulers with him in the restitution age. "And Jesus said unto them verily I say unto you, that ye which have followed me, in the regeneration, when the Son of Man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel." Matt. xix. 28. We see here, that the twelve apostles, will judge the twelve tribes of Israel. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne." Rev. iii. 21. "Do ye not know that the saints shall judge the world." 1 Cor. vi. 2. "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." (If this be so that the heavens must receive him till the times of restitution he don't come every time a good person dies.) This thousand years' restitution will be the grandest time this world's history has ever known. Please read Isaiah lxv. 17 to 25, and Jeremiah ix. chap. and xxiii. 5, 6. We believe at the end of this thousand years every thing will be brought into subjection to God's will. "For he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet." "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." 1 Cor. xv. 25, 26. "Prove all things hold fast that which is good. And remember straight is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life and few there be that find it." Please study these things carefully and prayerfully and your reward will be eternal life, and an everlasting home in the new earth.

LAURA M. SKEELS.

"Our Conversation." Phil. iii. 20.

The quotation below is an important one. "Our conversation is in heaven, from whence also we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ." What glory and honor in so exalted a position, a citizenship in high heaven, the most exalted of all positions, and is never-ending. Not like the positions obtained by those who mind earthly things. Fleeting! fleeting! But on and on through ceaseless ages. Going back to the seventeenth verse, we read, "Brethren, be followers together of me, and mark them which walk so, as ye have us for an example, for many walk of whom I have told you often, and now tell you even weeping, that they are the enemies of the cross of Christ, whose end is destruction, whose God is their belly, and whose glory is in their shame, who mind earthly things. The apostle wept because some professing godliness were enemies of Christ. Let us be careful that we are in no wise the enemies of Christ. Neither in malice, guile, envy, or in striving to serve two Masters, for we read in 1 Peter ii. 9, "Ye are a peculiar (purchased marg.) people." He purchased us with his own precious blood, and we have believed the Word of the kingdom, and accepted him as our King. First let us in every thing be careful that we become not enemies of the cross, or be found "minding earthly things." Read carefully all of this second chapter of first Peter, weigh every word, and from its boundless depth of meaning let us see if we are showing forth the praises (virtues marg.) of "him that called us out of darkness into his marvelous light." "Which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God, which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy." What an excellent chance right here to have taught them that now they had obtained mercy, they were to be rulers in this age, and take an active part in electing such. Not a word, not an intimation of the kind. But he adds, "Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul, having your conversation honest among Gentiles that whereas they speak against you as evil doers, they may by your good works which they shall behold glorify God in the day of visitation.

In the ninth and tenth verses quoted, the apostle points to our high calling; in the tenth and eleventh he addresses us as pilgrims and strangers; in the twelfth he tells us by our good works God shall be glorified; in the thirteenth and onward, we have a command, What is it? It is not for God's children purchased by the precious blood of the Anointed to be interested in the political affairs of this age. No, no, we have already learned that we are pilgrims and strangers, and the thirteenth verse says positively, "Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man, for the Lord's sake, whether it be to the king as supreme; or unto governors as unto them that are sent for the punishment of evil doers. This earthly position of punishing evil doers in this age does not belong to the heirs of God's kingdom.

We learn from Rev. ii. 26, 27, that that time is future, "He that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end to him will I give power over nations, and he shall rule them with a rod of iron. As the vessels of a potter shall they be broken in shivers." Is it consistent for us to erect a power, that we are in the near future to dash to pieces? "O Lord God to whom vengeance belongeth, show thyself. Lift up thyself, thou judge of the earth; render a reward to the proud. Lord, how long shall the wicked triumph? Shall the throne of iniquity have fellowship with thee, which frameth mischief by a law?" Psa. xciv. 1, 2, 3, 20. Let us be true to our King, and wait for him, and like Nehemiah of old, say to the enemy, "The God of heaven will prosper us." If wholly occupied in the Master's cause, we like the Prophet can send a messenger to them saying, "I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down." Yes, we are doing a great work, preparing for that great day. It will require every effort on our part, that we may be individually and collectively ready to receive the crown and the appointed positions at the hands of our Blessed Master, the King of kings. O, let us leave this world with its transient honors, to that other set of servants, who are not "seeking a better country, a heavenly." How can we earnestly pray "thy kingdom come," and at the same time putting forth every effort to sustain the present state of affairs. "O consistency, thou art a jewel." Let us forget those things which are behind, and reach forth unto those things which are before, and press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus. "Know ye not the saints shall judge the world." Not in this age, but when he comes whose right it is, he that shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears; but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity, for the meek of the earth, and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked, and righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins and faithfulness the girdle of his reigns.

"O glorious hour when Christ shall come,
And make this earth his wide domain,
When tribes from every land shall come,
To worship at Jerusalem."

Mother, Home, and Heaven.

An article in The Protestant of February 20, by a very dear friend and Christian brother in Washington, D. C., has led me to the conclusion that even good and sincere Christian men are liable to get painfully mixed when they attempt to place their dead and themselves in heaven the moment they die. A dear old Irish woman wanted the priest to let her soul visit a few friends in the North of Ireland before she went to heaven. She was from the sweet county Antrim, province of Ulster. The good "father" replied:

"A soul, my dear child, that has opinions upon it,
Need not be confined too province so small,
The souls of Ulster and Leinster and Munster and Connaught,
In less than a jiffy you're over it all." etc.

The Indian imagines that death will introduce him to a territory where "bammas bloom thrice in each moon." If it is true that good Indians and other good people are taken right up to heaven the moment they die, why is it that death all through the Scriptures is called an enemy? "The last enemy to be conquered is death." I repeat, if death is the door through which we immediately pass into glory, and are made perfect in happiness, death is really a friend. There is something wrong here. The grandest of all our Lord's miracles was when he gave back to the widow her son, and to the sorrowing sisters Lazarus, their brother.

No, no; death is not our friend. He is a cold, heartless executioner, a monster that all try to shun. He is the king of terrors and the crusher of hearts and homes. Some of the churches falsely teach that for a money consideration he can be cajoled, made to let up a little. But this is false, and a strange way of obtaining money.

Brother Cathell is a good man. I greatly enjoyed his description of his mother and home. I have been in his home and found it a model, up-to-date, Christian home.

"Oh! how often the old homestead
Comes before my vision clear,
As I ponder o'er its memories
Till my heart gives forth a tear;
When I think of childhood's pleasures,
When in innocence I came
To my mother's knee and whispered,
'Hallowed be thy name.'

Oh! that mother's hand so tender,
As it laid upon my head,
When at evening-time I'm kneeling,
Just before I went to bed,
As she taught me to say simply,
'Now I lay me down to sleep;'
Ah! that prayer I'll ne'er forget it,
'Pray the Lord my soul to keep.'"

"But the time is coming, mother, when
We'll surely meet again,
For the prayer—which thou didst't offer for for thy child, were not in vain."

And I believe when God's appointed time comes to command the sea and the grave to turn out their prisoners, he and his faithful companion and their well-trained children will all be admitted to the New Eden and have access to the Tree of Life. There will be no more separation then. Salvation, as I understand it, is life from the dead. An old colored man a few days ago asked the writer some things about the state of the dead. He remarked, "Once upon a time the question was asked if a man die will he live again? Now the question is, if a man dies is he dead?" The old man was bothered, and it is enough to bother any one of an inquiring mind. If anything survives the stroke of death it can be no more than our thoughts; but the 146th Psalm, fourth verse, removes this hope from all of us. When our breath leaves, our thoughts perish. I think we ought to train ourselves to submit to God's plan. A good soldier never thinks of suggesting to his commander a camping ground. A great many Christian people believe that God's people will spend their immortal life right here and I must say for myself I must prefer it to the sky home. "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth."—Isaac McCurry, Sr., in Methodist Protestant.

Man Upon the Renewed Earth.

We pursue our history no further. Its after course is comparatively well known. The huge ganoid fish was succeeded by the equally huge reptile,—the reptile by the bird,—the bird by the marsupial quadruped; and at length, after races higher in the scale of instinct had taken precedence in succession, the one of the other, the sagacious elephant appeared, as the lord of the latest creation which immediately preceded our own. How natural does the thought seem which suggested itself to the profound mind of Cuvier, when indulging in a similar review! Has the last scene in the series arisen, or has Deity expended his infinitude of resource, and reached the ultimate stage of progression at which perfection can arrive? The philosopher hesitated, and then decided in the negative, for he was too intimately acquainted with the works of the Omnipotent Creator to think of limiting his power; and he could, therefore, anticipate a coming period in which man would have to resign his post of honor to some nobler and wiser creature,—the monarch of a better and happier world. How well it is permitted to indulge in the expansion of Cuvier's thought, without sharing in the melancholy of Cuvier's feelings,—to be enabled to look forward to the coming of a new heaven and a new earth, not in terror, but in hope,—to be encouraged to believe in the system of unending progression, but to entertain no fear of the degradation or despotism of man! The adorable Monarch of the future, with all its unsummed perfection, has already passed into the heavens, flesh of our flesh, and bone of our bone, and Enoch and Elias are there with him,—fit representatives of that dominant race, which no other race shall ever supplant or succeed, and to whose onward and upward march the deep echoes of eternity shall never cease to respond.—Hugh Miller, from The Old Red Sandstone.

PAY for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a New Year gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

…ample of people … this Resurrection, both … and young, I thought I would … and write. I am a new beginner, … have had but little experience in writing. I love to read the letters from the brothers and sisters. How sweet it is to work in our respective fields, but each and all for Jesus. I ask an interest in your prayers.

HATTIE BERRY.

Dear Restitution:

Please allow us space to express our thanks for the privilege of reading your worthy columns. We are wonderfully pleased with "The Story of Israel," also Bros. Joblin, Wilson, Hatch, Jones, and others. They are workmen that needeth not to be ashamed. Our Baptist friends failed to meet Bro. Muncrief in debate, after challenging him publicly for a week's discussion.

Yours truly.

R. A. HUMPHREYS.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I have been a reader of the precious truths contained in this paper for some time, and you dont know how I enjoy reading the letters of those of like precious faith. I hope I shall never have to give up my blessed paper. I could not get along without it for it is all the preaching I have, as I moved away from the place where I was brought to a knowledge of the truth about ten years ago. This is my first attempt at writing for the "Love Feast." I would not give up my hope in Christ for all the world. It makes me feel sad when I look around and see how indifferent so many are to the cause of the truth. I have a great many things to contend with in trying to live for my blessed Master, but, the heavier the cross, the brighter the crown. One sister spoke of being called a "soul-sleeper," and oh, how many times have I heard the same thing, so we can sympathize with one another, for it is written "And hope maketh not ashamed, because the hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us." Rom. v. 5.

I would like some one to explain Phil. i. 21, "For to me to live is Christ, and to die is gain."

Your Sister striving for the truth.

SUSIE DOW.

Dear Restitution:

I am thankful that I heard the truth preached when I was young, twenty-eight years ago. I have heard Bros. Hatch, Wagoner, Read and others. I have not heard the truth preached since I came to Kansas in 1871, although I have heard much that is false. I seem to be alone here, yet, I get comfort from the Scriptures, and a lively hope of the soon coming King and the glorious restitution age. I do not seek a home in the orthodox churches. I would like to make inquiry concerning the one baptism that is necessary unto salvation, water or spirit, or both, Heb. vi. 2; Eph. iv. 5; Matt. iii. 11; Luke iii. 3; Acts xiii. 24, 25. I refer you to Acts xi. 15 to 18. Repentance and remission of sins does not have to be preached to the Gentiles seeing it is granted, and that without the laying on of hands. Is this gift bestowed on all that believe on the Lord Jesus Christ? Why wait to add to your faith the Christian graces, for he who said, "grow in grace, also said, "grow in knowledge of the truth." If there are new truths to be learned let us learn them as fast as they come to light. I am your fellow-traveler, in hope of eternal life in the age-to-come. Many thanks to you and the dear brother that caused me to get the much longed for paper, THE RESTITUTION.

E. G. WATSON.

Editor Restitution:

Enclosed please find $1.50 as renewal to the grand old paper. Times are pretty hard, but man shall not live by bread alone. We have faith in the words of David that he never saw the righteous forsaken, nor their seed begging bread. We have the word for it that in the last times we are to have famine, etc., and we must try to live comfortable as we can under circumstances. I am fully per-

…ground brought. So long as the typical people lived nearer to the rule laid down, so long they had plenty of everything, and when they strayed off to serve other gods, and follow their own ways, then they were visited by famine. So I think these droughts are sent to remind us that there is a better time and a better country ahead. That order of things that Abraham and all the ancient worthies looked for. Then, the wilderness shall blossom as the rose, and the dry and thirsty ground shall become pools of water and the earth shall yield her increase. Brethren, let us all labor to enter into that rest that is promised to the people of God, and dwell in that land where joys immortal flow. Hoping to meet all of like precious faith, where parting shall be no more.

Your Brother in hope.

J. W. GAMBLE.

Dear Restitution,

Brother Woodward was with us for awhile during the last of February and the 1st of March. We intended to hold meetings for two weeks but when we applied for the Baker Union Church other parties had engaged it for March 5th, so, after four evenings and one Sunday at this place, Bro. W. H. Elton secured Shiloh Church, three miles distant for the other five days, and thus the Word of Life was proclaimed to many who had never heard before. The congregations were large and deeply interested. On March 10, we returned to Baker where Bro. Woodward preached two able sermons. At the close of the Sunday evening service the congregation sang "God be with you till we meet again," and thus ended another season of seed-sowing, and what will the harvest be? People say that Bro. Woodward is the best preacher they ever heard but they will not obey the truth, even as Jesus said, "Ye will not come to me that ye might have life." We were sorry that sickness prevented Sister Woodward from coming. We are glad to see that the Master's work is progressing in other places. Our faithful laborers into the great harvest-field. We thank Sister Wince for her excellent children's papers. My children are deeply interested in them. Let us not forget to care for the little ones. Yours, looking for the coming King, and may he soon come. Even so, come Lord Jesus.

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects, by R. C. Bingley, is the title of a pamphlet of 68 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under diffrent headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued calls for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonian Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

Vandalia Line Low Rate Excursions.

On April 2nd and 30th, 1895, the Vandalia Line will sell excursion tickets to points in the South and Southeast at one fare round trip. In addition to the above, round trip tickets will be sold to points in Arkansas and Texas on April 2d, at rate of one fare plus $2.00. Liberal limits and stop-over privileges allowed. For full particulars call on or address any Vandalia Line Ticket Agent, or W. F. Brunner, Ass't General Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo. Apr. 30.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1896.

…Lord's Army directs him to the New England States or the Atlantic seaboard; to the South; or to the lake region of the North; or to the Rocky Mountains and the wonderland beyond the Mississippi, he will be given opportunity to indulge his tastes at a small cost for railroad fare this year. There will be low rates to Baltimore over the Pennsylvania in May, account the American Medical Association: to Decatur, Ill., account the German Baptist (Dunkard) meeting, and to Pittsburgh for the Presbyterian General Assembly. There will also be low rates over these lines to Meridian, Miss., account the General Assembly Cumberland Presbyterian Church the same month. In June excursion tickets will be sold over the Pennsylvania Lines to Omaha account the National Jr. O. U. A. M.; to Chattanooga, Tenn., for the International Convention of Epworth League; to Cleveland, Ohio, account the National Republican League Meeting, and to Roanoke, Va., for the German Baptist meeting. Excursions for July include low rates over the Pennsylvania to Baltimore for the Baptist Y. P. Union Meeting; to Asbury Park for the L. A. W. meeting, and to Boston for the Christian Endeavor Convention, and to Denver, Col., account the National Educational Association meeting. In August excursion tickets will be on sale over the Pennsylvania Lines to Boston, account the Knights Templer Conclave. The sale of low rate tickets will not be restricted to members of the organizations mentioned, but the public generally may take advantage of them.

The Asbury Park excursion will doubtless attract many to that delightful ocean resort. Atlantic City, Cape May, Long Branch, and all the famous watering places along the New Jersey coast are located on the Pennsylvania Lines, hence this will be a desirable opportunity to visit the seashore. The Denver excursion will be just the thing for sight-seeing jaunt through the far West, as tickets will be honored going one way and returning a different route through the most romantic scenery, including the Mississippi River. Liberal Variable route privileges will also be accorded Boston excursionists, enabling them to visit Niagara Falls, Montreal, Thousand Islands and St. Lawrence Rapids, the White Mountains, the Hudson River territory, and to return by steamer on Long Island Sound, after sight-seeing at Newport, Narragansett Pier, Nantucket and the Cape Cod resorts to New York, and then through the agricultural paradise of the Keystone State, along the Susquehanna and Juniata rivers, over the Alleghenies, around famous Horse Shoe Curve, through historic Johnstown and the coke and iron regions of Western Pennsylvania. It is also expected that Boston excursionists over the Pennsylvania Lines will be privileged to return via Baltimore and Washington if they so desire.

In addition to the above, there will be plenty of other cheap excursions over the Pennsylvania Lines to various points. As the season is some weeks away, arrangements in detail have not been consummated, but it is certain that no railway will offer better inducements than the liberal concessions in rates and privileges that may be enjoyed by travelers over the Pennsylvania Lines. This fact may readily be ascertained upon application to any passenger or ticket agent of these lines, or by addressing F. VAN DUSEN, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1896.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1896. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks those not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

Whether desiring any literature for the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 1, 1895. NO. 17.

Poetry.

Coming Summer.

What will the summer bring?
Sunshine and flowers,
Brightness and melody,
Golden-tinged hours;
Rose-gleaming meadows,
Vocal with praise;
Crimson-flushed evenings,
Nightingale lays.

What may the summer bring?
Gladness and mirth,
Laughter and song,
For the children of earth;
Smiles for the old man,
Joy for the strong,
Gifts for the little ones
All the day long.

What will the summer bring?
Coolness and shade,
Eloquent stillness
In thicket and glade;
Whispering breezes,
Fragrance oppressed;
Lingering twilight
Soothing to rest.

What may the summer bring?
Freshness and calm
To the care-worn and troubled,
Beauty and balm.
O toil-weary spirit,
Rest there anew,
For the heat of the world-race
Summer hath flew!

What will the summer bring?
Sultry noontimes,
Lurid horizons,
Frowning cloud-towers!
Loud-crashing thunders,
Tempest and hail,
Death-bearing lightnings,
It brings without fail.

What may the summer bring?
Dimness and woe,
Blackness of sorrow
Its bright days may know;
Hearts may be wormwood,
Verdure a pall,
The shadow of death
On the flowers will fall.

Is it not ever so?
Where shall we find
Light that may cast
No shadow behind?
Calm that no tempest
May darkly await?
Joy that no sorrow
May swiftly abate?

Will the story of summer
Be written in light,
Or traced in the darkness
Of shamefaced unright?
We know not—we would not know
Why should we quail?
Summer we welcome thee!
Summer, all hail!

—Frances Ridley Havergal.

Original.

To the Readers of The Restitution:

Having now finished my translation of the New Covenant Scriptures and the Book of Jabob called Job—most of this translation having been published in THE RESTITUTION during the last ten or twelve years, I purpose now to translate and publish the "Psalms" from the Greek text of the Septuagint, and to the intelligent reader who will patiently follow the work, I promise some startling revelations—and to the truth-seeker some help along the line of evangelistic work.

I find no such arbitrary divisions of the book, as the commentators ordinarily point out and assume to belong to the text. There are one hundred and fifty psalms and one with the heading "outside of the number," showing that the numbering was significant and to my mind of divine import in the Esoteric knowledge of revelation. This numbering has not been preserved in the Hebrew text and the com. and revised versions have followed the changed numbering as well as a great many other alterations of the original Scriptures, which to my mind belong to the rabinical tinkering and apostasy of the second century of the Christian Church when there was absolutely no knowledge of Hebrew as a spoken or written language in the Christian Church. The whole text of the Old Covenant Hebrew Scriptures was tinkered and corrupted, especially the oracular portions of it, and the Messianic prophecies beclouded and muddled in the text and all the correct, unvowel-pointed copies destroyed; so that when an attempt was made in the fifteenth century to revive the knowledge of Hebrew in the Church, there were no manuscripts of the Hebrew Scriptures discovered, and even to this date, there have been none since discovered, except the "Massoretic fragments" from which the present so-called Hebrew text has been compiled. It is well to bear in mind right here that the meaning of "Massora" is "traditions" and the Christian Church was specifically warned by our Savior against this danger, which had already begun to appear in his day. "Ye make void the Word of God with your traditions." To my mind every psalm has a Messianic import and is oracular, the difference of Messianic import being one of degree and not of kind. This import I shall endeavor to emphasize as I go along in my comments. The numerical significance I may refer to occasionally, but as the subject is too profound except for careful and thorough study, I shall only give hints in this direction.

The significant division of the books to my mind is not one of arrangement in "books" but in kind. The word "psalm" means anything played on a musical instrument or sung with the human voice and the book of psalms is divided into "hymns" and "odes"—a hymn being a literary composition appropriate to be sung in a worshipping congregation for general purposes and occasions of worship, while an "ode" is a literary composition to be sung in the way of worship too in a church congregation, but appealing to commemorate some great national event and occasion. I shall endeavor to make this distinction clear as I proceed in my work of translation and comment.

There is no evidence moreover of metrical construction in any of the psalms. If there was any in the original Hebrew text it has not been preserved in the Greek, and there is the best of historical evidence that there was none in the original Hebrew. The translators of the Com. and R. V. have sacrificed the thought of the text in a very marked degree to their desire to transfer an imaginary metrical construction of the text, and to my mind have done themselves great discredit and an irreparable injury to the reader and truth-seeker. There is the best of evidence that the musical singing-service of the old temple worship took the form of the chant and was not tied down to either poetical rythm or rhyme; and it is also well known that the chant was the form of the song-service of the early Christian Church, which probably in a measure continued and exemplified the old song-service of the temple and its liturgy. Metre and rhyme in a word belong to heathendom, were alien to God's Ekklesia, and have been providentially or otherwise adopted into it; and were not an integral part of its original service. They did not even belong to the heathendom of contemporaneous periods of time and are comparamodern inventions. One thing is certain and historically indisputable and this is, that the Septuagint Greek Scriptures constituted the Old Covenant portion of the Bible of the apostolic days of the early Christian Church, and that the early Christian Ekklesia was merely an expansion in form of the old Israelitish Ekklesia.

PSALM. 1.

1. A blessed happy man is he who hath not gone his way in the counsel of the irreverent, and hath not stood in the way of obdurate sinners, and hath not sat upon the judicial-seat of scourges;

2. But nay, in the law of the Lord is his purpose, and in his law will he meditate day and night.

3. And he will be like the tree as it were planted beside the watercourses, that will yield its fruit in its season; and all that he may do will have been prospered.

4. Not so the irreverent, not so; but nay, like the fine-dust as it were, which the zephyr snatcheth off the face of the earth are they.

5. Therefore the irreverent will not arise (resurrection meant) in a judicial-way, nor obdurate sinners in a council of justified ones:

6. Because the Lord knoweth a way for justified ones (to arise meant) and a way for irreverent ones will be lost.

PSALM. 2.

1. Why have nations waxed wanton, and tribes meditated vain things?

2. The kings of the earth stood by, and the rulers were gathered together at the same time against the Lord and against his Christ (Anointed).

3. Let us rend asunder their bonds, and let us cast off their yoke from us.

4. The One who dwelleth in heaven will laugh at them, and the Lord will sneer at them.

5. Then will he talk to them in his wrath and in his anger will he terrify them.

6. But I have been established a king by him on Sion, his sacred Mount.

7. I who proclaim the command of the Lord. The Lord hath said unto me, My son art thou; I today have begotten thee;

8. Ask from me, and I will give thee nations for thine inheritance, and the ends of the earth for thy possession.

9. Thou wilt (or shalt) shepherd like a potter's vessel wilt thou shatter them.

10. And now ye kings understand; be chastened (instructed) all ye who judge the earth;

11. Serve the Lord as bond-servants with fear, and be glad in him with trembling:

12. Lay hold of instruction (chastening) lest at any time the Lord become wrathful and ye perish from out a just way.

13. Whenever his anger shall have flamed out suddenly, blessed-happy are all those who have put their faith in him.

PSALM. 3.

1. David's psalm, when he ran away from the face of Abessalom his son.

2. Why have those who afflict me been multiplied? Many arise against me: Many are saying unto my soul, There is no salvation for him in his God. Interlude.

3. But thou, O Lord, art my interpositional helper, my glory and the One who exalteth my head.

4. With my voice have I cried unto the Lord and he hath hearkened unto me from his sacred mountain. Interlude.

5. I have lain down to sleep and I have slept; I have been awakened, because the Lord will intervene for me.

7. I shall not have feared myriads of a laity, the myriads of those round about, who oppose me.

8. Arise, O Lord, save me. O my God: because thou hast smitten all those who are hostile to me without a cause; the teeth of obdurate sinners hast thou broken.

9. The salvation of the Lord and thy blessing is upon thy laity.

PSALM. 4.

1. Unto the end, among psalms, David's ode.

2. When I invoke God hath hearkened unto my righteousness; In tribulation thou hast made a wide place for me. Pity me and hearken to my votive-prayer.

3. Sons of men, how long are ye going to be heavy-hearted? Why do ye love futility and seek a lie? Interlude.

4. And know that the Lord hath made his holy One a marvel;

5. The Lord will hearken unto me when I have cried unto him.

6. Be ye wrathful and sin not; things which ye say in your hearts feel compunction for upon your couches. Interlude.

7. Sacrifice a sacrifice of righteousness and hope in the Lord.

8. Many say, Who will show you the good things? The light of thy countenance, a Lord, hath been a portent of them unto us.

9. Thou hast given rejoicing to my heart: with the fruit of their grain and wine and olive-oil have they been multiplied.

10. In peace shall I have lain down to sleep and I shall sleep, because thou, O Lord, hast caused me to dwell in hope though solitary.

PSALM 5.

1. Unto the end, concerning the inheritance, David's psalm.

2. Mark well my oracular-words, O Lord; understand my cry;

3. Attend unto the voice of my supplication, my king and my God; because unto thee shall I offer votive-prayer.

4. In the morning wilt thou hearken unto my voice; In the morning shall I stand beside and look upon thee.

5. Because thou art not a God who desireth transgression and the one who is doing wickedly will not dwell beside thee,

6. Nor will evaders of law continue to remain before thine eyes; Thou hast hated, O Lord, all those who are working the transgression;

7. Thou will destroy all those who are talking the lie; a man of blood and a deceitful man doth the Lord abominate.

8. But I in the plenitude of thy mercy will go into thy house will adore (shrine) in thy fear.

9. O Lord, guide me in thy righteousness for the sake of my enemies; Make my way right in thy sight,

10. Because there is no truth in their mouth, their heart futile; an opened sepulchre their throat; with their tongues have they practiced deceit.

11. Judge them, O God. May they have failed of their plots according to the multitude of their acts of irreverence: Thrust them away, because they have embittered thee, O Lord.

12. And may all those who hope in thee have rejoiced in thee: forever will they be glad, and thou wilt pitch thy tabernacle in their midst; and all those who love thy name will boast in thee,

13. Because thou wilt bless a justified one. As with a shield of satisfaction (or moral-approbation) hast thou crowned us.

PSALM 6.

1. Unto the end, among hymns concerning the eighth, David's psalm.

2. O Lord, convict me not in thine anger, nor chasten me thy wrath.

3. Have mercy on me, O Lord, because I am weak: Heal me, O Lord, because my bones have been racked.

4. And my soul hath been exceedingly disturbed: and thou O Lord, How long?

5. Return, O Lord, deliver my soul, save me for thy mercy's sake.

6. Because there is no one who remembereth thee in death; and in the grave (Hades) who will confess unto thee?

7. I have grown weary with my sighing. Each night shall I bathe my couch, shall I wet my bed with my tears.

8. Mine eye hath been terrified with anger; I have become obsolete in the midst of all my enemies.

9. Stand away from me all ye who are working the transgression because the Lord hath hearkened to the voice of my lamentation;

10. The Lord hath hearkened to my supplication; the Lord hath accepted my votive-prayer.

11. May all mine enemies have been put to shame, and exceedingly disturbed; may they have turned about and have been put to shame very speedily.

COMMENT.

Tried by the standard of revelation, what is said in the first three verses of the first psalm could be applicable strictly speaking to but one man, the perfect man Christ Jesous, and the passage therefore is especially Messianic and oracular. The fifth verse speaks of resurrection, the resurrection of the "worthy" dead who are to be joined with the Christ in judicial rule and who will constitute "a council of justified ones" as here stated. The way of justification is what is referred to in the sixth verse in contrast with the way of condemnation for the irreverent.

The second psalm opens with a picture of the concerted opposition of the nations and Israel as represented by their respective official rulers, culminating in open revolt against God and his Christ.

The fourth and fifth verses state the attitude of God toward open rebellion of this kind.

The sixth verse represents David as God's vice-gerent speaking by appointment in the spirit of Christ and promulgating first the general command of God to be sent down through all the ranks of his subordinates as stated in the seventh verse.

The eighth verse is fraught with resurrectional glory and its promise. The ninth is a prophecy for Christian instruction concerning the coming rule of righteousness. The tenth is a warning and chastening instruction to kings and all in authority and the eleventh and thirteenth verses.

The first verse of the 3rd psalm is its heading, which dates its composition and gives the circumstance in David's experience that inspired it.

The whole psalm is Messianic in the sense that David as a king of Israel and the man of God's choice for this office is the typical pattern and representative of the coming perfect king and man, the son of David, namely. It opens with the confession of human weakness and concludes with the praise of the divine enablement and the assured hope of ultimate salvation and blessing.

The first verse of the 4th psalm is its heading, and begins with the phrase eis to telos an introduction common to at least fifty-six of the psalms, and this psalm is also stated to be "an ode of David's among psalms."

The phrase above referred to and translated "unto the end" is as old as the Levitical priesthood, and to them meant that the teaching following this as a caption contained something necessary to a full initiation into the "mysteries of the divine teaching and life." "Unto the end" in the sense of a full initiation into these mysteries or something for the saint to learn until he has reached the perfected state of the blessed divine life. The same phrase was used by contemporaneous heathendom, for instance of a full initiation into the "Mysteries of Bacchus" and other heathen religions rites.

The second verse is a statement that God hath heard his invocation of righteousness and the result. Also a prayer for pity and request to hear his votive-prayer. This verse is strictly speaking Messianic, because no one but the Christ could plead his own righteousness as he does here.

The third verse is the Messianic appeal to "the sons of men."

The fourth verse tells us moreover that he is "God's Holy One" and not merely a saint or sanctified One" and still more "a marvel."

The fifth verse is a prophecy as well as a statement of fact in regard to the efficacy of this Holy One as a mediator for "the sons of men."

The fifth verse contains the passage quoted by Paul, "Be ye wrathful and sin not." The context makes clear what is meant.

The sixth verse defines a true sacrifice and the true Christian hope.

The seventh makes the light of God's countenance the true portent of good things, as opposed to the heathen idea of signs and portents.

The eighth verse offsets the Christian's rejoicing heart and hope against the maternal blessings accounted by the wicked.

The ninth emphasizes the Christian's peace and hope though he dwell a solitary life upon the earth.

The first verse of the fifth psalm gives the same introduction to the subject-matter and states that this psalm is "concerning the inheritance" meaning of course "of the saints in light."

The second verse calls attention to its oracular import.

The third verse directs the reader's attention to the true object of votive-prayer, namely "my King and my God."

"The morning" referred to in the fourth verse is the morning of the resurrection as indicated clearly in the the last clause of the verse.

The fifth verse is in the minor key of sorrow as well as prophetic of the punishment coming upon the transgressor.

The sixth verse is a double major of God's condemnation of wickedness.

The seventh verse is a consummation and states their doom.

The eighth is resurrectional [illegible] in heaven and its glory.

The ninth verse is the Christian's prayer for guidance and the restoration of his way to uprightness.

The tenth verse gives the parting of the two ways, the way of uprightness and the way of wickedness namely.

The eleventh verse the Christian's prayer that they (the wicked) may have failed of their plots and devices, and a confession of his active co-operation with God to bring it about.

The twelfth verse is the Christian's hope and boast in this matter.

The thirteenth verse states as a reason for this expected result of victory the blessing that awaits the justified one, and of course is especially Messianic.

The first verse of the sixth psalm begins with the same heading as the precedingging two eis to telos with the additional information that it is "David's psalm among hymns concerning the eighth." What does "concerning the eighth" mean? Eighth what, is a natural query. Now eighth being a numeral adjective and its inflectional ending as well as that of the article agreeing with it being feminine indicates that the noun understood with which they agree in gender must be feminine also. The noun meaning day is feminine, and as we know days, feast-days and fast-days observed under the Levitical law were generally indicated by number in the Scriptures, we conclude that "day" is meant here. "The first-fruits day" was numerically "an eighth." So we conclude that this psalm will throw some light upon the reality of which the old first-fruits day was a type.

We find the next seven verses contain a full confession of human inability to cope with sin and its consequences notwithstanding the sinner's abhorence of sin and association with sinners; also an appeal to the divine mercy. Also an absolute refutal of the prevalent modern teaching that death is in someway a healing remedy and Hades (the grave) a conscious state of life at least for the faithful.

The ninth, tenth and eleventh verses constitute a gloria of faith and hope in the mercy of God towards his elect and the ultimate discomfiture of his and their enemies, which as it comes beyond death and the grave implies resurrection. So we draw the conclusion that the special significance of "the eighth day" or "the first-fruits day" was resurrectional truth.

Israel in Egypt—How long?

Abraham was 75 years old when he emigrated to Canaan, Gen. xii. 4. Was 100 when Isaac was born, Gen xxi. 5. Died 175 years old, or 100 years after he entered Canaan, Gen. xxv. 7. Isaac was married at 40, and was 60 when Jacob was born, Gen xxv. 20, 26. Died at 180. Jacob was 130 when he stood before Pharoah in the days of the famine, Gen. xlvii. 9. Died 147 years old, Gen. xlvii. 28.

Joseph was 30 when he stood before Pharoah, and was made ruler over Egypt, Gen. xli. 37–46. Then followed 7 years of plenty and 7 of famine, and during the famine Jacob and family went down into Egypt, Joseph being about 40 years of age. He died at 110, some 70 years after his father stood before Pharoah.

In Gen. xv. 13, Jehovah told Abraham that his seed would go down into Egypt, and serve the Egyptians; and that they should afflict them 400 years, etc. So also Stephen, Acts vii. 6, 7.

Jacob and family moved from Canaan into Egypt just 215 years after Abraham entered Canaan; proved as follows:—

Gen. xvii. 17, giving 25 years.

Isaac was 60, Gen. xxv. 26, at Jacob's birth. Jacob was 130, Gen. xlvii. 8, 9, when before Pharoah. Total 215 years.

The children of Israel prospered and multiplied greatly during the remainder of Joseph's life, or about 70 years, which makes 285 years.

After "Joseph died and all his brethren, and all that generation," a new king arose, who knew not Joseph, who began to afflict Israel, —and they were to be afflicted 400 years, Exod. i. 8–14, which makes 685 years.

From the promise to the Exodus, 430 years, Exod. xii. 40, 41; Gal. iii. 17. See Gen. xii. 40, 41. Israel began to be afflicted when a new king arose over Egypt who knew not Joseph, Exod. i. 7–14.

Our Bible chronology gives only 64 years from the death of Joseph to the birth of Moses—add 80 for the age of Moses when he delivered Israel, and we have only 144 years affliction.

Who can solve the problem?

Inquiry.

Will Brother W. H. Wilson give an explanation of the 144,000 of Rev. 7th and 14th? Are they the same company? and is either the same company as is brought to view in Rev. v. 9, 10, and withall, what are their characteristics? and how made up? Also, please give an explanation of that great multitude of Rev. vii. 9, from who made up, and what will be their position in the kingdom?

Your Brother, in hope.

DANIEL HOWARD.

The goodness or beauty of a Christian's conversation (behavior) consisting in symmetry and conformity to the Word of God as its rule, he ought diligently to study that rule, and to square his ways by it; not to walk at random, but to apply that rule to every step at home and abroad, and to be careful to keep the beauty of his ways unspotted, as those women are of their faces and attire who are studious of comeliness.—Leighton.

LET us unite in singing these words of an unknown author:—

"Father of mercies! speed the promised hour,
Thy kingdom come with all restoring power;
Grace, virtue, knowledge, spread from pole to pole,
Till round the world the ocean waters roll.

The age waits the morning of celestial light;
The nations bid his wisdom for everlasting flight
The changing seasons have their march begun,
The millennial years are listening to the sun.

Even through thick shade by Faith's transpiercing eyes
The new creation shines in purer skies.
All hail! thou age of crime, of suffering ends,
The reign of righteousness from heaven descends.

Vengeance forever sheathes the afflicting sword,
Death is destroyed and Paradise restored;
Earth rising from the ruins of his fall
Is one with God, and God is all in all!"

WHAT must a person do to be saved? Why, he must believe the Gospel of the Kingdom of God and this includes all the offices and work of Christ, John iii. 5; Mark xvi. 15, 16; Acts ii. 38-42. Christ's blood is efficacious only for those who believe and obey his gospel. After obedience they are the Seed of Abraham and heirs according to the promise made to him, Gal. iii. 26, 27; Gen. xiii. 14-17. Abraham was promised THIS EARTH, and all true Christians will have the privilege together with eternal life. Mark v. 5; Rev v. 9, 10.

"IN the resurrection, they neither marry nor are given in marriage, Matt. xxii. 30, that is the state to which the dead rise. They that have done good (shall come forth) to the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil to the resurrection of condemnation." It is testified that Paul preached the resurrection of the dead, Acts xvii. 18. This means more than did the rising from the grave, of Lazarus and the son of the Widow of Nain. The wicked who are amenable to the judgment will have anything but a joyful resurrection; they would prefer to be left in the oblivion of the tomb. Now is the time to secure a resurrection to everlasting life.

Transformed.

"Be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds." Rom. xii. 2.

This is a solemn injunction from the Great Apostle of the Gentiles to those who have believed in Christ. The truth here taught is so vital and far reaching, and so essential to the well-being of the race that we feel constrained to say, that if it was in Apostolic times needful to exhort the believer to enter more fully into the renewed life of the truth, still more needful is it to-day, far removed as we are from the direct spirit testimony to the truth, and when the abounding iniquity of the last days is in full operation, and fainting every religious thought. With all the modern facilities for the increase of knowledge, and all the organizations for the betterment of the human family, and its moral elevation, there are a thousand influences for evil to one of good, and we cannot too often, or too earnestly exhort one another to earnestness and diligence lest we be influenced by our surroundings.

In reminding the Church at Corinth of the gospel he first preached to them, the apostle clearly shows that that gospel so powerful to save will not save them unless they keep it in memory. The reason is obvious:—No one's life and conduct can be regulated by forgotten truths. If the entrance of God's Word gives life, its departure will leave one in darkness, it seems to us, more impenetrable, than if it had never entered. It is he who does the will of God that shall be saved, and how can a person do his will if he forget what that will is? It may sound a little strong to hear it said that salvation is to some extent a question of memory,—but after all, thus it is written, and we submit that what is written must commend itself to the honest hearted. The transforming power of the truth cannot be exerted upon those who allow it to escape them.

But these lines may come under the eye of some who have never exercised faith in the great blessings covenanted of God, and we would be thankful if we could say a word that would awaken them to the fact that their minds, too, must be renewed—radically changed from the bottom up; that they must study and exercise themselves with revealed truth so as to enter into its spirit and become imbued with its character—in short transformed into the image it unfolds. Nothing stands out in bolder relief in the teaching of Jesus and his apostles, than the fact that man needs to undergo a radical change before he is fit for association with the Divine family. The human race is unfit for Divine companionship, and is inexpiritated for intercourse with heaven because of estrangement by sin; and unless there be some means of removing that sin and of changing the sinner into a saint, of making the evil good; and of bringing man from the wilds of wickedness into the paths of truth and righteousness; unless he be brought nigh and so changed in character as to find in God the springs of his life and the source of his joy, and that environment in which he delights to live, and move and have his being, he is not a Christian and is without hope.

Be ye transformed. The word by which Paul presses home the necessity of this great change means a new form, a new habit, as the result of an intelligent belief of the truth. And the means to be employed in effecting this change is clearly revealed. God is not honored by mere sentiments, or blind credulity, or ignorant sincerity. He has abundantly supplied the means of knowledge, and he expects of man intelligent service, and only accepts those who worship in spirit and in truth.

Mind is the result of brain energy. The brain thinking and acting of itself produces only the carnal mind, an individual concerned only with the present and imbued with earthly things, fleshly things,—cannot please God. But when the brain is operated upon by the Word of the Spirit it produces the spiritual mind which leads him upward toward God and divine things, and to the daily practice and exhibition of godliness."

OUR CHILDREN.

My Robin.

When I was a child, beside our door,
In a green and spreading sycamore,
There sang each morning, with note as clear
As a crystal brook, and full of cheer,
A robin.

I watched his plumage in childish glee,
And fancied he sang his song for me;
And the melody lingers in heart and brain,
Making me often a child again
A Robin.

I look for his coming in early spring,
When the crocus opens, and maples bring
Their crimson tassels to kiss the breeze,
And the sunshine dallies with new-leaved trees,
My robin.

I hear them sing as the sun goes down,
And the stars come out o'er the silent town;
But there's never a harsh or mournful note,
That wells afresh from the warblers throat,
My robin.

And I learn a lesson of hope and cheer
That carries me on from year to year;
To sing in the shadow as in the sun,
Doing my part till the work is done.
My robin.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 16.

MOSES AND AARON AND THEIR MESSAGE.

But Moses, despite the assurance of the Lord, is still afraid that his people will not beleive nor hearken unto him; they will deny his divine commission, and will say "the Lord has not appeared unto thee." All this is provided for. Several signs are given him as proof that his words are true. His shepherd's crook is thrown on the ground and it becomes a serpent; he takes it by the tail and it becomes his old shepherd's crook. His hand is thrown into his bosom, and becomes as leprous as snow. He puts it in again, and it turns as his other flesh. If they will not believe the first, nor the second sign, water taken from the Nile is to be poured on the dry land and became blood.

We know, dear children, that no human being can do such things as these. If they are done, God must through the man, do the work. No one but God knows how to put life into inanimate things. No one but he can smite with disease in a moment and heal again in a moment, only he can turn the globules of water into blood.

But Moses still hesitates. It is strange is'nt it? He started out when in Egypt to deliver his people. He was brave enough then, for he supposed that the Hebrews understood how God by his hand would set them free. Acts vii. 25. He makes more excuses; he is "a man of slow speech, and of a slow tongue." This obstacle is also overcome. Aaron the brother of Moses can speak well, he shall be the spokesman for both. He goes back to the land of Midian and and he get Jethro to let him return to his brethr. n in Egypt, that he may see whether they are yet alive. Jethro bids him go in peace. The Lord tells him that the men are dead who sought his life. He takes his wife, his two sons, and the rod of God in his hand and starts on his journey. What an undertaking! Who would now, alone, set out to bring a nation out of an enemies land, over a long dreariesome route into another country, swarming with hostile peoples?

Would any one be brave enough to go alone into the mountinfastnesses of the Nestorians, and bring them away from the fierce Kurds? or who would sing'e-handed undertake the deliverance of the suffering Armenians? who would face the Czar of the Russias and free the persecuted Jews?

Aaron is sent to meet Moses, they come together at the Mount of God. Moses tells his brother all the words of the Lord who had sent him and all the signs which he had commanded him. They reach Egypt, the elders of Israel are gathered, Aaron repeats the words, and does the signs in the sight of all the people. They believe, and when they hear that the Lord has visited his people and glad they are! They bow their heads and worship. Moses and Aaron are to go to the palace now as messengers from the Great God of heaven. To Pharoah they are to say "Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, let my people go that they may hold a feast unto me in the wilderness." They are treated with contempt. "Who is the Lord?" said Pharoah, "that I should obey his voice, to let Israel go?" "I know not the Lord neither will I let Israel go." This is another Pharoah. It is Meneptah, or Darem, the son of Rameses II. Rameses II. died while Moses was in the land of Midian.

Meneptah scolds the task-masters for keeping the people from their work; makes the tasks of the Hebrews harder than before; gives them no more straw to make brick but commands them to gather it for themselves, and make as many brick as they did before. They hunt for stubble in the fields; this takes a great deal of time; hurry as they may, they cannot get the work done. Then their officers are beaten and complain to the king. He says "the people are idle," and that "this is the reason why, they ask to go and sacrifice to the Lord; not a brick shall be taken from their daily tasks.' It is very hard and the people are in perfect despair. They blame Moses and Aaron for it all. Moses now goes to the Lord, just where we all ought to go in trouble. He asks these questions, we feel like asking them too.

"Why hast thou so evil-entreated this people?"

"Why is it that thou hast sent me?" Thou hast not delivered thy people at all!"

What a wonderful answer he receives!

The Lord makes reply that Pharoah shall let his people go. He has established his covenant with them, to give them the land of Canaan. He has heard their groanings and has remembered his covenant.

He tells Moses to go to them again, and say, thus saith the Lord, "I will bring you out from under the bondage of the Egyptians, and I will rid you out of their bondage, and I will redeem you with a stretched out arm and with great judgments. And I will take you to me for a people, and I will be to you a God, and ye shall know that I am the Lord your God. And I will bring you into the land..... and will give it to you for an heritage." What strong promises! "I will" repeated seven times." Moses takes the message, but his people are too full of anguish to heed it.

AUNTIE WINCE.

Prepare.

This word has a world of meaning. Prepare means to get ready. In every work that we undertake to do we must first make preparation to do that work.

Now, our kind, heavenly Father, has given to mankind many glorious and precious promises, and has made it possible for every one to attain unto them, but there must be a preparation.

Dear ones, if you are out of the "Ark of Safety" as God said to Israel in days long passed, so he says to you today, "Prepare to meet your God." Enter now into the "Ark of safety," for when Jesus comes to make up his jewels, there will be no time to prepare. Get ready now. Let the loving spirit and life of Jesus enter into your life, let it purify and cleanse you. Let malice, anger and strife give place to love. O, dear ones, the time is fast passing from you never more to return, do not delay. Jesus will soon be here. Do you want to meet and clasp glad hands once more with that dear father and mother that have been sleeping so long in death's embrace? Do you want to meet that loved sister, wife, husband or brother that have been laid away in their narrow bed. Whose prayers went up to a throne of grace unceasingly in your behalf? If you do, begin to make the necessary preparations today. We all know how sad it is to part with those we love for only a short time, but think of that eternal separation if you fail to prepare yourself.

The way to life eternal is a straight and narrow way, and it is true that there are many thorns [illegible] Jesus says, "I will never leave thee or forsake thee." Then why do you shun him, why would you rather join in the pleasures and pastimes of the world than go to the house of God? Are you not hardening your heart against the entreaties of a loving Savior that has suffered, died, and now stands at the right hand of God, in your behalf, waiting to hear you say, "Lord I give myself to thee." Oh, dear, sinful, wandering one, "list the Joy-bells of heaven ringing with the glad anthem, the Lord has been found." How my heart aches for my own children, and my neighbors children that have not known the depths of a Savior's love. I fear you will tarry by the way until the door is closed and you stand without and knock, and will have to hear that dreadful doom, "depart." Today, life and death are set before you, choose life and live. Believe on the Lord Jesus, repent and be baptized in his name, walk worthy of the vocation in which ye are called and you will receive a crown of life at the appearing of Jesus, and an eternal inheritance in the kingdom of God. Remember, the Scriptures say that, "Youth is the time to serve the Lord."

With kindness and love I have written these lines to those out of Christ.

"I Never Meant It."

In a lonely village not far from the town of——lived an old woman and her son. She was a widow; for her husband was dead; and for many years she had been left alone with no earthly friend to comfort her except this only son. Now this son ought to have taken care of his poor mother, and tried to soothe and make her happy in every way; but instead of doing so, I am sorry to tell you, he was very unkind and disobedient to her. The old lady felt deeply grieved that her son was so wicked, and often talked to him about his bad ways, and prayed God to forgive him. But he would not listen to her; and one day when she had been talking to him as usual, he said, "Oh, mother! if you keep on talking to me so, I'll leave you!" and at last he made up his mind to go. This made his good mother's grief much greater than before, for she was afraid he might go deeper and deeper into sin, but still she set about getting everything ready for his going. The last thing was to pack his box, which she did; and right on the very top she put some paper and envelopes, saying to her son as she did so, "Let me hear from you sometimes; for I shall want to know how you are getting on."

Perhaps some of my little readers know what it is to leave home, and have heard their mothers ask them to write and let her know how they get on: if so, dear children, I hope you will always try to do what your mothers ask; and you will if you love them. But to return to my story. The day of departure came; and, bidding farewell to his good old mother, he left his happy home and native village, and went away, far far over the sea to Australia. Many of you may know where that is; you have perhaps heard a great deal about it, and some may have friends whom they love living there. Well, his poor mother waited six long months, but no letter came with tidings of her boy; at last a year passed away, two years, three, four; but still no letter came to cheer her aching heart. All this time the young man was getting on very well; and at last he made up his mind to come home and see his mother, for he often thought of her, and how carefully and prayfully she watched over him.

So he came (that long voyage over the sea), and was safely landed in England. His first act was to go to his native village, and there he saw everything the same, exactly the same as when he left it. Then winding through the lanes he came full in sight of the home of his childhood and youth; and his heart bounded within him when he saw how much the old house was improved and the thought came to his mind, "My mother has got on since I have been away." So up to the house he came with trembling steps, and with a beating heart he knocked at the door; a servant came, and the young man asked if Mrs. ——lived there.

[illegible] the servant.

"How long is it since she died?" inquired he.

"About six or eight months!"

"And of what did she die?" eagerly continued the young man.

"Oh let me see," said the servant, "she had a bad son, and she died of a broken heart."

This was too much, he could hear no more, but at once hurried off to the churchyard, and there he found her grave, with a stone at the head bearing her name. This cut him to the heart with sorrow and grief, and he threw himself on her grave, crying out. "Oh! mother, I never meant it; I never meant it!" But it was too late now—his mother's ears could never hear his cries and words of repentance.

Children, God has given you parents; will you not learn a lesson from this boy and listen when they reprove you for doing wrong? Remember, if God should take them from you, it will be too late to be sorry; they will have gone to their graves with broken hearts, and you will have to cry, "Too late, too late."

Selected.

What is Christ to us?

He is our Way; we walk in him.

He is our Truth; we embrace him.

He is our Lord; we choose him to rule over us.

He is our Master; we serve him.

He is our Teacher; instructing us in the way of salvation.

He is our Prophet; pointing out the future.

He is our Priest; having atoned for us.

He is our Advocate; ever living to make intercession for us.

He is our Savior; saving to the uttermost.

He is our Root; we grow from him.

He is our Bread; we feed upon him.

He is our Fold; we enter it by him.

He is our Shepherd; leading us into green pastures.

He is our True Vine; we abide in him.

He is the Fairest among ten thousand; we admire him above everything.

He is the Brightness of the Father's Glory, and the express image of his person; we strive to reflect his likeness.

He is the Upholder of all things; we rest upon him.

He is our Wisdom; we are guided by him.

He is our Righteousness; we cast all our imperfections upon him.

He is our Sanctification; we draw all the sources of holy life from him.

He is our Redemption; redeeming us from all iniquity.

He is our Healer; healing all our diseases.

He is our Friend; relieving us in all our necessities.

He is our Brother; cheering us in our difficulties.

He is our Resurrection; though we die, we shall live again by him.

He is our Eternal Life; we shall receive "the breath of immortality" from him. —N. Bishop.

PROVERBS.

They who forsake the law, praise the wicked; but such as keep the law, contend with them.

Evil men understand not judgment; but they who seek Yahweh understand all things.

Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit? There is more hope of a fool than of him.

Open rebuke is better than secret love; faithful are the wounds of a friend; but the kisses of an enemy are deceitful.

Though thou shouldst bray a fool in a mortar among wheat with a pestle, yet will not his foolishness depart from him.

Whoso keepeth the law (or obeyeth the gospel) is a wise son.

He that turneth away his ear from hearing the law (or the gospel), even his prayer is abomination.

Whoso causeth the righteous to go astray in an evil way (and the blind to wander from the truth) he shall fall himself in his own pit.

[illegible] he be saved; but he that is perverse in his ways shall fall at once.

He that being often reproved, hardeneth his neck, shall suddenly be destroyed, and that without remedy.

The fear of man bringeth a snare, but whoso putteth his trust in Yahweh shall be safe.

Every word of God is pure. Add thou not unto his words, lest he reprove thee, and thou be found a liar.

There is a generation that is pure in their own eyes, and yet is not washed from their filthiness.

The froward is abomination to Yahweh; but his secret is with the righteous.

The wise shall inherit glory; but shame shall be the promotion of fools.

Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom: and with all thy getting get understanding.

Take fast hold of instruction; let it not go: keep it; for it is thy life.

The path of the just is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

The way of the wicked is darkness; they know not at what they stumble.

Cease, my son, to hear the instruction that causeth thee to err from the words of knowledge.

The words of my mouth, saith Wisdom, are in righteousness: they are all plain to him that understandeth, and right to them that find knowledge.

Whoso findeth me findeth life, and shall obtain in favor of Yahweh. But he that sinneth against me, wrongeth his own soul: all them that hate me, love death.

Righteousness delivereth from death.

A rod is for the back of him that is void of understanding.

Wise men lay up knowledge; but the mouth of the foolish is near destruction.

The lips of the righteous know what is acceptable; but the mouth of the wicked speaketh frowardness.

Justification.

1. We are justified by the Grace of God. That is the source of our justification, Rom iii. 24; Titus ii. 7.

2. We are justified by the Obedience of Christ. That is the basis on which it rests, Rom. v. 19.

3. We are justified by the Blood of Christ. That is the way it has been brought about, Rom. v. 9.

4. We are justified by the Resurrection of Christ from the dead. That is its confirmation—the proof that God has accepted the atonement of Christ, Rom. iv. 25.

5. We are justified by Faith. That is the hand which lays hold of it. Rom. v. 1; Gal. iii. 8.

6. We are justified by Works. That is the proof we have of it. James ii. 20-26.

7. It is all of God. "Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth." Rom. viii. 33.—The Truth.

OBITUARY.

Died, in the Lord, on Tuesday morning, April 9, 1895, Sister Fannie Chase, wife of Peleg Chase, of Raisin, Mich. Her maiden name was White. She was born in Searsburgh, N. Y., Oct. 13, 1830. Coming with her parents to Michigan they settled in Deerfield. She was married to Bro. Peleg Chase Dec. 14, 1851, and subsequently settled on "the old home-stead" and birth-place of her husband, in Raisin Township. Eight years ago she with her husband, having learned the Gospel of the Kingdom and the things pertaining to Jesus Christ, yielded a willing obedience to the truth and were, by the writer, baptized in the saving name of Christ and rose to walk in the "New Life." Sister Chase was a loving wife, a kind neighbor, a steadfast friend and an earnest Christian. Those of the brethren and sisters, and especially Brother and Sister Woodward, who attended the last conference held in Raisin will remember her kindly greeting and earnest exhortations in the meetings, but she has finished her course, she rests from her labors till the time of reward. Funeral services were held at the [illegible] writer endeavored to speak words of comfort from the text "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord," after which we laid her to rest in Oak Wood Cemetery, feeling that in her home, by the neighbors, in the Church and Sunday School she will be missed, oh so much. May that kind and loving Father who knows all our grief, watch over, bless and comfort our dear Brother in his great sorrow, is our earnest prayer.

Don't Fret.

Are your enemies at work?
Don't fret.
They can't injure you a whit;
If you heed them not a bit
They will soon be glad to quit.
Don't fret.

Has a horrid lie been told?
Don't fret.
It will run itself to death,
As the ancient adage saith,
And will die for want of breath.
Don't fret.

Is adversity your lot?
Don't fret.
Fortune's wheel keeps turning 'round
Every spoke shall touch the ground,
All in time shall up and bound.
Don't fret.

Temptation and Consolation.

"There hath no temptation taken you, but to such as is common to man: but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation, also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it." 1 Cor. x. 13. The ideas that are here contained, which was given by the apostle Paul to the Corinthian brethren is worthy of our careful consideration, for this practical, most precious text of Scripture lines out the Christian course of action to be taken in each and every trial and temptation here, which is all important for us to know: first, "There hath no temptation taken you, but such as is common to man:" and with this saying the following thoughts arise. Does this have reference to man in general? to the mass of mankind? or to the man of God? the Christian man? Here the evidence must be weighed and settled according to the testimony given, and first you will here please notice the expression given, "but such as is common to man." It seems to carry the idea with it as though it meant the mass of mankind, but is it true? Right here we ask, If it is mankind in general, then the mass of man has the same amount, the same kind of trials, temptations that the Christian man has. Then they are tempted and tried for the truth's sake just the same as the Christian man. Then there is no difference between them. Is it a fact that the man of the world is tempted and tried like the saint of God, when he makes no profession of Christianity at all? It is a fact that nearly all trials and temptations are just the same, but here comes the difference between them while the Christian's duty is to overcome them—the man of the world does not care to, hence does not endure the trials and temptations, does not even try to overcome them, but the saint of God is not so, but to use every means at command to overcome, and even if he is led astray, and has committed sin, it is his place to acknowledge his sin, confess that he has sinned, pleading in Jesus' name that it may be forgiven him. Besides he must be sincere and honest in his convictions, otherwise it will do him no good. We as infallible, finite beings are surrounded by circumstances, are unable to control them all, yet to a very extended degree we can control the most of them, thus be the victor in Jesus' name, for "the Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation." 2 Pet. ii. 9. These temptations are severe ones and require the Lord to help as in the case of Lot. Why Lot and his family could not walk out of that great city as easy as he walked into it is somewhat strange to me, but it seems to be the Lord's way to deliver him whether he was able to deliver himself or not is not stated, but the Lord did deliver him, thus it seems to be the Lord's way. There are a few extreme cases which the Lord directs to bring about his purpose. In looking over the previous verses of the 10th chap. of 1 Cor., we find that the apostle Paul was rehearsing to the followers of the Lord the trials and temptations that the whole nation of Israel had to endure, while passing through the wilderness. It is a fact that the trials and temptations were so severe that there were only two that came out of Egypt that were able to enter the promised land, nor did any or all of the other nations have the same kind and the same amount of trials and temptations that nation of Israel had, not by any means, for God's people were differently tried, while passing through the wilderness than any other nation at that time, or ever have been since as the record plainly shows, for God was with them acting through his angels, leading them through the wilderness under greater restrictions than any other nation has yet ever been called upon to pass through. Still another case, a single individual, the patriarch Job, who was covered with boils from the sole of his foot to the crown of his head. I want to say right here that one such boil would be enough for me to endure, let alone being covered all over with them, and how he lived through and endured it all is a terrible thought to me. By the way it is a fact that patience was brought to a state of perfection. Also David the king, at the time that Absalom revolted and tried to make himself king—David had to flee out of the city for safety, was in a state of humiliation, while thus waiting to see how things would go on Shimei of the house of Saul threw stones at David and cursed him, and made sport of him, one of David's friends said shall I go and fall on him that I may kill him; but David said not so, for he would not have him killed, but soon the news came of Absalom's death then he was restored back to his throne again and throughout all these trials king David did endure them all, that patience was brought to a state of perfection. So we see in these trials and temptations that it is not the case of all people. So we see by these that the kind of temptations that the apostle Paul had reference to were not like these, but they were such temptations as were common to man, then it is the common temptations that he suffers us to be in, then it is a consoling truth to know that we have them all alike, that like it is said of our Savior that he was tempted in all points like as we are yet without sin. Heb. vi. 15. Then we have another Scripture which says, be sober, be vigilant, because your adversary the devil as a roaring lion walking about seeking, whom he may devour, whom resist steadfast in the faith, knowing that the same afflictions are accomplished in your brethren that are in the world. 1 Peter v. 8, 9. So that whatever afflictions come against us we may well remember that we are not alone, but that the same afflictions are accomplished in our brethren that are every where in the world, so that it is not altogether right for us to think that we have more trouble than any body else; but let us be strengthened that it is a great and consoling truth to that the same afflictions are accomplished in our brethren that are in the world. Then the ordinary trials and temptations are common to all of us as we are able to bear them. Then again let us be taught and strengthened to glory in the tribulation, knowing that tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope, and hope maketh not ashamed because the love of God is shed abroad in your hearts by the Holy Spirit which is given unto us. Rom. v. 3, 4, 5. Hence a line of thought is given unto us, step by step to put in practice that we may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. 2 Tim. iii. 17. Then again we are taught that throughout all our trials and temptations here we should remember that God is faithful and able to do all that he has promised to do. So that in whatever condition our lot may be cast we may rest assured of one thing that God is faithful. Also says who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape that ye may be able to bear it. Please notice again here what it says, "who (God) will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able to bear. It is a fact that God suffers us to some extent at least to be tempted and tried, but will not suffer us to be tried above that we are able. God who is allwise knows our every want before we ask. Then knows he every weakness, also knows what is best for our good, therefore knows just how much to suffer us under any and all trials and temptations, but in all that he suffers us, he will not suffer us to be tempted more than we are able to bear, but will, with the temptation also make a way to escape that ye may be able to bear it. Now for the way of escape, and glad am I that such a means is provided, and good will it be for any of us if we only make use of the means at our command, and now how has the Lord provided a way of escape by which we may be crowned with success is our entire reliance on his Word, and we now venture this one assertion, that all the trials and temptations that befall us, will all come under the three great temptations that befell our Savior, and we will do exceeding well to take him for our example, and then learn just how he did, and that he made use of the whole Word of the Lord at every step to conquer the foes in his defence in battling for the right, and overcoming the wrong, and says thus it is written or a thus saith the Lord, was his weapon of warfare, and now forces to win any when near the same kind of a victory. We must be willing and ready on every hand to have the Word of God at our command, and make use of it in struggling for the right and overcome the wrong, and humbly say, thus it is written. So it is absolutely necessary that we be sufficiently versed in the sacred Word, that we be ready to call to mind at every step of wrong whatever may be required and say, thus it is written, that the Word may keep us straight in line to win the prize at the end of the race.

Are You Under Protection.

The above caption suggests not only danger, but also a place of refuge from impending evil. The above topic came to my mind with much force while reading in Exodus the account of that fearful night when the death angel passed through the land of Egypt, and death was found in every home not under the blood of the passover lamb.

Dear reader, do you realize the truth, that this is a type of a coming day so graphically described in God's Holy Book, when the death-angel will pass through every land, and visit not only every home, but every person not under the protection of the blood of our Passover Lamb, which God in his loving mercy has provided for us?

When Jesus started on his sublime mission, it was under the character of a lamb. John points him out as "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." This is God's choice of a Passover Lamb, which was destined to be offered on the fourteenth day of the first month, the time selected under the law for the offering of the passover lamb. See Mark xiv. 12, and you will find proof that he was offered at that time. We there read that on "the first day of unleavened bread, when they killed the passover," etc., the disciples wanted to know where to prepare the passover, etc., and on that very night (Tuesday) he was apprehended, tried, and was offered on the cross at nine o'clock, Wednesday morning. The time for the offering of the passover lamb lasted from Tuesday evening to Wednesday evening. Christ and his disciples did eat the passover the first evening, and he was put on the cross at nine o'clock Wednesday morning, and died at three o'clock Wednesday evening, and was buried about six o'clock, the same evening. He was in the grave all day Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and also all of Wednesday night, Thursday night, and Friday night, and raised near six o'clock Saturday evening. Hence, the Passover Lamb provided by God for us, was offered according to the law on the fourteenth day of the first month, and according to his own Word, he was in the grave just exactly three full days and three nights, no more and no less.

Under the law, the lamb must be without spot, or blemish. God's Lamb was also without "blemish." See 1 Pet. 18, 19: "Forasmuch as ye know that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as silver and gold, from your vain conversation received by tradition from your fathers; But with the precious blood of Christ as of a lamb without blemish and without spot." As the Israelites were required to use the blood from a spotless lamb, so we are redeemed by the blood of Christ, the precious, spotless Lamb of God, provided for us by a loving Father.

We read in Hebrews that Christ hath "appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." What kind of a sacrifice? See 1 Cor. v. 7: "Christ our passover is sacrificed for us." Then "the blood of Christ, as a lamb without blemish and without spot," becomes the passover blood of the slain lamb to all those who appropriate it according to legal form. The word passover signifies that those who are under the protection of the blood of the Passover Lamb will not be "hurt of the second death," for they are written in the Lamb's Book of Life," and will be passed over, while others who do not appropriate this passover escape, will be hurt of the second death.

Under the law, the passover lamb was to be eaten, so, Jesus as our passover Lamb has to be eaten symbolically. At the time he ate the passover, according to the Mosaic law, he "took bread, and blessed and brake it, and gave it to them, and said, "Take, eat: this is my body. And he took the cup, and when he had given thanks he gave it to them; and they all drank of it. And he said unto them this is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many." "Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except you eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you." This of course has special reference to the life to come, as is indicated by the next verse: "Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life; and I will raise him up at the last day." (When the Life-Giver comes.)

Again, there must be a fitness of the individual to entitle him to partake of this memorial passover. The apostle says: "Whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord." "He that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body."

We observe from the above testimony that this memorial passover must be eaten, as the Lord said: "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you," or in other words ye are not entitled to receive the resurrection life, which is promised to those who do so eat and drink. "Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood hath eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day." And also "the Lord's body" must be discerned in the symbols chosen by our Lord to be eaten as a memorial of him, as "our passover sacrificed for us." To eat of them without discernment, we endanger our eternal interests.

The Israelites could not partake of the passover feast as a memorial (Exod. xii. 14,) until after the event had happened, the lamb had been slain, and the blood applied. Neither are we entitled to partake of the memorial feast of "Christ our passover slain for us," unless in the first place, the blood has been applied, and become efficacious in our case.

Now the real point at issue is,

HOW DOES CHRIST BECOME OUR PASSOVER?

We read of "Christ our passover sacrificed for us." What was the object of his being "sacrificed for us?" We read, that he "put away sin by the sacrifice of himself." The next thing to enquire is, in what way can this sacrificial blood "put away sin?" We read that he "washed us from our sins in his own blood." Now, as we cannot be literally washed in his blood by what means can our sins be washed away? See Acts xxii. 16: "Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins."

In Rev. vii. 14, John sees a great multitude come out of the great tribulation, who "have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the (passover) Lamb." Washing in water (which may symbolize his blood, as the bread and wine does his body and blood) is the only appointed way, revealed in God's Word, by which a repentant sinner can have his sins washed away. See Acts xvi. 33: "He took them the (jailor and household, who were Gentiles) same hour of the night, and washed their stripes and were baptized."

Christ is the one who cleanses from sin. Eph. v. 26, tells us how he does it: "Christ also loved the Church, and gave himself for it; that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the Word." Titus iii. 5: "He saved us by the washing of regeneration," etc., or the birth of water. John iii. What did he accomplish by this "washing of regeneration?" the answer comes: "He saved us." The question each one should ask him or herself, is, have I been "washed," and properly washed at that? If you are not washed, you are filthy, and unsaved; as the washed ones are the only ones that are "saved." Does not John iii. unmistakably affirm: "Except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God?" Universalists say you can. Which do you believe?

While contaminated with sin we are regarded as filthy, unclean, unfit for the companionship of the pure and holy; in fact, such are compared to a sow wallowing in the mire. When a person has been cleansed from the filth of sin by being "washed" in the blood of the Lamb (arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins) and again defiles himself, he is likened to "the sow that had washed (returning) to wallowing in the mire."

"Are ye ignorant that all we (this language was spoken to Romans who are Gentiles but applies to Jews as well) who were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into his death? We were buried, therefore, with him through baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised from the dead through the glory of the Father, so we also might walk in newness of life." After being baptized, buried, submerged, or washed we can then "walk in newness of life," being cleansed from the defilement of sin. It is after this burial, or washing, that we commence to walk the new, clean life. A filthy person must first wash, before he can become clean. Says Peter: "Seeing ye have purified your souls (lives) in your obedience to the truth unto unfeigned love of the brethren, love one another from the heart fervently."

This brings us a step further, and that is, "obedience to the truth,' spoken of by Peter as a said, that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations (not Jews alone) beginning at Jerusalem." I am glad that he told us that all nations should have the opportunity to have their sins remitted by "obedience to the truth," and also that it should begin at Jerusalem, for now we can refer to the proclamation of the truth on that occasion, and learn just what was required of "all nations" both to believe and do, to secure the remission of sins. The message delivered by Peter on the day of Pentecost (which was the time and place that repentance and remission of sins began to be proclaimed in the name of Jesus, and was also destined ultimately to be preached among all nations) pricked his hearers to the heart. That message was concerning a resurrected Christ to sit upon the throne of David, and Peter convicted them that Jesus was that very Christ. Then they cried out: "Brethren, what shall we do? And Peter said unto them, Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins."

This is the way, and the only way a repentant sinner can come under the protection of Christ, our Passover. False teachers may delude you by dangerous doctrine, called Universalism, and thus lead you to neglect to appropriate Christ as your passover until it is too late. Let me in love warn you to beware of such doctrine, lest it lead you not to comply with the requirements which will insure you a shelter in the time of storm, which is near at hand; yea, nearer than most people may think. Smooth pretty talk which they indulge in, may sound very nice just now, but it will never carry you beyond the storm into the City of Peace. You must be washed from your sins in the blood of our Passover Lamb according to legal form, just the same as the Israelites had to sprinkle the blood of the slain lamb on the lintels and door posts. We know death would have followed neglect. "If the word spoken through angels proved steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward: how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?" You cannot do it, beware, I beseech you.

Another equally dangerous doctrine, is that baptism is not required of Gentiles, it being applicable to Jews only. Read the tenth chapter of Acts and be convinced that such doctrine is positively false.

Peter was sent to the household of Cornelius, who were Gentiles. Peter says: "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is acceptable to him." He then spoke to them about the good tidings of peace preached by Jesus, beginning from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached. And how he was crucified and rose the third day. And "through his name every one that believeth on him shall receive remission of sins. While he spake these Words the Holy Ghost fell on them which heard the Word." "Then answered Peter, Can any man forbid water these (Gentiles) should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we? And he commanded them to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ." I would have you remember that Peter was a specially selected messenger to these Gentiles, to teach them the way of life. He was also marvelously filled with the Holy Spirit, so that he spake as he was moved by the Holy Spirit. Hence, under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, he says: "Can any man forbid water that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we? And commanded them to be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ." Which do you believe the Word of the Holy Spirit through Peter, or false teachers? Can this command be set aside at pleasure? What was the object of Peter's visit to Cornelius? See Acts xi. 13, 14: "Send man to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter; who shall tell thee words whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved." A part of those saving "words" to these Gentiles was: "And commanded them to be baptized." Who sent him? See verse 12: "And he is a man separate from sinners; such is a holy man. May we grow up to the standard of the habitually holy by repeated conquest of ourselves! And not forget that we may progress in holiness all our days. We can become wiser daily in understanding the pleasure of our Father; and the better we understand, if we only have a corresponding disposition, the holier we can grow. Let us "follow after holiness," until we are "established" therein, at the coming of our Lord, the Christ. And may grace more abundant help each of us, whose infirmities are most obstinate and rebellious!—Kellaway.

Baptism.

It is strange that the action of gospel obedience should have occupied so much time and so many volumes to define. Water is admitted to be the medium through which it is performed; and that the terms used in connection with its administration are burial, planting, birth, "body washed." Can a man be buried, or seed planted, without being put out of sight? And is not a birth an emergence from a cavity in which the thing born was previously concealed? Then water baptism is a being put out of sight in water, and to be born of it is to emerge from the bosom of the deep.

It is impossible to estimate the power of good, in this sad, struggling life, of a bright, glad, shining face.

"If all the lights you carry in your face,
Joy shines farthest out to sea."

One of the best things any of us can do for this world is to show it ever a victorious life of joy, a face that shines even through tears, a beauty of the Lord which glows with radiance even in the night. That is the life the Master wants every follower of his to live; and we can live it, too, if our life is truly hid with Christ in God.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

The Chino-Japanese War has brought about a regular migration of population in Japan. Since the imperial court was established at Hiroshima for military convenience Tokio is almost deserted, while Hiroshima is crowded and raising her charges. Wages have doubled, provisions gone up in price, and Western customs prevail. Hiroshima is most beautifully situated on the coast at the foot of the mountains, with a lovely view over the sea and innumerable rocky islands. It is the biggest city of Western Japan.

Holiness.

Who is the holy man? Is it he who has flattered himself into a feeling of self-goodness? Is it he who feels composed in his mind, and will not be disturbed by any blast, however wild? Is it he who excites himself into an unhealthy religious phrenzy? No; such is is not a holy man in the light of Scripture and truth. He is a holy man who, having heard the Gospel and believed it has obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine delivered by apostolic teaching. The humble, repentant, believing man, who has "gladly received the Word," and has been immersed into the Christ, is holy. He is joined to the "Holy One and the Just." The name of the Holy is called upon him. The Spirit of the Holy (the Holy Spirit) is in him. The word of the Holy is his delight. The will of the Holy is his study. His fellowship is with saints. He has been excised from the world, and grafted into Christ. He has been cut from the tree of Adam, in order to be united to the true vine, Christ. The state of that man is "Holiness unto the Lord!" He is in the Lord. Such a man, as he reads the revelation of the divine will, and as he considers Jesus, becomes more and more acquainted with what God would have him do. Daily he increases in a knowledge of the Lord concerning him. And with good-will he conforms himself to the pleasure of his Father, and the example of Jesus. Thus he uses himself to practices which are separate from those of the flesh and the world, and he is a practically holy man. His practice grows into a habit; and he becomes habitually holy. He is so filled with Christ, that for him to live is Christ. His life is all love, obedience, self-sacrifice. Jesus appears in his ways and his words. Such is a man renewed after Christ; such

Dear Restitution:

As I see there is a wish for all to write, and I feel thankful for the opportunity of saying "Good Morning" to all the readers of our beloved paper. Oh how dreary would the time be without the paper as I do not hear preaching very often. While in Cleveland I heard both Brother Joblin and Brother McLauchlan, and was much edified and instructed in the truth. May God bless them both. I beg an interest in your prayers that I may hold out faithful to the end.

BIANNA FISHER.

Dear Restitution:

I have been thinking for some time that I would write a few lines for THE RESTITUTION. I with my two brothers were baptized into Christ last February. We do not have much preaching here of the glad tidings of the soon coming kingdom. Dear brothers and sisters we have not long to wait, our time is short.

"The night is far spent, the day is at hand
Are you ready for the Bridegroom's coming?"

Let us put on the whole armor of God that we may be able to stand. Pray for me, that I may hold out faithful to the end.

JOHN DE KINDER.

Dear Restitution:

As my subscription has expired I thought I would write you a few lines and let you know that I am still alive and looking for the coming of our dear Lord to end all the sorrows and trials of this present evil world. When I feel sad and lonely I take up the dear paper and read the encouraging words from others, and it lightens my heart and I take courage and go on in the good way, trying to win the prize that will be given to the faithful. I think THE RESTITUTION one of the best papers published. I lend mine to my neighbors and hope good will result from it.

Hoping to meet you all in the kingdom of Christ, I remain your sister in hope of immortality when Jesus comes.

MRS. MAGGIE FAREWELL.

Editor Restitution:

If this is worthy of a place in your columns will you please publish it. On March 10th, 1895, we had services at the Horner School House, in Stark County, Ind. I spoke on the second coming of Christ. One sister came out and made the good confession and put on Christ by baptism. At the water a brother came forward and he too obeyed the gospel. Quite a number here believe the gospel but say we are not a popular church. I praise God that we are the "little flock," for it is the "Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." "And as I say unto you, I say unto all, watch, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." Will he find us watching?

Yours in the faith.

G. W. SMITH.

Dear Restitution.

I have thought a great many times that I would write a little for THE RESTITUTION. I love to hear from the brothers and sisters which are scattered all over the world. Oh how I wish I could meet you all in this world, but this is impossible. If we overcome and come out from every thing that is of this world we will meet in the kingdom of God. When I look around at the different churches, and see the way in which they are conducted it seems to me that if we are followers of Christ, we should separate ourselves from them. We all have many temptations to overcome, but we cannot serve God and mammon. We must put on the whole armor of God and humble ourselves and become as little children. Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man the things which God has prepared for them that love him.

Yours, waiting for the kingdom.

INEZ GANTON.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

Time has passed wearily away since I last wrote. Pain and wakefulness have stretched the hours into tripple length; but through it all a strong arm sustained me. Yes in my weakness, my faith and hope were my strength. The Lord in mercy spared me to my loved ones to work a little longer in his vineyard, though it be little that I can do. I cannot walk, but am thankful to be able to read and write a little as strength permits. I have so many things for which to be thankful, but above all, I am most thankful that it has been my privilege to know the truth as it is in Jesus, and to the truth to be made free. We are living in an age when sin and unrighteousness are abroad in the world; when God's power is not seldom heard over the people, and but few men or women are given a Bible reason for the hope that is within them. This is but one of the many signs which are so fast fulfilling. It seems that we are in the very dawn of that great and notable day. Oh! may we have to be ready for the soon coming for he who has promised will surely come. May he find us worthy and waiting for him. Let us ever bear in mind that the Kingdom of God is not food and drink, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit. Peace and love to all who call on the Lord of a pure heart.

Your Sister,

E. H. BAKER.

To the loved ones of like precious faith:

I thought that I would cast in my mite with those that I love. Our blessed Bible tells us that "They who love the Lord spake often one to another and that a book of remembrance was kept." Oh it cheers me so much to read the letters from those of like faith. This may be the last time that I can write, as I am gradually growing worse and suffering more daily with cancer. I have been afflicted for four years, and the Doctor has told me that no human help could cure me. My brothers, and sisters, I ask an interest in the prayers of all the dear ones who love and fear our Lord and Master. I believe that the fervent, effectual prayer of the righteous availeth much. In Matt. xxi. 22, we read, "And all things whatsoever ye ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive." Mark xi. 24 tells us, "Therefore I say unto you what things ye soever desire, when ye pray believe that ye receive them and ye shall have them." I am trying to serve my Lord and Master the best I can, although I fail in many ways, yet; I trust in the promises of God. I want to be an overcomer. He tells us in Rev. iii. 5, that "He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment, and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels." Dear ones, do we watch and pray believing that the kingdom is nigh at hand? We are told to watch for we know not when our Lord cometh. I want to have my lamp trimmed, and oil to replenish when the Bridegroom comes. Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

Your Sister, in the one hope

There is a difference between being built up in the most holy faith and being puffed up by pride.

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-advem. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

Niagara Falls Excursion, Thursday, August 8, 1895, via the Lake Erie and Western R. R.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see it accomplished. As we are circumscribed at present, we cannot offer premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us a renewal and a new name one year, one-half pound of our tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks who are not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application of any them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause to have some means at their disposal to assist in this work. Remember "he that watereth shall be watered himself," and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You do not pay us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would go a step further that all calls to be baptized be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God has spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the possession of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Blessed Land of Galilee.

Tune "Sweet Galilee."

1.

O Blessed Land of Galilee!
How was the lot which fell to thee
Familiar to his voice so long;
Scroft thy paths he first among

Chorus.

Oh Galilee, dear Galilee,
Knit with his life and ministry!
What shall thy heights and valleys see,
Thrice blessed Land of Galilee?

2.

Ye heard the cries, ye saw the tears,
The suffering of these waiting years,
Ye saw him stand in glittering white;
Ye saw him exalted in risen might.

3.

To Galilee on thy hills round sea,
First came his word, "Come follow me!"
And men from out thy coasts were those
His life he first blessed, that day he rose.

4.

From homes of thine came forth the throng,
Who sang that night the marriage song,
When earth was touched with Power Divine,
And water at his word was wine.

5.

Thy multitudes were those he fed;
The deaf and blind, thy dumb restored;
To hear and see and praise the Lord.

6.

O Galilee, that lieth now
A stranger's brand upon thy brow,
By strangers lost thy shrines down-trod,
Yet standeth sure the Word of God!

7.

Thou Bridegroom land, Land of the Bride,
Thou glory of all land beside
The morn shall see thee robed and crowned.

Chorus.

Zion of God, through all thy length,
Jerusalem put on thy strength!
We see the glory o'er thee stand;
We see the day of Christ at hand.

The above beautiful song was composed by H. G. Spafford of the Jerusalem Colony, while visiting the land of Galilee, where Christ first proclaimed the Gospel of the Kingdom. They have been kindly furnished for publication in THE RESTITUTION. There are two choruses, sing the first one to the first six verses, and the second to the last verse. It is well worth copying into your hymn books, and sing to the tune of "Sweet Galilee."

Original.

News from Jerusalem. No. 1.

Myself along with others, made another visit to the Jerusalem Colony now visiting Chicago, and were very cordially received by them. Evening drawing on, they invited us to remain and take tea with them, which we did. One occurrence impressed me very much. That was while at the tea table they broke out in a jubilant song of thanksgiving to Almighty God (on whom we all must for every good and perfect gift) for the food we were about to partake of. To me it was quite impressive and appropriate.

They related to us a remarkable occurrence of a portion of the tribe of Gad coming up to Jerusalem. One day, while walking about the city, they noticed about two hundred and fifty people resting by the roadside, wearied, desolate and hungry, with clothes worn out and insufficient to cover them. Upon investigation, they were found to be a portion of the tribe of Gad. The colony sheltered and fed all that they possibly could at their home. Others found shelter as best they could in caves, etc. The Jews in Jerusalem received them unkindly, and refused to either feed, shelter or clothe them. They told them to go back to where they came from. When they found that they were receiving food from the Colony, by threats they deterred them from receiving it, and as a result several died from starvation. Finally they relented, and the Colony fed and clothed them as best they could. It must be remembered this Colony is not composed of rich people, they depend upon God for their daily sustenance, and the means to relieve the distress of others. They relate marvelous instances of the way God has dealt with them. As for me it strengthens my faith, and at some future time may relate them for your benefit.

These Gadites are now all housed, and following their various avocations and are self-sustaining. Since this arrival, others have come, until now, there are about one thousand Gadites in Jerusalem. This Colony remembered the Word: "Blessed be he that enlargeth Gad." They have been blessed for services rendered to God, and the company of Gadites have been "enlarged" in Jerusalem.

They say, these people bring with them unmistakable evidence that they are Gadites. They have many men of culture and education among them. They came from a great distance in Arabia, and were a long time on their journey, and encountered great difficulties and delays on their journey.

When questioned as to their object in coming to Jerusalem, they say they could give no reason for it. They never that an irresistable impulse came upon them that they must go up to Jerusalem, which they started believing that it was the Spirit of God leading them. And now, dear readers, how does this move you? It strikes me that God is moving in a wonderous manner to fulfill his prophetic Word. The more I see of these things, the deeper it impresses me with the necessity of a closer walk with God, a holy consecrated life: we are of a truth on the verge of the great consummation. My Bible says: "To him that overcometh, to him will I give to eat of the tree of life." "He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death." "To him that overcometh to him will I give of the hidden manna." "He that overcometh, and he that keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give authority over the nations." "He that overcometh shall thus be arrayed in white garments; and I will in nowise blot his name out of the book of life." "He that overcometh, I will make him a pillar in the temple of my God." "He that overcometh, I will give to him, to sit down with me in my throne, as I also overcame, and sat down with my Father in his throne."

Dear reader, would it not be well for us in a season of quiet meditation, secluded from all outside influences, in a spirit of devotion, to seriously examine our ownselves and ascertain, if possible, what there may be about us which hinders us from becoming a triumphant overcomer in the name of Jesus. We ought to seriously take to heart the fact, that none of the above precious army of promises will ever be realized by us except we are overcomers.

Would it not be well for all baptized gospel believers to give more earnest attention to becoming personal overcomers and give Universalists and all other foolish hobby-riders who tramp the country trying to distract your minds with the thinkings of the flesh, the go-by? Having learned the true faith of the gospel, and become obedient thereto, we have no time to waste on such things. We all of us have got all the business on hand we can attend to by proclaiming the saving faith to others, and watching our ownselves that we may not fail in becoming faithful overcomers. This is urgent business, which cannot be neglected without suffering loss. It is absolutely certain we have but little time left; let us examine our lamps, and see that they are trimmed and filled. It is folly to delay, we do not know what moment we may hear the announcement. "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh!" It will be of no use to rush about in consternation then, and try to get your light shine when you find you have no oil in your lamps. These are thoughts that come to mind in thinking of the marvelous fulfillment of God's word which our Jerusalem Colony testify they have seen in the Holy land. I have other interesting matter to relate to you, which I will reserve for another article.

W. H. WILSON.

The Restoration of the Kingdom to Israel.

"Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" Acts i. 6.

This was a question which the apostles asked of Jesus during the interim between his resurrection and ascension, when he was "seen of them for forty days, speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." They had been sent to preach to the Jews that the kingdom had come near to them. Matt. x. 5-8; Luke x. 9. Jesus himself proclaimed the same doctrine, Matt. iv. 17; for the Father anointed him and sent him to preach it to the poor. Luke iv. 18, 19, 43. "He went throughout every city and village preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, and the twelve were with him." Luke viii. 1. Then he sent out the twelve, and other seventy also, to preach the same gospel. Luke ix. 1-6; x. 1-9. The apostles also heard his parables illustrating the kingdom, and which he explained to them, saying, "it is given to you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them (the multitude) it is not given." Matt. xiii. 11. No wonder, therefore, that they should ask their Master about the time of the restitution of that kingdom. What presumption for any one to say, as many do, that the apostles were mistaken. Let us briefly examine their question. 1st. It implies that the kingdom once belonged to or was connected with Israel. 2nd. That it had been taken away. 3rd. That it was to be restored again to Israel. 4th. That Jesus was to restore it. 5th. That the answer of Jesus implied its restoration, when the proper time arrived.

1. The Kingdom of God was once connected with Israel, or the twelve tribes of Jacob.

The Lord was king over Israel at the first, but the people desired a visible king to go in and out before them. 1 Sam. viii. 5-7; x. 1, 24, 25; xiii. 12-15. But Saul sinned against the Lord, and the kingdom was given to David. 1 Sam. xv. 28. David anointed, xvi. 13; 2 Sam. vii. 5. Jehovah made a covenant with David, that his house, throne and kingdom should be established for ever. 2 Sam. vii. 12-16; xxiii. 1-5; Psa. lxxxix. 3, 4, 34-37. Then Solomon was chosen "to sit upon the throne of the kingdom of the Lord over Israel," with the promise that Jehovah would establish his kingdom for ever, if he would keep his commandments. 1 Chron. xxviii. 4-7. The people also made Solomon king the second time, and he sat on the throne of the Lord as king instead of David his father. Chap. xxix. 22, 23. In verses 11, 12 David ascribes all the glory and power and majesty of the kingdom to the Lord; saying, "thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head over all." Solomon began his reign gloriously, and built a magnificent temple for the worship of Jehovah. But in the latter end of his reign, he did evil in the sight of the Lord, by marrying strange women of idolatrous nations, thus breaking the law of the Lord. Exod. xxxiv. 15, 16. These women led him into idolatry; so the Lord was angry with Solomon, and said, "I will surely rend the kingdom from thee, and give it to thy servant." Read the account of this rending of the kingdom in 1 Kings xi. xii. The division took place in the days of Rehoboam, the son of Solomon. Ten tribes were given to Jeroboam, the servant of Solomon; and the tribe of Judah, including Benjamin, with the Levites, remained with Rehoboam. The kingdom of Israel, beginning with Jeroboam 977 B. C., ending with Hoshea, 721 B. C., lasted 250 years, and was ruled by 10 kings. 2 Kings xvii. 6-23; xviii. 9-12. The kingdom of Judah survived that of Israel 135 years, and ended B. C. 588, when Zedekiah was taken as a prisoner to Babylon, the temple burned, and Jerusalem destroyed. See 2 Kings xxv. 8-10; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 11-21; Jer. lii. 12-14. Thus the kingdom was overturned, and to be no more, until he come whose right it is. Ezek. xxi. 25-27.

2. That the kingdom had been taken away. We have seen from the above references, that the divided kingdoms of Israel and Judah ended—Israel by the Assyrians, B. C. 721, and since then no restoration of either people or kingdom; and Judah by Nebuchadnezzar B. C. 588. After 70 years captivity of the people in Babylon, a partial restoration took place, but without a king or kingdom. The rulership for the time being was transferred to the Gentiles,—Jer. 27, 28; Jer. xxvii. 5-8. "The times of the Gentiles "then began, and are now about to close.

3. That the kingdom was to be restored again to Israel. The disciples knew that the prophets had foretold this. There is so much testimony on this point that I beg the reader to read the references, as it would make the article too long to quote at length. Peter told the Jews about "the times of restitution" spoken of by all the prophets. Acts iii. 19-21; Hosea iii. 4, 5; Amos ix. 11; Acts xv. 15, 16; Micah iv. 6-8; Isa. i. 25-27; ix. 6, 7; xi.; xii.; xvi. 5; xviii. 7; xxiv. 23; xxx. 18-21; xxxiii. 20-24; xl. 9-11; lii. 7-10; lix. 20, 21; lx.; lxi.; lxii. 1-7; lxv. 8, 9, 17-25; lxvi. 19-21; Jer. iii. 17, 18; xxiii. 5-8; xxx. 16-21; xxxiii. 14-18; Ezek. xx. 33-42; xxxvii.; xxxix. 25-29; Dan. ii. 44; vii. 27; Joel iii. 16, 17; Obad. xxi.; Zeph. iii. 13-20; Zech. ix. 9, 10; xiv. 9-11, 16. The reading of these references to the prophetic Word will prove that the kingdom will be restored again.

4. The apostles believed that Jesus will restore it. Their question implies this—"Wilt thou restore?" The various allusions they had heard him make to the kingdom,—as to its nature and principles, qualifications for inheriting it, and special promises to them concerning rulership; as well as the belief that they had that Jesus was the seed of David, born, and anointed, and crucified as king of the Jews, all made it certain to them that he was the one of whom Moses and the prophets wrote, the Messiah, the King of Israel. See Luke i. 31-33; ii. 10, 11, 25-32; Matt. ii. 1-6; v. 2, 10; xiii. 10-17; etc.; xviii. 1-4; xix. 23-28; xxi. 42-44; Luke xii. 31, 32; xxii. 28-30; John iii. 3-5; xii. 12-16, etc.

5. The reply of Jesus to the question implied that the kingdom would be restored in due time. Verse 7.

There was no doubt as to restoration of the kingdom. But the time was not yet revealed. The apostles had a great work to do—to be witnesses for Jesus even unto the ends of the earth, in order to take out a people for his name. Jesus was about to leave them, but they were not to begin their work until he should baptize them with the Holy Spirit. Then they would be energized, qualified, guided, taught, comforted, memories quickened and enabled to speak the Word with boldness, God also bearing witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles." John xiv. 15, 16, 26; xv. 15, 26; xv. 26; xvi. 7-14. They waited until Pentecost, and then they received power, when the Holy Spirit came upon them. Acts i. 1-4. Thus duly qualified, the apostles went everywhere "preaching the kingdom of God; and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus." (Acts xxviii. 31;) calling sinners "from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God, that they might receive forgiveness of sins, and an inheritance among the sanctified." Those called out by the gospel are a "chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people," and are designed for the Lord's service in the age to come. They are called "to obtain the glory of our Lord Jesus Christ;" "called unto his kingdom and glory;" and to reign with him on the earth as kings and priests for one thousand years. Rev. v. 10; xx. 4, 6. The kingdom had come nigh, and the King had actually come, but his people rejected him. They wanted a king of their own choice. Therefore the kingdom was deferred, and God exalted his Son to his own right hand until his foes are made his footstool, and until the times of restoration," when he will send Jesus Christ. Then his people will be willing in the day of his power. Psa. ex. 3. Then the Lord will arise to favor her, yea, the set time is come." Psa. cii. 13. During the absence of the King in the heavens, a people is being "prepared for the Lord," by a belief in the kingdom and name of Jesus, and obedience to him in all things:—these are heirs of the kingdom, and are joint heirs with Christ. Then at the return of the king, the restoration of of the kingdom, and the resurrection of the heirs, the remnant of Israel also will return, (Isa. x. 21, 22;) and over them, and all living nations, "Behold, a king shall reign in righteousness, and princes shall rule in justice." Isa. xxxv. 1; Psa. lxxii. 1-4; xcvi. 10-13.

OUR CHILDREN.

He Calleth Me.

O wise little birdie! how do you know
The way to go
Southward and northward, to and fro?

Far up in the ether piped they;
"We but obey
One who calleth us far away.

"He calleth and calleth year by year,
Now here, now here;
Ever he maketh the way appear."

Dear little birds, he calleth me
Who calleth thee;
Would that I might trusting be!

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 17.

THE PLAGUES.

I wonder if my little students are getting tired? They have been a long time with the children of Israel in Egypt.

It may seem tedious, but taking one little lesson at a time how much we shall learn! I have thought of a great many things that I never thought of before, and I am sure we shall all prize God's precious truth more than ever, when we find how much it has cost to keep it in the world, and to bring it down through thousands of years, to be put into our hands.

Poor, discouraged Moses! How is he to make Pharaoh hearken unto him? Listen, "And the Lord said unto Moses, See I have made thee a God unto Pharaoh, and Aaron shall be thy prophet."

Great men in those days were looked upon as gods, and were feared as such. The miracles that Moses was about to do, would make him seem to Pharaoh, more than a human being.

He and Aaron go to Pharaoh again: Aaron casts down the rod and it becomes a serpent.

But how is it that Pharaoh's magicians can do the same thing? Were their rods really turned into serpents? I do not believe it. The magicians of the East do a great many curious things, but when you find how they are done it is easy enough to do them. We know that they can extract the fangs from poisonous snakes, and carry them about their persons, and can handle scorpions without being harmed.

The power of these magicians of the king, from Dakke and Ekmin, seems to have been real, yet, although, we cannot convict them of trickery. We suspect they were tricksters. Like a dim, misty dream, come to me the memory of snakes described in natural history, that can scarcely be distinguished from rods.

The Egyptians were very credulous and could be easily deceived. Some English travelers in Egypt, were a few years ago, quite taken in by the magic arts of an old shiek. They now denounce it as an imposture. The magi were mind-readers, and could put people to sleep by magnetizing them, just as phrenologists and others do now.

They had great learning in the times of Moses, and could no doubt predict coming events from their knowledge of the signs, that God has set in the heavens. But, however much of that was true, the real God was proven to be on the side of his messengers, for their serpent-rod devoured the rods of the magi.

But why did God harden Pharaoh's heart? how could he do right things if God hardened his heart? That is a question that has puzzled wiser heads than yours, and yet, it is one that is very easily answered. Look into your own hearts, dear little ones. Remember how you feel, when asked to give up something that seems at the time absolutely essential to your happiness. It may be an anticipated visit, a pretty dress, a new suit of clothes, or a hoped for organ. If you have not learned to be cheerfully obedient and partially self-denying like Jesus, your hearts will be hardened, just as Pharaoh's was. You will say, "I will have the coveted thing, I will not let it go." God asked obedience from Pharaoh, and he chose to be disobedient.

That is all that God had to do with hardening his heart.

God asks obedience from you; he asks that you obey your parents. It is right that you obey them, you can never be good citizens of your country, nor Christians if you do not learn the lesson of obedience to those whom God has placed over you for your good. If you disobey your parents and feel hard and rebellious against them, your hearts are just as truly hardened against God, for you are disobeying him.

Do you understand? All right, then. We are ready now for the next great wonder to be performed. Where shall we find Pharaoh? It is in the early morning, he has gone down to the river Nile. He thinks the matter settled about stopping that great army of workmen for a three days tramp into the wilderness. He is in a hurry to have his treasure-cities finished, and there are no such brick-makers as these Hebrews. It would take more than a week for them to go and return, and what if they never come back? How he starts when he comes to the river to find that Moses and Aaron are there before him! what can they want now? Another solemn message, "The God of the Hebrews hath sent me unto thee, Saying, let my people go.... and hitherto thou wouldst not.

Thus saith the Lord, In this thou shalt know that I am the Lord: behold I will smite with the rod that is in mine hand upon the waters which are in the river and they shall be turned into blood. The fish in the river shall die, the water shall stink, and the Egyptians shall lothe to drink of the water of the river." The warning falls on heedless ears. The Lord commands and the rod is stretched out upon all the streams and ponds and pools of Egypt. Blood! Blood! is everywhere! Pharaoh and his servants see it: there the magicians stand with their enchantments: Pharaoh is eagerly watching: will they be able to do the same thing through Isis, and Osiris? It is a battle for supremacy between the Gods—which will be proven to be the true and which the false?

See! there's more trickery: the magi have done the same thing; so it seems to Pharaoh and his people. His god is as strong as the God of the Hebrews. This miracle doesn't prove anything, he turns contemptously and goes into his house.

AUNTIE WINCE.

OBITUARY.

Catharine Buck VanVactor was born March 14, 1825; died April 24, 1895, aged 70 years, 1 month and 13 days.

She was born in Preble County Ohio, of very humble parentage, and was left fatherless when a child. Her childhood and youth was exceedingly onerous, being burdened with numerous and almost constant hardships. Her opportunities for culture and social life were very limited, having but four days of schooling in which she neither learned to read nor write, but in after years, by her own efforts, she became a great reader, especially of the Bible and religious papers.

She was married to Hiram VanVactor immediately settling on a farm three miles north of Argos, where they resided for nearly forty-seven years, until her husband's death March 30, 1892. Eleven children were born to them, namely: Cyrus, Sarah E., an infant daughter, Melissa J., Emily J., Martha A., John R., Hiram T., David E., A. Lincoln and William T. Of these three died in infancy, four soon after maturity and four survive to mourn her death, namely:—Mrs. B. Brewer, David E. and A. Lincoln, of Argos, and W. T., of Plymouth. The last three years of her life were spent in Argos with her son Lincoln.

She had been a member of some church most of her life, having united with the Christian church in youth and remained a member until coming to Marshall County. She united with the Church of God about twenty years ago at Antioch and lived an upright, faithful life although beset with many trials. Kindheartedness, charitable, forgiving disposition were such strongly marked features of her character that it was counted a fault by many with whom she had to do. She was decidedly plain in her tastes and abhorred anything which had the appearance of deception. She cared nothing for the world's opinions if she was satisfied in her own mind that she was right. Her faith in the Bible was so strong that she believed it absolutely, and her views were very liberal on doctrinal points, especially as to the fate of the wicked; and believed in a future restitution age and the final restoration of all after due chastisement and reformation. It was her delight to talk upon religious topics and to dwell upon the goodness of God.

She bore all her sufferings with great patience. They were of long duration but she seldom murmured, and if she did at any time she prayed the good Lord's forgiveness, help and mercy. So far as death itself was concerned she looked to it with joy and regarded it as a falling asleep in Jesus to awake on the resurrection morn. She had no fears of it, but desired to live for the sake of those who were near and dear to her.

Her last sickness was due to an accidental fall which she received at her home Sunday, the 7th ult., from which, in her weak condition from a lingering illness, she could not recover and succumbed to mortality.

The funeral took place from the Advent Church at 2 P. M., April 28, and was conducted by Brother F. L. Austin, and the remains were laid away in Green Summit Cemetery, to await the resurrection.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 8, 1895.

☞ The address of any correspondent of this paper will be sent to any one wishing it, on application.

"IT is important to think right, more important to feel right; still more important to do right, but to be right is most important of all."

"HARRY is the man who has learned to do his work conscientiously, and then without anxious questionings or haunting fears, leave the results wholly with God."

"THE law of the harvest is to reap more than you sow. Sow an act, and you reap a habit. sow a habit and you reap a character; sow a character and you reap a destiny."

"THERE are souls in the world who have the gift of finding joy everywhere, and leaving it behind them when they go. Their influence is an inevitable gladdening of the heart. They give light without meaning to shine."

IN answering the question, "Who is a true man," Carlyle says, "He who does the truth, and never holds a principal on which he is not prepared in any hour to act, and in any hour to rest the consequences of holding it."

IN another part of this paper will be found announcements of conferences to be held in Michigan, Iowa and Indiana. Brothers and Sisters, try to make these meetings a season of rejoicing in the Lord. We are commanded to "Be filled with the Spirit; speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs," do to these meetings to bless, and to receive a blessing.

IN an earnest open letter by the Editor of "The Faith," he asks, "How can Life-believers spend more on domestic pets than they give to support the work of Christian Tea-Life workers. Brothers and Sisters, this is heart-breaking to the earnest men who have cheerfully suffered loss for the Truth, that they might lay time and talent and life itself upon the altar of service, as a living sacrifice as Christ's witnesses in these last days."

A CONTEMPORARY says the military craze seems to be sweeping everything before it. The "King's Daughters" of Quincy, Mass., have formed themselves into a rifle company, and after a practice drill under the instruction of a regular officer of the United States army, they recently gave a public exhibition of the regularity and precision with which they could manipulate the instrument of death. Think of it! The professed daughters of the "Prince of Peace," publicly exhibiting the dexterity with which they can handle the instruments of strife, war and bloodshed.

THE Rev. J. C. Campbell, of Los Angeles is charged with slandering Miss Tessa L. Kelso, the Librarian of the Public Library. The basis of the action was a prayer offered by the defendant before his congregation in the First Methodist Episcopal Church, in which he said: "O Lord vouchsafe thy saving grace to the librarian of the Los Angeles City Library and cleanse her from all sin and make her a woman worthy of her office. Rev. Campbell, in his demurrer took the position that his statement was privileged. The court held that a slander can be perpetrated in the form of a prayer as readily as in any form of speech.

WE commend to our readers the following lines from "The Every Day of Life:" We never get to understand the Bible merely by studying it. It will not reveal itself to us until we begin to do what it teaches. He that seeks to obey it shall know it. Many people have the impression that there is something occult and mysterious about the words of the Scripture. But this impression vanishes when they accept the divine teachings and begin to fashion their lives according to them. Many Christians will recall how dim and obscure faith in Jesus Christ seemed to them before they believed, and were trying to find the way,—and how simple and clear it appeared after they had begun to follow him. The same principle is found in other kinds of learning besides that of spiritual truth. If a pupil wants to acquire music, he may get books and a teacher, and learn all the principles. But he can never become a musician without practice. So one will never become an artist merely by studying the rules and principles of art: he must take his brush and paint as he studies. It is the same with the Bible. You read a command with a promise annexed. You say I cannot understand that. But if you accept the teaching as a fragment of God's will, and begin to do it, light will break in upon you. As you obey the teaching you shall know.

IT has been said that everybody serves some one. Those who have no other master are slaves to themselves. Sin, self, Satan and the world are hard masters, but if you wear the livery of Christ you will find him so meek and lowly of heart that you will find rest to your souls. He is the most magnanimous of captains. He is always to be found in the thickest of the battle. When the wind blows cold he takes the bleakest side,—the heaviest end of the cross lies on his shoulders. If he bids us carry a burden he carries it also. If there is anything that is gracious, generous, kind, tender, lavish in its love it is him. His service is life, joy and peace.

ON Sunday, April 28th the Rev. Carl F. Henry, a Universalist minister, struggled with the words of our Lord....."And these shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." And, judging from the newspaper report of his effort to show that the text was not opposed to Universalism, he floundered around mightily; and in the course of his remarks struck a wicked blow at the book containing it, by saying, "I believe that the universal human heart, and conscience is as worthy of belief as the Bible; and eternal punishment is certain that the best in man has always rebelled against such teaching and declared it wrong." Poor man; did he never read that the wages of sin is death? If everlastingly dead is not man everlastingly punished.

THE "Truth," New York, recently described a scene witnessed at a congress at Detroit: "President Harper, and President Andrews, of Brown University and others, had been advocating the methods of modern Higher Criticism, and saying that the last seven chapters of Isaiah were written by some other man, when Professor Howard Osgood, of Rochester, arose to reply. He spoke briefly, completely answered the critics, and then said, "I have here an article written almost exactly one hundred years ago. I will read it and then tell you the name of the author." He read a criticism on the Bible and especially on Isaiah, advocating a double authorship of the letter, in almost the exact language of Harper and his friends. He made a few comments upon the clearness of the ideas of the author, and showed his teaching to be identical with modern Higher Criticism. He then exclaimed after a long pause, "The author of this paper was Tom Paine, the infidel." The effect was wonderful. There was a look of surprise on the faces of the critics; and then, as the applause rang out, they looked as if they would like to escape, or perhaps sink through the floor. It would be a good thing if a few more irreverents could be shamed a little, and shown how their anti-Christian theories are manufacturing infidels.

Taxes on Jews.

The recent introduction in the German Reichstag of a proposition that the importation of Russian Jews should be taxed or stopped like any other Russian product, reminds us that before leaving England forty-one years ago we heard a missionary recently returned from Austria say that Jews had to pay toll for walking on the turnpikes. "The Frankfurter Zeitung" lately gave some interesting notes on the subject of "Jewish Import Duties,—and the classifications for this purpose are curious. "Riding Jews," "Driving Jews," and "Walking Jews," are found in the catalogue. Jews were harassed by demands of payment over and above their Gentile neighbors at every ceremony or transaction which they undertook. At a marriage feast the tax-collector put in his plea, and he was as regular an attendant as the rabbi. Not even at death could the Jew be allowed to pass away in peace, but an extra fee must be expected. Here again classification came into play. We find a difference in the tariff between "old dead," and "young dead." Herr Zopfel tells us that at the Jewish cemetery at Witzingen, the collector stood by the side of the sexton, and no burial ceremony could be proceeded with till his demands were satisfied. How clearly all this stands out in the light of persecution pure and simple, for surely the death of an objectionable member of the community was an obvious gain, and need not have been paid for by his relations, as if they were receiving anything from the state. Strange to say there are those who deny the literal fulfillment of the blessings promised to Abraham's numerous seed, although the threats for disobedience have been most literally executed. The promise of Gabriel to Mary, be it remembered, was unconditionally made, and as sure as God is in heaven his glorious Son will receive the throne of his Father David, and reign over the house of Jacob forever.

Baptized for the Dead.

In answering the question as to meaning of the words, "Baptized for the dead," in Cor. xv. 29, there is an obscurity about the passage as it reads in the common English translation. It seems at first to teach that one person can believe and be baptized for others who are dead: but this cannot be true,—only he who believes and is baptized before dying can be saved. In order to arrive at the truth of the matter it is first necessary to keep in view the assertion of some in the Church at Corinth that there is no resurrection of the dead, and we can. Many of the same Greek words have different meanings, and should be always rendered in harmony with the context and the general teaching of the Scriptures. In our opinion this has not been attended to in this verse, and out of this grows the difficulty. This passage contains two words in the original which we think are improperly translated, viz., "poiesin," and "huper." Poiesusin is a compound word. "Poiesi," means to make, gain, or acquire; and "ousin," substance, goods, property. Matt. xxv. 16; Luke xv. 12, 13. Instead, therefore, of reading, "Else what shall they do, who are baptized for the dead," we may read, "Else what shall they acquire, or gain, who are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? Why then are they baptized for the dead?

As to the other Greek word, "huper," which is here translated "for," if we render it as it is found in Matt x. 37, "He that loveth father or mother (huper) more than me, is not worthy of me;" and, "In all these things we are (huper) more than conquerors through him that loved us;" Rom. viii. 37; or as we find it in Acts xxvi. 13, "I saw a light above (huper) the brightness of the sun;" or as in Gal. i. 13, How that (huper) beyond measure I persecuted the Church of God;" yes; we think the will help us out of the difficulty, by bringing out the meaning of the apostle's question, "Else what shall they gain who shall have been immersed, more than the dead ones, if the dead rise not at all?" Why, then, are they baptized more than they who are dead? In a word, why should believers be immersed any more than unbelievers, if there be no resurrection of the dead. It seems to us that this view of the matter is warranted by another question, "If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what benefit is it to me if the dead rise not? If that be so, let us eat and drink for tomorrow we die, and that ends all. This is respectfully submitted,- but if any one has anything better to offer we shall be glad to see it. Of course we have read and even held another view of it, but at present the above is most satisfactory.

Secret Societies.

Bro. Joblin:—Will you please answer the following questions through THE RESTITUTION, and oblige, yours in the Blessed Hope.

T. E. ADAMS.

1. can a Christian affiliate with any secret, oath-bound organization and keep him or herself unspotted from the world?

2. Can a Christian use tobacco and not defile the temple of the Holy Spirit?

3. Can a Christian stray so far away from the truth that it would be necessary for him to be re-baptized and do the first works?

1. We have never belonged to a secret, oath-bound organization, and therefore do not know what they are sworn to do, or not to do. We do know, however, that ONE is the Christian's Master, even Christ. We know that whoever or whatever a man is sworn to obey, that is his master. We know that Christians are commanded not to be unequally yoked together with unbelievers—a far-reaching command this. We do not see how a Christian could be more unequally yoked with unbelievers than to be oath-bound to obey them. It seems to us that when a man gives himself to God and enters his service, he practically severs his connection with all human expedients for the uplifting of the race. He is enrolled as a member of God's Household, enters the school of Christ, belongs to a divine community, the distinguishing trait of which is love for, and interest in each other. And we understand that when a member of that Body cherishes ambitions which that community cannot be the means of gratifying, or which his privileges as a child of God does not foster, he is getting out of the ways in like lots wife, looking back into the world for something instead of forward to the end of the Christian's course.

The believer of the gospel must know that he is linking himself to a company of sinners,—a society of aliens and strangers to the covenants of promise when he enters an oath-bound organization, although they may have a chaplain in every one, him, Bible and all; they are not.

We have been acquainted with several brethren who had to leave societies because they had to sanction what they knew to be directly opposed to the Word of God; and this, of course, would have spoiled them all over. We have in mind now, a chaplain of one of these societies who was soaked through and through with fire-water.

Although we know little about such organizations, we do not hesitate to say that no follower of the meek and lowly Jesus who has been separated from the world by the Truth of God can enter those societies without imminent risk. He is commanded to redeem the time, to walk in wisdom, to warn them who are without, to go not in the way of evil doers, to enter not in the path of the wicked, to avoid even the appearance of evil, —to watch and pray, that they set a watch upon their tongues while the ungodly are in their sight. We suppose, without knowing that pleasure—the gratification of the flesh, is one great motive in the organization of these societies. Let them enjoy themselves. They live for the present,—the Christian lives for the future and is content to wait.

The Christian is not his own; he has been bought with a price, and delivered the goods. The Lord's money will have to be accounted for. It cannot be spent in showy uniforms. Some members of the Body are always wanting food, medicine, fuel, shelter; and thousands are perishing for lack of knowledge; it had better be lent to the Lord. More anon.

Procure an opera glass and take a searching look at your neighbor's good deeds and your own evil ones. Now reverse the ends of the glass and take another scrutinizing look, this time at your own good deeds and your neighbor's faults. In this way you may obtain a very fair view of things as they look from your neighbor's standpoint.

The man who can be informed of his faults without taking offence is the most apt to mend.

Loyalty to Christ is manifested by our zeal for his cause.

Announcement.

The ANNUAL CONFERENCE of the Churches of God, in Iowa, will be held at Marshalltown, sometime during the month of August. Notice will be given in due time. Brethren and Sisters, begin at once to prepare for this meeting and make it such a one in numbers and in Spirit that it may long be remembered.

O. J. ALLARD, Sec'y.

The Third Quarterly Conference of the Church of God, in Indiana, will be held at the Antioch meeting house, five miles south of Plymouth, commencing on Friday, June 7, 1895, at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue over the following Sunday.

Owing to the fact of there being so few members of this once prosperous church they being separated from different causes, it has been questioned by some as to the advisability of longer trying to hold conference meetings at this place; but as the time draws near all hearts turn to Old Antioch. These meetings have been held so long that they have become an established fact in the minds of the people and they expect the meeting as surely as the time comes. And then it seems we get so much real encouragement and enjoyment from them, it seems like a family reunion, where we all meet on a common level, where we can enjoy the blessed communion of those of like precious faith so that we feel that we would be lost without them for from these gatherings we do derive much strength if we come with the right spirit. So, brothers and sisters let us come with hearts full of love for the truth, laying aside the cares of this life and have nothing in view but the upbuilding of each other's faith. We invite you to come. We urge you to come.

J. F. WAGONER, Pres.
A. C. ROBERTS, Sec'y.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God, in Michigan, will be held (D. V.) at Dutton, Kent Co., commencing Thursday evening May 30th, and holding over the following Sunday. Committees are given instruction to "call the conference." Of course all that was meant was to announce the time and place appointed for having a conference. A few, a "little flock," have heard and obeyed the call of the Shepherd.

As we are considerably scattered over the field, it has seemed profitable and enjoyable to meet at stated times to greet and cheer each other, and to get a seed of grain.

Since our last assemblage we have had to keep constantly guarded against the wolves, we hope none have been taken unawares, and the weather has been severe—Satanic Storms. Now let us gather once more to aid and encourage each other before the Shepherd comes.

Should there be any in the "flock" who seem almost exhausted, make an extra effort to be present, and those who feel strong and healthy be sure to be present to lend a helping hand to others, and to tell them what food you have picked which gave you strength, and to instruct them which way to go in order to avoid the more ferocious wolves.

Bring as many with you as possible. There are a goodly number in Michigan, who are taking THE RESTITUTION, and will read this notice, thereby showing that you sympathize to some extent at least with those of this faith; but who have never met with us. Now can you not so arrange as to be present at this meeting. All will be heartily welcomed.

Dutton is located on the Michigan Central R. R., ten miles southeast of Grand Rapids. Those going from the South or West, go over the G. R. & I. R. R., L. S. & M. S. R. R. or C. & W. M. R. R. via Grand Rapids.

F. L. AUSTIN, Sec'y.

Keep the prayer-meeting going, and be sure to keep going to the prayer-meeting.—Christian Evangelist.

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a New Year gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

Cholera May Come from the Orient.

Fernand Ganesco, the Japanese war correspondent of Le Figaro, and attached to the first Japanese army corps in Mandschuriet, writes from Kinchau the following interesting sketch of the Japanese soldier's life in the field, in which he gives an interview with a Japanese officer—a chief of squadron—who had for some time been a resident of France. The officer spoke about the present winter campaign and the totally wrong ideas regarding it that have been current in Europe and the United States.

"As you perceive," said he, "we endure this winter campaign very well. Our enemies have from the beginning of the war tried to scare us with the idea that the winter weather would be fatal to us, and this opinion has also been entertained by Europeans and Americans unfamiliar with the local conditions in China. Now, my opinion is that an army operating in China during the winter has every advantage with them. During the summer terrible epidemics are common over the whole of China and would soon place a whole army hors de combat. While I do not like to pose as an evil prophet, I am perfectly certain that one result from this war will be a series of fearful epidemics as soon as the warm weather sets in, and Europe and America might as well in time take every precaution to guard against its spreading to those countries.

"An army operating in China during the winter weather has one great advantage, all rivers and inland seas are frozen, the country is one vast plain over which an army can without any difficulty manœuver at pleasure. Our soldiers are dressed to resist the cold and we need not be afraid of either fevers or cholera. And you notice how we harden the soldiers—a cold bath every morning—and you know my countrymen always use hot water for their baths. If the war should continue during the late spring and summer we would be in a measure to the cases necessary outfit for movement of guns or the necessities of an army."

"The Japanese soldiers," says the French correspondent, "are splendidly disciplined. During the evening if one goes through the silent streets where one does not meet a human being except the guards after 10 o'clock, it is almost impossible to believe that one is in a conquered country in the midst of a victorious army. From the closely shut little houses holding from five to fifteen soldiers each, not a cry, song, or sound is heard. Their gladness is mute. They enjoy their victory and triumph in a way most natural to them, without show, noise or big words. The Japanese have been a surprise to all and with the experience they have gained in modern warfare may become a powerful factor in Asiatic politics and a far from despisable foe for an European army to engage with and with more than doubtful results."—Tribune.

There are some persons who think that is easier to bury a sin than to repent of it. But it is a very hard thing to hide a sin. It is like hiding a seed or a root in the ground. It draws strength in concealment, and finally, pushing up through the soil, brings forth fruit—thirty, sixty, and a hundredfold. Sin is not dead enough to be safely buried. It is like a smouldering flame; it is like a poisonous seed—it will work ruin in its concealment, and finally break out into open ungodliness, and destroy on every hand. A sin needs to be dragged out of its hiding-place and extirpated. Hiding only gives a fresh hold. "Whoso covereth his sins shall not prosper, but he that confesseth and forsaketh them shall have mercy."

The man who imitates God in giving is bound to give the best he has. There is no Christian charity in giving away old clothes and food which we cannot use.

Fidelity in little things is one of the surest tests of character.

The doctrine of endless misery never made anyone love God.

At Bangalore, in Southern India, granite slabs as large as 60x40 feet and half a foot thick are quarried by means of wood fires. A narrow line of fire, about seven feet long, made of dry logs of light wood, is gradually lengthened and moved forward over an even surface of solid rock. It is left in position till strokes with a hammer show that the rock in front of the fire has become detached from the main mass beneath; the burning wood is then pushed on a few inches. The rock keeps splitting about five inches below the surface. It takes about eight hours and 1,500 weight of wood to set free a slab measuring 740 square feet. Afterward the plate is easily cut with blunt chisels into strips two and one-half feet wide.

Love has a work beyond merely giving itself. It must be willing to receive in return, but not always in the same kind. St. Francis of Assisi, in pity for a poor mendicant, took off his own velvet cape and threw it around the shivering pauper. He then himself put on the ragged and greasy garment of the poor man. We must throw the mantle of our charity and love over others, but we must be willing to take from others oftentimes indifference, unthankfulness, possibly bitterness and dislike. Our love is not of divine strength until it is able to go on loving, notwithstanding such a return.—Sunday School Times.

It was Martin Luther who gave the following ten qualifications as making a good preacher of the gospel: 1. He should be able to teach plainly and in order. 2. He should have a good head. 3. Good power of language. 4. A good memory. 5. He should have strong confidence in God. 6. He should know when to stop. 7. He should be sure of what he means to say. 8. And ready to stake body and soul, goods and reputation, on its truth. 9. He should study diligently. 10. And suffer himself to be vexed and criticised by every one.

One grand truth about Christ was his self-denial. "He pleased not himself." He was rich, yet for our sakes he became poor, that we through his poverty might be made rich. This same truth he taught to his disciples. "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself." Self-denial for the sake of others is a cardinal truth in the kingdom of God, yet how little of it we see. We may thank God that there is some of it, perhaps more than we think.

The rearrangement of the dining cars on the Nickel Plate Road provides breakfast and dinner on the New York and Boston Express No. 2 eastbound, breakfast and dinner on the Fast Western Express No. 5, and dinner on No. 6. This newly established service not only accommodates the through passengers of that line more satisfactorily, but provides a better arrangement for its local patrons.—m-1-8

"Through the week we go down into the valley of care and shadow. Our sabbaths should be hills of light and joy in God's presence; and, as time rolls by we shall go on from mountain top to mountain top, till at last we catch a glimpse of the glory of the gate, and enter in, to go no more out forever."

Poetry.

At Midnight.

There is balm for the troubled spirit
And feel for the hungry mind
In Nature's whispered message
That is borne on the midnight wind;
When the cares of the day are ended
A silence strangely sweet
Is dwelt o'er hill and valley
And over the busy street.

The earth is wrapped in a mantle
Of perfect, calm repose,
And there comes to the eager watcher
A blessing no other knows
As I study the constellations
Which each in its destined way
Are drawn borne along for ages
In the path it travels today.

For I know that my life so humble
Is fashioned by that same One
Who guides Orion's footsteps
And rules each distant sun.
All many a half-formed murmur
Which the day saw in me mind
Is changed to a song of worship
As I list to the midnight wind.

And the care which seemed a mountain
In the light of the rising sun
Assumes its true proportion
When my day of toil is done;
For not by an earthly standard
Do I weigh my bitter woe,
But the scales of God's high purpose
Which he doth dimly show.

That wonderful human reason
Of which I boast by day
At midnight's holy hour
Seems tardily slink away.
While there stands instead beside me
Sweet Faith, with her great, calm eye,
Who trusts our every questions
The Builder of the skies.

PSALM. 7.

1. David's psalm, which he sang unto the Lord concerning the words of Chusai son of Jemenei.

2. O Lord my God, in thee have I hoped: save me from all those who persecute me and deliver me,

3. Lest perchance he snatch my soul away like a lion, while I am not redeemed or saved.

4. O Lord my God, if I had done this, if thou were iniquity in my hands,

5. If I had returned evil to those who are returning evil to me, I ought forsooth to fall without avail before my enemies.

6. The enemy ought to run down my soul and take it, and tread down my life into the earth, and pitch the tent of my glory in dust. Interlude.

7. Arise O Lord in thy wrath, be thou exalted unto the limits of mine enemies. Awake, O Lord my God, with a commandment which thou hast enjoined,

8. And a synagogue of laities will encompass thee; and for this (synagogue) mayest thou have returned on high.

9. The Lord will judge laities: Judge me, O Lord, according to my righteousness, and according to my guilelessness in respect to me.

10. May the wickedness of obdurate sinners have been consummated forsooth, and thou wilt restore a justified one to uprightness, O God, thou who dost search hearts and inmost thoughts.

11. My right responsive is from the Lord who saveth the upright in heart.

12. God is a just Judge and strong and forbearing, not bringing wrath upon one each day.

13. If ye do not turn, he will bare his sword; his bow hath he stretched and made ready:

14. And on it hath he made ready arrows of death, his arrows hath he wrought out with things that flame.

15. Lo he (the wicked) hath had the woe of iniquity, hath conceived pain and brought forth transgression:

16. Lo, he hath dug a well and excavated it and will fall into a pit which he hath wrought out.

17. His painful toil will return on his own head, and his iniquity will come down upon his own crown.

18. I shall confess unto the Lord according to his righteousness; I shall exalt the strain unto the name of the Lord Most High.

PSALM 8.

1. Unto the end, concerning the wine-presses, David's psalm.

2. O Lord, our Lord, how wondrous is thy name in all the earth, because thy majesty hath been exalted above heaven.

3. Out of the mouth of children and nurslings hast thou restored praise in consequence of thine enemies, to overthrow an enemy and a requiter:

4. Because I shall see the heavens, works of thy fingers, a moon and stars which thou hast founded:

5. What is man that thou art mindful of him, or a son of man thou dost watch over him?

6. Thou hast diminished him somewhat as compared with angels, with glory and honor hast thou crowned him.

7. And established him over the works of thy hands: thou hast ordered all things beneath his feet;

8. Sheep and all cattle and moreover the domestic-animals of the plain:

9. The flying-things of the heavens and the fish of the sea, the things that go their way through paths of seas.

10. O Lord, our Lord, how wondrous is thy name in all the earth.

PSALM 9.

1. Unto the end, concerning the hidden things of the Son, David's psalm.

2. I shall confess unto thee with all my heart, O Lord; I shall discourse of all thy wonders;

3. I shall have rejoiced and I shall be glad in thee; I shall exalt the strain unto thy name O thou Most High;

4. When mine enemy hath been turned back; they will grow weak and perish from before thy face.

5. Because thou hast determined my judicial-trial and my right; thou art seated upon a throne, the One who judgest righteousness.

6. Thou hast rebuked nations and the irreverent one hath perished; their name hast thou wiped out for the age and for the age of the ages;

7. The swords of the enemy have left off completely, and his cities hast thou torn down; their memory hath perished with an echo;

8. And the Lord abideth forever. He hath made ready his throne in a judicial way.

9. And he will judge the inhabited in righteousness; he will judge laities in uprightness.

10. And the Lord hath become a refuge for the needy-one, a responsive-helper in tribulation in opportune times.

11. And may those who know thy name have hope in thee, because thou wilt not forsake those who seek thee out, O Lord.

12. Exalt the strain unto the Lord who dwelleth in Sion; announce his pursuits among the nations:

13. Because the One who requiteth their blood hath been mindful; he hath not ignored the supplication of the needy ones.

14. Have mercy on me, O Lord, see my humiliation by my enemies, O thou who art lifting me up out of the gates of death,

15. That I may declare all thy praises in the gates of the daughter of Sion: I shall be glad in thy instrumental salvation.

16. Nations have become fixed in the corruption which they have made. In this snare which they have hidden, hath their foot been taken.

17. The Lord who rendereth judgments knoweth; In the deeds of his hands hath the obdurate sinner been taken. An Ode for an interlude.

18. May the obdurate-sinners have been turned away into Hades (the grave), all the nations who ignore God.

19. Because not finally will the beggar have been ignored, the patient-endurance of the needy ones will not be lost forever.

20. Arise, O Lord, Let not man (a mere man) have controling-power: May nations have been judged in thy sight.

21. Establish, O Lord, a lawgiver over them; may nations have comprehended that they are men (mere men). Interlude. (10th psalm Com. Ver.)

22. Verse (Septua). Why, O Lord, hast thou stood afar off? Why dost thou overlook in favorable-times, in tribulation?

23. When the irreverent conducteth himself haughtily the beggar burneth therein. They are taken in plots which they devise.

24. Because the obdurate-sinner praiseth himself in the inordinate-desires of his heart, and the unjust one eulogizeth himself therein.

25. The obdurate-sinner hath provoked the Lord: according to the fulness of his wrath he will not seek him out: There is no God in his sight.

26. His ways have become abominable in every period; he removeth thy judicial renderings from before his face; he will lord it over all his enemies.

27. For he hath said in his heart, without evil-circumstance am I; I shall not have been moved from generation unto generation.

28. Whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness and deceit, toil and pain beneath his tongue.

29. He setteth in ambush with the rich in hiding-places to slay the innocent: his eyes look away for the needy-one.

30. He lieth in wait in a hiding-place like a lion as it were in his lair; he lieth in wait to snatch a beggar, to plunder a beggar when he hath dragged him away into his snare:

31. He will humble himself, he will stoop and fall down in his purpose to lord it over the needy.

32. For he hath said in his heart, God hath ignored it; he hath turned away his face from looking to see at last.

33. Arise, O Lord God: let thy hand be uplifted, may it not have ignored the needy ones.

34. For what reason hath the irreverent provoked God? It is because he hath said in his heart, he will not inquire.

35. Thou art looking to deliver them up into thy hands because thou dost clearly discern pain and passion: To thee hath the beggar been left utterly; for the orphian wast thou a responsive-helper.

36. Break the arm of the obdurate-sinner and the wicked one: His sin will have been sought out and he shall not be found.

37. The Lord will reign asking unto the age and unto the age of the age: Perish from off his earth O ye nations.

38. The longing-desire of the needy hath the Lord heard; Thine ear hath given heed to the readiness of their heart.

39. Mayest thou have judged the orphan and the lowly, that mankind may never again have become magnified upon the earth.

PSALM 10. (11 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end, David's psalm. In the Lord have I trusted; How will ye say unto my soul, Flee unto the mountains like a bird?

2. Because lo, the obdurate sinners have stretched a bow, they have made ready arrows in a quiver in an obscure place to shoot at the upright in heart.

3. Because they have torn down the things that thou hast fitted up: And the justified one what hath he done?

4. The Lord is in his sanctuary, The Lord, in heaven his throne: His eyes look away unto the needy one, His eyelids search out the sons of men;

5. The Lord searcheth out the justified one and the irreverent, and the one who loveth injustice hateth his own soul.

6. He will rain snares upon obdurate-sinners; fire and brimstone and a cyclone's breath is the portion of their cup.

7. Because the Lord is just and hath loved acts of righteousness; his face hath seen uprightness.

PSALM 11. (12 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end, concerning the eighth (day) David's psalm.

2. Save me, O Lord, because a holy one hath left off, because the truths have diminished from the sons of men.

3. Each one hath talked in utilities to his neighbor; lips deceitful in heart, and with heart have they talked (that is talked as they felt).

4. Destroy, O Lord, all the deceitful lips and a speech-magnifying tongue,

5. Those who have said we will magnify our tongue; our lips are from us; Who is our Lord?

6. Because of the wretchedness of the beggars and the sighing of the needy, now will I arise, saith the Lord. I will dispose with an instrumental-salvation, I will speak boldly in him.

7. The oracles of the Lord are pure oracles, silver that hath been purified with fire of approved-value for the earth, purified seven times.

8. Thou, O Lord, wilt guard us and wilt watch to keep us through from this generation even unto the age (the eternal age meant).

9. The irreverent walk about in a circle (that is are lost): according to thine exaltation hast thou highly esteemed the sons of men.

PSALM 12. (13 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end, David's psalm.

2. Until when, O Lord, wilt thou ignore me? Completely? Until when will thou turn away thy face from me?

3. Until what time shall I dispose counsels in my soul, woes in my heart for days? Until when will mine enemy have been exalted over me?

4. Look upon, hearken unto me, O Lord my God; enlighten mine eyes, lest perchance I sleep unto death:

5. Lest at any time mine enemy may have said, I am strong against him; Those who are afflicting me will be glad, if I be made to slip.

6. But I have hoped in thy mercy: My heart will be glad in thy instrumental salvation: I will sing unto the Lord who hath shown me beneficence; And I will exalt the strain unto the name of the Lord Most High.

PSALM 13. (14 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end, David's psalm. A thoughtless one hath said in his heart, There is no God. They have become corrupt and abominable in their devices: There is no one who is useful-good, no, not even one.

2. The Lord stooped down from out the heavens unto the sons of men to see if there was one who understood or was seeking out God.

3. They have all inclined out; Together have they become unprofitable; There is no one who doeth useful-good, no, not even one; Their throat is an opened grave; With their tongues have they practiced deceit; a poison of asps is under their lips; their mouth is full of cursing and bitterness; their feet are swift to shed blood; destruction and wretchedness are in their ways, and a way of peace they have known. Then is no fear of God before their eyes.

4. None who are working the lawlessness will comprehend, who are devouring my laity in the eating of bread: They have not invoked the Lord.

5. Where there is no fear there have they become cowardly; because God is in a justified generation.

6. The beggar's counsel have ye put to shame, because the Lord is his hope.

7. Who will give the instrumental-salvation of Israel from out Sion? Let Jacob be glad, when the Lord returneth the captivity of his laity and may Israel have rejoiced.

PSALM 14. (15 COM. VER.)

David's Psalm.

1. Who will sojourn in thy tabernacle, and who will pitch his tent down on thy sacred mount?

2. He who goeth his way blameless and doeth righteousness, who talketh truth in his heart:

3. Who hath not deceived with his tongue, nor done evil to his neighbor;

4. In whose sight the one who doeth wickedly is despised, but who glorifieth those who fear the Lord; the one who sweareth to his neighbor and doth not set it aside:

5. His money he hath not given to usury and bribes against the guiltless he hath not taken: The one who doth these things will not have been disturbed forever.

COMMENT.

The seventh psalm commemorates historically the revolt of Absalom against the royalty of his father David, and Chusai was David's counselor in this matter. David's experience is of course typical of the Christ's experience with the enemies of the kingdom of God, and the psalm is in this sense Messianic, and should be read in this light. This is one of the so-called "denunciatory" psalms, and its import not generally understood.

The eighth psalm is generally recognized as Messianic in import and is interpreted for us in Hebrews. So I would only call the reader's attention to the differences of reading.

The ninth psalm has a very significant and suggestive heading, in view of what we under the gospel know of the Son and the Sonship, it seems to me. "The hidden things" of than are "the revealed things" of now we are specifically told—things that angels desired to look into and were not permitted.

Read this psalm in the light of this thought—especially the 21st verse—also the 34th-38th and 39th.

It is in the division of this psalm that the change of numbers begins, the reader will notice moreover, although other changes occur later on.

The 10th psalm is also known as of the "denunciatory" psalms. Read it in the light of its Messianic import and the coming judgment of the Son of Man. Don't try to understand it as applicable to a "human day" merely.

The 11th psalm has a very suggestive clause in the heading "concerning the eighth" (day) remembering that our Lord's day or Sunday is an eighth day, and is typical of the great millennial eighth day of a thousand years of Christ's rule of subjugation. Read it in the light of this thought.

The 12th psalm is a waiting and hoping hymn for the saints of all ages, and full of the Messianic hope of mercy.

The 13th psalm formulates the hopelessness of legal justification for the sinner and the inutility of wickedness, ending with the promise of God's instrumental salvation which is to come forth from Zion.

The 14th psalm is especially Messianic for the reason that it is applicable and can be made applicable in its full import to but One person who can in any sense be said to be human, namely the Christ of God. He is the sole heir of this righteousness and distributes it to whom he will.

Reverting to the eighth psalm in explanation of the singular clause in the heading, "Concerning the wine-presses," I would refer the readers to such passages as the following for the parable significance—"Who is this that cometh from Bozra with his garments dyed red, etc.—"I who have trodden the wine-press alone, etc." "The wine press of the wrath of God," etc., etc.

Letter Drawer.

Dear Restitution:

As I renew my subscription, and as I had never written before for THE RESTITUTION, I thought I would say, that I am still watching for the Savior to come in his glory to set up his kingdom here on earth. O how I long to see him coming in the clouds of heaven. I want to be among that happy number on the resurrection morning. O what a glorious meeting that will be. For fear my letter will be too long I will close.

I remain, your Sister in Christ.

SARAH LEEPER.

Dear Restitution:

We herewith enclose money to renew the subscription to the paper for another year. Would have remitted sooner but money is scarce. We have had very cold weather during the past winter for Louisiana or "The Land of Summer" as it is called, and to see a foot or more of snow-fall was truly a wonderful freak of nature, but it did not remain with us long. Stock suffered to considerable extent, and a great many perished. I would be pleased to send some new subscribers to the paper. There is no church society of any kind here now. We are in great need of schools and churches. THE RESTITUTION is all the preacher we have. I think the children's column is a good addition. We like the paper very much and think we cannot do without it. I will close with best wishes to all the household of faith.

Yours in hope of the gospel.

MRS. ADDIE A. STANLEY.

Dear Restitution:

In my contribution to the letter drawer, I want to say first, that we ought all to write short articles, as is suggested by Bro. Underwood. Many a good article, letter or sermon has been spoiled by saying too much. Let us say what we have to say in as few words as possible, and thus give room for a greater number of contributions.

Today as I pondered over the great blessings and mercies of our heavenly Father toward mankind, my thoughts took this shape. The tribes of Israel have been scattered unto all the ends of the earth. Ten tribes were lost and the others are today without a king or a country, but God has seen fit to scatter them, and has purposes and promised that he would again lead them back to the land of their birth, send a king to rule over them whom they will recognize and receive, and restore again the Holy City—New Jerusalem. He has spoken through his holy prophets that he will do this and his words are sure and steadfast.

As Israel has been scattered and partly lost to man's knowledge, so do the elements which compose man become scattered and seemingly lost after death. But the All-wise Creator, "Who is able of these stones to raise up a people for his name," has promised he would bring back man from whence he came, and if worthy to have a part in the first resurrection. he will for this mortal blood substitute the immortal spirit.

Having this assurance to spur us on, let us strive to have a part in that "better resurrection" by living as he would have us live.

Your Brother in Christ.

J. EDGAR HATCH.

Editor Restitution:

Enclosed please find my subscription for another year. I would have renewed it before this but I have been sick most of the time this winter and am not very well yet, but am able to work a little. I was anxious to renew as I could not bear the thought of doing without the paper for I can in truth say, I would rather be compelled to live on one meal a day, and that of the coarsest fare than do without THE RESTITUTION. It is all the preaching I hear that has any gospel in it. A United Brethren Minister said to me, "I tell you as a minister of God, you don't have to wait till the day of judgment for your reward, for you go to heaven or hell when you die." Such is the stuff we hear for gospel. We go to hear Bro. T. E. Adams occasionally, but it is so far that we cannot go often. I wish I was able to send the paper to some dear one who is not able to pay for it themselves. I have taken it ever since it has been published under its different names. The first that I read was George Storrs' Six Sermons.

Love to all.

WM. I. CHURCH.

Dear Restitution:

This morning we will enclose our subscription for six months and we trust in the Lord to help us at the expiration of that time to renew again. The 20th of Jan., Brother Orchard of Zillah, Wash. and Brother Pickles of Pullman, commenced meeting in Oakesdale, Wash., and held two weeks. At the close of the meeting eight dear ones were buried with Christ in baptism and were raised to walk in newness of life. When meeting closed there the brethren came out to Pleasant Hill School House, about eight miles from Oakesdale, and conducted one weeks meeting, at the close of which, three more dear ones came forward and confessed Christ before all men, and obeyed the command, "Therefore, we are buried with him by baptism unto death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life, for if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall also be in the likeness of his resurrection." Rom. vi. 4, 5. Let each and every one of us keep this fresh in our minds, and strive each day to be more like Christ, so that we may be found watching when he comes to make up his jewels, and our prayer is, that we may so live as to be among them.

Your Brother and Sister, in Christ.

O. D. & N. A. KENWORTHY.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I will again try to contribute my mite to the many interesting letters in the Letter Drawer.

Myself with five brothers and sisters of Blair, Neb., attended a ten night discussion held by State Evangelist, Almus Adams, and the Latter Day Saints Elder, C. H. Porter.

Elder Porter affirming first, that the Kingdom of God spoken of in Dan. ii. 44, is set up and is now in existence.

Second, Almus Adams affirmed that the Kingdom spoken of in Dan. ii. 44, is yet future and will be established at the second coming of Christ.

Third, Almus Adams affirmed that man is wholly mortal, and has no conscious existence between death and the resurrection.

Fourth, Elder Porter affirmed that there is a spirit in man which remains in a conscious state of existence between death and the resurrection.

The truth was ably defended by Bro. Adams, and though few were convinced of their error, we hope the discussion may cause some to study God's Word more closely, to see if this be true, and in that way may be brought to a more perfect knowledge of the truth.

Then let us, "Fight the good fight of faith," lay hold of eternal life, whereunto thou art called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses. "Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily as to the Lord and not unto men; knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of thine inheritance; for ye serve the Lord Christ." "Be ye also patient, stablish your hearts for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

Your Sister, "Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the Great God and our Savior Jesus Christ."

ALICE MEHRENS.

[This letter should have been published before this but by accident was delayed.—ED.]

Dear Restitution:

As the love-feast calls for a word from all, I will say, that we are here at Ingraham, Ill., still journeying on toward the kingdom which is to be under the whole heavens, and we believe we shall soon reach the end of our rough and toilsome journey, and we each and every one realize that the time is near at hand that will test every mans' work, of whatever sort it is. Let us ask ourselves this solemn question, "Are we ready to meet the King, and how will it fare with thee and me when he comes? How few there are who are willing to forsake the world with all its pleasures, deny themselves, take up the cross and follow the foot-steps of our Blessed Savior. Dear brothers and sisters let us turn our backs to the world [illegible] ture, as much as we can, for James iv. 4 says, "Whosoever, therefore, will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God," and as we have come out from the world, let us be careful that our daily walk is such as becometh Christians. We should be separate and touch not the unclean thing, that we may be received of him when he comes. Let us be strong in the Lord and put on the whole armor of God that we may be able to withstand in the evil day. Having on the breastplate of righteousness, and our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, above all taking the shield of faith that we may be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked, and take the helmet of salvation and the sword of the spirit, which is the Word of God, and ever walk worthy of the vocation wherewith we are called, with all lowliness and meekness, with long-suffering forbearing one another in love endeavoring to keep the unity of the spirit in the bonds of peace. Oh let us build up on that most holy faith, and keep ourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, unto eternal life. Grace be with all them that love our Lord and Savior in sincerity.

Your Sister, waiting for the kingdom.

TEMPERANCE.

The Rumseller.

Men starve as they toil in the black coal mines,
Girls freeze as they stitch in th cold;
But in every land where the moonlight shines,
The rumseller rolls in gold.

The laborer labors all his youth
For the pestilence when he is old;
And many the farmer's toils and fears
But the rumseller rolls in gold.

Jack drinks his wages and staggers away
To his wife the story is told.

Water and Rum.

A little child lay upon its bed, tossing and restless. Hear it asking for water. The loving mother hastens to bring it a glass of pure cold water. How it soothes the child and soon it sinks into a quiet, peaceful slumber. The tired mother thanks God for the blessing of the pure water, and trusting her daughter to his care, seeks her needed rest.

Let us look upon another scene. A strong man, with bloodshot eyes and frenzied brain, tossing and feverish. Does he call for water? Ah no! "Give me rum." Will it quiet him? will he rest after he has secured the rum? No! No! The patient, heart-broken wife knows he will not, and how bitterly she curses the fiery serpent of the still. How it has blighted her life. How it has destroyed all that was manly and loving in the frenzied man before her. Ah! this serpent of the still, how many lives and homes it has wrecked, and destroyed by its deadly power. Are we getting this serpent under control? O, no! it has gotten far beyond the control of human hands. In every country and in every clime, its deadly power is felt. Men have become entangled in its foils, they are entirely helpless. God alone can help us. He has promised to help us in every time of need. How much we need him now. The cries of the suffering and poor are heard from all over the land. The signs of the times show that the Lord is near at hand. Christ is coming to set up his glorious kingdom. Then all will be peace and joy. No more pain and no more wrecked lives, but life eternal in in Christ our King. Life Eternal! Lord hasten thy coming and establish thy kingdom.

Another Wrecked Home.

Bessie Merrill was a beautiful and attractive child, who was born in a comfortable home in a New England village, where the father and mother were sincere Christians respected by all who knew them.

At the age of sixteen she went from home to teach a country school, and there she became acquainted with a son of the wealthiest man in the neighborhood. This young man, Walter Russell, belonging to a good family, bearing a good reputation, and having bright prospects for the future, was considered a desirable acquaintance, and perhaps the possession of a new carriage and a span of handsome black horses such as no other young man could command, made his acquaintance seem all the more desirable.

No one was surprised when two years later young and beautiful Bessie became happy Mrs. Russell. In another two years a nice house was built and furnished, and a little daughter added brightness to the new home.

But it does not take many years to make many changes. The house is no longer a home. Bessie and the little daughter do not live in it. Bessie is teaching school again, to earn money to pay for necessary food and clothes; there is in her face much of the sweetness that that used to be there, but it hides a crushed heart and a broken spirit.

The past is too terrible to recall, for some of it has been made up of days when abuse and threats of murder compelled her to seek safety among friends: the present seems intolerable; and the future has in it very little of hope. The little daughter lives in some other home, and looks out into the world wondering what she can do that will be a means of self-support. The husband and father, although hardly in middle life, is a drunkard and an imbecile, having reached this condition by a very direct road.

First there was his early life in a home where cider was always kept and used; then association with men who drank cider and something stronger; then a few years of a growing habit and an increasing appetite which others did not know; then a little time when others suspected the truth, but related as well I not believe the rumors which were whispered; and finally the sad fact which was known and read of all.

When Bessie married a man of excellent family and bright financial prospects and a good reputation, she thought she had chosen according to the highest standard. She believed that wine should be kept in the house, and that brandy was "good in mince pies" and for medicinal purposes, and that it would do no harm if her husband did drink a little, just as so many other men did; and in her estimation total abstainers were cranks! If she had known that Christian character was more important than a good reputation, and that total abstinence was the only safeguard against drunkenness; if she had known that the use of [illegible] in the home is always dangerous, the great sorrow of her life might have been averted. But she did not know these things.

Perhaps this lack of knowledge was partly due to home teaching. Most of her belief was the result of the drinking practices of such respectable and Christian families as she had known and been associated with all her life. She cannot be blamed for choosing according to the highest standard she knew, nor censured for one she never disapproved of what she thought was right, or because she imitated those whom she esteemed. But had she read and believed God's Word, she might have known that wine is a mocker, which at the last biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder.

For such ruined homes and blighted lives, who is accountable? Is it not time that from Christian homes at least, shall be cast away that which causes so much misery and which has led, and will lead, to every kind of sin? Safeguard.

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God of love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue have a love-feast all the year.

Niagara Falls Excursion, Thursday, August 8, 1895, via the Lake Erie and Western R. R.

Poetry.

The Breakers.

A lonely coast, with tossing, snow-white crest
And crystal spars that in the sunlight flash,
While sea-birds shriek, and frighted fly to rest
Upon the rocky beach their shining breasts.

Then hurled the away with dying roar:
But other crested heads come charging on!
Thus endlessly hath raged from Nature's dawn
The war between the breaker and the base.

Not doubtful is the issue. Slow but sure
Will fall the doom of life, reluctant strength:
It foe shall change, until the shore, at length,
Shall yield, despite its rocky armature.

Despair not, O Thou striving human soul,
Though wrong still recurs upon his granite throne.
Each charge, though ending with the baffled moan,
Brings nearer certain final victory.

Love and Charity.

Dear Restitution:

In reading the letters from the good brothers and sisters, the thought comes to me that perhaps I might contribute something that would have a tendency to lighten the burden of any who perchance may feel discouraged or disheartened in meeting with the many obstacles with which we have to contend in this great work, and at the same time remind them that although the beautiful sun may be hidden from our view, it is only just behind a cloud; and if we will only let the rain and tears cease, the shine of love into our lives, we will forget our unhappy state, for it will burst open the doors of our hearts and shine all around us, lighting the life of those with whom we come in contact. As we smooth down the rough places in their lives, our own may seem to grow brighter, and by cultivating this spirit of love we feel that we are drawing nearer to God. Although our life may have been one of disappointment, and our path may have been full of thorns, in looking back over it all we will quickly see that although we have suffered much and had grievious burdens to bear, there have been some sunny days, and if we can remember correctly we will find that our happy days were the ones in which we forget ourselves in trying to do something for others. Thus it is in our work for Christ and his kingdom, therefore let us exercise great care and not enter into the work with a spirit of antagonism, but do it in all gentleness and meekness, showing the true light of the gospel in such a way that it will not give offence, or cause others to think we are assailing their views. In fact let every day of our life be a sermon. I often think that some of the most beautiful and effecting sermons I have ever heard were those expressed in acts instead of words. I tell you, dear friends, it isn't just the words we speak that convince people of the truth of what we say, it is the something back of it all, it is the motive. When we are preaching and teaching others, let us examine ourselves and see if it is the spirit of truth talking through us. I feel that in many instances we are inclined to try living up to the letter and not the spirit of the Word, forgetting our brother who is walking in the shadow, who would doubtless be glad to receive light if given in an agreeable manner. I think we nearly all are liable to drift into a way of thinking, that if we just give the gospel to others the way we see it, regardless of the spirit in which it should be given, it must be accepted at once and if it isn't we get discouraged and relax our energies, forgetting that we were once blind and could not see. Let us not be too impatient or hasty, and remember that though we "speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not charity we are become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal." Now let us look at 1 Cor. xiii 8 and we read, "Charity never faileth" Would it not be well to examine our work and see where we have failed, and in looking over our failures ask ourselves, Did we have true charity? Now I think I hear some good brother saying, I have tried this and it won't work in all cases. If so, please let me invite you to read the whole of the above named chapter, which defines the word charity and then ask ourselves if we truly have what the Bible explains charity to be. Now while we have our Bible in our hands let us read that chapter once more, and read it carefully. It is so full of beauty and promise. I think it will inspire us all with a new zeal, and if we are anxious to do a good work for the cause we will be willing to put in a good stock of this precious jewel charity, and by so doing be prepared to scatter the sunlight of truth all along our way, brightening and gilding the lives of those around us, and the beauty of it all will reflect back into our own lives. Although a cloud may now and then obscure the sun, we have the blessed assurance that it is still shining just as brightly as ever, and when the cloud passes it will burst forth in all its beauty and we will appreciate it more because we have been allowed to see and understand what life would be without it. Therefore, brethren, let us go forward in the good work armed with that mighty sword which the Word says never faileth (Charity), and who will be able to stand.

"What a great amount of virtue,
Oft we find in little doses;
Let us understand our brother,
Then contribute to his needs.

Little acts of love and kindness,
We can easily bestow,
And the mighty power withheld,
We may never know.

Life is made of little minutes,
Fleeting though they be:
Take them, use them, while they're ours,
For the great Eternity."

O. L. LOMBELL.

Mary's Choice.

"Mary hath chosen that better part that shall not be taken away from her." Luke x. 42.

That which Jesus calls "that good part" must be of priceless value, a treasure well worth obtaining in this changing, perishing world; for it is to be enduring, "It shall not be taken away." But a few brief words were spoken in regard to Mary's choice, and yet how much they convey. She sat at Jesus' feet and heard his words. While reading that touching narrative of the two sisters, the one humbly sitting at the Master's feet, drinking in the gracious words that fell from his lips; the other troubled and anxious about the cares and various duties of life, I could but exclaim, "Oh, how many troubled Martha's there are nowadays, and how few Mary's that have chosen that good part. I love to contemplate this touching scene, and recall those gentle, chiding words: "Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things." Is there not a volume of love and interest expressed in those few words? And may not the Martha of today learn wisdom from them, and seek in Jesus that friend who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, "that good part which shall not be taken away?" The Savior looked with love and pity upon the troubled Martha, for he realized that she was not only cumbered with many cares, but she was also anxious for his personal comfort. The thoughts and purpose of her heart were as open to him as were those of the gentle, loving Mary; and while our revealed care and anxiety for the perishing things of this life, the other told of perfect love and trust in her adored Lord; of earnest longing for the knowledge of the truth, of deep humility, of self-forgetting devotion, of that quiet courage which fears neither ridicule nor oppose. Like the favored Mary, we may not literally sit at the Master's feet, yet he is speaking to every humble child of God, in and by his Word. We may choose the world with all its vanities which perish with the using, or we may choose Christ as our portion, both for time and eternity. Then let us seek to be enabled to turn from the entanglement of sin and vanity, in whatever form these may come, and choose our place as lowly, humble followers of the dear Savior, nourished by his love, cheered by his counsel, and approved by the divine "Well done."

"Made pure by the blood that he shed,
My heart in his presence was free.
I was hungry and thirsty he fed;
I was sick, and he comforted me.

He gave me the blessing complete,
The hope that is with me to-day.
And a quiet abode at his feet,
That shall not be taken away."

SARAH E. OVERMAN.

News from Jerusalem. No. 2.

Mr. Jacob Eliahu, a Jew, a native of Palestine, who has accepted Jesus as the Christ, told me he was walking out one day along the valley of dead bodies, when he saw a man scooping out the bones, etc., from the rock-hewn graves along that valley, and scrambling them around his trees, as manure. He spoke to the man, and said: "Don't you know that you are fulfilling prophecy?" The man replied, that he was not aware of it. He then quoted to him Jer. viii. 1, 2: "At that time, saith the Lord, they shall bring out the bones of the kings of Judah, and the bones of his princes, and the bones of the priests, and the bones of the prophets, and the bones of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, out of their graves: and they shall spread them before the sun, and the moon, and all the host of heaven, whom they have loved, and whom they have served, and after whom they have walked, and whom they have sought, and whom they have worshipped; they shall not be gathered, nor be buried; they shall be dung (manure) upon the face of the earth." The man was utterly astounded to find that he was one among others, who was innocently bringing to pass the unerring Word of God.

Now, dear readers you see we don't have to speculate or guess about the fulfillment of prophecy, we have it direct from the lips of truthful witnesses, whose eyes have seen these things. There is not the least particle of excuse for unbelief. It seems to me that God is now placing before us marvelous evidences of what is coming. If these things don't arouse us from lethargy, nothing will disturb our slumbers except it may be that we shall find ourselves left behind, when the angelic reapers gather in the harvest. Did you ever picture to your mind in moments of meditation, how you would feel, should you be left, having knowledge of what has happened? It is a solemn truth, we have no time to waste on the foolish things of life, the above event is liable to occur any hour, we cannot at any time with certainty know that it will be delayed a day It will come upon us some day as sudden as a flash of lightning. He shall come as a thief. How does a thief come? Why he don't send us any word when he intends to plunder our homes. And just that sudden will the Lord gather his elect. Knowing this, don't you remember how urgent our Lord was in his exhortations to watch and be ready at all times?

It is certainly wisdom at this late day to remain sound in faith. Tell novelty venders to pass along, that you have no time to entertain their vagaries, and critically watch every action of our life, that we may inherit the blessings promised to overcomers.

W. H. WILSON.

Law and Gospel.

I have just been reading a little 15 page tract, treating on "Baptism and its Importance," by W. C. Long, and, while the author has said some good things about the mode, importance, etc., of baptism, he has said some things in which he does not clearly define himself. I will quote some from said tract:

"We are taught in Scripture that baptism is for the remission of sins, also that sin is the transgression of the law, and that sin is not imputed where there is no law. Baptism stands related to sin, and sin is related to an existing law. Those who preach the abolition of the law preach a gospel, (so-called) without any basis; it is nullity; like a wagon without wheels, or a bell without a clapper. Baptism enjoined in such preaching is not truly gospel baptism, it is deprived of its relations, and therefore of its efficacy."

He does not say what law is meant. If he means the ten commandments, why does he not say so? I find that when Seventh-day people are questioned as to what law sin is the transgression of? they say, "the ten commandments," while the Bible says no such thing. He then quotes Rom. vi. 2, and says:—

"It is emphatically declared in verse 2, that we cannot be dead to sin, and live in it; but this is done just as long as we transgress the law."

On page 14, he quotes Rom. vii. 4, "Ye also are become dead to the law by the body of Christ that ye should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead."

He justly says, "We cannot be dead to sin, and live in it." I take it, that if we are dead to the law, we quit living by the law, we should have no more to do with the law, just the same as with sin, if we are dead to sin. This is a trap I would smile to see him free himself of. He says, "He that transgresses the law lives in sin; if he lives in sin he is not dead to it."

I take it that if he keeps on keeping the law he is not dead to it, and makes Rom. vii. 4 of no force, consequently not married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, and if not married to him cannot bring forth any fruit unto God, Rom. vii. 4. and I would admonish all such to be married to Christ as soon as possible. He then goes on to say:—

"Thus, we have found that baptism stands related to sin, and sin to an existing law, for where there is no law there is no transgression and of course no call for repentance. Sin is not imputed where there is no law, and it would be sheer absurdity to preach baptism for the remission of sins when there was no law. We are candid in stating, that the no-law-theorists not only pervert the gospel, but subvert it, leaving it destitute of life and power."

Who are these no-law-theorists any way?

Paul says, we are "under law to Christ" 1 Cor. ix. 21, but, neither Paul nor Christ ever said we were under the ten commandments law, as some would like to have us believe. Paul says, "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned," Rom. v. 12. We find that all have to die, as Paul further says, and he is good authority, "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive," 1 Cor. xv. 22. Yes; we must die, but not for breaking the ten commandments either.

What must we do in order not to remain eternally dead? Let Christ tell it. "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world and (tell them to keep the ten commandments, no that's wrong) preach the gospel to every creature, he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that (dont keep the sabbath, missed it again) believeth not shall be damned." Mark xvi. 15 16. You see we are damned if we do not believe the gospel. I wonder if the Seventh-day-ten-commandment-people won't claim that the gospel of Jesus Christ is contained in the ten commandments yet? Christ and his apostles never told us to keep the sabbath, or of any penalty for not keeping it. If those that have been blinded by reading Moses would only come over and accept Christ. We get our commands from Christ, and he from the Father, John xiv. 10, 11; 2 Cor. v. 18.

Selected.

A New Race in Egypt.

Professor Flinders Petrie reports the discovery of a new race, whose existence was hitherto unsuspected in ancient Egypt. The London Times thus quotes him:

"On the top of a plateau, between Ballas and Negadeh, about thirty miles south of Thebes and 100 feet above the Nile, the home of paleolithic man was found. Large massive flints, beautifully worked and perfectly unworn, were discovered, of exactly the same forms as those so well known in the river gravels of France and England. The enormous age of these is shown by the black brown staining of them, while others of 3,000 years old by their side show scarcely a tinge of weathering. Besides these, other flints of a later paleolithic type are found embedded in the ancient gravels of the former high Nile. So that the Nile still rolled down as a vast torrent, fifty times its present volume, at the latter age of paleolithic man. Turning now to historical times, a town was found on the edge of the desert adjoining a small temple. On clearing this site it was discovered to be the center of the worship of the proscribed god Set. In early times the two brothers Set and Horus were both venerated; but as the Osirian legend grew in popularity Set became abhorred for his enmity to his father Osiris, and every trace of his worship was removed. In this town of Nubt, from which he was known as Set-Nubte he was specially venerated, and many figures of him were found. A magnificent lintel, with figures of Set, has been sent to the Ghizeh Museum. The discovery of this town, being called Nubt, explains a passage which has hitherto puzzled translators of Juvenal. Another town known as Nubt was rendered by the Greeks as Ombos, now Kom Ombo. But it was this recently found Nubt-Ombos which Juvenal refers to in his Fifteenth Satire as being next to Tentyra, for Dendera is the nearest city to this on the north. Besides the classical interest of it, the town was of great value as preserving the remains of many successive ages. At the bottom of it was pottery precisely like that found in northern Egypt of the fourth dynasty. Above it was pottery the same as that of the twelfth dynasty, and above that pottery like that of the eighteenth and nineteenth dynasties in northern sites. Hence there is proof that the varieties of style already traced were not merely local but extended widely over the country.

"But the strangest result awaited the explorers here. Not a quarter of a mile from this Egyptian town lay another site of a town. In that not one potsherd was like those of any of the periods seen in the Egyptian town. And, vice versa, not a single sherd like those in the strange town was to be found in Nubt. If the new town had been found in Syria or Persia no one would have supposed it to be connected with Egypt. Not only was a town found, but also a series of cemeteries of this same new race; and altogether nearly 2,000 graves have been completely excavated, every object noted in position, and everything preserved and marked. In this great number of graves not a single Egyptian object was found not one scarab or cartouche, not one hieroglyph, not one piece of usual funereal furniture, a head-rest, or a kohl-pot, not one Egyptian head, not one god, not one amulet, not a single piece of Egyptian pottery such as was found abundantly in the neighboring Egyptian town. And not one body was mummified or buried at full length; all were contracted, with the knees bent up to the arms. The position was always with the head to the south and the face to the west. The extent of this race is shown by their characteristic objects having been found abundantly as far north as Abydos and as far south as Gebelen. This is a district of rather more than a hundred miles in length, opposite to the Great Oasis and the Western Oasis, which would give access to it across the desert from the west. The age of this people was the next after fact limited their epoch, until we can definitely say that they were between the seventh and ninth dynasties, or about 3,000 B. C.; and they probably were the people who overthrew Egyptian civilization at the close of the old kingdom, and so produced that dark age of the seventh and eighth dynasties, when the Egyptians seem to have been narrowed and oppressed by disaster.

"The physiognomy of this new race was fine and powerful, without any trace of Negro prognathism. Their stature was remarkable, some being over six feet high; and the great development of their legs points to them having been a hill race. Their hair was brown and wavy, but not at all crisp. A very prominent aquiline nose and a long, pointed beard gave a strong resemblance to the Libyan and Amorite type. A remarkable custom was the eating of portions of the bodies of deceased persons. Although the observation of the burials is complicated by most of them having been plundered in later times, and thus disturbed, yet many instances occurred of the arrangement of the body in a manner which could not be ascribed to any plunderer. The head was almost always severed from the shoulders and the hands often removed. Tombs where perfect pottery was placed over the decapitated neck; others where the severance had gone further and all the bones were grouped, in one place a handful of ribs, in another a handful of arm bones, elsewhere a pile of vertebræ; and the still more decisive case where skulls were placed between stone vases, the bones of several bodies heaped together, and lines of bones strewn round the pit each with the ends broken off and the marrow scooped out—all these point undoubtedly to ceremonial cannibalism. But we must not for a moment suppose that this implied an ignorance of all civilization. In many lines—pottery, flint-working, head-making—these people were the equals or superiors of the Egyptians.

"The arts were well advanced in most ways; but in two directions there was a remarkably low level—no writing was known beyond personal marks, no trace of hieroglyphs is met with, and drawing and sculpture were in a very rude condition. Metal, however, was well known; copper chisels, or rather adzes, show that woodwork was familiar, and traces of finely carved bed frames with bull's feet were found; copper needles also showed that sewn garments were used, and copper harpoons were imitated from the form in bone. Flint work was far more highly developed than by the Egyptians; the forms of the knives differ from any of the Egyptian race, and the exquisite machine-like flaking of them shows the highest skill. We know that the finest examples known—in the Ashmolean and Pitt Rivers Museums at Oxford—belong to this people. Stone working was also a favorite art, many beautifully formed vases of all varieties of stone have been found, from the soft alabaster to the hardest syenite. All of these are entirely wrought by hand, without any lathe or turning process. Beads were skillfully made of hard stones, and many were glazed; but the forms were un-Egyptian. The clear crystal beads with a colored glazing are now known to belong to this race. In pottery these people excelled. The exquisite coloring of the red vases, showing every shade of crimson, with brilliant black tops, produced by being burned in the ashes, is more rich than in any Egyptian ware. The forms are varied and often fanciful, but generally graceful and true; and yet every piece was made entirely by hand; the potter's wheel was completely unknown. This made from the old arts of the country; for if any of the men of the old kingdom had been retained, even as slaves, the wheel could not have failed to be used among a people so devoted to pottery. Few tombs contained less than half-a-dozen vases; many had twenty or thirty, and one even eighty.

"Who this unknown race were and from whence they came cannot yet be decided. Their pottery shows some peculiar resemblance to that of the Amorite period in Palestine. On the other hand several connections point westward to Malta and Italy. As the Amorites and Libyans appear to be of one race, according to their portraits on later monuments, the physiognomy cannot help us to distinguish them. But the skulls and the carved heads of these people may well belong to that race. It may be proved in the future that these were a branch of the same eastward migration of Libyans, which founded the Amorite race in Syria. Here, at least, we have an entirely new and unexpected factor in the most important civilization of the ancient world."—Independent.

Many a man raised from poverty and obscurity, to wealth and honor can trace his rise to civility; it is sure to reproduce itself in others, and he who is always polite will be sure to get, at least as much as he gives. We believe it was Macauley who defined politeness as benevolence in small things. The French who are nothing unless satirical, declare politeness to be the zero of friendship's thermometer.

Some losses are true gain. The statue, under the skillful blows of the sculptor, gains in beauty what it loses in rock; the gold gains in purity what it loses in dross; and the soul gains in experience through its daily losses. We gain the next world when we give up this.

Meditation is the handmaid of prayer, to wait on it before and after the performance. It is as the plow before the sower, to prepare the heart for the duty of prayer as the harrow to cover the seed when it is sown.

THE favor Christ bestows now is not stored in us as in a warehouse, it is food, and is taken into the circulation and becomes part of us."

THE Glasgow Mail says the Supreme court of Strasburgh has confirmed the sentence of a day's imprisonment passed upon the Protestant Pastor Muller, for having spoken offensively of the Catholic religion in the course of a sermon."

IN speaking to young men Philipps Brooks once said, "The whole sum of life is a voice—service to others, not to self. Life is not an existence for self. To determine what success a life may attain is to see how much a life may accomplish for the betterment of humanity."

"EVERY person has his own particular work in life to do. No one can relieve him of his responsibility. Others may encourage and sympathize, but they cannot take part in the work. What is done by each one may be much or little, —the quantity does not count for as much as the spirit in which it is done, and the faithful devotion to its performance."

READER, flesh and blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God. If you would share in the glory of that kingdom, you can only obtain it by a Spirit birth. To be born of Spirit is to become Spirit,—to put on the nature which is undying, incorruptible and immortal. To be changed into Spirit is to become partakers of the Divine nature. And having put on the house which is from heaven, you will at the call of your Lord, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world.

for all that is Christ-like in humanity, it would show its true meaning in the lives of all who call themselves by his name. In the world of business it would be manifested in honesty of dealings; at home and in society it would be noticeable in courtesy of manner and purity of conversation: with the poor and needy it would be manifest by an unostentatious charity which blesses both giver and recipient: it would produce a spirit noble, yet gentle, an interest as unflinching as the everlasting hills; a sympathy as tender as that of a little child; a humanity as broad as all mankind, and a loyalty to God and truth that will be unmistakable."

DR. J. MURRAY MITCHELL says Hinduism confined to India is professed by over 200,000,000. For the most part the wildest Pantheism,—reckoning gods and goddesses by hundreds of millions. Among educated men it becomes Pantheism, acknowledging only one being in the universe - Spirit, the world around having no existence. Only believingly say "Aham Brahma, I am God," and you have attained the height in wisdom. Hindu caste is a stupendous system, affecting one's whole life. Violate any of these rules, and you are expelled from society; father and mother cast you off; you suffer social death. "Suttee," self-murder under the wheels of Jugarnath, and infanticide have been suppressed by the British Government, but the general heartless treatment of widows and of the lower castes, child marriages, and many similar things still survive, inwoven with the whole frame work of Hindu society and thought."

THE Panjist priest who has been delivering popular lectures in Ohio and other states, writes in the Catholic World for April, concerning the private interpretation of the Scriptures as follows:—"It makes one's blood boil to think of honest people being fooled with such a preposterous delusion as that private interpretation of the Bible is the divine rule of faith." We can readily believe that. The power of the Catholic system grows out of the ignorance of the people. It is happy and prosperous as long as it can keep the Book of God away from the masses; and it would naturally make the blood of one of the class claiming a monopoly of interpretation boil to see common mortals reading and believing the Book for themselves. The boiling of the blood, we think, just expresses it. It is a fleshly system of a fleshly man. What a delusion it is to think that the words addressed to illiterate people by Jesus and his apostles and understood by them should now need interpretation by a priesthood utterly ignorant of the Gospel of the Kingdom!

A DISPATCH from Massillon, Ohio, on May 4th says: "There has been a split in the Church of the Brethren in Christ at Lippo, and 25 of the members are now worshipping in J. W. Reinohl's barn, under the leadership of the Rev. Anthony Stoner, all because of a sermon delivered by that gentleman about a month before the recent visit of the Bishop, in which the Rev. Stoner expressed himself with great directness upon the doctrine of the resurrection, declaring his firm belief in the theory of sleeping. On the arrival of the Bishop, the points of discussion were repeated to him, and he decided that they were in conflict with the doctrines of the church, whereupon his address to the members of the church who professed to be "soul-sleepers" to withdraw decently and in order, unless they preferred to retire by a more summary process. Thereupon the 25 members who now worship in Reinohl's barn rose and left the building. The rock upon which this heterogeneous congregation divided concerns the immortality of the soul. According to Rev. Stoner, when the change called death takes place, the spirit is not at once liberated in another world,—there is an actual death of body and soul until the Judgment day, and the theory of an immediate resurrection, he declared, is not in accordance with the Scripture, and consequently he refuses to recant at the Bishop's behest, but is continuing his labor [illegible] sleeping theory. The trouble in the church is spreading rapidly, and the followers of the new faith, or "soul-sleepers," as they are commonly called expect to make rapid headway throughout the United States, especially among the various branches of the Mennonite Church." If there are any of our brethren in the vicinity of Massillon, we know they will look after these people who have the courage of their convictions, and teach them the Word more perfectly.

The Tobacco Habit, and Re-baptism.

We are asked if a Christian can use tobacco and not defile the temple of the Holy Spirit? We think not. We have never been addicted to the tobacco habit; but we have seen its fearful effects on others. We know it so enslaves its victims that business cannot be attended to without its stimulus. We have lived where men at the plow in the field would have to unhitch the team and rush off after tobacco after the last chew had been worn out. We have in mind a brother who quit the use of the noxious weed from principle, after learning the truth, but he could not keep awake,—would fall fast asleep over his work every few minutes. Since writing the above we have consulted with a brother who had used tobacco for many years, but who through mercy has been freed from its influence. We asked him what its effects were on him, and found that it so shattered his nerves and affected his mind that he was fit for nothing, and would doubtless have died for want of sleep but for the kind offices of a physician in the faith, who daily put him to sleep and nursed him back to life, as it were, and usefulness. The Diaglott, reads: "If any man destroy the temple of God;" and the margin of the common version also reads destroy instead of defile, so that the brother just conducted very nearly destroyed the temple of God, and the declared penalty for this is: God will destroy him who does it. We hold that this destruction of the temple of God commences with the use of tobacco. If matters not if some can resist its inroads longer than others, the destructive work goes on; and its fearful results may be stamped on the user's innocent offspring. We have undoubted authority for saying that many a puny child okes out a wretched existence on account of the tobacco habit in its parents.

We approach Bro. Adam's third query on with fear and trembling: "Can a Christian stray so far from the fold that it would be necessary for him to be rebaptized, and do the first works?" We find no apostolic example of the baptism of a sinner who had once been a saint. Baptism into the Name is for the remission of sins. Here obedience from the heart makes the sinner a saint, a holy one, a child by adoption, and he enjoys the rights and immunities of a child. Among these are access to a throne of favor for the family of God. Christ being the mercy-seat. Here sins of omission and commission can be pardoned on confessing and forsaking them, without rebaptism. He is treated as a disobedient child, and is pitied by God as a father pitieth wayward children. But suppose forgiveness is not asked, what then? He is not forgiven. Suppose instead of forsaking sin he sins on, what then? He is not forgiven. Why does he not ask forgiveness? Why does he not forsake his sin? The answer is, he has not repented. God only knows how long this state of things will be tolerated, but we do know there is an end to it, although God gives space for repentance. Rev. ii. 21, because we read Heb. x. 26, "If we sin wilfully voluntarily, after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries."

From the above we understand, that having once availed ourselves of the sacrifice for sin, we cannot again avail ourselves of it, because Christ will not again be sacrificed, and baptism is of no avail without a sacrifice. Truly, as it says in the 31st verse, "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God."

We are aware that we read of first love, and first works, in Rev. ii. 4, 5, but does this refer to baptism? We think not. This revelation is made to the servants of Jesus Christ, see chap. i. 1; and if the words first love and first works do not refer to the ardor and faithfulness which first characterized their conduct as servants of God we do not know how to harmonize the subject. Notice, space was given for repentance, but she repented not. Only repentance was called for because they were already children, but failing of that, then follows the great tribulation. Respectfully submitted.

Foreign News.

Late advices from Kars say 800 of the survivors of the recent massacre in Armenia, who returned to their homes under promise of protection from the Turks, are being daily persecuted and tortured at the hands of the Turkish officials supported by gendarmes. For two months, it is added, the officials have tried to force the refugees to sign an address of thanks to the Sultan. Those refusing to sign the address are beaten, placed in chains, and suspended for hours by the feet.

Under the apparent smoothness in the relations between Great Britain and France there are signs of growing discord. These outward signs of politeness might be well compared to the marks of courteousness observed by two duelists who bow low before beginning to try to kill each other. The Egyptian question pops up again; the appeal of the Queen of the Bowas to Great Britain causes a ballon d'essai to be sent up into the air, by which France is asked to abandon her adventure in Madagascar and come to peaceable terms with Ranevelo and her Prime Minister. If France, Germany, and Russia have joined hands in view of compelling Japan to be more clement in her dealing with the Chinese, England refuses to fall in line with the other European powers. So there does not appear to be any likelihood of the two nations working hand in hand either in Europe, in Africa, or in the Far East. On the contrary, a lively discussion is promised as soon as the Chamber meets, and the everlasting Egyptian question will be one of the main topics of debate during the summer session. M. Delaneix who has just returned from a three weeks' sojourn on the banks of the Nile says, "Matters have arrived at such a pitch between the foreigners in Egypt and the English on the one hand and the Egyptians and the English on the other that the present state of affairs cannot be continued long. He accuses the English of having organized a veritable moral tyranny and having at their disposal a band of spies who render odious the sojourn of any free man in Cairo, and of wanting to make Egypt a second Ireland. The French who glean their foreign news from their own newspapers may never wait to hear both sides of question, so one may easily imagine their opinion in the matter.

The absolute rejection of the anti-revolutionary bill by the Reichstag is a signal and overwhelming defeat of the German Emperor's policy and at the same time a victory of the people in the interests of more popular and progressive government. The severity of many of its provisions defeated the bill in its entirety. If it had become a law it would have been equivalent to an oppression of the right and freedom of speech of the individual and of the liberty of the press in expressing opinion or indulging in criticism. Any person who made free to criticise marriage, who protested against the petty tyranny of army officers, who commented unfavorably upon a papal encyclical or a Lutheran synod declaration, the editor who expressed his opinion upon any public topic in a manner displeasing to the government, or the college professor who ran counter to the government's policy in his conversation or in his lectures any one of these persons would have been liable to heavy fine and imprisonment, and the decision as to the guilt of these persons would have been left at the option of policemen and petty judges whose word was final. In a word, freedom of speech, freedom of press, and the right of assembly would have been completely muzzled. The Emperor would have had supreme power over his subjects. All over Germany the feeling against this bill has been intense, and its defeat has been received with general rejoicing. The issue with the Emperor was squarely met, and in spite of his arrogance, his efforts to make combinations, his promises and his threats, the people have triumphed. Had the bill aimed alone at the suppression of the Anarchists and extreme Socialists its fate might have been different, but its scope was so extensive that it involved the liberties of the whole people and threatened the sacred right of opinion and speech. Had it passed the Kaiser would have been the war lord in reality. His powers would have been more absolute even than those of his grandfather. It would have been an autocracy as odious as that of the Czar. The outcome, if he can read the lesson aright, must be a feeling that there are limitations to his power and that popular government is stronger than his individual will. He may in his resentment dissolve the Reichstag, order another election and use all his influence to secure a majority favorable to his policy. But it will be in vain. Revolutions of this kind never go backward. In his efforts to break down sedition he made the mistake of trying to break down the fundamental rights of the people. Should he repeat the experiment his defeat will be even more conspicuous. It might be the signal for revolution should he succeed.

TOKIO, April 27, via San Francisco, Cal., May 12.—Although totally ignorant up to this day of what is in store the people of Japan are about to receive a heavy blow of adverse fortune. To what extent the news of the hostile combination of Russia, Germany, and France has been made public in Europe and America, residents of Japan have no means of knowing; but in this country it remains a secret of state and may not be officially disclosed for some time to come. Rumors are prevalent, but the startling fact that the three great powers have united to deprive Japan of the continental territory ceded by China is scarcely suspected by any outside of the official circles. The announcement was delivered at Hiroshima April 22, and after receiving the Emperor's commands, Count Ito set forth to consult with Viscount Matsu at the sanitary resort, Maiko, whither the junior Commissioner had repaired in hope of regaining his shattered health. The heads of departments in Tokio were notified April 21, but foreign Ministers were confidently advised on that and the following days. By them the governments not already concerned were made acquainted with the facts. No Japanese newspaper has yet obtained information on the subject, but foreign journals indulge only in vague speculation. Upon the general populace the stroke is yet to fall. The indignation which the Japanese Government does not affect to conceal is intensified by the fardidness with which the intentions of the three powers were revealed. Many weeks ago they were frankly notified of the general terms to be imposed on China. They knew well a part of the Shin-King Province would be demanded, and if they had then declared their objection, or at any time previous to the signing of the treaty of Bakan, their remonstrances would doubtless have received consideration. But it seems as if Russia had purposely schemed to put Japan into a painful and disadvantageous position. By waiting until the great bulk of the Japanese army had crossed to the continent it certainly strengthened its own hand, for now the troops are a thousand miles from their base of supplies and the powerful Russian fleet may keep them isolated or prevent their return home. The Russian diplomatic officials have indeed signified that such is their intention unless Japan yields to the pressure exerted. In spite of Japan's wrath at the trick which it thinks has been played it is scarcely credible that it will venture to resist, in case it finds the allies are thoroughly in earnest. So far as Russia is concerned there can be no question on this point. Germany's purpose is hardly less clear, though the language of its communication is so needlessly offensive that a mask of braggadocio might be suspected. France exhibits no wanton discourtesy, and the belief is strong it was unwillingly led into the league and joined it only as a manifestation of its newly born affection for the northern power. The attitude of England is regarded with deep interest and some surprise. It has long been thought here that if any Western nation watched with jealousy the rapid development of Japanese power it was Great Britain. It is needless to say its refusal to take part in the unfriendly manifestation causes gratification, and the practicability of a coalition between Japan and Great Britain is already discussed in influential quarters. For some time past a steadily increasing dislike for England and the English has been displayed by the Japanese, while France, next to the United States, has been the object of their special regard. A week hence, or as soon as the action of the several States is clearly understood, these sentiments will be radically reversed. Until the appearance of this dark cloud it seemed nothing could obscure the sunshine of Japan's prosperity. The government was cheered and gratified by the enthusiasm with which the treaty of peace had been received in all parts of the empire. So favorable and so unanimous a verdict was not looked for. Almost to the last moment the popular demands were extravagant and unreasonable, and it was believed the military power was so strongly bent upon a further prosecution of the war that the prudent counsels of Count Ito and Viscount Matsu might be set aside, at least until Pekin could be occupied by the victorious invaders. But the highest influence in the nation—the will of the Emperor—was on the side of moderation. Every measure tending to a speedy and honorable termination of hostilities had his approval and support. In the face of his avowed wishes the hot-heads of the army could not clamor for a prolonged contest, and among the people the knowledge the sovereign was opposed to needless strife held even the most violent in check. Yet it was not supposed the reaction from the belligerent sentiment of two months ago would be so sudden or complete.—The Tribune.

Letter Drawer.

Dear Restitution:

We have had some very good meetings at the Union Church, Sticks School House, East Plum River, and Lamark, by Bro. D. M. Rodler, and some are waking up to the truth, while others flee from it as from some evil spirit. Still some love to read THE RESTITUTION, and say it only teaches Bible truths. May our Father add his blessings to all those who believe and teach his Word.

Your Brother.

SIMON P. RENNER.

Dear Restitution:

As my subscription for the paper has nearly expired I will renew as I cannot afford to do without it. It is all the Gospel I have aside from my Bible. I dearly love to read the letters from so many of the dear ones. They cheer me as I am all alone in the blessed hope that Christ is coming back to this earth to reign. My heart aches to meet with you dear brothers and sisters. Pray for me.

Yours in hope.

EMILY COLLETT.

Editor Restitution:

I have been a reader of your highly prized paper for many years and like it more every week, and while I read the blessed promises left on record for those that look for the coming of our Lord and Master my whole soul goes out with gratitude to him who protects and blesses me evermore. I am trying to do what I can for the dear Master and I earnestly desire an interest in the prayers of the brothers and sisters.

[illegible]

Bro. Underwood:

Enclosed please find my subscription for another year. I need not say that I am pleased with the management of the paper as a whole. The Gospel of the Kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus the Christ are clearly taught, and the way to obtain pardon and acceptance are equally as well set forth. Thus it behooved Christ to suffer and to rise from the dead, and the repentance and remission of sins be preached in his name among all nations beginning at Jerusalem. These things are especially set forth by Brothers Joblin, Wiley Jones, B. Wilson, J. S. Hatch and W. H. Wilson.

Your Brother, in Christ.

ROBERT HARPER.

Editor Restitution:

If you have the space you can publish these few lines. We sometimes hear people talk about their Spiritual Advisers. I will say that THE RESTITUTION and my Bible are my only advisers of that kind as I am one of the isolated members and have not heard one of our faith preach for over two years. I am still strong in the faith, and ready at all times to give a reason for the faith that is in me; firmly believing that to be the faith once delivered to the saints. I have been very much benefitted and strengthened by the able manner in which the writers for THE RESTITUTION have set forth the truths as laid down in God's Holy Word, and most especially Bro. Joblin's articles on "Saved by Law or Gospel" and "Justification by Faith Only." Dear brothers and sisters of the one faith, let us take into consideration the fact that all of the traveling space on this entire globe except a very narrow path leads to destruction, and this broad space is very easy to get into and easy to follow when there. It has a fence on both sides that we must lay off our earthly robes to climb over before we can reach the narrow path that leads to life. When we reach this narrow path we must stop and look back and fully consider where we are and what we must do to remain in this narrow way. We must fully understand that we have not a high fence to climb to get back into the broad way traversed by so many of the human race; there is apparently only a chalk mark to step over and then we are back among the deluded followers of wordly things, and may not be able to climb the high fence again. I ask an interest in your prayers.

I remain yours in hope.

P. H. OATMAN.

Dear Restitution:

I have been an interested reader of this paper for over a year and have read many interesting letters from the brothers and sisters.

I will tell you what we are doing here at Blair, Neb. We have a church of twenty-six members and every Sunday we meet at some of our houses and have Bible reading and singing and lately we have been having essays written by different members and they have been very good. We are all trying to serve God in a right and acceptable manner, and get much good from our meeting together. Our beloved Brother Almus Adams preaches to us as often as he can.

May the Lord help us to live in the right way is my prayer.

MRS. LIZZIE JOHNSON.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I want to send a few words to the letter drawer if thought worthy to be published. I have been receiving THE RESTITUTION, which I mean to pay for as soon as possible. I do not intend for you to always just take promises for anything that does me so much good and gives me so much instruction and good advice. Many thanks for it. I would love to have some kind friend and reader of God's holy truth give an answer concerning baptism. We heard a very good appearing professed minister that told us we had never been properly baptized for the remission of our sins, and would not receive the Holy Ghost without the laying on of hands. Now I will tell you what I think about it the best that I can. I always thought that my sins were pardoned for his name's sake. No worth nor merit of my own but [illegible] ence to his commandments. I was buried in baptism to walk in a new life, being risen with him, to seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. We should have our affections set on things above and not below, putting off the old man with his deeds and putting on the new man, Christ, which is renewed day by day, after the image of him who created us. I believe that we receive his Holy Spirit the same as we do our daily food, if we make the right use of it. We could not live without eating food, neither can we without reading, seeing and hearing and understanding with heart and mind. He that has ears to hear let him hear what the Spirit saith to the churches. My prayer is, and I believe that the Lord is just at the door. The hour will soon come when all those that are in their graves will hear his voice. Some will be raised to everlasting life, and some to everlasting destruction. Does it not stand us in hand to be watching the signs which predict it near, and welcome his presence, and be able to "Cry, Hosanna in the highest, to him that cometh in the name of the Lord." Let us have our lamps trimmed and burning and go out to meet the Bridegroom and hear that blessed applaudit, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you."

Your Sister, in hope of eternal life.

OUR CHILDREN.

Little Children.

Little children, little children!
Did you ever think how true,
That the blessed Lord and Master,
Came to save the children too?

Little children, little children!
In God's great and blessed Word,
There is just the sweetest message
That you ever yet have heard.

Now when you, like little Moses,
Learn the truth of God's dear Word;
Ponder well the blessed message,
Pass it not a if unheard.

Jesus Christ, the Lord and Master
Died, that you might each have life,
And if you would learn the whole truth
Read God's Book, with truth so rife.

Never rest till you have read it,
For the way is bright and clear,
Leading unto God's dear kingdom
Through his Son, the Savior dear.

Once we were the little children,
And God taught to us the way,
Which, by faith we've found so pleasant,
That we'll ever in it stay.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 18.

MOSES, AARON, AND THE PLAGUES.

Moses threatens a plague of frogs if his people are not permitted to go and serve the Lord. The frogs come, they swarm into the houses, cover the beds, crawl into the ovens, and fill the kneading-troughs where the bread has been set to raise. The cold, slimy things are under their feet, they are on their tables, they are creeping over their food: it is horrible! But the magicians stretch out their rods, and more frogs come. The Egyptians are deceived, but are we?

The hand of Aaron has been stretched out over the streams and rivers and ponds,—if the frogs do come at the bidding of the magicians, or seem to come at their bidding, who sends them? and why do they come? God sends them, because of the stubbornness of the king; his call was first. But Pharaoh doesn't like the frogs; he begs that they be taken away, and on the morrow, in answer to the prayer of Moses, they die and are gathered into heaps. Yet even this signal proof that there is none like the Lord, does not convince the king; he holds fast to his bondmen. Have you noticed that, however often the wise men attempt to do just as Moses and Aaron do in bringing the plagues on their people, they never try to get rid of them? Does not this fact prove them to be imposters? What will the next plague be? Lice! The dust is smitten and becomes lice, throughout all the land of Egypt. They are on man and beast! You can imagine how the people feel! Go into a pigeon-house where bird lice are swarming, take hold of the beams with your hands, brush against the walls with your clothing, and you will know something about it. The enchantments of the magi fail, they cannot put life into particles of earth. Turning to Pharaoh they say, "This is the finger of God." But he will not listen to them; he is determined not to believe. The hatred that Esau felt for Jacob, has been bequeathed to his children. Where is the king going in the morning? To the water again! Why does he go so often? To worship his gods, but early as it is, God has sent Moses and Aaron there before him. They meet him with the same old message,—"Thus saith the Lord, let my people go that they may serve me,"—and threaten him, if he is still disobedient, with swarms of flies, or as the margin has it, with "a mixture of noisome beasts." "This time," they tell him, "the Lord will sever the land of Goshen where his people dwell, so that no flies shall be there," that he may know that the God of the Hebrews is the Lord in the midst of the earth. The division that is to be a sign to him, will be made on the morrow. Here they come, "a grievous swarm!" What a significant word to use,—"grievous"—causing grief. The land was corrupted, or destroyed by reason of the swarms of flies. They must have caused many deaths among the Egyptians, or God would not have used such strong words as he has in telling us the story. When we say "a land is destroyed," we mean that many of the people have perished.

Pharaoh begins to feel troubled. He concludes that the Hebrews may sacrifice to God in his land, and when Moses tells him that this will not do, he gives them leave to retire "a little way into the wilderness," on condition that the flies he caused to depart, will the king keep his word? Moses intreats the the Lord, and the flies are removed, not one is left. As soon as Pharaoh sees that the tormenting insects have all disappeared, he once more sets his will against the will of the Lord. He is warned that if he hold the people still, and will not let them go, a grievous murrain will be sent on all his animals—cattle, horses, asses, camels and sheep, but that nothing that belongs to the children of Israel shall die. The Lord appoints the the time, the king does not yield, and all the cattle of Egypt die. Pharaoh wants to make sure about that dividing line; he sends to the land of Goshen, not one of the cattle of the Israelites is dead; God's Word has come true. But even this has no effect on the heart of the king. He wants the brick-makers to go on building wonderful cities and strongholds for the glory of his name, and he has no intention of giving them up.

Moses sprinkles ashes of the furnace toward heaven, and it becomes a boil on man and on beast, breaking out even on the magicians, but still the king is as hard-hearted as ever. But why does God tell Pharaoh that he has raised him up for the very purpose of showing his power, and that his name might be declared in all the earth? Because he knew Pharaoh's stubborn disposition, and just how he would act when he placed him on the throne of Egypt. Just such a wilful, disobedient man was needed, if the name and the fame of the God of the Hebrews was to be carried to other lands. If Pharaoh had let the Hebrews go at the first call of God, not much would have been said about it. The fear of the Lord must fall on other nations.

When the Israelites leave the land of Egypt, there is a long, perilous journey before them, and strong, cruel peoples to subdue. These must hear of the mighty wonders wrought by God in the deliverance of his people, that they may shrink from coming against them in battle. It is no small thing to set three million of slaves at liberty. God worked a good many miracles in the war of the rebellion before the stubborn southerners would let the negroes go. One signal defeat was not enough; Davis fought on and on, just as Pharaoh did until thousands of his people were slain. Were the Egyptians as much opposed to letting the Hebrews go, as was the king himself? I think they were. Was there any other reason, why God raised up the sons of Esau to the throne of Egypt? Yes, the children of Israel must leave Egypt on the very day foretold by God to Abraham, and there must be something to drive them out.

Self Denial. Titus ii. 12.

[Read at Young People's Bible Class, Cleveland, Ohio.]

Nothing can be accomplished without self denial. Even the comparatively unimportant things of this life. The first step toward success is thus purchased. While it is true we by nature object to submitting ourselves to an ordeal for something that lies beyond, it is equally true, that, however pleasant it may be to follow what we naturally desire, such a course will end in death. "The wages of sin is death." "The carnal mind is enmity against God."

Thus the great truth of self denial becomes the entrance way to life. The life of our Master confirms this. Where in all the annals of history can be found the records of such a life? He having promise of all things made himself of no account, bore all the shame and humiliation his enemies could heap upon him,—tempted in all points as we are and died an ignominious death at last, and for what? For the joy set before him, for the re vard beyond; for life and glory, that he could bestow it throughout eternity on those who follow after him.

True it is not for us to do the one great work which was his more especial mission in the world,—that of dying a sacrificial death for the sins of men but we are to work for the one great end.

There is no exception to our Lord's law, "Whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple." If we could only imitate such a noble example as was shown by him we would be sure to share with him the blessing of the coming age.

A friend, said to me one day, "It is the hardest thing in the world to be a Christian." The remark set me to thinking, and I asked myself: "Is it hard to be a Christian, and if it is why is it so?" With a message of soothing assurrance came these words. "For my yoke is easy and my burden is light." The fault is ours, not the Master's if the yoke is not easy and the burden light. It is because we can not entirely give up our will and accept that of our Father. We think too much of ourselves; we wish this or that to happen because with our finite, short sighted reasoning, we imagine it to be to our great advantage. God with his larger vision, sees to the end. He sees it is not for our good, and in his love for us he denies the wish. We struggle against the decree, we rebel and sigh, "Why could not I obtain the thing I so much desired, it is hard to give up everything." That is the secret of the hardship, we want our own way, we do not bury our will in his.

Some one has truly said, "There are no disappointments to those whose wills are buried in the will of God." A Christian's life is the easiest thing in the world if he gives himself to God, but if he tries to carry the world in one hand and God in the other it is the hardest, for there is a constant warfare between himself and conscience. Are we Christains indeed when we try to serve both God and Mammon? "He that is not with me is against me, and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad," Matt. xii. 30.

If we are only half-hearted in our service; if we suit our own inclination, are we not slothful and unfaithful servants? If we can not without a feeling of great sacrifice obey his command to come out of the world and be separate in our lives and actions, do we not show that we love him a little, the world a little and ourselves more. Oh Lord Jesus how many times thou wert weary, and footsore, and hadst not where to lay thy head, yet; thou didst go about doing good with never a thought of thyself, while we sometimes can not even attend thy service because we are tired. Well might thou say, "Could ye not watch with me one hour?"

If after we profess Christ and still have a longing after worldly things we testify by our deeds that our hearts are not the Lords. If every desire, purpose and intent is to do the will of God, live for him and be passive and submissive to his control, then we would be good soldiers of Jesus Christ.

Let us dig deep into God's Word, and as each day brings forth new duties may we be strengthened to wait patiently for the coming of the Lord. May none of us get tired of waiting, but ever on the watch tower, keeping our lamps trimmed and burning. When the Savior calls may we be ready to go in. Oh Lord, come quickly is my prayer. Amen.

PSALM. 15.

(10 com. ver.)

1. David's Inscription for a votive-pillar.

Watch to guard me, O Lord, because in thee have I hoped.

2. I have said unto the Lord, my Lord art thou, because thou hast no need of my good things.

3. He hath done wondrously to his saints on the earth, all his purposes being in them.

4. Their weaknesses have been supplied; After that they have gone swiftly; I shall not gather their synagogues from blood, nor shall I have mentioned their names with my lips.

5. The Lord is the portion of my inheritance and my cup: Thou art the One who restorest my inheritance to me: Lines have fallen to me in the best places; Yea, indeed my inheritance is best for me.

7. I will commend the Lord who hath made me to understand: And still even until night have my secret-thoughts chastened me.

8. I have seen the Lord before me constantly, because he is at my right hand that I be not moved.

9. Therefore my heart hath rejoiced, and my tongue hath been glad, and moreover my flesh will pitch its tent on hope.

10. Because thou wilt not leave my soul in Hades (the grave) nor suffer thy Holy One to see corruption.

11. Thou hast made known unto me ways of life: Thou wilt fill me with rejoicing with thy face; Delights are there at thy right hand at last.

PSALM 16. (17 com. ver.)

1. David's entire-prayer.

Hear, O Lord, my righteousness; attend unto my supplication; Mark my votive-prayer not with deceitful lips.

2. From thy face may thy verdict have gone forth: may mine eyes have seen acts of uprightness.

3 Thou hast proved my heart: thou hast watched over me in the nights; Thou hast purified me in fire and wrong hath not been found in me.

4. Would that my mouth might not speak of the doings of men; Because of the words of thy lips I have watched to guard hard ways.

5. Fit out my steps in thy paths, that my steps may not be unstable.

6. I have cried, because thou hast hearkened unto me O God; Incline thine ear unto me and hear my oracular words.

7. Cause thy mercies to be wondered at, thou who dost save those who hope in thee, from those who stand opposed to thy right hand.

8. Guard me as a pupil of an eye. In the shelter of thy wings wilt thou shelter me

9. From the face of the irreverent who have made me wretched. Mine enemies have encompassed my soul:

10. Their fat hath shut them in: their mouth hath talked supercilliousness;

11. They have cast me out just now and surrounded me; they have set their eyes to incline out on the earth:

12. They have made their attempt at me like a lion, as it were ready for prey, and a lion's whelp as it were dwelling in hiding-places.

13. Arise, O Lord; Anticipate them; and trip them up; Deliver my soul from an irreverent one; thy sword

14. From the hand of thine enemies, O Lord, thou who dost destroy from off the earth and away from thy hidden things: apportion them in their life: Their belly hath been filled; they have become full-fed with swine's flesh and the residue they have left to their children.

15. But I shall have appeared before thy face; I shall have been full-fed when thy glory hath appeared.

PSALM 17. (18 com. ver.)

1. Unto the end; David's psalm the child of the Lord, things which he talked to the Lord, the words namely of this ode, on the day when the Lord delivered him out of the hand of all his enemies, and out of the hand of Saoul;

2. And he said, I will love thee O Lord, my strength;

3. The Lord is my canopy and my refuge and my deliverer; My God is my responsive-helper; I will hope in him: My protector and the horn of my salvation, and my interpositional helper.

4. I will praise and invoke the Lord, and I shall have been saved from mine enemies.

5. Woes of death environed me and floods of lawlessness terrorized me;

6. Woes of hades (the grave) encompassed me; snares of death anticipated me;

7. And while I was being afflicted I invoked the Lord, and I cried unto my God; He hearkened unto my voice from out his inner sanctuary, and my cry entered into his presence into his ears;

8. And the earth was shaken and trembled, and the foundations of the mountains were disturbed and shaken, because God became wrathful with them.

9. Smoke went up in his wrath, and fire flamed down from his face; coals were kindled therefrom;

10. And he inclined the heavens and came down, and thick gloom was under his feet:

11. And he mounted upon Cherubim and flew, he flew upon wings of winds:

12. And he made darkness his hiding-place, his pavilion about him dark water in clouds of air:

13. The clouds were parted with the far-shining brightness before him; Hail and coals of fire were there;

14. And the Lord thundered from out the heavens, and the Most High gave his voice;

15. And he sent out his bolts and whirled them about, and multiplied lightnings and overwhelmed them with terror:

16. And the fountains of the waters appeared, and the foundations of the inhabited were uncovered at thy rebuke, O Lord, at the breath of the spirit of thy wrath:

17. He sent from on high and took me; he took me to himself out of many waters.

18. He delivered me from my able enemies and from those who hate me, because they had become a canopy over me:

19. They anticipated me in a day of my calamity, and the Lord became my stay,

20. And led me out into a wide place: He delivered me because he had willed me:

21. And the Lord will repay me according to my righteousness, and according to the cleanness of my hands will he repay me:

22. Because I have watched to guard the Lord's ways and I have not gone irreverently away from my God;

23. Because all his verdicts are before me and his statutes have not stood away from me:

24. And I shall be blameless in estimation and I shall be guarded from my transgression:

25 And the Lord will repay me according to my righteousness and according to the cleanness of my hand in the sight of his eyes.

26. In the estimation of a holy one thou wilt have been accounted holy; to a guiltless man thou wilt be guiltless;

27. And to an elect one thou wilt be elect, and to a crooked one thou wilt seem perverse:

28. Because thou wilt save a lowly laity, and eyes of haughty ones wilt thou humble:

29. Because thou dost illuminate my lamp, O Lord, thou O my God, dost illuminate my darkness:

30. Because in thee shall I have been delivered from an ordeal, and in my God shall I mount over a wall.

31. My God, his way is blameless, the oracles of the Lord have been fire-tested; he is a protector of all those who hope in him.

32. Because what God is there except the Lord, and what God is there except one God?

33. He is the God who girdeth me with ability and who hath made my way blameless:

34. Who fitteth out my feet like a hind's feet as it were, and standeth me upon high places:

35. Who teacheth my hand to war, and maketh my arms a copper (not brass) bow:

36. And thou hast given me protection for my salvation and thy right hand hath intervened for me: and thy chastening hath restored me to uprightness at last, and this thy chastening will teach me.

37. Thou hast made wide my steps beneath me and my footprints have not been faint.

38. I shall not pursue after mine enemies, and I shall overtake them, and I shall not turn back until they leave off.

39. I shall afflict them and they will not be able to stand; they will fall beneath my feet.

40. And thou hast girded me with ability to war; thou hast bound hand and foot of all those who arise against me, made them subject to me.

41. And my enemies thou hast given their back to me and those who hate me hast thou utterly destroyed:

42. They cried out and there was no one to save; unto the Lord and he did not hearken unto them.

43. And I shall winnow them like fine-dust in the face of the wind; like mud in public-squares shall I smooth them down.

44. Deliver me from the contradictions of a laity; establish me for a head of nations: a laity that I have not known hath served me as bond-servants.

45. By the hearing of the ear hath it hearkened unto me: alien sons have lied to me;

46. Alien sons have become obsolete and withdrawn from their paths.

47. The Lord liveth, and my God be praised, and may the God of my salvation have been exalted;

48. The God who giveth unto me requitals and rendereth laities subject to me:

49. The one who delivereth me from wrathful enemies: from those who rise up against me wilt thou lift me up, from an unjust man wilt thou deliver me:

50. Therefore shall I confess unto thee among nations, O Lord, and in thy name shall I exalt the strain.

51. He it is who dost magnify the acts of salvation of his king, and who causest mercy for his Anointed David and his seed whilst there is an intimate age.

PSALM 18. (10 com. ver.)

1. Unto the end, David's psalm.

2. Heaven discourseth God's glory and the canopy publisheth his handiwork.

3. Day unto day beleheth forth oracular speech, and night unto night publisheth a way of comprehension.

4. There are no ordinary forms of speech nor words, whose sounds are being heard;

5. Into all the earth their voice hath gone forth though, and unto the ends of the inhabited their oracular-sayings.

6. In the sun hath he placed his tabernacle: and he is a bridegroom as it were going his way out of his bridal-chamber: a giant as it were to run his way will he be glad.

7. From the heaven's extreme limit is his going forth and unto the heavens' extreme limit is his goal: And there is no one who will hide away from his heat.

8. The law of the Lord is blameless converting souls; The testimony of the Lord is trustworthy making children wise.

9. The statutes (the enactments that justify) of the Lord are upright rejoicing the heart: the commandment of the Lord is farshining enlightening the eyes.

10. The fear of the Lord is chaste continuing unto an age of an age; The judicial-renderings of the Lord are truthful, renderings that have justified at the same time;

11. More to be desired than gold and a very precious stone, and sweeter than honey and honey-comb.

12. And forsooth thy bond-servant is watching to guard them; in the guarding of them is there a great return.

13. Who will understand stumbling steps? From my hidden-sins mayest thou have cleansed me,

14. And from sins that alienate mayest thou have spared thy bond-servant: If they shall not lord it over me, then shall I be blameless and I shall have been cleansed from a great sin.

15. And the oracular-words of my mouth will be satisfactory, and the meditation of my heart constantly in thy sight, O Lord, my responsive-helper and my redeemer.

COMMENT.

The fifteenth psalm is numerically a conjunctive-minor—the ten indicating the conjunction of the divine and human will to have taken place—the minor five indicating, as a fifth, the plaint of human weakness and inability unassisted to accomplish the righteousness that comes with the divine concept and prescience.

From the fourth verse on the Messianic import becomes unmistakable and culminates in the prophetic blessedness of the eleventh verse. Portions of this psalm are quoted in the new and interpreted for us and therefore need no further comment, except to recall the reader's attention to the heading in the first verse—"an inscription for a votive-pillar" which marks its importance in the way of public-teaching—something for the wayfarer to read and ponder over.

The 18th psalm we learn from the first verse is David's votive-prayer—a very important thought by the way—as it is the Messianic-prayer par-excellence—the spirit of Christ speaking by the mouth of David—the "Son of David" speaking through David. In this light alone can it be understood, as the casual-reader at all familiar with David's character and career would see at a glance that David himself could not assume the statements herein made to be true of, himself except in some imputed sense. Observe the complete mercy expected in the 7th verse and the confidence in the divine guardianship in the 8th—both numerically significant. Also the minor assurance of the conjunctive fifteenth with which the psalm closes.

The 17th psalm with its heading "Unto the End" and the additional statement that it is "an ode" with the historical fact which it commemorates, makes it national in its particular import. The 2nd and 3rd verses are remarkable for their descriptive epithets here applied to the Lord. The psalm is as it should be numerically a picture of the consummation of lawlessness and iniquity with God's judgment upon it—the great Armagedon battle—and the victory and the deliverance of the saints—the whole psalm being luminous with instruction in righteousness and resonant with the Messianic hope of salvation, God's ability to save to the uttermost. Observe the special Messianic import of the 44, 45, 46 and 47th verses. Also the 50th and 51st.

The 18th psalm like the 9th is a consummation of parable teaching, and there is nothing in human literature that approaches it in striking imagry and significant tropes, grandeur of thought and simplicity of statement. It is in short an epitome of the divine revelation in word and works. Notice the variations from the Com. and R. V. For they are very marked, and remember that 9 or any multiple of nine is significant of consummation in some way. Here it is the consummate thought of God in creation and redemption as revealed in his works and his Word.

Special.

Sisters of the "Evangelical Aid Society," do not forget that in connection with the conference work ours too must be shown. All did so well last year. We hope the interest has not abated but that all will do what they can even though it should not be very much. Every offering however small helps swell the amount which is all used to further the gospel work. Bring or send your mites to Dutton at conference time when Sr. Jackman will credit each with their amount.

Yours, working for the Master.

Report.

Dear Restitution:

Since our last report the Elder has again visited Millbrook and three more were added to the Body of Christ by baptism. We have promised to return there in the near future. At present writing we are both at Niagara Falls, holding a series of meetings. We expect to return to Michigan in time to welcome all who may come to Dutton, to conference, and we hope to have more than ever before. Come one and all, and assist in making this the best meeting ever held in Michigan. Able speakers are expected who will not fail to interest and instruct all. God help us to prepare ourselves for a glorious meeting. Come in the spirit of prayer and earnest work and a blessing will not fail to be added.

M. A. Woodward.

Through Buffet Sleeping Car to Michigan Points.

Commencing about the middle of June, and continuing until the latter part of September, the Vandalia Line will place in service elegant Buffet Sleeping Cars to be run through to Petoskey, Bay View, via Terre Haute, St Joseph, Grand Rapids, Traverse City and Charlevoix. This will be the only line of through cars from St. Louis to the delightful and cool resorts of Michigan. Only one change of cars to Mackinac Island. For detailed information address nearest Vandalia Line Agent, or E. A. Ford, General Passenger Agent, St. Louis.—June 30.

For the Dunkard's Convention at Decatur, Ill., May 28th to June 8th the Nickel Plate Road offers a Superb Passenger Service with Magnificent Sleeping Cars, Unexcelled Diners, Luxurious Day Coaches, and Reduced Excursion Rates.—m-15-22.

Please say, that the brethren of Northern Illinois will not hold conference in June, as was contemplated, but will postpone until in September. Due notice will be given.

J. M. GLOTFELTY, Chairman.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God, in Iowa, will be held at Marshalltown, sometime during the month of August. Notice will be given in due time. Brethren and Sisters, begin at once to prepare for this meeting and make it such a one in numbers and in Spirit that it may long be remembered.

O. J. ALLARD, Sec'y.

The Third Quarterly Conference of the Church of God, in Indiana, will be held at the Antioch meeting house, five miles south of Plymouth, commencing on Friday, June 7, 1895, at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue over the following Sunday.

Owing to the fact of there being so few members of this once prosperous church they being separated from different causes, it has been questioned by some as to the advisability of longer trying to hold conference meetings at this place; but as the time draws near all hearts turn to Old Antioch. These meetings have been held so long that they have become an established fact in the minds of the people and they expect the meeting as surely as the time comes. And then it seems we get so much real encouragement and enjoyment from them, it seems like a family re-union, where we all meet on a common level, where we can enjoy the blessed communion of those of like precious faith so that we feel that we would be lost without them for from these gatherings we do derive much strength if we come with the right spirit. So, Brothers and sisters let us come with hearts full of love for the truth, laying aside the cares of this life and have nothing in view but the upbuilding of each other's faith. We invite you to come. We urge you to come.

J. F. WAGONER, Pres.
A. C. ROBERTS, Sec'y.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God, in Michigan, will be held (D. V.) at Dutton, Kent Co., commencing Thursday evening May 30th, and holding over the following Sunday.

The executive committee has given instruction to "call the conference." Of course all that was meant was to announce the time and place appointed for having a conference. A few, a "little flock," have heard and obeyed the call of the Shepherd.

As we are considerably scattered over the field, it has seemed profitable and enjoyable to meet at stated times to greet and cheer each other, and to get a seed of grain.

Since our last assemblage we have had to keep constantly guarded against the wolves, we hope none have been taken unawares, and the weather has been severe—Satanic Storms. Now let us gather once more to aid and encourage each other before the Shepherd comes.

Should there be any in the "flock" who seem almost exhausted, make an extra effort to be present, and those who feel strong and healthy be sure to be present to lend a helping hand to others, and to tell them what food you have picked which gave you strength, and to instruct them which way to go in order to avoid the more ferocious wolves.

Bring as many with you as possible. There are a goodly number in Michigan, who are taking THE RESTITUTION, and will read this notice, thereby showing that you sympathize to some extent at least with those of this faith; but who have never met with us. Now can you not so arrange as to be present at this meeting. All will be heartily welcomed.

Dutton is located on the Michigan Central R. R., ten miles southeast of Grand Rapids. Those going from the South or West, go over the G. R. & I. R. R., L. S. & M. S. R. R. or C. & W. M. R. R. via Grand Rapids.

F. L. AUSTIN, Sec'y.

OBITUARY.

"Granma Fisher," as she was known by those of us who had met with her at our conferences, died suddenly, Apr. 3, 1895, at the home of her son, David C. Fisher, aged 81 years, 7 months and 1 day. Her maid n name was Charlotte Draper. Her native home was in Canada where, in her 18th year she was married to Wm. C. Fisher. In the spring of 1837 she with her husband moved to Portland, Ohio from Ledorg, Canada and in 1874 they removed to Indiana where she resided until her death. In 1877 she united with the Church of God and was a "faithful member until the end." How much there is in being able to have it said of us, "Faithful unto the end." It is to those, that the crown will be given. How well do we remember her smiling, peaceful face, and her pleasant way of saying and doing things which no one else could do just as she did, when she came to our homes, where she was always welcome. May we all be "Faithful until the end," that we may be able to say, "Good Morning" with her in the Kingdom of God. C.

If we wait until we have more than we want before beginning to give, we shall die without giving. But if we give out of our scanty portion to those whose need is greater than ours, we shall live as givers, and shall enjoy living. The man who only gives from his surplus never knows the real joy of giving.

Liberty is a great word, but so is duty. We must not forget, how much of life's happiness, sweetness, and usefulness are secured by bending to our duties, and being like him who came not to be ministered unto, but to minister.

The true motive of our actions, like the real pipes of an organ, are sometimes concealed. Then the gilded and the hollow pretext is placed in front for show.

I will be southeast of Kokomo, Ind. the 2nd Sunday in May. The 3rd Sunday northeast of Colfax. The 4th Sunday at Argos. The 1st Sunday in June, at Bell, and the 2nd Sunday southeast of Kokomo. At each of the above places the meeting is to begin on Saturday evening.

J. S. HATCH.

PLEASE write short articles. It does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

Niagara Falls Excursion, Thursday, August 8, 1895, via the Lake Erie and Western R. R.

On Thursday, August 8, 1895, the Lake Erie & Western R. R. will run their popular excursion to Cleveland, Chautauqua Lake, Buffalo and Niagara Falls at following very low rates, viz.:

Peoria	$7.50
Bloomington	7.00
LaFayette	6.00
Michigan City	6.00
Indianapolis	5.00
Tipton	5.00
Lima	4.00
Ft Wayne	5.00
Muncie	5.00
Connersville	5.00
Rushville	5.00
New Castle	5.00
Cambridge City	5.00
Fremont	4.00
Sandusky	4.00

With corresponding reductions from intermediate points.

In addition to the above, the purchasers of these tickets will be given privilege of special excursion side trip tickets to Lewiston-on-the-Lake, including a steamboat ride on Lake Ontario, for 25 cents. To Toronto and return by Lake from Lewiston $1.00; to Thousand Island $5.00. Tickets for the above side trips can be had when purchasing Niagara Falls ticket, or at any time on train.

Besides the above privileges, with that of spending Sunday at the Falls, we will furnish all those who desire a side trip from Brockton Junction to Chautauqua Lake and return free of charge.

Tickets of admission to places of special interest at or near Niagara Falls, but outside the reservation, including toll over the great International Bridge to the Canadian side, elevators to the water's edge at Whirlpool Rapids on the Canadian side, will be offered on train at a reduction from prices charged after reaching the Falls.

Do not miss this opportunity to spend Sunday at Niagara Falls. The excursion train will arrive at Niagara Falls 7:40 A. M. Friday, August 9, 1895, and will leave the Falls returning Sunday morning, August 11, at 6 o'clock, stopping at Cleveland Sunday afternoon, giving an opportunity to visit the magnificent monument of the late President Garfield, and many other interesting points.

Tickets will be good, however, to return on regular trains leaving the Falls Saturday, August 10, for those not desiring to remain over. Tickets will also be good returning on all regular trains up to and including Tuesday, August 13, 1895. Secure your tickets, also chair and sleeping car accommodations, early. Those desiring can secure accommodation in these cars while at the Falls. For further information call on any agent Lake Erie & Western R. R., or address C. F. Daly, Gen. Pass. Agent, Indianapolis, Ind.

It is rarely well to take too anxious thought for the morrow; many of the knottiest problems if left alone, will solve themselves; many of the most perplexing will suggest, even dictate their own solution, when the time for action shall arrive.

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects, by B. C. Bingley, is the title of a pamphlet of 68 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under different headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued calls for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonian Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer any premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks there not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You owe us for paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

Special Announcement.

We have secured a limited number of copies of "Letter to a Friend." This is our old and popular favorite, a 32 page tract, telling of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the One Hope, the One Faith, and One Baptism. Written by Mrs. C. C. Wondruff. Price 10 cents, 12 for $1.00 post paid. Send soon, for they will not last long.

PRESENTS FOR FRIENDS.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Words;" one of 8 page tract; and one of "Seeking and Finding," all for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of truth. Send to Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va. not to this office.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

The Restitution.

THE RESURRECTION of Jesus the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." And a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Comfort in Obedience.

What peaceful hours I now enjoy,
Since I've obeyed the Lord;
With praise, my heart and tongue employ,
And thus proclaim His Word.

His Word so great, so pure and true,
Is wondrous to my mind;
'Twill make us free, 'twill make us pure,
The truth in Christ to find.

To know the truth in Jesus' name
Will bring a rich reward,
My greatest joy, and chiefest gain,
Is to obey the Lord.

His gift, a wondrous kingdom fair!
With sorrow wiped away,
The saints, in throne with him will share,
In that eternal day.

Yes, Zion's holy hill is named,
The home of Christ's pure Bride:
Can we then wish for aught more famed,
Than this rich Paradise?

An Exposition.

"Will Brother W. H. Wilson give an explanation of the 144,000 of Rev. 7th and 14th? Are they the same company? and is either the same company as is brought to view in Rev. v. 9, 10, and withall what are their characteristics? and how made up? Also, please give an explanation of that great multitude of Rev. vii. 9, from whom made up, and what will be their position in the kingdom?" Your Brother, in hope.

DANIEL HOWARD.

To answer in a comprehensive manner the above inquiry, would require the space of the entire paper, as that cannot be, what I shall offer will be merely an outline, which if followed out, may lead to a better understanding of the topic.

I do not regard the 144,000 of Rev. vii. and xiv., as being the same. See Rev. xiv. 4, 5, and there will be no difficulty in understanding what company constitute the 144,000 mentioned in that chapter: "These are they which were not defiled with women; for they are virgins. (Paul represents the faithful church as a chaste virgin, espoused to Christ.) These are they which follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. These were purchased from among men, to be the first fruits unto God and unto the Lamb, and in their mouth was found no lie: they are without blemish."

Let me note right here, that this company is composed of pure, holy characters. They "follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth." If he says, Believe the gospel I preached, they believe. If he says, be baptized for the remission of sins, they cheerfully obey. If he says, copy my godly walk in life, they do the best they can. None others have the least possible show of ever being a part of this 144,000.

As to who they are, is indicated by the phrase: "the fruits unto God and unto the Lamb." "Ye are come unto Mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to the innumerable hosts of angels, and to the general assembly and church of the first born who are enrolled in heaven." "Christ the first fruits; then they are Christ's at his coming. (The first crop of the harvest.) Then the end." (The second crop).

As already indicated, this company of the 144,000 are "the firstfruits unto God and the Lamb" and are truly a blessed and holy people. See Rev. xx. 6, as to what is promised this people: "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection: (the first fruits unto God and the Lamb) over these the second death hath no power; but they shall be priests of God and of Christ, and shall reign with him a thousand years." If we compare Scripture with Scripture, we will find beyond any successful controversy that "the first fruits unto God and the Lamb," is the "church of the first born," which are those who "hath part in the first resurrection," and those having "part in the first resurrection" are to "reign with him a thousand years." Now, see Rev. v. 9, 10, and you will find that the company there mentioned, are identical with these, as both are redeemed by the blood of the Lamb, and both reign with Christ. Hence there can be no doubt but what the company mentioned in Rev. xiv. and Rev. v. 9, 10 are the same, and answers our brother's second question. But the companies mentioned in Rev. xiv. and vii are not the same. That chapter shows that 144,000 out of the nation of Israel are to be sealed.

The time is indicated in Rev. vi. 12-17, the day of the wrath of God and the Lamb, at the close of the sixth seal. I look for a future opening of the seals, following each other in very rapid succession. Rev. v. 7-10, shows the "the firstfruits unto God and the Lamb," are with him before the opening of the first seal. Right here I would remark, that those who hold to the future opening of the seals, and those who regard them as being opened in the past, both agree that the signs indicate that the time is ripe for the ingathering of the harvest of the first fruits unto God and the Lamb. Therefore I would not regard it as wise to agitate ourselves seriously over the differences, but rather let each one seriously and earnestly question him or herself, am I personally ready for that auspicious event? Or, if would to God, we could see a real earnest awakening in the Church of God.

To return to our topic, the question may be asked what prospect is there ahead for the sealing of twelve thousand of each tribe at present? We don't see very much, especially if we are now living near the end of the sixth seal as many brethren think, which is the time fixed for the sealing. But, if the firstfruits are gathered in before the first seal is opened, (as there is some indication in Rev. v. 7-10) there is time for the event to take place, especially as events happen rapidly in these days. Israel may suddenly appear upon the scene as a nation born in a day.

In Malachi we have a decisive promise that "Elijah the prophet" will be sent to Israel before the full ushering in of the day of wrath, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, etc., John the Baptist performed a similar mission as a forerunner, before Jesus' first advent, coming in the spirit and power of Elias, but the prophet himself will appear before the coming of Christ with his saints. The two witnesses which are "two prophets," will also appear on a mission to Israel. See Rev. vii. and you will find although it is the time for the ushering in of the day of wrath, the angels are restrained from doing harm until the requisite number are sealed. These sealed ones are styled the "servants of our God." It may be possible that these "servants of our God," have for the most part been already sealed, as they served God under the Mosaic law. Rev. vii. does not furnish the least hint that they have been purchased or washed in the blood of the Lamb, the same as the 144,000 in Rev. xiv. In Rev. xv. 2, 3, we can infer that both companies are present on the sea of glass, those redeemed under the law, and those by Christ, for "they sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb."

Rev. xiv. 5, ends the account relating to the 144,000 composed of the "firstfruits unto God and unto the Lamb." Verse six introduces "another angel flying in mid-heaven, having an eternal gospel to proclaim unto them that dwell on the earth, and unto every nation, tribe and tongue and people; and he saith with a great voice, fear God, and give him glory: for the hour of his judgment is come." This you will perceive, immediately succeeds the gathering of the 144,000 firstfruits, and the sealing of Israel.

Another account is given of "the hour of his judgment" in Rev. vii. 9-17, and the result of the proclamation of the "eternal gospel," during that hour. Verse 9, ends the account of the sealing of Israel verse 9 says: "After these things (the sealing of Israel) I saw and behold, a great multitude which no man could number, (the firstfruits could be numbered) out of every nation, and of all tribes, peoples and tongues, standing before the throne and before the Lamb, arrayed in white robes, and palms in their hands," etc. Verse 14 says, "these are they which come out of the great tribulation, and they washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."

This "hour of judgment" is the same as that spoken of by Isaiah, when the Lord arises out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity, when the earth casts out her dead, and the Lord says, Come, my people, enter thy chamber, and shut thy door, until the indignation is overpast, and also Dan. xii. where the dead are raised, and the time of trouble comes. In the Psalms we are also told that God will hide his people in his pavilion.

The great question which should concern us very much, at this time [illegible] the "first fruits," and have the Lord as a shelter in the time of storm, which will shortly break upon the world in tremendous fury?

W. H. WILSON.

Gentiles Baptism.

"And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, all power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things, whatsoever I have commanded you." Matt. xxviii. 18-20.

We learn from the Master's command just quoted:

1. That all power was given unto him.

2. That the disciples were commanded to teach all nations, which surely includes Gentiles.

3. Baptizing them, who? all nations. The language of the Master in this commission should forever settle the question as to whether Gentiles should be baptized or not.

4. Teaching them (all nations) to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you. This teaches positively that the disciples were to teach and baptize converts among all nations, and the commission in Mark is the same. "And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," Mark xvi. 15-16. We learn by this first, that, they were to go into all the world, second to preach the gospel to every creature, which would take in Gentiles. To my mind there is nothing plainer taught in the Bible that now under the gospel there is no difference between Jews and Gentiles as far as obedience is concerned. Christ says, "I am the door, if any man enter in he shall be saved. Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber," John x. 1-9.

The Master makes no difference, how can we? They all have to come by the same door, and the commission in Matthew and Mark are part of the way leading through the door. It seems Cornelius was a Gentile, and was commanded to send for Peter (a Jew) to tell him what to do, Acts x. 6. "Then Peter opened his mouth and said, of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him and worketh righteousness is accepted with him," Verses 34, 35, and 47, and 48 teaches that they the Gentiles, were baptized, and thisagrees with the commission in Matthew, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you. Just what Peter done to the house of Cornelious. How is it Paul? "But now the righteousness of God without the law (added law) is manifested being witnessed by the law and the prophets; even the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ unto all and upon all them that believe for there is no difference," Rom. iii. 21, 22. "For there is no difference between the Jew and the Greek. (Gentile) for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him," Rom. x. 12. Paul says there is no difference, how can we? And Christ said, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man (does not say Jew) be born of water and of the spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God," John iii. 3. "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, (Gentile) there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus, and if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise, Gal. iii. 27-29. Paul does not say, "As many Jews as were baptized" and he teaches that if they had been baptized into [illegible] if they were Christ's they were Abraham's seed and heirs. Surely this tells how we become the seed of Abraham, and Paul says there is neither Jew nor Greek, that is, there is no difference between Jew or Greek, (Gentile.) They must all in every nation accept and be saved on the same conditions of pardon. Where there is neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, Barbarian or Scythian, bond nor free, but Christ is all and in all," Col. iii. 11. Certainly there is no difference in Christ. I know no different way for different nations of people to put on Christ, or be saved only through and by the door, for as the body is one and hath many members and all the members of that one body being many, are one body, so also is Christ. For by one spirit are we all baptized into one body whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one spirit," I Cor. xii. 12, 13.

Certainly this language needs no comment. All are baptized into one body whether Jew or Gentile. Here Paul is carrying out the instructions of the Master in the commission of Matt. xxviii. 19, 20, and who dare change it. If I am not right on this subject, I would thank some one to correct me and show me where I have erred. Read Eph. ii. 30.

M. L. ADAMS.

Inspired Preachers.

A short time since I was present at a religious service, and during the opening exercises, a gentleman prayed for the preacher; and among other things in his petition, he asked the Lord to "inspire him with just the right words suited to our needs." I fear the good Lord does not answer such prayers, in fact we can be assured that he does not, for the reason that the preacher does not proceed very far with his discourse, before you will detect that his words are out of harmony with that which we know is of a truth, the Inspired Word of God. These preachers have thoroughly instructed their hearers, that the Word which holy men of old wrote as they were moved by the Holy Spirit, is a dark enigma, which cannot be understood, or explained to the people, unless they, themselves are inspired by the Holy Spirit to enable them to comprehend its import

Once heard a leader of a Bible class tell his pupils, that he believed preachers of all denominations were given a greater measure of the Holy Spirit, than the people in the congregation, to guide them into all truth. Now, how is that? does the Holy Spirit guide all these men to contradict each other? One man is supposed to be guided to preach a sky-kingdom for immortal souls, something that is completely foreign to the Inspired Word of God. Another preacher is inspired to preach sprinkling for baptism, and then another is inspired to contradict him; and another is inspired to preach the doctrine of the trinity, and another to contradict that, and so on to the end of the list, one inspired preacher is led to contradict another supposed inspired preacher, until confusion confounded is the result.

Inspired apostles commended the Bereans, and called them "noble," because they searched the Scriptures daily, to test the teachings of these inspired apostles.

Paul says to Timothy: "From a babe thou hast known the sacred writings which are able to make thee wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. Every Scripture inspired of God is also profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for instruction which is in righteousness: that the man of God may be complete, furnished completely unto every good work."

Now, what do we gather from this Scripture?

1. "The sacred writings." "are able to make wise unto salvation."

2. "Is also profitable for teaching."

3. "For reproof."

4. "For instruction (or discipline) in righteousness."

5 "Furnished completely unto every good work."

This is just what the sacred writings are able to accomplish for every one who will submit him or herself to their guidance. There is not the least intimation anywhere of the necessity for an accompanying interpreter. It would seem unnecessary for those words to be given us through the mediumship of the Holy Spirit as a guide to lead our footsteps unto the haven of rest, if they could not be comprehended by us unless we are also specially inspired by the same Spirit to understand them, thus rendering the first revelation of little value, if it cannot be understood without a second revelation specially given to those who seek to obtain a knowledge of the same. A revelation that cannot be comprehended, is practically no revelation at all.

This second inspiration business amounts to but little more than a species of infidelity. The Sacred Writings are not exactly according to their taste, they are too old, they prefer something of a later date, and hence, they pray God to inspire their preachers with the Holy Spirit, and give them words just suited to their needs. The words of prophets and apostles many seem to think are not in step with the advancement of the age. This thought is frequently given out by those high in position in the popular church. Dean Stanley remarked with regard to baptism, that immersion is undoubtedly the meaning of the Greek word bapto, and that immersion was practiced by the apostles and others in the early whose church in Palestine a country climate was suited to such practice, but not suited to our northern climate, and that advanced Christianity has outgrown that idea. He says: "It is a striking example of the triumph of common sense."

The advanced church has outgrown the Sacred Writings. they have become to a large extent infidel. I once heard a preacher compare the Bible to a large pasture, in which different animals could find food suited to their taste, and reject that which they did not relish. So the Bible was just such a pasture, furnishing food for various species of Christians, like a horse or a cow would crop the sweet grass, but the jackass would eat the thistles, which a horse would reject. But he did not tell us what jackass Christians were.

Dear reader, stand firm by the Bible, it has stood the test of ages; its promises can always be relied upon, they never disappoint. It is a magnificent transcript of the Divine mind, revealing his glorious purposes concerning man and the earth. It bears upon its face the divine impress, in striking contrast with the vain imaginings of specially inspired preachers of modern times, or the frothy vaporings of the empty heads and corrupt hearts of impostors, liars and deceivers.

It is not safe to trust man, but is absolutely safe to trust, believe and practice what you find written in God's Holy Book. By so doing you will be wonderfully blest, even more. I have tested it personally, and know whereof I speak.

W. H. WILSON.

The Covenants of Promise.

That the hope of the promise as given by Jehovah unto the father's Abraham, Isaac and Jacob was the basis of the faith once delivered to the ancient worthies, the faith once for all delivered unto the saints, there can be no doubt. It was the faith of the martyrs, which made the fires that consumed their bodies as but chariots of glory. This is the faith that we are exhorted to contend earnestly for.

For contending for these things Stephen lost his life, and is called the first Christian martyr.

Paul was made a prisoner because of the hope of the promise made of God unto the fathers.

An important item of the promise is the land of Canaan. Its boundaries are given minutely thus:—"From the River of Egypt, unto the great river, the River Euphrates, the Kenites and the Kennizzites, and the Kadmonites, and the Hittites, and the Perizzites, and the Rephraim, and the Amorites, and the Canannites, and the Girgashites, and Jebusites."

Stephen declared in Acts vi. and vii. chapters, that the promise has never been fulfilled and Abraham has as yet received none inheritance in it. The promise of Jehovah is given. By and by he will call his faithful servant Abraham from the sleep of death and give him the promised land. That the patriarch did not expect to receive or to possess the land during his mortal existence is evidenced by the question he asked Jehovah, "Lord God, whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it.

By one of the most impressive ceremonies ever after observed by the ancients in making a firm covenant, God ratifies these promises by the blood of slain animals, and fixed the boundaries as we have seen of the land of promise. The account of this transaction is to be found in Gen. xv. Unless this deep sleep and horror of darkness with the prophecy following was intended to answer Abraham's question we know not its significancy. Abraham surely understood it so. Understood by it that not in this mortal life was he to inherit it, but that he must go down into the grave and inherit it with the promised seed, with whom he had been made joint-heirs, and this was to him a promise of a resurrection from the dead, by the power of God to an immortal glorious life, and to reign with Christ the promised seed forever. The faithful in Christ are Abrahani's Seed and joint heirs to the promised land and headship of the nations. All this was foreshadowed by Abraham being laid powerless in a deep sleep pre-figuring the sleep of death, and the horror of great darkness as of the grave, from which he was recalled again to the light of day. As the fiery trials through which his seed were to pass in Egypt, and an ever watchful providence were foreshadowed by the smoking furnace and the burning lamp that passed between them but did not consume the divided peices.

Thus, we see, the promise of landed inheritance and headship of nations has not been fulfilled neither did the patriarch in his mortal days look for the fulfillment but embraced them and looked forward to a better state than these obtained. His seed have occupied but a small part of the land of promise, and that mostly west of the Jordan, the least desirable portion. His seed according to the flesh possessing the faith, must yet people this entire territory or the covenant of which circumcision was the sign will never be honored. Eden will yet belong to and be inhabited by Abraham's seed. The kingdom of God will be restored to Israel, territory and all. Then, a King, (Jesus) shall reign in righteousness and princes (the saints) rule in judgment. In that day they will come from all quarters and set down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, in the kingdom of God. Then indeed the prayer of every consecrated child of God will be realized. The long-prayed-for kingdom will have come.

The territory of the kingdom of God on earth will embrace the land deeded to Abraham. A large land, larger than any country in Europe except Russia. By getting a map of the Old World and tracing the boundaries of the promised land as given by Jehovah to Abram, the reader will readily see the truth of this statement.

That Jesus the Christ is the rightful heir to the throne and kingdom of the Lord over Israel, all Bible students know. Isaiah says of him, "That the government shall be upon his shoulders. Upon the throne of David and upon his kingdom to order it with justice and judgment from henceforth, even forever, the zeal of the Lord of Hosts will perform this." The angels say of Jesus, "The Lord God will give unto him the throne of his father David and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Bible readers know that David's throne was on Mt. Zion in the City of Jerusalem.

Editor Restitution:

I have never written any for the paper before this. We are strangers in one sense, but by the Word of God we are not. We are here with but few of like precious faith to converse with. We have Sunday School with Brother Boice Cheney as superintendant. We are doing all we can for the cause. How thankful we should be for the many blessings that are now bestowed upon us. I live in hope of meeting you all in the everlasting kingdom. Dear ones, let us pray for each other that we may be found faithful and at last meet where sorrow and care are no more, and be of that number that will be found ready and waiting when the Lord comes.

With love to all I remain your Sister in Christ.

MRS. VIOLA SNADDON.

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a New Year's gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you through out the year.

Lord Help.

Let us pray:—
"Help us to build each other up;
Help us ourselves to grow;
Increase our faith, confirm our hope,
And perfect us in love.

Words cannot tell what sweet relief
In prayer for every want we find!
What strength for warfare, balm for grief,
What peace of mind.

Take courage, then, ask and believe,
Expecting mercy from the Lord
The promise runs: 'Ask and receive,
And Christ is faithful to his Word.'"

PLEASE remember that there are five Wednesdays in May, hence no issue on May 29. June 5 will be the date of the next issue.

"REDEMPTION is a deliverance from the bondage of sin and death. Rom. viii. 23. God is our Savior, Isa. lxiii. 10, through Christ. 1 Tim. ii. 26. Thus Christ becomes to us a Savior; first, by dying on our behalf. Second, by God investing him with life-giving power to redeem or save us, John xvii. 2; Phil. iii. 21.

SOME one has said, "If I am laid away conscious of having spent my last days in purity of life and a consciousness of having my sins forgiven through him who was the first one resurrected from the dead, I will not fear but what the power that could speak life to the separate leaf, to the cold and lifeless egg, and give life to humanity as he does, can and will raise me when and how he promised."

WE learn through the press that the Pan-American Congress of Religion and Education is to be held in Toronto, Ontario, July 18-25. It is said to have attracted the attention of prominent men of all religious bodies and many influential Protestant and Catholic dignitaries have promised to attend. The object is the betterment of the Word, but no creed is to be advocated; it seems to have sprung out of, or received a new impetus from the Parliament of Religions in Chicago.

"GODLINESS, it is said by Paul, 1 Tim. iv. 8, has the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come. We all understand from the Scriptures that Godliness has the promise of the future life; but what about the life that is now? In the life of Godliness we lose some things the flesh delights in; but when we think of these things it is clear that many of them are better missed, and their place taken by superior things. What is there in present experience to compare with the peace of God ruling in our hearts? What joy of the world is equal to that implanted by the Truth? What companionship can rival in sweetness the communion of saints?"

CANNON LIDDON said, "Our possession of immortality is independent of the work of Christ." What an awful statement to make in the face of positive statements of Scripture to the contrary! Do we not read that it is to them who by patient continuance in well doing, seek for glory, honor, and immortality. God will render eternal life. The apostle does not speak of immortality as a possession independent of the work of Christ, but as a gift to be sought for by patient well-doing. This dignitary of the Church of England also said, "Through Christ's precious death and his glorious resurrection, our inevitable immortality will be an immortality of bliss;—the hope in Christ is the hope of a blind immortality." Here is subtelty worthy of the Serpent's Seed. The Cannon is certainly a wily corruptor of the truth. He covertly manufactures his own proof texts, and robs Christ of the honor of bringing immortality to light and he should read the golden text which puts the gospel hope before us, "That whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but be blessed;" the life is inevitable,—no thanks to Christ.

IN the Gospels our Lord quotes from the Old Testament more than 70 times, either assuming the trustworthiness of its statements or appealing to it as authority, or expounding its predictions; while his references to it amount in number to over 100.

"WHEN men start with the assumption that miracles are incredible or impossible, however clever they may be in literary or historical criticism, no one need be over-awed by the names and opinions of any particular school of Higher Critics, however eminent they may be. Examination will often show that much is put forward as critical conclusion is, after all, little more than conjecture."

ON Sunday, May the 12th, Miss M. L. Atwell a member of the Disciple Church, put on the Sin-covering name of Jesus. For several months she had been examining the foundation of what we teach as "The things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ;" and being fully persuaded that God employs no other gospel to save, decided to lay hold on the only hope set before us. Earnest words of exhortation and congratulation were addressed to the new-born one by those present, one of whom was our venerable Brother Bonk of Ponthill, Ont., who was visiting the Church in Cleveland. It was a joyous and soul-stirring occasion that will not soon be forgotten.

IT is not the mad thing it seems when we say Christ may be expected in the earth again by and by. It only seems so to those who have not realized the fact that he has been here once already. Only grant that Jesus Christ appeared in Judea 1800 years ago, and that he did and said the things recorded of him, and a person will be bound to feel that the idea of his second coming is not only reasonable, but inevitable. The saints are those who have accepted all the truth of God which centers in him. He comes to be glorified in them and admired of them. In order to do this they have to be raised from the dead; and this is just what he has promised to do; and all the sufferings and death of the past will avail nothing without a resurrection. In the death state they are no glory to him; his glory in them is now prospective; it will certainly be realized for it says "the Lord himself shall descend with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first," etc. It is when Christ their life appears that they appear with him in glory,—and not before —and not before they are thus glorified, can he be glorified in them. Besides all this, God has promised to send him again, and he has promised to come, and the hope of his coming is apostolically styled the "Blessed Hope."

SIR G. G. Stokes says: "We know that to a certain extent, thought as we experience it, depends upon the condition of the brain. In the case of a faint, the supply of blood to the brain is greatly reduced, and for a time is in abeyance. And it is exceedingly curious how completely one's consciousness, when the faint is over, joins on to one's consciousness before it took place." The same author says, "The supposition frequently made is that the soul is rather hampered by its union with the body, and it would be freer to act, to think and exercise its proper functions if it were separated from the body altogether. That theory was subject to very great difficulties. The more vigorous our health, the more active as a rule are our minds. In illness the mind is often very much enfeebled. Those who hold this theory suppose that the soul is immediately, by its very nature immortal. Yet this is rather of the nature of a philosophical speculation than of a proposition deduced from Scripture." This scholarly writer further says: "The body may go to corruption and may be reduced to ashes, and they may be dissolved by chemical means and thrown into a river. What is that to us? Nothing at all. It does not depend upon that; nor are we obliged to suppose that the resurrection body will be composed of the same particles as the laid away body. We do not now consist of the same particles that we did a few years ago, and yet our identity is preserved."

Selected.

The Royal Marriage.

All Christ's parables were illustrative of some phase of the kingdom of God, that kingdom which is soon to be set up on this earth. Many of his parables were based upon scenes of every day life. The sower sowing his seed (Mark iv.) showing how the seed of God's Word is sown, and brings forth fruit, which will be harvested in due time. "The grain of mustard seed" (Matt. xiii. 31) tells us that the seed which the Son of Man sowed will develop and spread, and that although the wicked may have sown tares, yet at the end of the age, when the angels are commissioned "to put in their sickle" and reap the harvest, when "they shall have gathered out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity" (verse 41); then that seed shall have produced a population of inhabitants for the kingdom which "shall fill the whole earth," and they "shall shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father." "The parable of the marriage feast" referred to the hostile attitude of the Jewish nation against their King; they not understanding that their Messiah was first to suffer and die, in order that he "might bring life and immortality to light by the gospel." Christ illustrated their attitude towards him from a divine standpoint. A man's course may appear very different from what it really is. He may be conscientious; and thinking he is doing the will of God, in teaching poor little children in the "Sunday School" that they may go to heaven when they die. But if—as is the fact—God has nowhere promised such a thing, but has so plainly declared that "the kingdom under the whole heavens shall be given to the saints of the Most High;" and "those that wait upon the Lord shall inherit the earth," it can be none other than displeasing to him to instil doctrines into their young minds which are entirely opposite to his Word and promises. Paul tells us that he was exceedingly zealous, and even thought he was doing God's service when he persecuted the brethren of Christ, but in reality "he was kicking against the pricks." The leaders of the people in Christ's day (the Scribes and Pharisees) thought they were defenders of God's kingdom, but were really excluding themselves from an entrance into it when he set it up. To show this, and the consequences that would follow on their rejection of him, was the object of the parable we are considering.

In the King (verse 2) we recognize God, the great Creator of heaven and earth. It is his established purpose to spread a banquet of good things for those who are faithful. From the beginning, he has been working out a programme which will ultimate in the whole earth being filled with righteousness—peopled with an obedient, loving, and immortal state of beings—an earth which shall become again like Eden, ere sin marred that sinless spot. This purpose is represented as a Marriage for his Son. It has been developing for 6000 years. Adam (Gen. iii. 15) was pointed forward to that Son—the Seed of the woman—who should bruise (or kill) the serpent's head, containing the serpent's sting; or, in other words, should conquer sin; for "the sting of death is sin." Abram looked anxiously forward, and saw "afar off" a time when he and his seed (the Christ) would be in everlasting possession of the land of Canaan, and when all nations would be blessed in him. David could rejoice (Psa. lxxxix. 3,4) in the covenant made to him, that his seed (Christ) should be established for ever, and his throne be built up to all generations." The fulness of times came (Gal. iv. 4) when God fulfilled his Word, and sent forth his Son to redeem them that were under the law; that we might receive (also) the adoption of sons.

What an honor to be a son or daughter of God. If we are in this position by a belief in his gospel, and baptism into his name, then we are "heirs of God through Christ." "There is none other name given under heaven, but the name of Christ, whereby men may be saved." "Every knee shall bow to him, and every tongue confess that he is Lord." He is the great central figure of the feast. And David will be there: the prophets and martyrs of Christ Jesus will form part of that glorious company, but it will be "the King's Son" who will be Lord of lords, King of kings—our all in all.

A marriage feast is a joyful occasion, when we see a concentration of splendor and joy—especially if it be a royal one. It is the commencement of a life long union of the Bride and Bridegroom. When the union referred to in the parable takes place, it will be one that will know no end: inasmuch as all the partakers there of will be "equal unto the angels: neither can they die any more." From the beginning it has been the King's purpose that this feast shall be spread, that he would provide the Bridegroom in the person of "his well beloved Son." But the marriage would be very incomplete without a bride, and this the King purposed he would select from the human race, on condition that they fulfilled his wishes and will, which he caused to be written down by "holy men of old who spake as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." He therefore sent an invitation to the Jewish nation —that favored people of whom he said, "Thou art an holy people unto the Lord thy God: the Lord hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself above all people that are upon the face of the earth." Deut. vii.; Rom. ix. 4. Their history tells us that although they were thus favored, they were a "stiffnecked people." They imprisoned and slew the prophets, and "made light" of their warnings and invitations to repentance; and when the King had borne with them for many centuries, he sent forth the heir—his only begotten Son. But they conspired against him saying, "This is the heir: let us kill him, and the inheritance will be ours." They crucified their Messiah, crying as they thirsted for his life, "His blood be upon us and our children." "When the King heard thereof he was wroth, and sent forth his armies and destroyed those murderers, and burned up their city." (verse 7). He had told them and warned them of this (Deut. xxviii. 41 to end.) That their city should be besieged and burnt, and their children dispersed among the nations. The Roman armies, which God used as "his armies," carried out these purposes with awful effect. They burnt their city with its beautiful temple; no less than a million Jews perished; the nation was scattered to the four winds, and are now suffering persecution, while the invitations are extended to the highways and hedges. And here comes the practical part for us: salvation from the grave was offered only to the Jews for centuries: but we have to thank God that he has said "as many as ye shall find bid to the marriage." This was "the mystery which was revealed unto the apostles and prophets (Eph. iii. 5, 6), that the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel."

God, in the fulness of his love, has made it possible for you and I to be amongst that happy gathering "when the wedding is furnished with guests." He has visited the Gentiles (Acts xv. 14) to take out of them a people for his name. One here and one there hears and receives the truth.

When the Bride is complete, and sufficient guests are invited the Bridegroom will come from "the far, far country," to be united in that marriage which shall know no termination. There will be a selection of the guests, some will be found to have on "no wedding garment." The bride is symbolized in Rev. xix. as a woman in fine linen, clean and white, which it explains is (the symbol of) "the righteousness of saints." No one will be allowed to sit down in that magnificent assembly who are not clothed "with the righteousness which the King requires, viz., a belief in his gospel, baptism into the name of his Son for the remission of sins, and a walk in newness of life, striving to live pure—not mixing with the pleasures of sin, but taking up his cross, by separating ourselves from the world. The end will be a glorious transformation scene. Should we be lying in the silent tomb, and the lands of the valley have covered us, ere the Bridegroom comes to spread the banquet, his angels who will attend him at his coming, will be commissioned to raise the sleeping ones. They will have the power of reforming the dust, and, by spirit power, flashing intelligence on the brain of that multitude of re-animated men and women, so that they will exclaim, I am verily the one who once was alive, have died, and now am raised to meet the Lord. That will be a solemn time for the dead and the living who will be gathered to him. No time for repentance then: but if we have not clothed ourselves with the fine linen—"a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation which shall devour the adversary" of Christ Jesus, which shall blot his name out of the Lamb's Book of life; a command to the angels to bind us hand and foot, and consign us to the outer darkness of the silent tomb, with weeping, and wailing, and gnashing of teeth: then to hear those awful words, "Depart from me, I never knew you." Consign that one to the eternal consequences of "the second death," when the worms will again destroy this body, and the eternal ages will roll on with no resurrection morn to come, and no voice to wake those sleepers. To the faithful ones a reality of eternal joy awaits. "Death shall be swallowed up in victory." They will shout and sing with immortal voices tuned to join in that song which only those can sing who have been permitted to "come in ere the door is shut."

Friends, this is worth striving for. There is a tangible reality about such a glorious future. To have the name and nature of God stamped upon us—to shine as the sun in our Father's kingdom—no worm to gnaw at the vitals of the heart no sorrow to dim the now tearful eye, but joy, joy, and that eternally.

On which side will you be? It depends upon your belief and conduct now. Don't put it off until too late. Those who have to conduct this paper will only be too delighted to hear your cry, "What must I do to be saved?" and to show you God's plan.—Jas. Wells, in Old Paths.

Editor Restitution:

I was much pleased with Bro. Joblin's answer to the question in regard to "Secret Societies." Will he please tell us through THE RESTITUTION, whether or not, a Christian ought to take part in politics, vote at elections, etc. Some tell us it is all right to vote for township and county officers, because it is of a more individual benefit. It seems to me that if we consider these things from a Bible standpoint, we will not partake in the least of the world or worldly ways. I believe we should become united on all these important questions. Paul says in 1 Cor. i. 10, "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and the same judgment." Truly advancement is indispensable to procure salvation and keep pace with the onward move of God in these last and perilous times. Let us strive to be more efficient and useful for the Lord in every possible way, and not be puffed up in our imaginations, but be filled with the meekness of Christ, who is our most precious example.

Yours in the Faith of the Gospel.
J. J. CADY.

Dear Restitution:

I thought as my subscription had about expired that I would write and let the brothers and sisters of the one faith know that there is one poor, lonely mortal here in Oklahoma, struggling for the crown when Jesus comes. I feel so lonely as my companion with whom I took so much comfort in conversing with in regard to the faith and hope of the gospel, has been dead over two years but her words to me still sound in my ears, "I am going to sleep in Jesus but I will not sleep very long, the awakening time will soon come." Yes, dear brothers and sisters it appears to me that the time is close at hand when he shall come who is the way, the truth, the life. "He is the resurrection and the life." Jesus said, "No man cometh to me except the Father which sent me draw him, and I will raise him up at the last day." It appears to me that we are nearing the last days of this world where sin and corruption abound. Let us be faithful until the coming of the Lord, then the faithful will enter the other world where there will be a new order of things. Then he shall reign King of kings and Lord of lords. Let us be ready to exclaim: "Lo, this is our Lord, we have waited for him and he will bless us." Let us be in earnest to the things that pertain to our eternal welfare. Do we often look heavenward and say, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly." If there are any of the faith living within forty or fifty miles of Columbia, Oklahoma, please write me and I will visit you as I am so lonely. I am your brother, waiting for the Lord to come.

D. M. COWARDIN.

Dear Restitution:

I am a stranger to most of the brothers and sisters of THE RESTITUTION, yet, I feel that I am not a stranger, for we are all one in Christ Jesus if we love and obey him. How precious his promises. If we live for and obey him here, we shall live and reign with him in the world to come. Blessed thought, that we shall see our Savior, who died for us to redeem us from sin. I have been taking THE RESTITUTION a few months and enjoy reading it very much. I love to read the letters from the brothers and sisters. I live where I do not hear this kind of preaching, but it does my heart good to read the testimonies from God's dear children, and to read the little sermons they have written there.

Will some brother or sister give through THE RESTITUTION an explanation of John iii. 13, also Luke ix. 30-35. This is for the benefit of a young brother who has lately started for Christ under many persecutions, and is studying hard to find the true light.

Yours, waiting for the kingdom.
MRS. O. E. PARKHURST.

Bro. Underwood:

Please permit me to say through the letter department of our valuable paper, to the isolated ones that I know how to sympathize with you, being isolated myself from those of like faith. Its a dreary condition to be in when one don't know whether he belongs to the world or not, when he sings,

"How tedious and tasteless the hours,
When Jesus no longer I see,
Sweet prospects, sweet birds and sweet flowers,
Have lost all their sweetness to me;"

Such songs would be appropriate for a professor of Jonathan Edwards old time religion as he slips out of the back door of a saloon on Sunday morning and wipes his mouth preparatory to going to church. The adopted children of God possessing the Spirit, the Christ formed within, the hope of (coming) glory, can sing, even when isolated,

"How pleasant and joyful the hours
Since Jesus by faith I can see;
Sweet prospects, sweet birds and sweet flowers
Have all gained new sweetness to me."

Those not having the Spirit of Christ are none of his, are unable to call God their Father, and Jesus the Anointed One their Elder Brother. Without God and without hope is a sad road to travel yet, millions have, and are still on the broad road while few find the way of life.

H. MURPHY.

Dear Restitution:

I love THE RESTITUTION because it is always laden with so much good news for the weary pilgrim. The letter drawer is precious to me, all testifying to the same things, one Lord, one faith, one hope, one baptism, one Book the Holy Bible is our guide. "Simon Peter, a servant and an apostle of Jesus Christ, to them that have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God, and our Savior Jesus Christ, whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust." "This is the victory that overcometh the world even our faith. Therefore, being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ who was delivered for our offences and raised again for our justification. For this reason we are buried with him in baptism into death that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we should walk in newness of life." Let us strive to overcome the world with all its pleasure, it is but a moment compared with eternity. "He that overcometh shall inherit all things, blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, for on such the second death hath no power, but they will be kings and priests and reign on the earth.

Your Sister, waiting for the Master.

Michigan Conference.

You have all seen the notice of the Annual Conference to be held at Dutton, beginning May 30th. Brothers and Sisters, let us all make a special effort to be present. There is important business to be brought before the meeting, concerning the Lord's work in Michigan. And a representation, at least, from every church is earnestly requested. Able speakers will be in attendance and every effort is being made to make this a meeting long to be remembered for the good done in his name. If it is really impossible for you to attend, send in a few words of greeting by mail.

Commencing Sunday May 19th, the day coaches on all through trains of the Nickel Plate Road will be attended by a colored porter whose services are placed at the disposal of the patrons of the line. The purpose of this equipment is to insure scrupulously clean cars enroute.—m 22 t5

In the government of Kasan, in Russia, no fewer than 11,034 converted heathen, 5,000 of them women, relapsed from the orthodox faith into their original idolatry last year. During the same period in the same district, 12,188 Tartars, including 5,767 women, gave up the Greek Church for Mohammedanism, and the religious authorities believe that the greater part of the converted orthodox Christians are at heart either Muhammedans or heathens.

Jerusalem.

Fallen is thy throne, O Israel! Silence is on'r thy plains!
Thy dwellings all lie desolate, thy children weep in chains.
Where are the days that fed thee on
Etham's barren shore?
The fire from heaven that led thee, now lights thy path no more!

Lord, thou did'st love Jerusalem; once she was all thine own—
Her love thy fairest heritage, her power thy glory's throne
Till evil came and blighted thy long-loved olive tree,
And Salem's shrines were lighted for other gods than Thee.

Then sunk the star of Solyma, then passed her glory's day
Like heath that in the wilderness the light wind whirls away.
Silent and waste her towers, where once
the mighty trod;
And sunk those guilty towers, where Baal
reigned as God.

"Go," said the Lord, "Ye conquerors, steep in her blood your swords
And raze to earth her battlements, for they are not the Lord's.
Tell Zion's mournful daughter, o'er kindred bones she'll tread,
And Hinnom's vale of slaughter shall hide
but half her dead."

But soon shall other pictured scenes in brighter vision rise,
When Zion's sun shall seven-fold shine on all her mourner's eyes;
And on her mountains beauteous stand the messengers' of peace;—
"Salvation by the Lord's right hand!" they shout and never cease.

PSALM. 19.

20 COM. VER.

1. Unto the end, David's psalm.
2. May the Lord have heard thee in a day of tribulation; May the name of the God of Jacob have been a shield over thee.
3. May he have sent out unto thee responsive-help from his sanctuary and from out Sion may he have intervened for thee:
4. May he have remembered all thy sacrifice and may thy whole burnt-offering have been accounted fat. Interlude.
5. May he have granted unto thee according to thy heart, and may he have fulfilled all thy counsel.
6. We shall be glad in thy instrumental salvation, and in the name of our God shall we have been magnified. May the Lord have fulfilled all thy requests.
7. Now I know that the Lord hath saved his Christ: he will hearken to him from out his sacred heavens. In assertions of his ability is the salvation of his right hand.
8. These with chariots and those with horses, but we in the name of the Lord our God shall have been magnified.
9. They have stumbled and fallen, but we have arisen and been made upright,
10. O Lord, mayest thou have saved the king and mayest thou have hearkened unto us on the day when we shall invoke thee.

PSALM 20. (21 COM. AND H. V.)

1. Unto the end, David's psalm.
2. O Lord, in thy ability will the king have rejoiced and in thy instrumental salvation will he be very glad.
3. The longing-desire of his soul hast thou granted him and the supplication of his lips hast thou not denied him. Interlude.
4. Because thou hast anticipated him with blessings of useful-goodness, thou hast placed a crown of precious stone upon his head.
5. He asked thee for life and thou hast given him length of days unto an age of an age.
6. His great glory is in thy instrumental-salvation; glory and majesty wilt thou place upon him.
7. Because thou wilt give him blessing unto an age of an age; thou wilt make him to rejoice in joy with thy face.
8. Because the king hopeth in the Lord, and in the mercy of the Most High he shall not be moved.
9. May thy hand have been found by all thy enemies, and may thy right hand have found all those who hate thee.
10. Thou wilt make them a furnace of fire as it were in an appointed-time of thy face; The Lord in his wrath will terrify them and fire will devour them.
11. Their fruit wilt thou destroy from off the earth, and their seed from sons of men,
12. Because they have inclined evil things toward thee; they have reasoned counsel which they will not be able to establish:
13. Because thou wilt set them back, in thy residues wilt thou make ready their face.
14. Be thou exalted, O Lord in thy ability; We will sing praise and exalt the strain with thy able acts of rule.

PSALM 21. (22 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end, concerning the morning intervention, David's psalm.
2. O God, my God, attend unto me, Why hast thou forsaken me? Far from my salvation are the words of my stumbling-errors.
3. O my God, I shall have cried unto thee and thou wilt not hearken and in the night even unto my folly.
4. But thou dost dwell in a sacred place, O thou Praise of Israel.
5. In thee did our fathers hope; they hoped and thou didst deliver them;
6. Unto thee did they cry and they were saved,
7. In thee they hoped and were not put to shame,
7. But I am a worm and not a man, a reproach of men and the contempt of a laity.
8. All those who behold me have mocked at me; they have talked with lips, they have wagged their head;
9. He hath hoped in the Lord; Let him have delivered him; let him have saved him, because he willeth him.
10. Because thou art he who didst take an oversight of me from the womb, from my mother's breasts wast thou my hope.
11. Upon thee was I cast from the womb, from my mother's womb art thou my God. Stand not away from me, because tribulation is nigh.
12. Because there is no responsive-helper;
13. Many yearling-bullocks have encompassed me; fat bulls have surrounded me;
14. They have opened their mouth against me, like a lion as it were that seizeth prey and roareth;
15. Like water as it were have I been poured out, all my bones have been racked; my heart hath become wax as it were that melteth in the midst of my body;
16. My strength hath dried up like a potsherd, and my tongue hath cleaved to my throat, and thou hast led me down into death's dust.
17. Because many dogs (Gentiles) have encompassed me, a synagogue of those who do wickedly have surrounded me; They have dug through my hands and my feet:
18. They have numbered all my bones; and they have contemplated and viewed me closely;
19. They have apportioned my outer garments among themselves, and for my under-garment have they cast a lot:
20. And thou, O Lord, keep not my responsive-help far from me; heed to interpose for me;
21. Deliver my soul from sword and my only-born from a dog's (Gentile's) hand;
22. Save me from a lion's mouth, and my humiliation from horns of unicorns;
23. I shall (or will) discourse thy name unto my brethren; in the midst of a church shall (or will) I hymn thy praise.
24. Ye who fear the Lord, may ye have praised him, all the seed of Jacob, may ye have glorified him; may all the seed of Israel have feared him:
25. Because he hath not despised nor hath he thrust away the supplication of the beggar, nor hath he turned away his face from me, and when I cried unto him he hearkened unto me:
26. From thee is my praise in a great church, my vows will I pay in the sight of those who fear him:
27. Needy ones will eat and will have been full-fed, and they will praise the Lord who seek him out; Their hearts will live unto an age of an age.
28. All the ends of the earth will have remembered and will turn unto the Lord, and all the families (lit. the descendants in the father's line) of the nations will worship in his sight.
29. Because the kingdom is the Lord's and he swayeth the nations (lit. ruleth as sole lord—the Greek word being the same as the English word despot).
30. All the fat of the earth have eaten and have worshipped; before him will fall down all those who go down into the earth: and my soul will live for him;
31. And my seed will serve him as bond-servants: The coming-generation will declare it unto the Lord;
32. And they will declare his righteousness unto the laity that will have been brought forth (born) which the Lord hath created.

PSALM 22. (23 COM. VER.)

1. David's psalm. The Lord is shepherding me and I shall lack nothing.
2. In a green place, there hath he pitched my tabernacle, Unto a water of rest (interval-rest, not the final-rest) hath he turned me aside.
3. My soul hath he nourished; In paths of righteousness hath he guided me from his name's sake.
4. Yea though I shall have gone my way even in the midst of th shadow of death, I shall have feared no evil, because thou art with me; Thy scepter and thy prophetic-rod, they have assisted me.
5. Thou hast prepared a table in my sight away from the immediate presence of those who afflict me; Thou hast anointed my head with olive-oil, and thy cup intoxicateth like the strongest as it were.
6. And thy mercy will pursue after me all the days of my life, and I shall dwell in a house of the Lord for a length of days.

PSALM 23. (24 COM. VER.)

1. David's psalm for the first of a sabbatic-period (first day meant). The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof, the inhabited and all those who dwell in it.
2. He hath founded it upon seas, and upon rivers hath he made it ready.
3. Who will go up into the mountain of the Lord, and who will stand in his sacred place?
4. One guiltless in hands and clean in heart, and who hath not received his soul in vain, and hath not sworn deceitfully to his neighbor.
5. He will receive a blessing from the Lord, and mercy from God his Savior.
6. This is the generation of those who seek him, who seek the face of the God of Jacob. Interlude.
7. Lift up gates, ye your rulers and may ye have been lifted up, ye everlasting gates, and the king of the glory will come in.
8. Who is this king of the glory? A Lord controlling and able, a Lord able in war.
9. Lift up gates, ye your rulers, and may ye have been lifted up ye everlasting gates, and the king of the glory will come in. The Lord of the hosts (plural of dunamis meaning intelligent forces) he is this king of the glory.

PSALM 24. (25 COM. VER.)

1. David's psalm Unto thee O Lord have I lifted up my soul;
2. O my God in thee have I trusted; May I not have been put to shame, nor may my enemies have laughed me to scorn.
3. Yea forsooth all those who patiently wait for thee shall not have been put to shame; May those who transgress in vain have been put to shame.
4. Thy ways, O Lord, make known unto me, and teach me thy paths:
5. Guide me unto thy truth and teach me, because thou art God my Savior, and I have waited for thee all the day long.
6. Remember thy feelings of pity, O Lord, and thy mercies, because they are from the animate-age.
7. The sins of my youth and my ignorance remember not, according to thy mercy remember me for thy useful-goodness' sake, O Lord.
8. The Lord is useful-good and upright: Therefore will he legally instruct those who are sinning in way;
9. He will guide the meek in a judicial-way; he will teach the meek his ways,
10. All the Lord's ways are mercy and truth to those who seek out his covenant and his testimonies.
11. For thy name's sake wilt thou be favorable to my sin. For it is great.
12. Who is the man who feareth the Lord? He will legally instruct him in a way which he hath chosen.
13. His soul will camp in good things, and his seed will inherit an earth.
14. The Lord is a controling-power for those who fear him, and it is his covenant to have given revelations to them.
15. Mine eyes are constantly unto the Lord because he will pull my feet out of a snare.
16. Look upon me and have mercy on me, because an only-born and abeggar am I.
17. The tribulations of my heart have been multiplied; Lead me out of my necessities.
18. See my humiliation and my toil and remit all my sins.
19. See my enemies, because they have become multiplied, and they have hated me with an unjust hatred.
20. Watch to guard my soul and deliver me; May I not have been put to shame, because I have hoped in thee.
21. May the guileless and the meek have cleaved to me, because I have patiently waited for thee, O Lord.
22. Mayest thou have redeemed Israel, O Lord, from all his tribulations.

COMMENT.

Observe the Messianic prayer in the first five verses, and the prophecy in the sixth verse, "in thy instrumental salvation" is an unmistakeable reference to Christ as the instrument God will use to save. The last clause of this verse is strictly applicable only to Christ.

Notice the fulness of the revelation and assurance in the seventh verse, and the way this salvation will be brought about in the eighth. Again the hint of the resurrection in the ninth verse, "but we have arisen and been made upright" and the conjunctive glory of the tenth verse.

The twentieth psalm according to its number is a double-conjunction in its whole import. The king here is Christ the Messianic King of which David's kingship is a type. The double conjunction is the conjunction first of the divine will with the human will in the human experience of life with its consequent trials and tribulations, —the second conjunction is in "a length of days unto an age of an age"—and "glory and majesty wilt thou place upon him"—"with thy able acts of rule"—"to rejoice in joy with thy face," etc.

Notice the discomfiture of all who oppose this divine purpose also here given, and reference again to the "instrumental-salvation."

Psalm 21st has a very significant and suggestive heading "Concerning the morning intervention." What morning is meant unless the resurrection morning? And what intervention other than the divine intervention of course? Notice the confession of the 7th verse and the extreme humiliation. See the glimpses of Calvary in the 8th and 9th verses and still clearer and plainer as you go on in the 14th and 16th till the cross and the whole scene looms up in the 18th and 19th and the triumphant assurance of the 23d verse. The whole psalm is an epitome of "the cross and the crown." In his humiliation Christ is "the beggar" and "the needy one" you observe.

The significance of the intercession is apparent enough in the last three verses of the psalm.

Psalm 22nd is a pastoral parable, a divine idylic teaching, poetry in every sense except in the modern idea of rythmic effect which is really the smallest part of any true poetry. The Com. Ver. has changed the original thought materially and sacrificed the true sense in many places to make the diction flow smoothly and poetically, and the result is as might be expected more of a paraphrase than a translation. In the light of the New Covenant and Christ's own teaching, as "the Good Shepherd" the general significance of the psalm needs no comment. Instead of "thy rod and thy staff" which is generally, interpreted to be "the chastening rod" and "the shepherd's crook" we have, the reader will observe, in fact "the sceptre of rule" and "the prophetic-rod" or baton of office, which interpreted means God's sovereign-power and "the more sure Word of prophecy" or to be still more explicit and practical, faith in these two great facts to sustain us in the hour of death and darkness.

The 23d psalm has a heading which, if understood, makes the whole significance of the psalm clear, "For the first (day) of a sabbatic-period." The sabbatic-period here referred to is the millennial thousand years which immediately precedes and ushers in eternity. According to the year-day prophetic teaching each day of this period is a year. It is also spoken of as a whole as one day. "In the estimation of the Lord a thousand years are as one day." This millennial period is also spoken of as a week. Whether the day referred to here is one-seventh or one-tenth of this whole period is of comparatively little importance; it is important to know that it is the first part of the coming millennium, as we have a picture of the earth as it will be then given us in this psalm considered as a whole. And moreover the grandest concept and word-picture ever drawn in the world of literature. There is enough in this one word-picture to suggest volumes of profitable thought moreover if we think God's thoughts.

The 24th psalm is a votive-prayer full of teaching and suggestive thought as far as the 8th verse. From there on to the 17th verse it is divine instruction in righteousness and a revelation of God's character. From the 17th to the close of the psalm the prayer is resumed and is pregnant with spiritual profit. Notice "his seed will inherit an earth" not the earth—that is it is suggestive of "a new heavens and a new earth" more clearly revealed to us now than it was then.

OUR CHILDREN.

God's Care for His Children.

Not a brooklet floweth
Onward to the sea,
Not a sunbeam gloweth
On its bosom free,
Not a seed unfoldeth
To the glorious air,
But our Father holdeth
It within his care.

Not a flower fadeth,
Not a star grows dim,
Not a cloud o'ershadeth
But 'tis marked by him.
Dream not that thy gladness
God doth fail to see:
Think not in thy sadness
He forgetteth thee.

Not a tie is broken,
Not a hope laid low,
Not a farewell spoken,
But our God doth know.
Every hair is numbered,
Every tear is weighed
In the changeless balance
Wisest love has made.

Power eternal resteth
In his changeless hand;
Love immortal floateth
Swift at his command.
Faith can firmly trust him
In the darkest hour,
For the key she holdeth
To his love and power.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 19.

MOSES, AARON, AND THE PLAGUES.

A great hail storm is coming next, no such hail storm has been seen in Egypt since it was founded. The cattle and the servants of Pharaoh must all come in from the fields. Some of the Egyptians have learned to fear the Lord; his words always come true, they believe him and make their servants and their cattle flee into the houses. Others are faithless; they pay no attention to the Word of the Lord, and leave their herds and their men to perish. There are awful thunderings, and fire runs along the ground. The herbs are destroyed; the trees broken, the flax and the barley smitten. There is no hail in the land of Goshen. Pharaoh owns now that he has sinned. It is the first time he gives up that the Lord is righteous, and that he and his people are wicked. He means that the Lord is right in wanting to set his own nation free, and that it is wrong for the Egyptians to oppose him. He wants no more such awful thunderings and hail. He says, "Intreat the Lord that the storm cease, and I will let you go, ye shall stay no longer." But as soon as he sees that the rain and the hail and the thunders are over, he sins yet more, he and his servants,—he will never let this alien people go. God may keep on commanding, he will not obey.

He is warned that if he will not humble himself to submit to God's commands, a swarm of locusts will eat up all that is left from the hail. His servants beg him to "let the men go, that they may serve the Lord their God." Does he not yet know that Egypt is destroyed? Moses and Aaron are brought in, "Go," he says, "Serve the Lord your God," and then, as if fearful that he is yielding too much, enquires, "but who are they that shall go?" Moses replies, "We will go with our young and our old, with our sons and our daughters, with our flocks and with our herds will we go, for we must hold a feast unto the Lord." At first the king consents to let the little ones go, but it is with a threat of evil. The words are scarcely out of his mouth when he reverses his decision, says only the men may go, and drives them from his presence.

The locusts are called for. They are such locusts as have never been seen in Egypt before. They come in such countless numbers, that the face of the land cannot be seen, they eat up the herbs, the fruit of the trees and every green thing.

The great leader of Israel and his spokesman are sent for in haste. Pharaoh confesses again that he has sinned against the Lord and against them and prays to be forgiven, if only "this death" may be taken away. A west wind carries the locusts into the Red Sea. Can it be possible that the king will still persist in rebellion against the Lord? He does, and the plague of darkness follows. Now he says that the Hebrews may go and take their children with them, but their flocks and their herds may be left behind, "Not a hoof shall remain," is the reply of Moses, and Pharaoh declares that they shall see his face no more, if they do they shall die. Isn't it dreadful to have such a disposition as that of Pharaoh; to be convinced that one is sinning against the Lord, and yet keep right on in the way of wrong? There are a great many Pharaohs in the world, men with hearts like his, who want things that do not belong to them, and who will hold them fast when they know they are not theirs. What makes you think that the Egyptians were opposed to letting the Hebrews go? as much so as their king? Because he says that "he and his people are wicked," meaning that they are unitedly opposing the Lord. And Moses uses the expression, "As for thee and thy servants, I know that ye will not fear the Lord."

How many plagues are there? Ten in all. The turning of the rod into a serpent was only a sign or proof of what God could do. It is not counted with the other signs. How many of the plagues came on Egypt, before the dividing line severs the land of Goshen from the rest of the country? Three,—the water turned into blood, the frogs in the houses, and the dust turned to lice. Seven came only on the Egyptians,—the swarms of flies, the murrain on the cattle, the boils on man and on beast, the great hail storm, the locusts, the terrible darkness, and the death of the first born. But the darkness could hurt no one, you say? No, but it would cause great fear. Have you ever read about the dark day in New England, when cattle came in from the fields, chickens went to roost, and candles had to be lighted? People were dreadfully frightened, they thought the judgment day had come. We read about it now with a feeling of awe, for the cause of it has never been explained. We can only say, "It is the finger of God" warning us of a coming judgment and of an approaching King. It is "a sign" to us, just as the plagues were signs to the Egyptians. The Savior said "the sun should be darkened," a little while before his second advent. But the darkness in Egypt was still more intense than that in New England, how fearful it must have been!

Selected.

Baptism.

1. An act of obedience required of all who believe the gospel.

"Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God."—John iii. 5.

2. It consists of bodily immersion in (not sprinkling of) water.

"And he commanded the chariot to stand still; and they went down into the water, both Philip and the eunich; and he baptized him."—Acts viii. 39.

3. It must be preceded by belief of the gospel.

"And when they believed Philip, preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women."—Acts viii. 12.

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."—Mark xvi. 15 16.

4. Apostolic examples.

"Then Peter said unto them, repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ. .....Then they that gladly received his word were baptized."—Acts ii. 38, 41.

"Lydia was baptized, and her household."—Acts xvi. 15.

"The Philippian jailor was baptized, he and all his straightway, ...believing in God with all his house."—Acts xvi. 27, 33, 34.

"When they (twelve men at Ephesus) heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus."—Acts xix. 5.

5. Its necessity.

"The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ." 1 Peter iii. 21.

6. Its signification.

"Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore, we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection."—Rom. vi. 3, 5.

7. Benefits derived:—

Remission of sins (past.)

"Arise, and be baptized and wash away thy sins."—Acts xxii. 16.

Union with Christ (legal.)

"For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ,.....and if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."—Gal. iii. 27, 29.

Announcement.

Dear Restitution:

Please say, that the brethren of Northern Illinois will not hold conference in June, as was contemplated, but will postpone until in September. Due notice will be given.

J. M. GLOTFELTY, Chairman.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God, in Iowa, will be held at Marshalltown, sometime during the month of August. Notice will be given in due time. Brethren and Sisters, begin at once to prepare for this meeting and make it such a one in numbers and in Spirit that it may long be remembered.

O. J. ALLARD, Sec'y.

The Third Quarterly Conference of the Church of God, in Indiana, will be held at the Antioch meeting house, five miles south of Plymouth, commencing on Friday, June 7, 1895, at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue over the following Sunday.

Owing to the fact of there being so few members of this once prosperous church, they being separated from different causes, it has been questioned by some as to the advisability of longer trying to hold conference meetings at this place; but as the time draws near all hearts turn to Old Antioch. These meetings have been held so long that they have become an established fact in the minds of the people and they expect the meeting as surely as the time comes. And then it seems we get so much real encouragement and enjoyment from them, it seems like a family re-union, where we all meet on a common level, where we can enjoy the blessed communion of those of like precious faith so that we feel that we would be lost without them for from these gatherings we do derive much strength if we come with the right spirit. So, brothers and sisters let us come with hearts full of love for the truth, laying aside the cares of this life and have nothing in view but the upbuilding of each other's faith. We invite you to come. We urge you to come.

J. F. WAGONER, Pres.
A. C. ROBERTS, Sec'y.

The time appointed for the Third Quarterly Conference of Nebraska, is June 7 to 9, 1895, at Moorefield, Frontier County. The brethren there extend a hearty welcome to all who may come and will do all within their power to make the meeting a success.

J. J. CADY, Sec'y.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God, in Michigan, will be held (D. V.) at Dutton, Kent Co., commencing Thursday evening May 30th, and holding over the following Sunday.

The executive committee has given instruction to "call the conference." Of course all that was meant was to announce the time and place appointed for having a conference. A few, a "little flock," have heard and obeyed the call of the Shepherd.

As we are considerably scattered over the field, it has seemed profitable and enjoyable to meet at stated times to greet and cheer each other, and to get a seed of grain.

Since our last assemblage we have had to keep constantly guarded against the wolves, we hope none have been taken unawares, and the weather has been severe—Satanic Storms. Now let us gather once more to aid and encourage each other before the Shepherd comes.

Should there be any in the "flock" who seem almost exhausted, make an extra effort to be present, and those who feel strong and healthy be sure to be present to lend a helping hand to others, and to tell them what food you have picked which gave you strength, and to instruct them which way to go in order to avoid the more ferocious wolves.

Bring as many with you as possible. There are a goodly number in Michigan, who are taking THE RESTITUTION, and will read this notice, thereby showing that you sympathize to some extent at least with those of this faith; but who have never met with us. Now can you not so arrange as to be present at this meeting. All will be heartily welcomed.

Dutton is located on the Michigan Central R. R., ten miles southeast of Grand Rapids. Those going from the South or West, go over the G. R. & I. R. R., L. S. & M. S. R. R. or C. & W. M. R. R. via Grand Rapids.

F. L. AUSTIN, Sec'y.

Sisters of the "Evangelical Aid Society," do not forget that in connection with the conference work ours too must be shown. All did so well last year. We hope the interest has not abated but that all will do what they can even though it should not be very much. Every offering however small helps swell the amount which is all used to further the gospel work. Bring or send your mites to Dutton at conference time when Sr. Jackman will credit each with their amount.

Yours, working for the Master.
M. A. WOODWORTH, Sec'y.

Cheap Excursions to the West.

On May 21st and June 11th, The North-Western Line (Chicago & North-Western Railway) will sell excursion tickets at very low rates to a large number of points in the west and northwest. For full information apply to ticket agents of connecting lines, or address A. H. Waggener, T. P. A., 7 Jackson place, Indianapolis, Ind.—m-11-15

Through Buffet Sleeping Car to Michigan Points.

Commencing about the middle of June, and continuing until the latter part of September, the Vandalia Line will place in service elegant Buffet Sleeping Cars to be run through to Petoskey, Bay View, via Terre Haute, St Joseph, Grand Rapids, Traverse City and Charlevoix. This will be the only line of through cars from St. Louis to the delightful and cool resorts of Michigan. Only one change of cars to Mackinac Island. For detailed information address nearest Vandalia Line Agent, or E. A. Ford, General Passenger Agent, St. Louis.—June 30.

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a New Year gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

PLEASE write short articles. I does not pay anyone to write a lengthy article. The reason you write at all is that you wish to give some information, or to relate an incident that will encourage some one. The fact is this object is missed almost every time, because no one reads the long articles you write. Then write short and to the point. Make a point every time you write. You need not poison the point to make it surely kill some brother, but put love-salve on. If you have none of this ointment on hand, you are not ready to write at all, though paper, pen, and ink are before you. What you need is a season of communion with God, and time to study and meditate his Word first. Please do this each time before you write. Then what a good paper we can have for 1895. Let us try it once and see how much of God—of Love we can get into THE RESTITUTION for the coming year. Let us have the letters from old and young once more. We want each one to write a letter for our paper the coming year. Let us have two or three columns each issue—have a love-feast all the year.

Niagara Falls Excursion, Thursday, August 8, 1895, via the Lake Erie and Western R. R.

On Thursday, August 8, 1895, the Lake Erie & Western R. R. will run their popular excursion to Cleveland, Chautauqua Lake, Buffalo and Niagara Falls at following very low rates, viz.:

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one y. r, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks those not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, type-setting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION OF ALL THINGS WHICH GOD HATH SPOKEN BY THE MOUTH OF ALL HIS HOLY PROPHETS SINCE THE WORLD BEGAN.

VOL. XLIV. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE, 5, 1895. NO. 21.

Poetry.

An Invocation.

"Bow down thine ear O Lord, hear me for I am poor and needy." Ps. lxxxvi. 1.

Alpha, the first-born of every creature;
Bring to thy people the promised reward.
Counsellor give us thy horn and thy fortune;
David's own kingdom by thee restored.

Every land be thine own, thy dominion,
Fill the whole earth with thy glory and name.
Govern the world, with thy equity rule it.
Help thine own Israel to bury their shame.

Immanuel, come, be thou God with thy people,
Judge of the living, give life to the dead.
King of all kings, be thou with us and keep us,
Light of the world from thy throne be we led.

Mighty, o'erthrow these strong powers around us.
Nothing can stay thy strong arm in thy wrath.
Omega, last of all kings we implore thee
Pass us not by, keep us safe in thy path.

Quicken the dead, give new life to the living.
Righteousness, be it the staff of thy throne.
Say, "I am thy God and thou art my people,"
Take thy "little flock" them last hong it them thine own.

Unto the Father be praise and thanksgiving
Verily he hath rich blessings bestowed
Wonderful Prince, may sweet peace like a river
Extend to thy Zion, the hill of our God.

Yea, blessed be he, who the victory gives us,
Zealously guide us and bless us again.
And thine be the kingdom, the power and glory,
Etcetera, now and forever. Amen.

The Two Redemptions.

Editor Restitution:

Kindly give the paper "The Two Redemptions" enclosed, herewith a place in your valuable paper, that is, should you deem it worthy of the honor. I copied it from "A Letter to a Friend," published by the author John Robertson in 1891, long since dead. Regarding its length, bearing in mind your instructions, I have condensed it at considerable length, where there was a repetition. Yours in Israel's hope.

J. M. GUNN.

"The work of man's redemption from the curse of the law, was finished on the cross, by Jesus the Christ, and the human race are specially called to believe this authentic fact. This important work was performed before faith could rest upon it.

It is true, without faith in the finished work, none can be benefitted or saved by it, hence it will be seen that the work done on the cross by Christ must not be confounded with our salvation. Although the latter cannot exist without the former. Thus, the work of redemption finished by Christ on Calvary, and our faith in that work, and salvation through faith, are three distinct factors from one another. Redemption from the curse by Christ is the light to which we come, our coming is not the light.

On Calvary God filled the well of salvation. It is full, free and refreshing, whether we drink from it or not, we must drink to be refreshed. Still the act of drinking is not the water. By drinking we neither make, nor change the water. The watery element had existence before we quenched our thirst. Thus says Paul, "Christ hath redeemed us from the curse of the law, being made a curse for us; for it is written, Cursed is every one that hangeth on a tree." Our redemption from the curse is therefore a work done by Christ alone. In this work no human hand, apart from the Christ, had any share. It is a finished fact addressed to our faith. Our faith in the fact did not create the fact.

There are two redemptions, to wit, a redemption from the law, curse, and a redemption from sin which is the cause of the curse. The first redemption brings the living water of remission to my mouth. Assuring me that it is mine through the precious blood of Christ. The second redemption—the redemption from iniquity—comes through faith in redemption through the blood. If we put faith before redemption and say, "We are redeemed from the curse of the law" by faith, we substitute faith for the work and blood of Christ, making faith the ground of our salvation. It follows as a truth as sure as the infallible demonstrations of geometry, that Christ hath redeemed all mankind from the curse of the law, and that the good news be preached to faith, and not for faith. Some one might say: If all men are redeemed from the curse of the law, all must be saved. Christ redeemed men from the curse of the law when he died the ignominious death on the cross. See Heb. ii. 9. Not when you believed or when I believed, for the Christ suffered before our birth and for that matter long before the birth of many of our progenitors. Nevertheless, men may be saved from Old Testament curse, and still be under a heavier curse, by disobeying the law of the New Testament called "the law of faith." Jesus Christ in some sense is the Savior of the world. This is a doctrine of Scripture, the apostle says, "He is the Savior of all men, especially of those that believe," and what can that mean but that he hath redeemed all men from the curse of the law, and that he redeems from sin those who sincerely obey the gospel?

The blood of the atonement makes redemption from sin possible, by making redemption from the curse certain. There is a difference between Christ bearing our sins, and bearing our curse. Was it not the curse of sin that Christ bore? Scripture clearly points out the distinction between redemption effected on the cross and preached to faith, from redemption from sins which comes through faith, and is one thing with full salvation.

We have made comparison of faith to the drinking of water, but who praises the act of drinking? In gratitude for excellent water we praise the Great Giver. What is faith? Simply seeing intellectually the evidential value of the precious blood, but do we praise the seeing? No. We praise the Son who loved us better than his own life. Thus, Peter addresses his fellow believers, "Ye were not redeemed with corruptible things as silver and gold, but with the precious blood of Christ, as a Lamb without blemish and without spot." Thus Paul, "We have redemption through his blood the forgiveness of sins." Thus the beloved disciple, "Thou wast slain and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood. Out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation." Thus the supplement to the ancient gospel of the kingdom, first preached in the Christ's name at Jerusalem, through the blood of the New Covenant is not merely offered but announced to all mankind, without money and without price, confirming the testimony that Christ hath so put away sin, that it is not imputed to us. 2 Cor. v. 19, 21. "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them, and hath committed unto us the Word of reconciliation, now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us. We pray you in Christ's stead be ye reconciled to God, for he hath made him to be sin for us who knew no sin," etc. So that the good news by which men are reconciled to God, is the proclamation of forgiveness of sin through the innocent Lamb of God, having borne our trespasses. But how is the foregoing to be harmonized with the doctrine taught in Rom. v. 1, "Being justified by faith we have peace with God." Also Acts xiii. 39, "By him all that believe are justified." And many such passages which show men are justified by faith, and not before it? Doubtless, the apostle might have proclaimed that justification was possible. But that supposes the existence of a previous certainty, as a basis for faith conditioned not on faith, but on the cleansing blood. See 1 Jno. i. 7. While obedient faith is made the final condition of salvation. Thus forgiveness through Jesus paves the way to make faith and justification possible, and the following passages are clear in showing the difference between forgiveness and justification. Luke x. 9, "He is willing to justify himself." Psa. li. 4, "That thou mightest be justified when thou speakest." Matt. xi. 18, "Wisdom is justified of her children." Luke vii. 29, "The people and publicans justified God." Rom. iv. 2, "Abraham was justified by works." 1 Tim. iii. 16, "Justified in the Spirit." Put pardoned in place of justified and it will be apparent. It would never to do say the publicans pardoned God. And with reference to its being sins against law that Christ took away, see Heb. ix. 15. When we have "by means of death for the redemption of the transgressions under the first testament." All sins against law have been borne by Christ, and thus put away for ever. It may be asked, Are we to infer from this that all men shall be saved? Certainly not, if they disobey the gospel. Such disobedience involves a far greater sin and a much more terrible penalty than transgressions under the first testament. Sins against the command, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God," were as nothing compared with disobeying "the law of faith," which says, "Thou shalt believe that the Lord thy God hath loved thee and gave his Son to die for thee." The sin of unbelief which is the rejection of the Son of God, by whose bloody sacrifice God commendeth his love to us, plainly shows unbelief is the sin of sins now. In fact, unbelief is the rejection of God's only remedy; and being as sin against the remedy, it is in consequence a sin for which there is no remedy. Heb. x. 28, 29. It is the sin against which the Spirit strives and warns unbelievers. See Jno. iii. 18. He that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." See also Jno. xvi. 7-9.

Infidel Ministers.

Dr. Heber Newton, pastor of All Souls' Protestant Episcopal Church, recently preached a sermon in that church, in which he declared his disbelief in the physical resurrection of the Lord Jesus. He admits that the disciples believed in his literal resurrection, but he says: "I cannot accept the testimony of the disciples." He claims that it was "the spirit of Jesus in his spiritual body which is the house of the living after death appeared to his disciples."

If Dr. Newton "cannot accept the testimony of the disciples," he will have to carry his scepticism to a greater length than he has already done, for every thing hangs on the testimony of these inspired witnesses. Before his ascension, he told his disciples to tarry in Jerusalem, until they were endued with power from on high. "The Holy Spirit, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring to your remembrance all that I said unto you." Now, if Dr. Newton rejects the evidence of the disciples, he will, of necessity have to reject the teaching of the Holy Spirit, for "he shall teach you all things." Jesus further says: "When the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, the Spirit of truth which proceedeth from the Father, he shall bear witness of me: and ye also shall bear witness, because ye have been with me from the beginning." Here we are taught that the Holy Spirit would first "bear witness" to them, concerning Jesus, and they in turn would "bear witness as to what the Spirit taught them. Again: "When he the Spirit of truth is come, he shall guide you into all the truth."

Now, on the day of Pentecost the Holy Spirit came. "And they were all filled with the Holy Spirit, and began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance." The Holy Spirit gave Peter "utterance" to say as follows: "Ye men of Israel, hear these words: Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God, etc. * * * ye by the hand of lawless men did crucify and slay: whom God raised up, having loosed the pangs of death; because it was not possible that he should be holden of it." The Holy Spirit "bears witness" through Peter, that God raised up Jesus, by having "loosed the pangs of death." And further: "This Jesus did God raise up, whereof we are all witnesses." Now, did the Holy Spirit cause these witnesses to bear false testimony? If Dr. Newton "cannot accept the testimony of the disciples" he cannot believe the Holy Spirit, for they simply spake as they were moved by that power.

The Doctor will also have to reject Jesus' Word, he repeatedly declared that he would rise again the "third day." The chief priests and the Pharisees remembered his declaration, and went to Pilate saying: "Sir, we remember that that deceiver said, while he was yet alive, after three days I will rise again. Command therefore, that the sepulchre be made sure until the third day."

According to Dr. Newton's theory the Lord gave false testimony when he said "I will rise again," "Destroy this temple, (the temple of his body) and in three days I will raise it up." Note, it is the temple which was destroyed that should rise again, and not some spiritual body which could not be destroyed by sinful men. Hence Dr. Newton must reject Jesus' Word.

The Doctor will next have to reject the testimony of angels: "An angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled away the stone, and sat upon it. His appearance was as lightning and his raiment white as snow; and for fear of him the watchers did quake, and became as dead men, and the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye: For I know that ye seek Jesus which hath been crucified. He is not here; for he is risen, even as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay, and go quickly, and tell his disciples, He is risen from the dead."

How does the Doctor account for the empty grave? It is incumbent upon him to account for this, when he avows his disbelief in the physical resurrection of Jesus. The angel invites the women to come and see the empty grave, and view the very spot where the Lord had laid, and affirms: "He is risen from the dead." Spiritual bodies cannot die and rise again.

Next, Doctor Newton's scepticism will have to reject the testimony of the Apostle Paul, who was taught by Jesus himself, after the ascension of the Lord to heaven: "For neither did I receive it from man nor was I taught it, but it came to me through revelation of Jesus Christ."

Paul says: "I delivered unto you first of all that which also I received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures; and that he was buried; and that he hath been raised on the third day according to the Scriptures; and that he appeared to Cephas; then to the twelve; and then he appeared to above five hundred brethren at once, of whom the greater part remain until now, but some are fallen asleep; then he appeared to James; then to all the apostles; and last of all, as unto one born out of due time, he appeared to me also."

Paul states that it is the one who "died" which had "been raised on the third day," and not a spiritual body which cannot die. To maintain his theory the Doctor will have to refuse belief in the revelation of Jesus from heaven, to his chosen messenger of the Gentiles.

Next, Dr Newton will have to doubt the evidence of doubting Thomas, who said: "Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and put my hand into his side, I will not believe." The crucifixion scars would certainly be positive proof that it was the identical body which hung upon the cross. "Then saith he (Jesus) to Thomas, reach hither thy finger, and see my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and put it into my side: and be not faithless but believing. Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God. Jesus saith unto him, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed; blessed are they which have not seen, and yet have believed." Dr. Newton cannot be among the "blessed" for not even the crucifixion wounds are evidence to him of the physical resurrection of Jesus.

The New Testament hinges all future life and blessedness upon the physical resurrection of Jesus: "If Christ hath not been raised, then is our preaching vain, your faith is also vain, yea, and we are found false witnesses of God; because we witnessed of God that he raised up Christ, whom he raised not up if so be that the dead are not raised. For if the dead are not raised, neither hath Christ been raised; and if Christ hath not been raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins. Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ have perished."

We have reached a period, when infidelity has reared its head in the churches. Ministers in the pulpit question the inspiration of the Scriptures which contradict their teaching. And here we have Dr. Newton, assailing a doctrine which lies at the base of all Christian faith. Remove the literal resurrection of Jesus and all hope of a future life is destroyed.

Justin Martyn (A. D. 150) said, "For if you have conversed with some that are indeed called Christians, and do not maintain these opinions, but even dare to blaspheme the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, and say that there is no resurrection of the dead, but that the souls, as soon as they leave the body, are received up into heaven, take care that you do not look upon these. But I, and all those Christians that are really orthodox in every respect, do know that there will be a resurrection of the body and a thousand years in Jerusalem, when it is built again, and adorned, and enlarged, as Ezekiel, and Esaias, and the rest of the prophets declare."—Dialogue with Tripho, the Jew.

On the field of Waterloo a topaz seal set in gold was recently found, bearing the arms and motto of Viscount Barrington. It belonged to Ensign Barrington, who was killed at Quatre Bras June 16, 1815, and had lain undiscovered for eighty years.

OUR CHILDREN.

The Little Brown Seed.

"'Tis of no use," said a little brown seed;
Where shall I go and hide?
I'm ugly and brown, with nobody's love,
And ugly beside."

So she [illegible], and rolled very quickly away,
And [illegible] on the ground;
The rain came in torrents, and fell upon her
And all things around.

And she felt herself sinking in darkness beneath,
Poor little faithless seed!
Where never an eye could see her sad fate,
Oh! she was hidden indeed!

The little brown seed lay still in the earth,
So herself still sighing —
Till at last with an effort she roused up, and cried,
"I'll begin by trying."

"I'll try and stop fretting, for 'tis of no use,
And if I've nobody's love,
I'll look up in hope, for there is One who will see,
The dear God above."

Oh, would you believe it! straightway the ground
Began to tremble and shake;
And make way for the little seed, hopeful now,
Her upward way to take!

Up, up she went, till at last she saw,
The lovely, bright blue sky;
Oh! the beautiful spirit had found release,
And the Summer time was nigh.

And brightness and beauty that grew up on her,
I cannot begin to speak;
Crowned with flowers she stood, beloved by all,
So lovely, yet so meek.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 20.

DEATH OF THE FIRST BORN—THE PASSOVER.

"There was a thick darkness in all the land of Egypt three days."—A darkness that could be felt.

"They saw not one another neither rose any from his place for three days."

Was it a foggy, or a smoky darkness? There was something more than absence of light for the blackness was so impenetrable that the people just sat still. They made no attempt to dispel it with the feeble flames of lamp or candle. One day of darkness is awe-inspiring, what must have been three such days of silence and gloom?

"But all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings." We need no comments on this. God is ever the joy and the light of those who serve him.

Moses and Aaron have been driven out from the presence of Pharaoh. He thinks he will see these men no more, but he will be glad to send for them by and by.

Hitherto, the plagues have been annoying and destructive of property, but God has been mercifully careful about destroying life. He has given plentiful warnings, wonderful proofs of his existence and power, and ample time for faith and repentance to work.

A few among the Egyptians have learned to fear the Lord,—are these the mixed multitude that go out of Egypt with the Israelites? Ex. xii. 38; xi. 8.

God always warns people of coming judgments that they may have time to repent and escape;—did he warn Pharaoh of the approaching death of the first-born?

You can find nothing of the kind in the 11th chapter of Exodus? Read the next chapter carefully, you will see that Moses does not leave Pharaoh's presence until he says,—"Thus saith the Lord, About midnight will I go out into the midst of Egypt. And all the first-born in the land of Egypt shall die, from the first-born of Pharaoh, that sitteth upon his throne, even unto the first-born of the maid-servant, that is behind the mill; and all the first-born of beasts, and there shall be a great cry throughout all the land of Egypt, such as there was none like it, nor shall be like it any more. But against any of the children of Israel, shall not a dog move his tongue against man or beast, that ye may know how that the Lord doth put a difference between the Egyptians and Israel. And all these thy servants shall come down unto me, and bow down themselves unto me, saying, get thee out and all the people that follow thee, and after that, I will go out. And he left Pharaoh in great anger, he had not left him before.

If Pharaoh will not hearken—that is, he will not listen with believing mind, and cheerful obedience He is letting his last chance slip away, he will not let the children of Israel go out of his land.

What are the Israelites to do? Will their land be separated from that of the Egyptians? Yes; we are at our starting point now. You remember when we began these lessons that I was reading to the young girl about Jesus sending his disciples to prepare the Passover, and she was asking me "what the Passover was?" and "why was it instituted?" Divide the word and you will see what it means,—to pass over,—to let escape, to free from guilt and its penalty.

It is the month Abib or Nisan. This month is hereafter to be the beginning of the year to the Israelites. In the tenth day of the month they are to take to them every man a lamb—or if the family is too small the neighbors are to unite in the feast. The lamb must have no blemish, it must be a male of the first year, taken from the sheep or from the goats. It must be kept up until the evening of the fourteenth day and then killed. That would be at three o'clock, for the margin reads "between the evenings," and this, men say, was the middle of the afternoon. The whole assembly of the congregation of Israel kill the lamb, that is, the heads of the household, kill, each one a lamb. The blood is caught in a basin, a bunch of hyssop is dipped in it, and the lintel and the two side posts of the door are struck; no one must then go out of his house until morning. The lamb, is roasted whole in the fire, and eaten with unleavened bread and bitter herbs. All that remains of the lamb is to be burned in the fire. They must eat it as if they were in a great hurry, all dressed as if ready to start on a journey.

But what does it all mean? More I am afraid than Auntie can tell you. We have been watching all the time for something that would speak to us about Jesus; we have found it now in one of the most wonderful picture-lessons that was ever given to the world.

"The blood shall be for a token upon the houses where ye are; and when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and the plague shall not be upon you to destroy you, when I smite the land of Egypt. For the Lord will pass through to smite the Egyptians; and when he seeth the blood upon the lintel and on the two side posts, the Lord will pass over the door and will not suffer the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you. And this day shall be unto you for a memorial; and ye shall keep it a feast to the Lord throughout your generations by an ordinance forever."

But how is the passover a picture-lesson of Jesus? Can not you call up a great many texts like these?—"Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." "Like a Lamb dumb before her shearers." "Lamb without blemish." "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain." "Made white in the blood of the Lamb." Who is this "Lamb" that the New Testament talks so much about? Ah! you know! You have heard the dear Savior called the "Spotless Lamb," and have read in 1 Cor. v. 7, "For even Christ our Passover is sacrificed (slain in the margin) for us." This Lamb in Egypt is a picture of him.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the exhibit mention the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

The Bible.

We think it would be well if our young readers would commit to memory the contents of the Bible as given in the following lines from an unknown writer:

"It contains:
Worlds of hidden wonders;
Ages upon ages of history;
Floods of everlasting light;
Mines of inexhaustible wealth;
Seas of saving health;
Forests of trees of righteousness and life;
Rivers of pleasure and gladness;
Chariots of fire dropping clouds;
Acres of charming landscape;
Mountains of mighty power;
Fountains of life and peace;
Reservoirs of living water;
Oceans of lively hope;
Treasures of wisdom and knowledge;
Heaps of truth and virtue;
Wells of salvation and spirit;
Volumes of precepts and protocols;
Heights of unspeakable joy;
Depths of spiritual treasure;
Lengths and breadths of heavenly love;
Fields of golden grain;
Realms of sacred story;
Lands of sunny glory;
Treasuries filled of faith;
Beautiful vision of peace;
Waves of strength and beauty;
Rocks of justice and judgment;
Showers of blessing and mercy;
Rills of holiness and purity;
Deluges of spiritual medicine;
Piles of statutes and commandments;
Loads of promises and prayers;
Cargoes of profit and prophecy, and Lapfuls of gospel pearls."

SISTER Nell's question will be attended to shortly.

MAHOMET divided the nether world into seven hells, and in the lowest he placed the hypocrites of all religions.

SOME one writes to say that we "Have no plan of salvation;" we hope that that is the literal truth: we want no plan of our own; it is enough to accept God's plan.

COTTON Mather used to say there was a gentlemen mentioned in the 19th chapter of Acts to whom he was greatly indebted—viz.; the town clerk of Ephesus, whose counsel was, "Do nothing rashly."

"THE most perfect thinking substance in world now is the human brain. But the time will come when the thinking substance will be incorporated in a body capable of developing all its conceptions; a mind as much superior to the animal organ of thought, as incorruption is to that which is corruptible."

"WHETHER we realize the Almighty presence or choose to ignore it, it pervades us still. Abiding with us in the morning light, it guides through the sunny hours, and confronts us in the twinkling orbs of midnight. God is everywhere about us. "In him we live and move and have our being."

HARRIET Beecher Stowe once said: "Talk of hair-cloth shirts, and scourging, and sleeping on ashes as a means of saintship! Let a woman once look at her domestic trials as her hair-cloth, her ashes, her scourges, accept them, rejoice in them, smile and be quiet, silent, patient, and loving under them, and the convent can teach her no more; she is a victorious saint."

No system of religion can be true which is out of harmony with man as we see him. God has told us how he formed man, and of what he formed him; and experience teaches us that we have a truthful account of his organic constitution as well as his origin. If we consent to be what God says we are, the religion of the Bible just meets our case, and supplies all our needs.

How does the prospect of the Lord's coming speedily, affect you, reader? Is it full of stimulating power for you? Does it fan your love into a flame? Does it make you more earnest, more zealous, more prayerful, more watchful, and, withal, more cheerful? Does it make you careful to redeem the time? More determined to avoid even the appearance of evil? What effect does it have on covetousness, and worldly mindedness, and selfishness, and, frivolity? The hope of seeing Jesus and of being made like him has a purifying power,—and if the purifying process is not going on in a person he has no good hope. He may know what the gospel faith and hope are, theoretically, but he has not believed with the heart unto righteousness, or he has left his first love. To such we affectionately say, there is space for repentance, and for strengthening the things that remain; how long it will last we know not. Repent, before it be too late.

God's movements among the nations are so gradual and natural, and, so to speak, they so dovetail with the present condition of things that his controlling power is concealed, except to the few who are animated with the spirit of a discerning faith and affection. What a privilege to be numbered with the few, so as to be able to count the mile posts and mark the events which tell us that "The time is at hand;" the world's crisis is rapidly approaching.

EVERY day of our lives some thing happens which shows the importance of clinging to the grand old covenants of promise. Pained are we to see those of whom we had hoped better things crazy over hobbies, and spending time, talents and money on ideas wholly human, and without a speck of gospel in them, and yet trying to splice them on to it. Oh, let us hold the Glad Tidings in its purity and simplicity. It is a thousand times more costly to sacrifice the truth than a few men.

THERE are two answers to the question, "What is man?" One of them is not us. One is a divine answer, the other human. The divine answer is as follows: "Man is like to vanity; his days are as a shadow that passeth away." The latest human answer we have seen, says, "A man! No line can measure him; no fruit can bound him. The archangel before the throne cannot outlive him. The stars shall die, but he will watch their extinguishment. The world will burn, but he will pass on the conflagration. Endless ages will march on; he will watch the procession. A man! The masterpiece of God Almighty." What presumption and wickedness! Surely the writer must have been given over to believe a lie.

THE question is asked:—"As we are commanded to love our enemies, does not God love his enemies?" Yes; we have the evidence of this in the words of Jesus in John iii. 16, "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." The questioner will please note that the world of mankind can only be saved by compliance with the condition exacted. Whosoever believeth in the Son given shall not perish, but have everlasting life. The best [illegible] is derived from God's great gift [illegible] not scattered broadcast. God [illegible] his enemies enough [illegible] in their sins. He [illegible] of a perfect hatred; it [illegible] of enmity, and his love finds expression in a system of means for ridding them of sin. The sinner must make use of the means provided or no reconciliation is effected. Questioner must make sure not to love the sins of his enemies, while he loves them.

WE recently read a paragraph which said a Roman Catholic merchant in Australia died some time ago, leaving one thousand five hundred pounds to the church "to deliver his soul from purgatory." The executor refuses to pay the legacy until proof shall be furnished that the soul of the dead man has been really delivered. It is safe to say the money will never be paid if that decision be adherred to. But what a system! A wealthy person takes it for granted that he is going to a disagreeable place. Is there no means by which he could avoid going there? Why go and then have to pay out? If it is money that is wanted, why not purchase exemption and be done with it? If a person is sent to purgatory because of some misdemeanor, has Catholicism no system of pardon? Do not their priests claim pardoning power? Surely faithful Catholics should escape purgatory if they have been pardoned? It looks as if either purgatory or the confessional must be a fraudulent piece of business, viewed in the most favorable light, and from a Catholic standpoint too; the one conflicts with the other. But what else could be expected from Babylon?

BELIEVER: Nothing more easily reconciles us to the disagreeable things of this life than the knowledge that the swiftly fleeting present is bearing us onward to a time when life will be a beautiful and glorious thing. Nothing appeals more powerfully to human motive than the certainty that heaven life will shortly come under the review of an unerring and omnipotent Judge whom God has ordained to give to every man according as his work shall be. Nothing nerves a man to endure hardships like the prospect of Christ's approbation. Nothing enables a man to live as a stranger in the earth, abdicating political privileges and benefits like the conviction that all human politics are vain, and that there waits at the door with Christ the solution of every problem affecting the well-being of man, whether physiological, social, spiritual or political. Oh, beloved, there comes spiritual comfort and moral power, and endurance when faith rests upon the exceeding great and precious promises. If we would not be swayed by our environment, we must not look at the things which are seen. We must by faith bring the future near to us, and, as it were, live in its atmosphere even now.

WHAT the outcome may be we are not prepared to say, but reading and observation enable us to say that the mutations of sceptical thought are more and more apparent. The mythological theory of Strauss has died a natural death, and among cultured sceptics it is now generally admitted that religion is a necessary part of human life, and that religious feeling is really a component of humanity and must point to some reality. Even Spencer says that "an unbiassed consideration forces us to conclude, that religion everywhere present as the weft, running through the warp of human history expresses some eternal fact." And Tyndall, "that religious feeling is as much a verity as is any part of human consciousness," and that "against it the waves of science beat in vain;" and Huxley says that "religious feeling is the essential basis of conduct." Herbert Spencer used to say he "found himself in the presence of the unknowable," but in his late utterances he said that "man is ever in the presence of an infinite and eternal energy from which all things proceed." And adds, "that since veneration and gratitude are due somewhere, they are surely due, if due at all, to that ultimate cause from which humanity, in common with other things, proceeds."

DIED.

Every few days the lovers of truth are saddened by the death of its long-time witnesses. Word recently reached us that Bro. Geo. Dowey, of Dundee, Scotland, whose name has for many years been identified with the neglected truth of God, and the sect every where spoken against, has had to succumb to the great enemy. He was a man of far more than ordinary ability, and, in a remarkable degree, had the rare faculty of presenting disagreeable truths in an agreeable way. Besides this he is said to have adorned the doctrines of Christ by a consistent walk and conversation. May the good time soon come when all who sleep in Jesus shall awake and sing. And may we who still remain so live as that we may sing with them.

Since writing the above we are reminded that an aged sister on this side of the water has also ended her testimony. Grandma Fisher, who but a short time since visited us, has fallen asleep. The ranks of the veterans are being fast thinned out, and we begin to feel lonesome. It makes us sigh for the end of death's harvest. What a mighty host he has slain! It is estimated that near 40,000,000 a year fall under his scythe. Every day and hour and minute this vast procession is passing. The army of death is recruited from every nation, state, city, and street in the vast world. The rich and poor alike fall before him; the strong as well as the weak become his prey. He beckons, and our beloved ones from the king of terrors regardless of our tears, our prayers and our mourning.

To us it is one of the strangest things in nature that the wind-up that is sure to take place does not lessen the zest for the pleasures of sin, nor quench the thirst for wealth. Men act as if they knew nothing of death and expected to live here forever.

It is scarcely necessary to remind readers of this paper that the one hope for our race is Christ. He has announced himself as the resurrection and the life of all who believe in him. "He that hath the Son hath life." And God I sing true that same Christ will be death's destruction.

Original.

Steadfastness.

"Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." What a great comfort, brothers and sisters, this should be to us, to know that he is faithful that has promised, and that our labor is not in vain in the Lord. And though in this life, friends or those supposed to be friends may turn against us, our burdens may become heavy, our load seem greater than we can bear; but when we take up the comforting words of our Lord, which we should always do when about to give up under the trials that come to every Christian heart, and read, "Wherefore seeing ye also compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith, who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despised the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God."

When we come to think of the trials that our Savior had to endure for us, and which he did endure without murmuring and came out victorious over every evil, how it ought to help us to strive hard to overcome the evils which so easily beset us in this life, and to ever look ahead to the time when the overcomer can sit down in the kingdom of God.

I know that we have many trials and temptations on every hand when we are striving to follow in the footsteps of our Savior. We have to watch for the tempter, it comes to every one and in all places. Sometimes it comes in the form of a friend with a flattering tongue, and enticing words to draw you into evil, but beware on every hand. Oh, we can't be too careful, and God warns us in so many places in the Scriptures to watch and be steadfast in our faith, so that we may boldly say the Lord is my helper, and therefore I will not fear what man can do unto me. "The Lord knoweth our works and saith, behold I have set before thee an open door and no man can shut it, for thou hast a little strength and hast kept my Word, and hast not denied my name, because thou hast kept the Word of my patience. I also will keep thee from the hour of temptation which shall come upon all the world to try them that dwell upon the earth. As ye have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men especially unto them which are of the household of faith, but be patient, be steadfast, continue in prayer and watch, stablish your hearts for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh. It won't be long; it can't be long. And every day puts us one day nearer the time. We can't be too careful, let us take heed, guard every step, weigh every word, prove all things, and above all love one another for we will have to give an account of all things. But think for a moment; think of that grand eternal city with its beauty and splendor which no mortal tongue can describe, which is to come when the curse shall be removed from the earth, and the throne of God and the Lamb shall be in it. There will be no death there, neither sorrow nor crying; there shall be no night, no need of a candle, for the Lord God shall give them light and shall reign forever and ever. These sayings are true and faithful, and the Lord God of the holy prophets sent his angels to show unto his servants the things which must shortly be done. Behold I come quickly, blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this Book, and they that do his commandments, that they may have a right to the tree of life and may enter in through the gates in to the city. Is it not worth striving for? Striving to live so that we may be permitted an entrance. Let us hold fast to the things which we have heard, and been a cured of. I ask an interest in the prayers of all the dear ones of the household of faith that may read these lines, that I may hold out faithful. And come Lord Jesus, and come quickly is my prayer. Submitted in love.

ANNA LIPPINCOTT.

PRAYER.

"The effectual fervent prayer of the righteous man availeth much." James v. 16.

Elias was one of those earnest men, and we learn how earnestly he prayed, and we learn the result of his prayers when he prayed that there should be no rain, and for three years and six months there was no rain, and the heavens gave rain. Christ prayed in the garden, and his prayer was earnest, and his prayer of some length is given in the 17th chapter of John. There was another earnest, effectual, fervent prayer of our dear Lord and Master at the grave of Lazarus. When the children of God pray they should pray in earnest. The thief on the cross prayed in earnest when he said, Lord remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom, and how soon the answer came. The promise was when he came in his kingdom he should be with him in Paradise, for Christ will come and restore the kingdom to Israel. Then he will also restore Paradise. David prayed earnestly and fervently in Psalm lxxii. when he said, Blessed be the Lord God, the God of Israel who only doeth wondrous things, and blessed be his glorious name for ever; and let the whole earth be filled with his glory; Amen, and Amen. The prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended. Oh, what a grand and glorious prayer that was. That prayer was in harmony with the prayer Jesus told his disciples to pray, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." That is one of the earnest, fervent and effectual prayers, and the children of God will continue to offer that prayer till Jesus comes to set up that everlasting kingdom. David prayed to his God three times a day, notwithstanding he was threatened with the lion's den. This was another of those fervent, effectual praying kind of men that did not care for the decree of those wicked men and the king. Paul was one of those earnest kind of men, he was an obedient man, he let none of those things that came upon him move him; neither did he count his life dear unto him, so that he might win Christ, and be accepted of him. James was one of those earnest men. Peter was another, and, dear brethren and sisters, should we not all be earnest, faithful, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as ye know your work is not in vain in the Lord. Earnestly, tenderly, Jesus is a calling, Oh sinner come unto me, for my yoke is easy and my burden is light. Take my name with you wherever you go. We have no time to wait with the vain allurements of this present evil world. Now is our salvation nearer than when we first believed. Oh let us all be ready.

J. S. HATCH.

Let us serve God in sunshine, while he makes the sun shine. We shall then serve him all the better in the dark when he sends the darkness. The darkness is sure to come. Only let our light be God's light, and our darkness God's darkness, and we shall be safe at home when the great night comes.—F. W. Faber.

OBITUARY.

Alonzo P. Terrel, the subject of this sketch was born in the town of Waterbury, New Haven Co., Conn., Sept. 5, 1809. When about nine months old he came with his parents, (who were the first white settlers) to the township of Ridgeville, Lorain Co., Ohio, where he resided with the exception of a few months spent in the township of Lagrange in the same county, until the spring of 1854, when he with his family came to Michigan, settling on a farm in the township of Byron, Kent Co., where he resided until his death April 8th, 1895, aged 85 years and 7 months. On the eve of Oct. 11th, 1832, he was married to Caroline M. Blakeslee who fell asleep in Jesus not quite two years ago. Since that time his feelings may well be expressed in the following lines,

"Let me go for I am weary,
Tired of life's [illegible]
the way of [illegible]
Let me lie in [illegible]
To rest me and be at rest.
With my couch [illegible] neath the sod;
Then in the resurrection morn,
We shall awake to live with God."

Brother and sister Terrel were the parents of five children, one son and four daughters, two of the daughters still live. They with a number of grand-children and great grand-children, four brothers and one sister, and other relatives and friends sincerely mourn his loss. He has been a worthy member of the Church of God for about thirty years, and died in full hope of a resurrection through Christ.

Funeral sermon preached by Mrs. M. A. Woodward, from John xi. 21, to a house well filled with sympathizing friends and neighbors who had long loved and respected their aged friend and brother. A steady rain began to fall and continued all day, but we all look for the time when the clouds will be dispersed and the sun of righteousness will arise, and there will be no more death.

Sister Mary A. Stouffer, wife of Bro. P. B. Stouffer, died at Des Moines, Iowa. She was born July 4th, 1830, in Washington Co., Ind., and was united in holy matrimony to Peter B. Stouffer in 1850. To them were born four children, three of whom preceded her to the grave. In 1860, she united with the Church of God, and since then has lived a devoted Christian, consecrating her life to Jesus, and always expressing a desire to see him return. She fell asleep in Jesus on Monday May 20th, with paralysis of the heart, after having spent a day before in reasonable good health. But she had suffered much in the past few years, but during all her suffering she was cheerful and resigned placing her faith in the Lord. Her remains were brought to Lanark, Ill. for burial, Bro. D. M. Huddler preaching the funeral sermon. We join in sympathy with the friends in their loss.

How minutely the prophecies concerning the very last days are fulfilling before our eyes, and yet how few of us, even of those who profess to believe in the soon coming of Christ, are earnestly watching their fulfillment, realizing that they are veritable signs of the last days.

Eastern Express No. 6 on the Nickel Plate Road which formally left Chicago at 2 P. M. has been changed on the new time-card effective May 19th to 1.30 P. M. The run has been shortened and the city of Cleveland is reached at the reasonable hour of 11.36 P. M. This secures for the patrons of this popular road a train better adapted for Cleveland business and will no doubt please many of its patrons. – 22 13

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1895.

Report.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

We have just closed a fifteen-night discussion between Brother Adams of Fairview, and Elder Johnstown of Clay Co. The questions were, "The nature of man," "The Kingdom," "The Promises made to Abraham covering the land of Canaan," and the "Destiny of the Wicked." It is not necessary for me to comment on the discussion as the brethen know full well that there is nothing on the other side of the question. Johnstown insisted that there was, but the people could not see it, and some of his own brethren did not believe his argument. He was so tangled up that it would have taken a powerful magnifying glass for any mortal man to see through it. On the question of the kingdom he believed that he was in the kingdom and the kingdom was in him, and at last he lost both. On the "Nature of man" he affirmed that the real man was inside. Brother Adams called Paul on the witness stand and proved that Johnstown had his inner man in the wrong place, and from the way he acted and talked people came to the conclusion that Johnstown's inner man could not have been a part of God or he would not have used such language, and I think he will have to renew his inner man twice each day before he is able to stand another round up with Bro. Adams. In regard to the punishment of the wicked, Johnstown tried to make all the writers of the Bible contradict each other. Brother Adams proved himself a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, and there are but few that could take his place in such a sanhedrin as we had here. He won the hearts of many of the outsiders. Brother Adams immersed five prior to, and during the discussion, so the good work goes on and we pray the kind Father to hasten the time when error and superstition shall have an end and truth shall reign supreme.

Your Brother, in hope.

The latest wonder among the textiles is a fabric woven from the fibers of wood which has been put through a special chemical process. This important method of treating wood fiber, which renders it equal to wool or cotton for all practical purposes, is of German origin, and is known as the "Mesterlich process of chemically treating wood pulp." It was introduced during the year just closed.

Testimony of the Martyrs.

William Tyndale, the Christian martyr, who first translated the Bible into the English tongue, has left the following argument for the resurrection hope:—

"In putting departed souls in heaven, hell and purgatory, you destroy the arguments wherewith Christ and Paul prove the resurrection. What God doth with them that shall we know when we come to them. The true faith putteth the resurrection, which we are warned to look for every hour. The heathen philosophers denying that, did put that souls did ever live, and the pope joineth the spiritual doctrine of Christ, and the fleshly doctrine of the philosophers together—things so contrary that they cannot agree, and because the fleshly minded pope consenteth unto heathen doctrine, therefore he corrupteth the Scriptures to establish it. If the souls be in heaven, tell me why they be not in as good case as the angels be, and then what cause is there of the resurrection?"

REST.

When on the billows of this life's tumultuous sea,
The darkness falls, the waters compass me,
My fainting heart weary battling with the tide,
And, craving peace beyond all else besides,
My soul hath longed for rest.

When weary, Lord, of all that this vain world can give,
Its fancies making life so sweet to live,
Its triumphs, and its glories, gain to transient grace,
My soul shall crave thy rest.

Father, my lips grow weary with their prayer for peace,
The hand that labors, knowing no increase,
The heart that faints with its scarce-clasped confessed,
Still crave, O God, thy rest.

With tired feet that falt'ring fall this side the goal,
I crave the Presence that shall make me whole,
And looking onward toward the city of the blest,
My soul doth thirst for rest.

PSALM. 25.

25 COM. VER.

1. David's. Judge me O Lord, because I have gone my way in guilelessness; and while I hope in the Lord I shall not have been moved.

2. Prove me, O Lord, and try me, purify my secret-thoughts and my heart.

3. Because thy mercy is before my eyes and I am pleased with thy truth.

4. I have not sat in a joint-counsel of folly, and I will not enter into the midst of those who evade law.

5. I have hated a church of those who are doing wickedly, and in the midst of the irreverent I will not be seated.

6. I shall wash my hands in guiltlessness, and I shall encompass thy altar, O Lord,

7. To hear a voice of praise and all thy wonders discoursed about.

8. O Lord, I have loved the appropriate-beauty of thy house and the place of the tabernacle of thy glory,

9. Do not destroy my soul along with irreverent ones and my life in the midst of men of blood.

10. In whose hands are transgressions, whose right hand hath been filled with bribes;

11. But I have gone my way in guilelessness: Mayest thou have redeemed me and saved me.

12. My foot standeth in uprightness: in churches shall I commend thee, O Lord.

PSALM 26. (27 COM. VER.)

1. David's before he had been annointed. The Lord is my illumination and my Savior; Whom shall I have feared? The Lord is the protector of my life: Before whom shall I show cowardice?

2. When those who do evil draw nigh me to devour my flesh, those who afflict me and mine enemies have grown weak and fallen.

3. If a camp shall array itself against me, my heart will not have feared: If war arise against me, in this (my heart) I hope.

4. One thing have I asked from the Lord, this will I seek out, that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, that I may behold the delight of the Lord and have an oversight of his inner-sanctuary.

5. Because he hid me in his tabernacle in a day of my calamities; He sheltered me in the hiding-place of his tabernacle; on a rock he exalted me.

6. And now lo, he hath exalted my head above my enemies: I have gathered about and sacrificed in his tabernacle a sacrifice of Alala: (victorious rejoicing) I will sing praise and exalt the strain unto the Lord.

7. Mayest thou have hearkened, O Lord, to my voice with which I have cried: Have mercy on me and hear me:

8. Unto thee hath my heart said, I have sought out thy face, thy face O Lord will I seek.

9. Turn not thy face away from me; Incline not away from thy bond-servant in wrath: become my responsive-helper; do not forsake me and do not overlook me, O God my Savior.

10. Because my father and my mother have forsaken me: but the Lord hath taken me to himself.

11. Legally instruct me in thy way, O Lord, and guide me in an upright way by reason of mine enemies.

12. Do not give me up to the souls of those who afflict me, because unjust witnesses have stood up against me, and their injustice hath falsified itself.

13. I trust that I shall see the good things of the Lord in the land of the living.

14. Wait patiently for the Lord, be manly and let thy heart be controlled, and wait patiently for the Lord.

PSALM 27. (28 COM. VER.)

1. David's. Unto thee have I cried: Do not disregard me in silence O my God. Do not disregard me in silence ever; or I shall have become like to those who go down into a pit.

2. Mayest thou have hearkened unto the voice of my supplication when I supplicate thee, when I lift up my hands toward thy inner-sanctuary.

3. Do not drag my soul away along with obdurate-sinners, and do not destroy me along with those who are doing injustice, with those who are talking peace with their neighbor, but evil in their hearts.

4. Mayest thou have given unto them according to the wickedness of their devices: according to the deeds of their hands mayest thou have given them: Mayest thou have paid them their payment.

5. Because they have not understood in respect to the doings of the Lord and the doings of his hands, thou wilt take them down and not build them up.

6. The Lord be praised because he hath hearkened to the voice of my supplication.

7. The Lord is my responsive-helper and my protector: In him hath my heart hoped, and I have received responsive-help and my flesh hath thrived; and with my purpose shall I confess unto him.

8. The Lord is the controling-power of his laity and the protector of his Christ's instrumentalities of salvation.

9. Mayest thou have saved thy laity and blessed thine inheritance, and shepherded them whilst there is an animate-age.

PSALM 28. (29 COM. VER.)

1. David's psalm for a tabernacle exodus. May ye have brought in unto the Lord, O ye sons of God, may ye have brought in unto the Lord sons of rams; May ye have brought in glory and honor;

2. May ye have brought in unto the Lord glory unto his name; May ye have worshipped the Lord in his sacred court.

3. A voice of the Lord upon the waters! The God of the glory hath thundered, the Lord upon many waters.

4. A voice of the Lord with strength, a voice of the Lord with majesty!

5. A voice of the Lord breaking cedars! The Lord hath broken the cedars of the Libanos;

6. And he will crush them like the yearling-bullock of the Libanos as it were, and the Beloved is a son of unicorns as it were.

7. A voice of the Lord cleaving a flame of fire!

8. A voice of the Lord shaking a wilderness. The Lord will shake the wilderness of Kades.

9. A voice of the Lord training hinds! And he will uncover forests; and in his inner-sanctuary every one saith glory.

10. The Lord inhabiteth the flood; and the Lord sitteth as King forever.

11. The Lord will give strength to his laity; The Lord will bless his laity in peace.

PSALM 29. (30 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end, David's psalm for an ode, for the renewing-service of the house (meaning the house of the Lord).

2. I will exalt thee, O Lord, because thou hast taken me up, and hast not allowed mine enemies to rejoice over me.

3. O Lord my God, I cried unto thee and thou didst heal me.

4. O Lord thou didst lead my soul up out of hades; thou didst save me from those who go down into a pit:

5. Exult the strain unto the Lord, ye his holy (not saints here hosioi nothsgioi) ones, and confess in remembrance of his sanctification.

6. Because there is wrath in his anger and life in his will: Lamentation will have camped at evening and in the morning is there gladness;

7. And I said in my prosperity, I shall not have been disturbed forever.

8. O Lord in thy will furnish my beauty with ability: but thou didst turn away thy face and I became terrified.

9. Unto thee, O Lord, will I have cried and unto my God will I have besought.

10. What profit is there in my blood, in my having gone down to corruption? Dust may not confess unto thee nor declare thy truth.

11. The Lord heard and had mercy on me; The Lord became my responsive-helper:

12. Thou didst turn my mourning into joy: Thou didst rend asunder my sack-cloth and gird me with rejoicing:

13. O that my glory may exalt the strain unto thee, and I shall not regret it. O Lord my God, I shall confess unto thee forever, (or as long as he lives).

PSALM 30. (31 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; David's psalm of ecstacy (meaning the prophetic state).

2. In thee, O Lord, have I hoped: May I not have been put to shame forever; in thy righteousness mayest thou have given them: Mayest thou have paid them their payment.

3. Incline thine ear, be swift to rescue me: Become a protecting God unto me, and a house of refuge to save me.

4. Because my controling-power and my refuge art thou and for thy name's sake wilt thou guide me and cherish me:

5. Thou wilt lead me out of this snare which they have hid for me, because thou art my protector, O Lord.

6. Into thy hands shall I have committed my spirit: Thou hast redeemed me, O Lord God of the truth.

7. Thou hast hated those who watch to guard inutilities in vain; But I have hoped in the Lord.

8. I shall be glad and shall have rejoiced in thy mercy, because thou hast looked upon my humilation, thou hast saved my soul from its straits;

9. And hast not shut me up in the hands of an enemy: hast stood my feet in a wide place.

10. Have mercy on me, O Lord, because I am being afflicted; mine eye hath been disturbed with anger, my soul and my stomach.

11. Because my life hath left off in woe, and my years with sighings, My strength hath become weak in poverty, and my bones have been racked.

12. To all my enemies I have become a reproach and to my neighbors exceedingly so, and a fear to my acquaintances; Those who behold me without have fled away from me;

13. I have become ignored from their heart like a dead person as it were. I have become as it were a lost vessel.

14. Because I have censure from many who sojourn round about; When they have been gathered together against me they have counseled to take my life (soul).

15. But I have hoped in thee, O Lord; I have said thou art my God.

16. In thy hands are my lots; Mayest thou have delivered me out of the hands of mine enemies and out of the hand of those who are persecuting me.

17. Mayest thou have manifested thy face unto thy bond-servant; Mayest thou have saved me in thy mercy.

18. O Lord, may I not have been put to shame, because I have invoked thee; May the irreverent have been put to shame, and may they have been led down into hades (the grave).

19. May the deceitful lips have become an object of alala, the lips that talk transgression in haughty-pride and contempt against the justified-one.

20. How vast is the plenitude of thy useful-goodness, O Lord, which thou hast hidden for those who fear thee; which thou hast wrought for those who hope in thee in the sight of the sons of men.

21. Thou wilt hide them in the concealment of thy face away from the disturbance of men; Thou wilt shelter them in a tabernacle away from the gainsaying of tongues.

22. The Lord be praised, because he hath made his mercy to be wonderful in a city of entrenchment.

23. But I said in my ecstasy, I have been cast away from the face of thine eyes; Therefore didst thou hearken, O Lord, to the voice of my supplication, when I cried unto thee.

24. May ye have loved the Lord all ye his holy ones, because the Lord requireth truth and repayeth those who showeth haughty-pride overmuch.

25. Be manly and let your heart be controled all ye who hope in the Lord.

COMMENT.

The 25th psalm is a confession and gloria of ultimate praise. David here is speaking in the spirit of the Christ which is "the spirit of prophecy" and the psalm is specifically Messianic in this sense. It is true only of David's spiritual desire; but is literally true of Christ's accomplishment as well and to be understood should be real in this light. Numerically it is a conjunctive-minor. In trinity we have the conjunction of the divine and human will both in purpose and accomplishment and in five we have the minor key of struggle and opposition still to be overcome.

The 26th psalm is numerically a conjunctive-major of faith and hope—full assurance of ultimate triumph over all enemies and opposition to righteousness, and should be the utterance of every true saint who is sojourning to the city of God. It is David's utterance as an individual saint before he was anointed king we are told, and this gives us the key to the interpretation of it. It is the saint illuminated, but still unanointed with the ability from on high.

The 27th psalm is numerically a divine consummation in its teaching the co-ordination of the human and divine will as expressed in judgment upon the obdurate-sinner and the assurance of salvation to the penitent seeker after righteousness—the demarkation of the two ways—the way of life and the way of death—the Messianic import coming out unmistakeably in the 8th verse and from there on to the close of the psalm.

The 28th psalm has the heading "For a tabernacle exodus" and was one of the hymns appropriate for a processional in the old temple service according to the Levitical rites and ceremonies. The chief-priest has been into the inner-tabernacle with the appropriate offering of blood, and the Levites greet his exodus with this processional hymn, after which the "sacrifices of salvation" are offered upon the altar in the outer-tabernacle accompanied by the worship of the laity in the sacred court and the court for the nations. The hymn is an exaltation of the majesty and power of God as an omnipotent Lord and the voices of nature and the natural phenomena become figuratively of course the voice and doings of God. The 11th verse is a prophecy of the coming glory for God's people, "the people of the king."

Psalm 29th is also a Levitical hymn appropriate for another regular temple-service which is indicated in the significant heading namely, "For an ode for the renewing service of the house," meaning the renewing of the covenant, a service which regularly recurred once a year, as I understand, and referred to in Hebrews and John's gospel as a "dedicatory" service. This is a mistake of translation and very misleading as the ceremony was typical of the renewing of the old covenant of law in the new covenant of grace—the former ministered by Mouses as a mediator of law, the latter ministered by Christ as a mediator of grace, the one in the blood of bulls and of he-goats, the other in the blood of Christ himself, as "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the cosmos." The fact that the psalm is "an ode" teaches us that the occasion typified is a great national event, and the scene is post-resurrectional as indicated by the appellation "ye holy ones," that is perfected saints, saints with their spiritual resurrectional bodies and in a state of glory. This is a sort of "healing" that has taken place. This is the "morning gladness" here referred to. We have also the confession of weakness in the mere human ability and the responsive-help and divine enablement—the merciful deliverance even from hades and death.

The 30th psalm is one of several psalms of instruction, the object of which is primarily to give an example illustrative of the thought contained in the heading. Here the thought is "of ecstacy." This is the word very often used in the Scriptures to designate or define the prophetic state and the word means literally "a standing out" and as applied to the prophetic state means a standing out of the natural or human condition into the spiritual or divine condition or state for the time being or while the individual so affected is under the influence of this divine control. It is also sometimes spoken of as "a frenzy" because to the beholder who does not understand this matter the person so affected appears for the time insane, because he acts in an unnatural way and says and does strange things. The fact is that the individual so affected is under control outside of himself and his own personality and becomes an instrumentality though an intelligent one in the hands of God to say and do his purpose, and this word "ecstacy" expresses this idea, though the word is not used in the sense in which we ordinarily use it, namely as a state of delight.

Notice this idea brought out in the 4th verse "Because my controlling-power art thou. Read the psalm in the light of this exegesis and much that is obscure will become plain. The whole psalm is a Messianic soliloquy and fraught with spiritual instruction.

Observe in the 23rd verse that the individual when in this state of "ecstacy" and while seeing things as God sees them, looks upon his ordinary or natural way of reasoning as a "craze" too. It is wonderful how little understood "the prophetic-state" and "the way of vision" is now, even in the churches and among Christian people. There is another word that is frequently used in the Scriptures to describe both these states as well as the state of faith and this is "hypostasis" a real state as opposed to a fictitious state or a hypothetical state; as in the first verse of the 11th chapter of Hebrews, "Now faith is a hypostasis, etc.," (or a hypostatical state as opposed to hypothetical state) which is equivalent to saying that faith is a real not an imaginary state of mind and heart. To be a man of vision or a prophet one must be a man of faith and this definition of faith precludes any mere notions or figments of the imagination. The word "ecstasy" describes how the man of faith gets into the hypostatical state of faith or vision—that is by "standing out" of the natural into the spiritual way of seeing things for the time being.

CHAS. GARDNER.

The Day that Christ Died.

My object in writing on this subject is to present what I believe to be the truth, to some that appear to be following the teaching of the church of Rome. It is claimed that Christ was buried on Friday eve and that he rose on Sunday morning, therefore giving an undue prominence to the day of the sun, the day that Constantine commanded to be kept in honor of his god the sun. In Matt. xii. 40, Christ said, "so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth;" this is a very positive statement of the length of time he was to be in the grave, and makes seventy-two hours while according to the general idea it could have been but thirty-six hours at most, which is just half the time Christ stated; it would not help the matter by saying that from Friday evening to Sunday morning would be a part of three days; for we would still be short an entire night and Christ was just as positive as to the numbers of nights as he was of the number of days; why not believe Christ?

The Bible no where lets us know what day Christ died but it is positive as to when he was raised. Mark in giving an account of the visit of the woman to the sepulchre says it was on the first day of the week at the rising of the sun, and that they found the sepulchre open. This gives us no information as to when he was raised, only that the resurrection had taken place some time before sun rise. Luke and John are to the same point; now let us turn to Matt. xxviii. 1, and there we find "in the end of the sabbath certain parties came to the sepulchre and there was an earthquake and an angel descended and rolled back the stone. With the Jews the day commenced at sundown and ended at sundown; now the historian says in the end of the sabbath (Saturday), now I will submit that as long as it was in the end of the sabbath (Saturday), it could not possibly be twelve hours later (Sunday morning). Taking Matthew's statement as to the time (Saturday eve) of the resurrection and Christ's as to the length of time he was to be in the tomb; then counting back three days and three nights from Saturday evening, we would have Wednesday as the day of his death. Submitted in love.

Babel and Calneh.

The recent appearance of Mr. Loftus' "Travels and Researches in Chaldea and Susiana," enables us to supplement this part of our subject with notices of the most recent discoveries in the lower Mesopotamia. This unquestionably is the oldest region on earth, having been the building ground of the human family in the age after the flood. Here the traces still remain unobliterated in debris-covered buildings, and writings whose meaning has been wrapt up for ages in the mystery of the cuneiform character. These monuments are rather beyond our proper field, which is that of "fulfilled Prophecy;" but when we think of the high antiquity with which they stand connected, and the evidence they afford of the truth of Scripture history, we are unable to resist the temptation of turning aside to behold objects so august and venerable.

Let us visit first the ruins of Niffar, about sixty miles to the south-east of Hillah. This according to Sir Henry Rawlinson, is the Calneh of the Bible. The ruins are found on the line forming the northern boundary of the Chaldea of antiquity. It was the capital according to Rawlinson, of the region, and bore the name of Belus, and was the true site of the tower which was begun by those who said "Go to, let us build us a city, and a tower whose top may reach unto heaven." The ruins of the tower have not been identified. The existing remains on this site are those of the edifices erected by the earliest king of whom the cuneiform inscriptions give us any notice. His name has not yet been deciphered, but his era appears to have been as early as B. C. 2300. The city was called Tel Anu, from the god Anu, the name under which Noah was worshipped by his idolatrous descendants. The Babylon that afterwards arose on the banks of the Euphrates borrowed its name, Rawlinson thinks, from this earlier Babel, and original head of the kingdom Nimrod. The only objection to the theory that makes Babel and Calneh identical, is, that they are mentioned as two separate and distinct places in the list in Genesis, of the earliest cities built by men.—From "Ruins of Bible Lands."

The Ten Persecutions.

The first was under the Emperor Nero, thirty-one years after Christ's ascension. Multitudes were apprehended; they were covered by the skins of wild beasts, torn to pieces by devouring dogs; fastened to crosses, wrapt up in combustible garments that when the daylight failed, they might, like torches, serve to dispel the gloom of night. For this tragical scene Nero lent his own gardens; and thus the shrieks of women burning to ashes supplied music and diversion for their circus. The second was under Domitian in the year 95, and forty thousand are supposed to have perished. The third began in the third year of Trajan in the year 100. The fourth under Antonius. The fifth began in the year 127, under Severus, when great cruelties were committed. The sixth began in the reign of Maximus, in 235-7. The seventh, which was the most dreadful ever known, began in 250, under the Emperor Decius. The eighth began in 257, under Valerian. The ninth was under Aurelian in 274. The tenth began in the nineteenth year of Diocletian, in 303. [illegible] dreadful persecution, which lasted ten years, houses filled with Christians were set on fire, and whole droves were twisted together with ropes and cast into the sea. It is related that seventeen thousand were slain in one month. In this fiery persecution it is believed that not fewer than one hundred and forty-four thousand Christians died by violence, besides seven hundred thousand that died through the banishments, or the public works to which they were condemned.

"Living to Christ in small things, and living for Christ every day, is the secret of large fruitfulness. A peach tree or an orange does not leap into a bounty of fruit by one spasmodic effort; an orchard does not ripen under a single day's sunshine. Every raindrop, every sunbeam, every inch of sub-soil does its part. A fruitful Christian is a growth. To finish up a godly character by a mere religion of Sundays and sermons and sacraments and festivals and specials is impossible. A man can be converted in an instant, but he must grow by the year. The tough fiber of the slender branch which can hold up a half bushel of oranges is very different from a little willow switch. It is the steady compacting process that makes the little limb like a steel wire. Such is a healthy and holy believer's life. Every honest prayer breathed, every cross carried, every trial well endured, every good work for our fellow-men lovingly done, every little act conscientiously performed for Christ's glory, helps to make the Christian character beautiful, and to load its broad boughs with "apples of gold" for God's "baskets of silver."

Y. P. S. C. E. Excursion to Boston.

The Society of Christian Endeavor of Central and Northern Indiana, at a meeting in Fort Wayne, Ind., May 21st, selected the Nickel Plate Road as their special train to Boston in July, to attend the Annual Meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. for 1895. This special train will be arranged to stop enroute for a few hours at Niagara Falls and also at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., enabling passengers to enjoy a visit to those famous resorts. No extra charge will be made for these privileges. Passengers at other points along the Nickel Plate Road may join this special train at any station by previous arrangement through the nearest ticket agent or by addressing M. C. Baker, District Passenger Agent, Ft. Wayne, Ind. The Nickel Plate Road offers the lowest rates to all points east or west. This line, with its immediate eastern connections, forms the shortest line to Boston for the meetings of the Y. P. S. C. E. in July, and also the Masonic Knights Templar in August.—June 30.

Cheap Excursions to the West.

On May 21st and June 11th, The North-Western Line (Chicago & North-Western Railway) will sell excursion tickets at very low rates to a large number of points in the west and northwest. For full information apply to ticket agents of connecting lines, or address A. H. Waggener, T. P. A., 7 Jackson place, Indianapolis, Ind.—m 11-tf

Solid through trains to New York City were placed in service May 19th over the Nickel Plate and West Shore Railroads. This will enable both first and second class passengers to go through without change of cars. A colored porter will be placed in charge of first and second class day coaches to attend to the wants of our patrons, and to insure scrupulously clean cars enroute. This is in addition to the porters that always accompany the through sleeping cars. Rates continue the lowest.—June 30.

Announcement.

Dear Restitution:

Please say, that the brethren of Northern Illinois will not hold conference in June, as was contemplated, but will postpone until in September. Due notice will be given.

J. M. GLOTFELTY, Chairman.

The time appointed for the Third Quarterly Conference of Nebraska, is June 7 to 9, 1895, at Moorefield, Frontier County. The brethren there extend a hearty welcome to all who may come and will do all within their power to make the meeting a success.

J. J. CADY, Sec'y.

The Annual Conference of the Churches of God, in Iowa, will be held at Marshalltown, some time during the month of August. Notice will be given in due time. Brethren and Sisters, begin at once to prepare for this meeting and make it such a one in numbers and in Spirit that it may long be remembered.

O. J. ALLARD, Sec'y.

The annual meeting of the Church of God will convene in the new church at Scholl's Ferry, Oregon, commencing Saturday June 8th, 1895, and hold over the following Sunday. We extend a cordial invitation to all the brethren. Dear brothers and sisters, will all come that can? The signs of the times show to us, who are watching and waiting for the near coming of our Savior, that such a reunion always helps us. We feel that we have a foretaste of what is to come.

S. B. LAWRENCE, Sec.

The Third Quarterly Conference of the Church of God, in Indiana, will be held at the Antioch meeting house, five miles south of Plymouth, commencing on Friday, June 7, 1895, at 10 o'clock A. M., and continue over the following Sunday.

Owing to the fact of there being so few members of this once prosperous church, they being separated from different causes, it has been questioned by some as to the advisability of longer trying to hold conference meetings at this place; but as the time draws near all hearts turn to Old Antioch. These meetings have been held so long that they have become an established fact in the minds of the people and they expect the meeting as surely as the time comes. And then it seems we get so much real encouragement and enjoyment from them, it seems like a family re-union, where we all meet on a common level, where we can enjoy the blessed communion of those of like precious faith so that we feel that we would be lost without them for from these gatherings we do derive much strength if we come with the right spirit. So, brothers and sisters let us come with hearts full of love for the truth, laying aside the cares of this life and have nothing in view but the upbuilding of each other's faith. We invite you to come. We urge you to come.

J. F. WAGONER, Pres.
A. C. ROBERTS, Sec'y.

Appointments.

Union Church, Ill., June 7 to 9.
East Plum River, Ill., June 15, to 16.
Lanark, Ill., June 22, to 23.
Leaf River, Ill., June 29, to 30.

D. M. HUDLER.

I will be southeast of Kokomo, Ind. the 2nd Sunday in May. The 3rd Sunday northeast of Colfax. The 4th Sunday at Argos. The 1st Sunday in June, at Roll, and the 2nd Sunday southeast of Kokomo. At each of the above places the meeting is to begin on Saturday evening.

J. S. HATCH.

Special Announcement.

We have secured a limited number of copies of "Letter to a Friend." This is our old and popular favorite, a 32 page tract, telling of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the One Hope, the One Faith, and One Baptism. Written by Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. Price 10 cents, 12 for $1.00 post paid. Send soon, for they will not last long.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks those not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have the credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfillment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

Commencing Sunday May 19th, the day coaches on all through trains of the Nickel Plate Road will be attended by a colored porter whose services are placed at the disposal of the patrons of the line. The purpose of this equipment is to insure scrupulously clean cars enroute. - m 22 15.

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects, by R. C. Bingley, is the title of a pamphlet of 48 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under different headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued calls for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonian Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

Summer Outings.—At Seashore, Mountain and Lake Resorts.

The Ocean Resorts—Atlantic City, Cape May, Asbury Park, Ocean Grove, Long Branch, and famous resorts along the New Jersey Coast are reached by the Pennsylvania Lines. As a direct route to Newport, Narragansett Pier, Cape Cod, Martha's Vineyard, Nantucket and the popular watering places along the Atlantic from Chesapeake Bay to Maine, these lines offer special advantages.

In the Mountains—Cresson, Bedford Springs, Ebensburg, Altoona and other resorts in the Alleghenies are located on the Pennsylvania Lines, which also lead to the White Mountains, the Adirondacks, Watkins Glen, Mt Desert Island, and places of summer sojourn in Eastern New York, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

The Lake Region—The Pennsylvania Lines bring Mackinac, Petoskey, Charlevoix, Mt. Clemens, St. Clair, Muskegon, Traverse City, Mackinaw City, Sault Ste. Marie, Gogebic, St. Ignace, Watersmeet, Au Sable, Iron mountain and all the romantic resorts of Northern Michigan within easy reach, as well as Ashland, Cedar Lake, Devil's Lake, Pelican Lake, Three Lakes, Waukesha and other resorts in the Northwest.

For information concerning rates, time of trains and the first-class service, please apply to nearest Penn-sylvania Line Ticket Agent, or address F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburg, Pa. June 26.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundred of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. Is it folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Poetry.

If Christ Should Come Today.

If Christ should come to-day,
With all the holy angels in His train,
Into the clouds of heaven to take away
His own redeemed, and those who have been slain
Because they would not bow to Baal's reign,
And wear his hateful mark upon the hand,
Or in the forehead, for unblushing gain,
And all the wealth and pleasure of the land,
Though multitudes should plead with prayers and tears,
Because they trusted not in God for bread,
But bought and sold and plied their daily cares,
And so were in their sins found dead,
How many would be left behind to weep
And wail the coming of that dreadful day,
When they must with the living wicked sleep
The long, long sleep, far from the light of day?

Can we from our altars and our knees,
And the holy work of people in Thy grace,
Look up to Thee, sweet Master in the skies,
And say we're ready to see Thy face,
Regardless of the need around us spread,
Of the naked, the hungry and the cold,
Unwilling to share our daily bread
Even with those we sell for gold.

No! rather will the spoiler,
Will laugh at your dismay and mocks,
The tyrant shall yield to the boiler,
And your feasts cast away like the ox
For the prayers of the poor have ascended
To be written in lightning on high,
And the wail of our captive friends blended
With the bolts that must leap from the sky.

The thrones of your kings shall be shattered
And the prisoner and serf shall go free;
I will harvest for you and I have scattered
On the borders of this Galilee;
For I come the chosen and a stranger
As my reapers will sing through the night
Till the star that stood over the manger
Shall usher the world with its light.

The Garden of Gethsemane.

The supper being ended, the Lord with his chosen few retired to this garden, and there commenced the enactment of a series of events eminently pathetic and touching, even to melting a heart of stone, as well as tragic and heroic on the part of the Son of God.

He says to his disciples: "Sit ye here while I pray. And he taketh with him Peter and James and John, and began to be greatly amazed, and sore troubled. And he saith unto them, My soul is exceedingly sorrowful even unto death: (literal Greek—deadly anguish) abide ye here, and watch. And he went forward a little, and fell on the ground, and prayed that, if it were possible, the hour might pass away from him, ("thou hearest me always.") And he said, Abba, Father, all things are possible unto thee; remove this cup from me: howbeit not what I will, but what thou wilt."

His Father heard his prayer, and right on the spot removed the cup.

What cup? It certainly was not the cup of the cross, which he should press to his lips, a little later on, but the cup of sorrow "unto death." A cup filled with "deadly anguish," which would have ended in death, before he reached the cross, if his prayer had not been answered.

The phrase: "sorrowful even unto death," means something. And if carefully examined, you will find that death was imminent in the garden, caused by a "deadly anguish"—Dinglott. Refer to Luke xxii. 44, for further light: "And being in an agony he prayed more earnestly: and his sweat became as it were great drops of blood falling down upon the ground." His "agony" produced some difficulty in his system, which caused the blood to pass through the pores of the skin, some say, the Savior was dying in the garden from a broken heart. Such being the case, he may well pray earnestly for that cup to pass, which seemed likely to frustrate that to which all the prophets predict of him, something like Abraham offering up Isaac, the child of promise.

How did God help him in this di' mas? "And there appeared unto him an angel from heaven, strengthening him." See also Heb. v. 7: "Who in the days of his flesh, having offered up prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears unto him that was able to save him from death, and having been heard for his godly fear: though he was a Son, yet learned obedience by the things which he suffered." It seems to me that this Scripture applies directly to his "agony" in the garden. While he often engaged in quiet prayer in the lonely fastnesses of the mountains, but on what other occasion, save in the garden, did he offer up "prayers and supplications with strong crying and tears, unto him that was able to save him from death?" Upon what other occasion did he need the aid of God to "save him from death?"

After the agony of the garden had passed, Christ approached the cross unflinchingly as a hero, without the least sign of unmanly weakness, as one might expect if it was the fear of the cross which caused his agony in the garden, and if that was the cup he sought release from. Remember his death on the cross was an act of personal choice, it was not forced upon him. "I am the good Shepherd: the good Shepherd layeth down his life for the sheep." "Therefore doth my Father love me, because I lay down my life, that I may take it again. No man taketh it away from me, but I lay it down of myself." I for one could not possibly believe that my Savior would reluctantly offer to lay down his life for the sheep, and then want to back out at the last moment. I certainly have a much higher conception of the moral and manly courage of Jesus than that.

Jesus, in his prayer that he might not drink the cup, resignedly said, thy will be done. "Remove this cup from me: howbeit not what I will," but what thou will." Jesus has repeatedly assured us that it was both his "will" and purpose to "lay down his life for the sheep," and that on this account "therefore doth my Father love me." This shows that the will of both the Father and Son were one as far as his laying down his life for the sheep was concerned. Both knew each others will: When is it proper to pray "thy will be done?" This should only be done where the petitioner is in doubt as to whether it would be in harmony with the will of him whom the petition is asked. if otherwise used, it shows a lack of faith.

Jesus, in referring to his offering for the sins of the people, says: "Lo, I am come (In the roll of the book it is written of me) To do thy will, O God."

See Luke xxii. 37, and read his words which he spoke as he was about to enter the garden and commence the fulfillment of that which he says, "is written of me." "For I say unto you, that this which is written must be fulfilled in me. And he was reckoned with transgressors, for that which concerneth me hath fulfilment." He is here telling us that that which was written of him in Isa. liii. was then being fulfilled. Can you for a moment that he would pray the Father to remove the cup which alone could fulfill the prophecy of Isaiah, to which he referred? I do not. I think my Savior was more courageous than that. His whole conduct was brave from arrest to crucifixion. He said, "remove this cup from me," a cup filled with "deadly anguish." It amounts to nothing more than an inference that he referred to the cross.

After the ordeal was all over, and he had passed into the resurrection life, he met two of his disciples on their journey to Emmaus, and found them engaged in earnest conversation about the things which had happened unto him. They did not seem to comprehend the necessity of his death. He reproved them as follows: "O foolish men, and slow of heart to believe in all that the prophets have spoken! Behooved it not the Christ to suffer these things, and to enter into his glory?"

Could he thus consistently reprove his disciples for lack of faith in what the prophets had predicted concerning his death, etc., if he had only a few days previous prayed the Father to remove from his lips the cup, which if he had done, would render the predictions of the prophets false? Could he consistently say: "Behooved it not the Christ to suffer these things?" if at the same he had tried to escape the suffering of "these things?" Other occasion did he need the aid of God to "save him from death?"

THE report of the Michigan Conference has arrived, but too late for this issue. It will appear next week.

HE that cannot forgive others breaks down the bridge over which he must pass himself, for every one has need of forgiveness."

"OPPORTUNITY is the flower of time; and, as the stalk may remain when the flower is cut off, so time may remain with us when opportunity is gone.

OUR habits change with our years, so that looking back we can hardly recognize ourselves by our former ways. Sometimes the change is not a good one, though a Christian who is true to her opportunities, improves to the end.

AT a mass meeting held in London to protest against the atrocities in Armenia, and presided over by the Duke of Argyll, a letter from Mr. Gladstone was read, in which he says he "contemplated the infatuatio . of the Turkish government determined, it would seem, to do everything it can do to produce its own ruin.

SAID Queen Mary to John Knox, "You interpret the Scriptures in one way and the Catholics in another; whom shall I believe, and who shall judge?" "You shall believe God, who plainly speaketh in his Word," replied the sturdy old reformer, "and further than that Word teacheth you, you shall not believe neither one nor the other."

THE Psalmist has said, "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord, and he delighteth in his way." It is a comfort to know that our course, if we are children of God, is on lines which he has laid down. Life would be a sad pilgrimage if there were no divine superintendence. The very fact that the Lord plans for us, and that we accept his guidance, will cause him to delight in our ways.

The zeal of Catholics, always great seems to be greater than ever. They seem determined to take the world for the Pope. Many of the Catholic priests of Cleveland are about to give up parish work and devote their whole time to a movement similar to that of the Salvation Army,—embracing street work and hall meetings. It is to be inaugurated by a mass meeting to which all Protestants are to be invited.

"If ye love me keep my commandments." This is his commandment. That we should believe on the name of his Son Jesus Christ, and love one another, as he gave us commandment. And he that keepeth his commandments, dwelleth in him and he in him." 1 John iii. 23. "Beloved, let us love one another; for love is of God, and every one that loveth has been begotten of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love." 1 John iv. 7, 8.

THE religion of Jesus makes one superior to circumstances. The language of Paul, "I have learned in whatever state I am, therewith to be content goes to show that the touchstone of faith can transmute the basest metals of life into fine gold. The man who can truthfully say with the Apostle that he is contented with whatever state he is in, has made wonderful progress in the divine life. He is surely walking in the spirit. He appropriates the words of our Lord spoken from heaven, "I know.... thy poverty, but thou art rich." A poor man rich in faith has a far higher satisfaction than a rich one devoid of faith. The possessor of this world's wealth today may be poor tomorrow, but the Christian has durable riches.

WE recently met with a paraphrase of Phil. i. 22, 23 that reads as follows: "For if I live in the flesh, or continue alive, as I am, this is the fruit of my labor,—Christ shall be magnified as I have already said, (v. 20,) and what I shall choose in my toilsome and persecuted condition I do not well know, for I am in a strait betwixt the two; that is between living and dying, since I am not anxious for either, and yet one of them I must choose. I am not anxious for either of them, for I have a wish in my mind, if I could only have it granted, and it is this to be caught away alive by the coming of the Lord. This is better than being in these toils and sufferings; it is also better than to die, for in that case I shall not see Jesus till the resurrection morning."

THE news that the Kickapoo Indian country would be opened on the 23rd of May caused great excitement it is said, in Oklahoma. There were less than 600 quarter-sections after the Indian allotments had been reserved, but hundreds of people had been camping around the new country waiting for it to be opened to settlement, for two years. It was estimated that no less than 20,000 people contested for the less than 600 claims. Think of the privations that would have to be gone through in two years in order to get a few acres of land, they may not be able to enjoy for a year, and then of the utter indifference manifested when God offers everlasting life in his kingdom of glory and peace! Must they not be classed with those who have wandered so far out of the way of understanding that they will perish like beasts?

WE are not surprised that exceptions should be taken to our remarks about the use of tobacco, but we are sorry; although at the same time glad of the opportunity to give a note of warning. If anything could be said in its favor we have no doubt it would have been said. Fault-finding only shows that the truth has hurt somebody. This is a suspicious circumstance. In a weekly paper before us is an account of a boy brought to a doctor by his father, who said the boy seemed to have been born with his nerves all on the outside of his body. When a child he had the St. Vitus' dance,—and as he grew older he could not attend school because the least exertion exhausted him. After a careful examination the physician asked the father if he used tobacco? "Yes," said he, "I have used it all my life, and it has'nt hurt me a particle." He was told that his Son was suffering from its injurious effects. We believe the enormity of the tobacco evil is second only to that of alcohol. The alcohol habit produces far more social distress, no doubt, but the evils it entails upon posterity are little worse than those by tobacco. We have nothing to take back.

A PITTSBURGH, Kansas paper says, "Christ was a socialist," were words that rang out from G. A. R. Hall last Sunday evening, and were greeted with a storm of app'ause by a large and enthusiastic audience. They fell from the lips of the Rev. Dr. Morrison and were the peroration of a calm, but glowing presentation of "Christ the man." Said he, "If Christ should appear on our streets today and teach the doctrines he taught on the streets of Jerusalem, his pretended worshipers would seize him, and after due process of law in their courts, they would hang him by the neck till he was dead. I assert and dare maintain in the presence of a college of cardinals, or convocation of the ministers and teachers of any so-called Christian Church on earth, that not one of them—no not one—either believe or teach the doctrines that Christ taught. I challenge any such body to the contest. I will maintain,—I will prove that not a Christian Church on earth believes, teaches or practices the doctrines of Christ." This is a severe, but truthful indictement of so-called Christians; but it is a mistake to say that not a Christian Church on earth believes or practices the doctrines of Christ, because they are not Christian unless they so believe and teach. But this is a remarkable utterance for a Presbyterian.

ADVICES from Constantinople on the 5th inst. say that the news from Jidda, Arabia, the seaport of Mecca, and the scene of the recent murderous assault on the consular offices of Great Britain, France and Russia, is to the effect that a panic prevails there, it being feared that the Bedouins will attack the town. The latter are held responsible for the attack on the consuls which resulted in the death of the British Nice Consul. The situation is so serious that the Europeans are hastily seeking refuge on board the merchant vessels on the harbor. It is also stated that the arrival there of a British Mediterranean squadron of seventeen war vessels is anxiously expected even by the Turkish authorities, as the garrison is very weak. The Turkish government has refused to agree to the reforms in Armenia proposed by the powers, and the envoys of Great Britain, France and Russia are awaiting instructions from their governments. We, too, are anxiously awaiting the outcome of this interference, but feel pretty sure it will be in line with the crippling of that power that has been in progress for seventy or more years. It was rumored to-day (5th inst.) that some moves were contemplated by the Great Powers which will place Palestine under British control; if this be true it is safe to say that that is not all the carving to be done; each will want a slice.

Death's Doings.

After a long and painful illness death ended the sufferings of our aged Sister relief of the late Bro. Morgan of South Cleveland, May 24th. She took upon her the sin-covering name some 28 years ago, and now awaits the voice of him who is the resurrection and the life. The truth was heard by a large number.

A Scientific Gleaning!

Prof. C. V. Riley thinks he has discovered satisfactory evidence of telepathy among insects—that is to say a sixth sense by which they are able to communicate ideas from one to the other at great distances. The power, as illustrated in the case about to be mentioned, evidently depends, not upon sight, hearing or smelling. The fact that man is able to transmit sound by telegraph almost instantly around the globe, may suggest something of this subtle power, though it furnishes no explanation. Prof. Riley had two ailanthus trees in his front yard. They suggested the idea of obtaining some eggs of the ailanthus silk worm from Japan. He got a few and hatched them, rearing the larva and watching anxiously for the appearance of the first moths from the cocoons. He put one of the moths in a little wicker cage, and hung it up out of doors on one of the ailanthus trees. This was a female moth. On the same evening he took a male moth to a cemetery a mile and a half away, and let him loose, having previously tied a silk thread around the base of his abdomen in order to identify him. The purpose in this performance was to find out if the young male and the female moth would come together for the purpose of mating, they being in all probability the only insects of their species within a hundred miles, excepting the others in the Professor's possession. In this case sure enough, the male was found with the captive female the next morning. The latter had been able to attract the former from a distance of a mile and a half."

The Question Drawer.

Bro. J. J. Cady asks "whether or not a Christian ought to take part in politics, vote at elections, etc., adding that some say that it is all right to vote for township and county officers, because it is of a more individual benefit?"

1. In our judgment "The individual benefit" weighs nothing in a case of right or wrong. As opinions differ as to the benefit of this or that move upon a political checker board, we may safely dismiss that consideration as a rule of conduct.

2. Ought a Christian to take part in politics, vote at elections, etc.? If the writer uses the word ought in the sense of a moral obligation, our answer is no! To the best of our knowledge, no commandment of Jesus makes it a moral obligation to take part in politics.

3. We do not understand that this is a matter of faith, that is to say,—it is no part of the gospel, faith in and obedience to which constitutes one an adopted child of God, but one of the thousand details of Christian conduct or good works, in reference to which he stands or falls to his own master—the rewarder of every man according to his works; and we may add, the only qualified Judge.

4. We know of nothing that has been so prolific a source of division of the Body of Christ, as the making of articles of faith out of human opinions.

5. Lastly, these remarks are not by way of apology for dabbling with politics. We have resided in the United States 25 years without voting for any one.

THE questions relating to Jehovah and where he will be when all things have been made new," etc., is too large a subject for a "paragraph." We suspect that our correspondent has been puzzled by the queries of some one who cares little for the truth. But we offer the following suggestions with the hope that they may assist our correspondent to a better understanding of the truth in the promises, and draw out their love and admiration for the Ever Living and Self Existent One.

The world by wisdom knows not God. We cannot by searching find out the Almighty to perfection. We once read that Simonides, a heathen poet, being asked by Hiero, king of Syracuse, "What is God?" desired a day or two to think about it; and when the time expired he asked for two more, then four, and so on, before he would give an answer. The king was surprised, and asked him what he meant. The poet answered: "The more I think of God, he is still the more dark and unknown to me." We know God as he reveals himself to us. The poet could only know him by his works. We have both his works and his Word. Great is our God! The universe which he brought into existence is always in perfect running order. "The stars never clash: the seasons come and go in their order; every seed brings forth after its kind. If he were obliged to hurl an unruly planet back into its orbit occasionally—or if a year should pass without a summer, or if it had to stop every once in awhile for repairs, would perhaps be apt to remember that behind all the natural laws, the e is personal intelligence and infinite power and wisdom; the very perfection of his works seems to lessen the credit given him by his creatures, astonishing as this is. It will enlarge our conceptions of Jehovah to ponder over what the Psalmist said many years ago. "O Lord, thou hast searched me, and known me; thou knowest my down sitting and mine uprising, thou understandest my thoughts afar off....whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there if I make my bed in sheol, behold thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea,—even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me. If I say, surely the darkness shall cover me, even the night shall be light about me. Yea, the darkness hideth not from thee; but the night shineth as the day; the darkness and the light are both alike to thee."

When the Psalmist confesses that such knowledge is too wonderful for him, it is not surprising that those devoid of faith cannot be made to understand it, and reject it on that account. We do not think it profitable or right to discuss the deep things of God with skeptics, because, for lack of spiritual discernment it is impossible for them to understand them. On the other hand we cannot too frequently or thoroughly discuss them with believers,—their hearts being right, faith must be strengthened, and hope confirmed, whether the phase be that of nature or of direct revelation. They commune with God when they consider him in the light of nature as well as when they contemplate his Word, only the lessons are different.

The question as to Jehovah's place of Abode when all things are made new betrays too narrow a conception of the Eternal One, and the unnumbered worlds comprising the universe—seems to imply that just heaven and earth are his only choice, and if one be selected the other must be rejected; —that if he be in one place he is not in another. In the light of the Psalm quoted from, this is manifestly wrong. Jehovah fills universal space by his Spirit, which is the vehicle of his creative and sustaining power.

When properly understood Rev. xxi. 3, which says of the glorious future, "Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them and be their God, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away," in no way conflicts with the idea of his omnipresence expressed above. God is his own interpreter, and he will make it plain to him who compares Scripture with Scripture. It must be remembered that God has once tabernacled with men: he said (Lev. xxvi. 11) I will set my tabernacle among you" (Israelites) and he did: his glory appeared in it. (Deut. xxxi. 15). In the 76th Psalm we read: "In Judah is God known. His name is great in Israel. In Salem also is his tabernacle, and his dwelling place in Zion." But all the same, heaven was his throne and the earth his footstool. And if we consider that the fulness of the Godhead now dwells bodily in Jesus our glorious Lord,—that the whole earth is his royal domain, and that his glorious throne is to be established here, and that the saints of every age and clime will have divine nature of existence conferred upon them by this exalted personage, or that God will be all in all of them, and each one of them a manifestation of God in spirit—yea; if we consider all this we think we shall not be perplexed about the tabernacle of God being with men.

DEATH OF THE FIRST BORN, THE PASSOVER.

We shall see as we go on, in how many ways the lamb is a type or picture—prophecy of a coming Savior. It must have no blemish; no fault is to be found in Jesus. John xix. 4; xviii. 38; Luke xxiii. 41; Hebrews vii. 26; 1 Pet. ii. 22. It must be a male of the first year; the Redeemer is to be a son the Son of God. It must be slain to be the Pass-over or Protection, for the Israelites; Jesus is to be slain to be the Pass over or Protection for us. It must die on the fourteenth day of the month Abib (or Nisan); Jesus is to die on the fourteenth day of Abib, (or Nisan). Its blood the proof of its death, saves the first-born of the Israelites from the hand of the destroying angel; the blood of Jesus, the Antitypical Lamb, is to save the church of the first-born ones from the second death. Its blood on the lintel and door posts is to be a sign, or token to the Lord, that in that house there has been obedience to him: the blood of Christ—the proof of his death—put symbolically upon us in our baptism, is to be a token, or sign to God, that we too, have been obedient. "Without shedding of blood there is no remission." Not a bone of the lamb is to be broken; (Ex. xii. 46), they are not to break a bone in the body of Jesus, (John xix. 33, 36). The flesh of the lamb must be eaten;—the flesh of Jesus is to be eaten. The flesh of the lamb stands for the lamb itself; the whole of the lamb must be used just as God has said, if the children are to be saved from that dreadful plague, that is to sweep the first born child in all the houses of Egypt away. Poor, frightened people! How glad they must have been when God gave the lamb as the way of escape! It was just as if the children had been dead and buried, and were now to be brought up out of the grave through the death of the lamb. For there is no known disease that is so much dreaded as the plague. The flesh of Jesus stands for Jesus himself; it is a whole Savior that saves us. When he speaks of "giving his flesh for the life of the world," he means that he has given himself; has given his life. When it is said "we are saved by his blood," it means the same thing. The blood stands as the symbol of his death. But how can we eat the flesh of Jesus? We do not really eat it, do we? No, but if there is something in the life and death; burial and resurrection; ascension and coming again of Jesus, that if believed and carried out in our lives,—just as carefully and as faithfully as the Israelites carried out God's instructions about that other lamb, will lead to our escape from the plagues of the second death, by a resurrection to any incorruptible and endless life, isn't it very much like eating flesh to live? We eat flesh and other food to preserve our lives: we believe and do the words of Jesus, that we may have the life to come. Jesus only uses a figure of speech, meaning that faith in him gives life. So to eat the flesh of Jesus, is to believe and do the words of Jesus.

Is there anything more in the Passover that represents Jesus? Yes, the bread. And you will see more than ever, as we go on in the lesson, why faith in Jesus is like the food we eat. The bread that the Israelites are bidden to use is to be thin unleavened cakes. On the same day that they kill the lamb, they must put all leaven, or yeast out of their houses. For seven days it is to be death to eat light, or leavened bread. You will see why, when I tell you that heaven in the Bible represents sin, malice, wickedness and decay. That which is used as a symbol of sin, cannot be used to represent the sinless Savior; nor can that which has in it anything that looks like decay and death, be used to point us to One who is to win indestructible life for himself, and the power of bestowing the same precious gift upon others. Ask your young Jewish friends about the bread used at certain feasts; I think they will tell you that it, like the sailor's biscuit is almost indestructible. And just such a bread must be used in the Passover feast if it is to picture Jesus as "the bread of life." He is "the bread that comes down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof and not die." Just as bread preserves our present life, so the words of Jesus, if believed and obeyed, give us the life to come. He is alive for ever more, and we are to come, "raised after the power of an endless life." You can begin to see now, why the Passover was instituted, can you not? Isn't it beautiful? But that there is a great deal more to tell that is like Jesus and his church. Read the 45th verse of the 12th of Exodus, and you will see that people who do belong to this great Israelite family, cannot eat of the Passover feast, not unless they choose to be adopted into the nation, by the law of circumcision, (48 verse) that God has chosen this people to be his people.

Foreigners and aliens may not eat of "the bread of life," until having heard of the Saving Lamb, they believe and have his blood put upon them by another law of adoption, that of baptism. The Christian Church is now God's people or family. But does the putting of the leaven out of the houses, mean anything? Yes, it is a sign to the Israelites that all wrong things must be put away from their lives. And those who take the name of Christ must put away all the old leaven of sin, (1 Cor. v. 6, 7, 8),—anger and wrath and malice and evil-speaking. But were the Israelites forgiven? In some sense, they must have been. Why could they not go out of their houses? Because to go out would take them from under the protecting blood. To go out of God's family and back to the world is to go where the judgment of death will fall. To stay outside of the house, and away from the life-giving feast, is to rebel against God and be lost forever. Be in haste to eat of our Passover, dear children, come to the table all equipped for the journey; loins girded and staff in hand. You are going to Canaan, no matter about the bitter herbs of suffering; there is sweetest of manna at the end.

For the National Republican League Convention at Cleveland, Ohio, June 18th to 21st, the Nickel Plate Road offers one fare for the round trip.—June 21.

WANTED—SEVERAL HUNDRED New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1895.

Conference Notice.

The Iowa State Conference of the Church of God will be held in Marshalltown, beginning Thursday evening August 15th, and lasting over till Sunday evening the 25th, 1895. Our reasons for place—the most central, and most convenient in the State for railroad for all brethren. At the crossing of the Chicago & North-Western, Iowa Central, and the Great Western or Diagonal Road. The location in the city is on North Third Street opposite the Green House. The street car line starts out just east of the depot and for a nickel will carry you to the ground. Come prepared to tent and to live. Will have tents on the ground, but all who have tents bring them.

As to time, it will be of more leisure than in June, and therefore secure a better attendance. Also crops will then be sufficiently matured to tell of a certainty what can be done for Evangelistic Work. A regular programme will be given out for work. Begin now to arrange to attend the meetings. Leave your hobbies at home and come prepared for a meeting of straight-forward gospel and Bible work. We shall try to make this one of the most interesting meetings we have ever held in Iowa. We expect to be able to secure reduced rates upon all of the railroads in the state for this occasion.

Low Rates to Colorado.

On account of the meeting of the National Educational Association at Denver, Col., July 5th to 12th, 1895, the North-Western Line will sell excursion tickets to Denver, Pueblo, Colorado Springs and Manitou at the rate not to exceed one fare for the round trip (with $2.00 added for membership fee). The time limit of these tickets will be extremely liberal, and an excellent opportunity will be afforded for a summer sojourn in the "Rockies," or enjoyable side trips to the Black Hills, Yellowstone National Park or the Pacific Coast. For full information apply to agents of connecting lines, or address W. B. Kniskern, General Passenger and Ticket Agent Chicago & North-Western R'y, Chicago, Ill.; A. H. Waggener, T. P. A., 7 Jackson place, Indianapolis, Ind.

Notice.

Mrs. Ralph Vinton Lyons of Niagara Falls, N. Y. wishes to know if there are any children of the parents of the household of faith who are named after the late Ralph Vinton Lyons. Several years ago Bro. Lyon proposed giving a Bible to any child named for him. Many copies had been given away before his death, and Sister Lyon has many copies yet to send, she desires to carry out her husband's wishes in the matter, and if there are others she knows not of, please address her at 709 Ashland Ave, Niagara Falls, N Y.,—giving the whole name of child its age and name of parents. Please respond immediately.

Summer Tourist Rates.

The North-Western Line (Chicago & North-Western R'y) is now selling excursion tickets at reduced rates to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Ashland, Bayfield, Marquette, Deadwood, Dakota, Hot Springs, Denver, Colorado Springs, Manitou, Salt Lake City, and the lake and mountain resorts of the west and northwest. For rates and full information apply to agents of connecting lines. Illustrated pamphlets, giving full particulars, will be mailed free upon application to W. B. Kniskern, G. P. & T. A., Chicago & North-Western R'y, Chicago, Ill.

Enclose a stamp to any agent of the Nickel Plate Road for an elaborately illustrated Art Souvenir entitled "Summer Outings."—aug31.

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a New Year gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

Poetry.

Oh, Why Should the Spirit of Mortal be Proud?

Oh, why should the spirit of mort. l be proud?
Like a swift-fleeting meteor, a fast-flying cloud
A flash of the lightning, a break of the wave,
Then passes from life to his rest in the grave.

The leaves of the oak and the willow will fade,
Be scattered around and together be laid,
And the young and the old, and the low and the high,
Shall moulder to dust, and together shall lie.

The infant a mother attended and loved,
The mother that infant's affection who proved;
The husband that mother and infant who blest,
Each, all, are away to their dwellings of rest.

The maid on whose cheek, on whose brow, in whose eye,
Shone beauty and pleasure—her triumphs are by;
And the memory of those who loved her and praised,
Are alike from the minds of the living erased.

The hand of the king that the sceptre hath borne,
The brow of the priest that the mitre hath worn,
The eye of the sage and the heart of the brave
Are hidden and lost in the depths of the grave.

The peasant whose lot was to sow and to reap;
The herdsman, who climbed with his goats up the steep;
The beggar, who wandered in search of his bread,
Have faded away like the grass we have trod.

The saint who enjoyed the communion of heaven;
The sinner, who dared live to remain unforgiven;
The wise and the foolish, the guilty and just,
Have quietly mingled their bones in the dust.

So the multitude goes, like the flowers or the weed,
That withers away to let others succeed;
So the multitude comes, even those we behold,
To repeat every tale that has often been told.

For we are the same our fathers have been;
We see the same sights our fathers have seen;
We drink the same stream, and view the same sun,
And run the same course our fathers have run.

The thoughts we are thinking our fathers would think;
From the death we are dreading our fathers would shrink;
To the life we are clinging they also would cling;
But it speeds for us all like a bird on the wing.

They loved, but the story we cannot unfold.
They scorned, but the heart of the haughty is cold;
They grieved, but no wail from their slumbers will come;
They joyed, but the tongue of their gladness is dumb.

They died, aye, they died, and we things that are now,
Who walk on the turf that lies over their brow,
Who make in their dwellings a transient abode,
Meet the things that they met on their pilgrimage road.

Yea, hope and despondency, pleasure and pain,
We mingle together in sunshine and rain.
And the smiles and the tears, the song and the dirge
Still follow each other like surge upon surge.

'Tis the wink of an eye, 'tis the draught of a breath,
From the blossom of youth to the paleness of death,
From the gilded saloon to the bier and the shroud,—
Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?

PSALM. 31.

32 COM. VER.

1. David's (psalm) for understanding, (that is to give understanding). Blessed-happy are they whose transgressions have been remitted and whose sins have been covered:

2. Blessed-happy man is he, to whom the Lord shall not account sin, and in whose mouth there is no deceit:

3. Because I kept silent, my bones waxed old with my crying all the day long:

4. Because day and night thy hand weighed heavily upon me, I turned in wretchedness when the thistle (acanthus) pierced. Interlude.

5. I made known my sin, and I concealed not my transgression; I said I will disconrse unto the Lord against myself my transgression, and thou didst remit the irreverence of my heart. Interlude.

6. For this (this irreverence of heart) will every holy (not sanctified here) one offer votive-prayer unto thee in a well-ordered period; but in a flood of many waters will they not draw nigh unto thee:

7. Thou art my refuge from the tribulation that encompasseth me; my gladness that thou hast redeemed me from those who compassed me about. Interlude.

8. I will make thee to understand and I will conduct thee on this way that thou art going to go. I will fix mine eyes upon thee.

9. May ye not have become a horse and a mule as it were that have no understanding, whose jaws thou hast constrained with rein and muzzle that they draw not nigh unto thee:

10. Many are the scourges of the obdurate-sinner; but mercy will environ the one who hopeth in the Lord.

11. May ye have rejoiced in the Lord, and be glad ye justified ones, and boast all ye upright in heart.

PSALM 32 (33 COM. VER.)

1. David's psalm: Be glad in the Lord, ye justified ones: Praise becometh the upright.

2. Confess unto the Lord with Cithara, with ten-stringed psaltry exalt the strain unto him:

3. Sing unto him a new song, exalt the strain well with an alala.

4. Because the Word of the Lord is straightforward and all his works in faith:

5. He loveth an act of mercy and a judicial-way; the earth is full of the mercy of the Lord.

6 By the Word of the Lord the heavens were canopied and by the spirit of his mouth all their host (Dunonis is the word here for "host").

7. He it is who gathereth the waters of a sea like a wine-skin as it were, who placed abysses in treasure-houses.

8. May all the earth have feared him and from him may all who inhabit the inhabited have reeled away;

9. Because he spake and they came to pass, he commanded and they were generated.

10. The Lord dissipateth the counsels of nations, yea he setteth aside the reasonings of laities, he setteth aside the counsels of rulers:

11. But the counsel of the Lord abideth forever; reasonings of his heart are from generation to generation.

12. Blessed-happy the nation whose God is the Lord, a laity that he hath chosen for an inheritance for himself.

13. From out the heavens the Lord hath looked upon, hath seen all the sons of men:

14. From out his habitations made ready hath he looked upon all those who inhabit the earth,

15. He who hath moulded their hearts one by one, who understandeth all their doings.

16. A king will not save himself because of much ability and a giant will not have been saved in a plenitude of his strength;

17. A horse is unreliable for safety, and in the fulness of his ability will he not have been saved.

18. Lo the eyes of the Lord are upon those who fear him, who hope in his mercy,

19. To have delivered their souls from death and to foster them in famine.

20. Our soul waiteth for the Lord, because he is our responsive-helper and our protector:

21. Because in him will our heart have rejoiced, and in his sacred name have we hoped.

22. May thy mercy, O Lord have come to pass upon us even as we hoped in thee.

PSALM 33 (34 COM. VER.)

1. David's (psalm) when he changed his face in the presence of Abimelech, and he released him, and he went away.

2. I will commend the Lord in every period and his praise will be constantly in my mouth:

3. In the Lord will my soul have been praised; May the meek have heard and have rejoiced.

4. Magnify the Lord along with me, and we will exalt his name together.

5. I sought out the Lord and he heard me, and delivered me out of all my rejoicings.

6. May ye have come unto him and may ye have been enlightened, and your faces shall not have been put to shame.

7. This beggar cried out and the Lord heard him and saved him out of all his tribulations.

8. An angel of the Lord will camp about those who fear him, and will deliver them.

9. May ye have tasted and perceived that the Lord is useful-good: (Charetos) Blessed-happy is the man who hopeth in him.

10. May ye have feared the Lord all ye his saints, because there is no lack for those who fear him.

11. Rich have become beggars and hungry, but those who seek out the Lord will not have lacked any good thing. Interlude.

12. Come hither children: May ye have hearkened unto me and I will teach you fear of the Lord.

13. What man is there who desireth life, who loveth to see good days?

14. Cause thy tongue to cease from evil and thy lips from talking guile:

15. Mayest thou have inclined away from evil and done good. Mayest thou have sought peace and pursued after it.

16. The eyes of the Lord are upon justified ones and his ears unto their supplication:

17. But the Lord's face is against those who are doing evil, to utterly destroy from out the earth the remembrance of them:

18. The justified have cried and the Lord hath hearkened unto them and delivered them out of all their tribulations;

19. The Lord is nigh to the contrite in heart, and the submissive in the spirit will he save:

20. Many are the tribulations of the justified, and the Lord will deliver them out of them all:

21. He will watch to guard all their bones; not one of them will be broken:

22. A bad death is there for obdurate sinners, and those who hate the justified-one will err discordantly:

23. The Lord will redeem the souls of his bond-servants, and all those who hope in him shall not err discordantly.

PSALM 34 (35 COM. VER.)

1. David's (psalm). Mayest thou have judged those who are wronging me, O Lord; Mayest thou have warred against those who are warring me;

2. Mayest thou have taken spear and broad-shield against them and have arisen to my rescue.

3. Unsheath sword and shut me in away from those who are pursuing after me; Mayest thou have said unto my soul, I am thy salvation:

4. May those who seek my soul have been put to shame and confounded: May those who are reasoning evil things against me have been turned back and put to shame:

5. May they have become dust as it were in the face of the wind and an angel of the Lord wipe him out:

6. May their way have become darkness and destruction, and an angel of the Lord pursue them.

7. Because they have hid for me without a cause the corruption of their snare; without reason have they reproached my soul.

8. May a snare they do not comprehend have come upon them, and may the hunting which they have hid seize them; and in the snare will they fall;

9. But my soul will be glad in the Lord, it will have delighted in his instrumental-salvation (Christ namely).

10. All my bones will say, O Lord, who is like unto thee? Thou who dost deliver the beggar out of the hand of those who oppress him and the beggar and needy one from those who rob him.

11. Unjust witnesses have stood up and asked me about things which I do not comprehend;

12 They have requited me with bad in return for good, and with childlessness to my soul:

13. And while they have been annoying me I have put on sackcloth and have humbled my soul with fasting, and my votive-prayer will return into my bosom.

14. As a neighbor, as our brother in this wise have I been pleasing to them, as one sorrowing and down-cast in this wise have I humbled myself;

15. And they have rejoiced against and have been gathered together against me; scourges have been gathered together against me, and I was not aware of it; they have parted and not suffered compunction.

16. They have tried me, they have mocked at me; they have gnashed their teeth against me:

17. O Lord, when wilt thou look upon me? restore my soul from their evil-doing, my only-born from lions.

18. I will (or shall) confess unto thee, and in a vast church in the midst of an influential laity will (or shall) I praise thee.

19. May those who hate me without reason, those who hate me without cause and wink with their eyes, not have rejoiced over me.

20. Because they have talked peaceable things to me, and in wrath have reasoned deceitfully;

21. And they have made wide their mouth against me: They have said, Good enough, good enough; our eyes have seen it.

22. Thou hast seen, O Lord. Do not disregard in silence; O Lord, do not stand away from me;

23. Awake, O Lord, and heed my judicial-trial, O my God and my Lord, heed my right.

24. Judge me, O Lord, according to my righteousness, O Lord my God, and may they not have rejoiced over me.

25. May they not have said in their hearts, good enough, good enough for our soul; Nor may they have said, We will drink him down,

26. May they have been put to shame and confounded together who rejoice in my calamities; May they have put on shame and confusion who magnify speech against me,

27. May they have been made glad and rejoiced who desire my righteousness; and may they have said constantly, The Lord be magnified, they who desire the peace of thy bond-seavant;

28. And my tongue will practice thy righteousness, all the day long thy praise.

PSALM 35. (36 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; David's (psalm) the bond-servant of the Lord.

2. The render of law saith to himself he is not sinning: there is no fear of God before his eyes:

3. Because he hath practiced deception in his sight in finding out and hating his transgression:

4. The spoken-words of his mouth are transgression and deceit, he hath not taken counsel to understand how to be good:

5. He hath reasoned transgression on his couch; he hath stood beside every way that is not good, and he hath not opposed the evil.

6. O Lord, thy mercy is in the heavens and thy truth unto the clouds;

7. Thy righteousness as God's mountains, thy judicial-renderings a vast abyss as it were.

8. Men and domestic animals wilt thou save, O Lord, because thou hast multiplied thy mercy, O God: and the sons of men hope in the shelter of thy wings:

9. They will have been intoxicated with the fatness of thy house, and with the spring-torrent of thy delight wilt thou water them:

10. Because with thee is there a fountain of life, in thy light shall we see light.

11. Extend thy mercy to those who know thee and thy righteousness to the upright in heart;

12. May the foot of haughty pride not have come unto thee, and the hand of obdurate-sinners not have moved me.

13. There have all those who work the transgression fallen; They have been thrust away, and they shall not be able to stand.

COMMENT.

The 31st psalm has the heading "For understanding" and the student of the Bible will recall how Paul and others seeking true understanding have availed themselves of the help afforded by this psalm in reasoning out the rationale of salvation. Numerically it is significant of a third conjunction realized in one person—the Messianic One namely. The first conjunction is the conjunction of the divine and human will; the second a conscious conjunction of life, the third the conjunction of the divine with the human thought in true wisdom as a result, or as here stated to give understanding. Observe the importance of confession as here emphasized, and how we are saved in hope not in realization yet.

The 32nd psalm as its number indicates, opens with an alala of rejoicing on the part of the justified ones or the saints in glory, at least in anticipation singing the "new song" that we hear about later in the Apocalypse of John. They are at least enlightened with the hope of the glory, and this psalm is an appropriate confession of this as well as of the glory of God as revealed and understood by his justified ones or saints. The psalm closes with an invocation of the Lord's mercy "upon us even as we have hoped."

The 33rd psalm is a confession of David unto the Lord for his deliverance when he fled from the face of Saoul to Abimelech for refuge—in great extremity—a recognition of the direct interpositional help of the Lord and especially instructive to the meek. The psalm is Messianic in the sense of David's experience being typical of the Christ's greater and profounder experience of trial and tribulation. The Messianic import begins to become clear in the seventh verse and grows more luminous from there on. From the 20th to the close of the psalm it becomes unmistakeable.

The 34th psalm is given us as a sample of righteous indignation properly expressed and David is speaking here in the spirit of the Christ and spirit of prophecy as a righteous judge of the obdurate and impenitent. The four of the thirty-four is numerically significant of squaring things to the line and the plummet of law in judgment. The scene and the experience recited in this psalm are strongly Messianic—the trials and tribulations of the Christ culminating in the mockery of a legal trial and the invocation and confession and triumphant hope that God will in due time assert right and righteousness are the picture and prophecy before the event. The 23d verse is the martyrs' appeal for divine justice to be meted out and the recognition of God as the Judge of all the earth.

The 35th psalm is a psalm of instruction in righteousness "unto the end"—that is until the perfected state of the saint has been reached. It tells us how to reason in regard to sin and righteousness and what to do. It tells us first what the evader of law does and how he reasons. It tells us how great a thing is God's mercy. Notice the 8th verse and what is said of the domestic animals, these poor helpers and friends of humanity. The humane society ought to adopt it as a motto and recognize the divine sanction on their blessed work. How is "salvation" used in this verse? Are domestic animals even to be saved and have another life? This is the strongest inspired teaching on this point that I know of in the Scriptures. The whole passage is manifestly resurrectional is it not? The number is a minor harmonic, a fifth, and appropriately closes with a prophecy and warning of retribution upon the obdurately impenitent. The "there" in the thirteenth verse refers to God's judgment. It is God's mercy that prolongs wickedness and rebellion, but he has appointed a day in which he will judge the earth "in the man of his right hand" and "there" refers to this time and place.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Letter Drawer.

Dear Restitution:

As our subscription is past due I will renew or pay up until fall and if we fail in raising a crop again this season will have to stop taking the paper as times are so hard.

We will say that we are still journeying on toward the kingdom which is under the whole heaven. I enjoy reading the letters very much. It seems like a social gathering to read them. We have our regular meetings here, but on account of sickness have not been able to attend any this winter. It reminds us that we are mortal and may so-on pass away, who can tell how soon. I am glad death is soon to be destroyed and life and immortality is to be given to God's faithful children. How blessed it will be to be gathered with all the faithful of every age and clime and know that we are safe in the kingdom of God never to be separated. What a change it will be to be free from care and sorrow, and to dwell in light and sunshine in the presence of our King. My hope now is stronger than ever before and the way grows brighter as I tread the path of life. I am looking for Christ to return to earth soon. My desire is that if I fail in everything else in this life that I may be sure that my name is in the Lamb's Book of Life, that I may be accounted worthy of a home in the kingdom of God when Jesus comes.

MRS. LIZZIE B. OLIVER.

Dear Restitution:

I am a stranger to most of the brothers and sisters of THE RESTITUTION, yet, I feel that I am not a stranger, for we are all one in Christ Jesus, if we love and obey him. I live in a small city where I can hear four or five church bells each Sunday morning and as I can hear no preaching of the one faith, I sometimes go to hear what is said in those churches, but it makes my heart ache when I hear men (pretending to teach the people) do violence to the Word of God to sustain a theory. I can take more comfort to take THE RESTITUTION and my Bible and sit down and read and study for myself. I love to read the letters from the dear ones. I am striving to be worthy of a crown when the Master comes. Let us strive to overcome the world with all its pleasure. He that overcometh shall inherit all things.

Your Brother in Christ,

A. B. GRIFFITH.

Dear Restitution:

It has been a long time since I wrote for your Letter Drawer, and will write a few lines this morning. I love to see it full of encoursging letters from those of the one faith. Dear ones, in this time of trouble are we working for the Master? Are we letting our light so shine before men that they may see our good works and glorify our Father which is in heaven? This is no time to be idle for Christ will soon come and will we be found ready? This is a question we should all ask ourselves. Says some, there is nothing I can do. My dear brother and sister, it may not seem that we are doing much, but we can overcome our own selfish desires and keep ourselves unspotted from the world and its so-called plensures, and this is a very important part. James says, If a man love the world the love of the Father is not in him and he says, know ye not that friendship of the world is enmity with God. So if we are a friend of the world we are an enemy to God. It is better not to even seem to be a friend to the world, for in so doing we seem to be an enemy to God. Paul says in the last days perilous times shall come, men shall be lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God. I think that time has come, and the coming of the Lord is near even at the door. Let us prove all things, hold fast that which is good, and above all let us keep ourselves unspotted from the world.

"Be not weary in well-doing.
Struggle on and gain the prize,
Though the night be dark and dreary,
Soon the morning sun will rise;
Soon this age of night and sorrow,
Full of pain and woe will cease;
In the bright and heavenly morrow,
All is love and joy and peace."

Your sister waiting the coming of our Lord and Savior.

EFFA C. JOHNS.

Dear Restitution:

I have been thinking for some time that I again would write for our excellent paper which encourages and helps its readers. I am striving to walk in the straight and narrow way that leads to eternal life, for the Blessed Master has said, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life." Dear brothers and sisters, that crown is worth working for, for it fadeth not away. May we be faithful that we may be with the Lord when he comes to set up his kingdom upon this earth, where the righteous shall dwell forever and ever. That will be a glorious and everlasting dwelling. "Fret not thyself because of evil-doers, neither be thou envious against the workers of iniquity, for they shall be cut down like the grass, and wither as the green herb. Trust in the Lord and do good so shalt thou dwell in the land and verily thou shalt be fed, for evil-doers shall be cut off, but those that wait upon the Lord shall inherit the earth. For yet a little while and the wicked shall not be, yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place and it shall not be, but the meek shall inherit the earth and delight themselves in the abundance of peace. For such as be blessed of him shall inherit the earth and they that be cursed of him shall be cut off. The righteous shall inherit the land and dwell therein forever," Psalm xxxvii. "Therefore know ye, that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." Dear brothers and sisters, what a dark and gloomy world this would be if we did not have this Word of the Almighty Savior, who died upon the cruel cross that we through him might obtain everlasting life. What a self-delight it is to read over and over the Word of God. All those who have taken upon themselves the Christian race, may it be granted that they may be faithful, and let their light so shine that those out of Christ may see their good works, and obey from the heart that form of doctrine which was set before them. Repent and be baptized in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, for the remission of their sins. May we all who are striving to live a Christian life hear these words from the lips of our Savior, "Well done thou good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." I ask an interest in all your prayers that I may be an overcomer and meet all the faithful in that soon coming kingdom of our Savior where sickness, pain and death shall cease.

Your Sister in Christ.

Fourth of July Excursions via Vandalia Line.

Tickets will be sold on July 3d and 4th, good to return until July 5th, 1895, inclusive, between all stations within two hundred miles of initial point, at one fare for the round trip. Tickets will also be sold to stations on connecting lines on same basis as above. For particulars, call on nearest Vandalia Line Ticket Agent, or address E. A. Ford, Gen'l Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo.

According to Mulhall leprosy is far more prevalent in Europe than most people suppose. He says that there are now 3,000 lepers in Portugal; 1,770 in Norway, 3,000 in Russia, and about 2,000 all told in other European countries. In India there are 131,000 and in Canton, China, not less than 10,000. He does not give figures for other countries and islands, but it is estimated that the leper population of the world is but little, if any, short of a million.

The Nickel Plate Road has published a map of Boston, Mass., showing the location of the Christian Endeavor Convention Hall and State Headquarters of the 14th International Convention July 10th to 15th, and presenting the merits of their through Drawing Room Sleeping Car Line between Chicago and Boston. Write for a copy to any agent of the Nickel Plate Road or B. F. Horner, General Passenger Agent.—jul 5.

WHO ARE LED BY THE SPIRIT?

This is the title of a new 4-page tract that contains just the arguments needed in mission-work in every community. Price 25 cts per hundred. Written and for sale by, Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va.

The Nickel Plate Road has compiled a list of country homes along the South Shore of Lake Erie, willing to accommodate summer boarders, and a copy will be mailed to any address by enclosing a stamp to any agent of the Nickel Plate Road or to B. F. Horner, Gen'l Passenger Agent.—Aug. 31

"In ourselves the sunshine dwells,
In ourselves the music swells,
Everywhere, the heart awake,
Finds what pleasures it can make,
Everywhere the light and shade
By the gazer's eye is made,
'As in heart we think to be,'
Saith the Wise Man, 'so are we.'

For the Conference of the Epworth League at Chattanooga, Tenn., June 27th to 30th, the Nickel Plate Road offers one fare excursion tickets.

...Hannah More, ...coined the phrase, "The ... of the Life." It embodies a splendid truth. There are thousands of lives no incident in one of which can be used to illustrate any particular cause, the sum total of each one of which is unanswerable argument for the right. If no special passage in your life be so conspicuous as to arrest any man's attention, let your character, as a whole make an impression for the truth. Let its weight, however little, press every one it touches away from the wrong and into the right. -Charles F. Deems.

Y. P. S. C. E. Excursion to Boston.

The Society of Christian Endeavor of Central and Northern Indiana, at a meeting in Fort Wayne, Ind., May 21st, selected the Nickel Plate Road as their special train to Boston in July, to attend the Annual Meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. for 1895. This special train will be arranged to stop enroute for a few hours at Niagara Falls and also at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., enabling passengers to enjoy a visit to those famous resorts. No extra charge will be made for these privileges. Passengers at other points along the Nickel Plate Road may join this special train at any station by previous arrangement through the nearest ticket agent or by addressing M. C. Baker, District Passenger Agent, Ft. Wayne, Ind. The Nickel Plate Road offers the lowest rates to all points east or west. This line, with its immediate eastern connections, forms the shortest line to Boston for the meetings of the Y. P. S. C. E. in July, and also the Masonic Knights Templar in August.—June 30.

PRESENTS FOR FRIENDS.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Words;" one of 8-page tract; and one of "Seeking and Finding," all for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of truth. Send to Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va., not to this office.

Cheap Excursions to the West.

On May 21st and June 11th, The North-Western Line (Chicago & North-Western Railway) will sell excursion tickets at very low rates to a large number of points in the west and northwest. For full information apply to ticket agents of connecting lines, or address A. H. Waggener, T. P. A., 7 Jackson place, Indianapolis, Ind.—m 11-15

Solid through trains to New York City were placed in service May 19th over the Nickel Plate and West Shore Railroads. This will enable both first and second class passengers to go through without change of cars. A colored porter will be placed in charge of first and second class day coaches to attend to the wants of our patrons, and to insure scrupulously clean cars enroute. This is in addition to the porters that always accompany the through sleeping cars. Rates continue the lowest. -June 30.

Special Announcement.

We have secured a limited number of copies of "Letter to a Friend." This is our old and popular favorite, a 32 page tract, telling of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the One Hope, the One Faith, and One Baptism. Written by Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. Price 10 cents, 12 for $1.00 post paid. Send soon, for they will not last long.

Eastern Express No. 6 on the Nickel Plate Road which formally left Chicago at 2 P. M. has been changed on the new time-card effective May 19th to 1.30 P. M. The run has been shortened and the city of Cleveland is reached at the reasonable hour of 11.30 P. M. This secures for the patrons of this popular road a train better adapted for Cleveland business and will no doubt please many of its patrons. —22 15

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a New Year gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1896. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks those not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfillment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

Commencing Sunday May 19th, the day coaches on all through trains of the Nickel Plate Road will be attended by a colored porter whose services are placed at the disposal of the patrons of the line. The purpose of this equipment is to insure scrupulously clean cars enroute. m 22 15.

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects, by R. C. Bingley, is the title of a pamphlet of 68 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under different headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued calls for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonian Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

Summer Outings. At Seashore, Mountain and Lake Resorts.

The Ocean Resorts—Atlantic City, Cape May, Asbury Park, Ocean Grove, Long Branch, and famous resorts along the New Jersey Coast are reached by the Pennsylvania Lines. As a direct route to Newport, Narragansett Pier, Cape Cod, Martha's Vineyard, Nantucket and the popular watering places along the Atlantic from Chesapeake Bay to Maine, these lines offer special advantages.

In the Mountains—Cresson, Bedford Springs, Ebensburg, Altoona and other resorts in the Alleghenies are located on the Pennsylvania Lines, which also lead to the White Mountains, the Adirondacks, Watkins Glen, Mt. Desert Island, and places of summer sojourn in Eastern New York, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

The Lake Region—The Pennsylvania Lines bring Mackinac, Petoskey, Charlevoix, Mt. Clemens, St. Clair, Muskegon, Traverse City, Mackinaw City, Sault Ste. Marie, Gogebic, St. Ignace, Watersmeet, Au Sable, Iron mountain and all the romantic resorts of Northern Michigan within easy reach, as well as Ashland, Cedar Lake, Devil's Lake, Pelican Lake, Three Lakes, Waukesha and other resorts in the Northwest.

For information concerning rates, time of trains and the first-class service, please apply to nearest Pennsylvania Line Ticket Agent, or address F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburg, Pa.—June 26.

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

HIMSELF.

Once it was the blessing, now it is the Lord.
Once it was the feeling, now it is His Word.
Once his gifts I wanted, now the Giver own.
Once I sought for healing, now Himself alone.
Once 'twas painful trying, now 'tis perfect trust.
Once a half salvation, now the uttermost.
Once 'twas restless holding, now he holds me fast.
Once 'twas constant drifting, now my anchor's cast.
Once 'twas busy planning, now 'tis trustful prayer.
Once 'twas anxious caring, now he has the care.
Once 'twas what I wanted, now what Jesus says.
Once 'twas constant asking, now 'tis restful praise.
Once it was my working, His it hence shall be.
Once I tried to use him, now he uses me.
Once the power I wanted, now the Mighty One.
Once for self I labored, now for him alone.
Once I hoped in Jesus, now I hope his shine.
Once my lamps were dying, now he marks them shine.
Once for death I waited, now his coming hail.
And my hopes are anchored safe within the veil.

Are You Short of Oil?

Ten Virgins are represented as going forth to meet the coming Bridegroom. They all took their lamps with them, but only half of them took the precaution to carry well-filled oil cans along with them, that they may re-fill their lamps when the oil that was in the lamps when they started should be consumed. The Bridegroom evidently tarried longer than they expected, and becoming weary with long waiting, they became drowsy. All this time the oil in the lamps was being consumed. "But at midnight there is a cry: Behold the Bridegroom! Come ye forth to meet him." The virgins were all at once aroused to a keen sense of activity trimming their lamps, and those who had oil with them began to re-fill them. The foolish virgins observed that the flickering light of their lamps was about to expire just at the critical moment when they should go forth to meet the bridegroom. Noticing their need "said unto the wise, give us of your oil; for our lamps are going out." Having none to spare they were admonished to purchase for themselves. "And while they went away to buy, the Bridegroom came; and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage feast, and the door was shut. Afterward came also the other virgins, saying: "Lord, Lord, open to us. "But he answered and said: "Verily I say unto you, I know you not. Watch therefore, for ye know not the day nor the hour."

Hence we observe the necessity of always keeping on hand a liberal supply of oil in case of emergency. To leave it for a more convenient season may result in the door being "shut" before a supply can be obtained.

The use of a lamp is to radiate light. "The people which sat in darkness saw a great light. And to them which sat in the region and shadow of death to them did light spring up. From that time began Jesus to preach, and to say: Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." "And Jesus went about in all Galilee teaching in their synagogues and preaching the gospel of the kingdom."—Matt. iv. 16–23.

The nature of the light as indicated by the above quotation is that which is radiated from the gospel lamp: for those people "which sat in darkness saw a great light. And to them which sat in the region and shadow of death to them did light spring up." The gospel light is the only light which is strong enough to light up "the region and shadow of death." When Jesus began to preach "the gospel of the kingdom" in Galilee, "the people which sat in darkness saw a great light." It is no mean light which can illuminate the dark "shadow of death."

We read that Jesus "brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." The great object seen by people who sit "in darkness," by aid of the gospel lamp, is "life and immortality."

I tell you that people will never see "life and immortality" unless they behold it "through the gospel" light. Universalists may tell you that all will see it—those who sit "in the region and shadow of death," as well as those who dwell in the light. Beware! the light they profess to have is darkness; it may lead you to neglect to lay in a supply of gospel oil, and when it is too late you may stir yourself and come and knock for admittance when the door is "shut". Too late! Too late! The "entrance of thy Word giveth light."

How different the condition of those whose life is radient with light, which is radiated or brought to light "through the gospel?" "Ye are an elect race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people for God's own possession, that ye may show forth the excellencies of him who called you out of darkness into his marvelous light." "And we have the word of prophesy made more sure; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a lamp shining in a dark place."—2 Pet. i. 19.

Gospel light is made more searching and powerful when aided by good works. "Ye are the light of the world, a city set on a hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a lamp and put it under the bushel, but on the stand, and it shineth unto all that are in the house. Even so let your light shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your father which is in heaven."

We might compare "good works" to keeping the gospel lamp in good order—cleaned, trimmed and filled. This gives brilliancy to the light, which otherwise would be charred and gummed up and finally go out.

All truly wise virgins are bound to be light-bearers. It is not to be hid under cover, but elevated where all can view it, and if accompanied by "good works" those who behold the light are sure to admire it. It is the duty of every single one to become lamp-bearers and let the light shine as best we can, either in private or in public. None are excused from this duty. It applies personally to you, my brothers and sisters.

It is with sorrow that I see that erroneous doctrine is putting some of the virgins to sleep. The tendency of Universalism is to lead those who trust in it to under-value the gospel light, and care little for the gospel oil, and who will be found without a supply when the Bridegroom comes, and hence you will not have "the great light" to show you the way through "the region and shadow of death."

None can become espoused virgins to Christ unless first obedient to the faith; and false teaching may lead others to neglect this duty, because they are taught that this is only incumbent upon Jews.

The coming Bridegroom for his bride is an event of daily expectancy; let us take no risks.

W. H. WILSON.

Talent is a call to work. Every gift, natural or spiritual, is for use, and will be lost if we do not exercise it. Hence the apostle's exhortation: "Stir up the gift that is in thee." If you would grow in grace, exercise the grace you have.

What Are You Laboring For?

"Labor not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of Man shall give unto you: for him hath God the Father sealed." John vi. 27.

This language was addressed to the people, the hungry multitude that sought for, and followed after Jesus wherever he went; and why? not because of his miracles, nor his wonderful teachings but because they were hungry and could be filled with the loaves and fishes, showing conclusively that they were only living to eat and drink, much as the horse or the hog. While this was their privilege, yet it was their folly to live so far beneath, and abuse the highly favored privileges. Instead of seeking for the wonderful words of truth and life that fell from the clean, sweet and sacred lips of Jesus, the divine Teacher, that related to the "world to come," their ambition was gratified when their present natural wants were supplied; eat and drink, and have a good time, heathen like, and pig like. Yet Jesus who was a personal manifestation of God's great love to fallen man ceased not to teach, warn, rebuke and instruct in the way leading to the better life in the world to come. And he says, I have meat to eat that ye know not of,—which is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work, and our wisdom is to pattern after him.

It was not the will of Jesus nor his heavenly Father, that poor fallen man, that was made in the image of his Maker, should thus wear himself out toiling for the food that butter up and sustains this present life, that is as a vapor that appears for a little while, and then vanishes away—perishes, but rather by far, that they live for and seek after that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of Man proffers to all that believe in and obey him. Not only does the Master admonish and warn the outside world that makes no profession, of the great danger there is in living simply for the things of this world, that are soon to pass away with the using and the user, but the danger is so great that the disciples—the Christians, are constantly exposed. Being weak, frail mortal creatures of earth, they too are prone to evil, and to fall in line with their surroundings like Israel of old. And inasmuch as no man can serve two masters, which is in fact "God and mammon," and which leads in different directions, so much so that when one is led by the Spirit of God to follow on in the line the Master has marked out in his teaching, and in his life examples, seeking not the honor or glory of self, but the good of others, and the glory of God, they have no time or disposition to seek after or hold on with an iron grasp to the deceptive mammon riches of this world, while on the other hand, a man or a woman that cultivates their natural avaricious and selfish disposition until it rises up like an old tyrant slave master, and claims all their time and talent, or nearly so, and then is not satisfied; has no time left fitting to serve God, or disposition to spend their time in that direction. Such persons have but little, if any faith in God, and to be very mild about it, such persons have but very little, if any love for God, if they do not actually hate him.

I believe it is safe to say, that our life and actions tells our love or hate to God. And more than that, we will all find in the coming day, that we will all be rewarded and honored just about as we have cultivated and trained ourselves in this our day. The Master knowing all these things, and more too, and the great danger of the devil and this world that did their best to allure and draw him away—drawing his disciples away from the line of duty marked out in the perfect pattern he has set for their invitation and salvation, warns them of the danger and folly of laying up treasures on earth, telling them time and again to take no thought, saying "what shall we eat or what shall we drink? or wherewithal shall we be clothed?" This is the way the heathen that know not God, live and do, while men and women who have heard, understood, believed and obeyed God's loving call in the gospel, should not live as they once did, but should make proof of their conversion by turning square about, and out of their former vanities, to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven." And our words and actions, which go to tell what our life is, and what we are living for, must speak out our faith and hope and unshaken confidence in the God and rock of our salvation.

But those who have a very weak faith, and a very slender hope, are ready to say if we don't work and plan and look after our bread and butter we will all starve to death. Well, suppose we do; is temporal death more to be dreaded than eternal death? Ah, that betrays your claim of confidence in God. I believe it is safe to say that the truth in this case, like most all truth, is found between extremes. And while it is perfectly right and honorable and no disgrace for Christians, yea, and for the ministers to labor and thus procure an honest living, and thus help themselves and others, yet it is absolutely wrong for them to worry and fret and be over-anxious about the things pertaining to this life, to the exclusion of their duties relating to the future life. Here is the danger line our Captain is warning us so much about. I tell you, my brethren, if we choose mammon for our master and go in a run all the day long and all the time to serve him, our souls, so to speak, will soon be thinner and leaner, if possible, than Pharaoh's seven lean and ill-favored kine; while on the other hand if we trust God more, and serve him better by laboring more and more for that meat that perishes not—the bread of life eternal and eat of it daily, and that with a relish, our soul or inner life will soon be like a watered garden, and we will hunger and thirst after righteousness and after the bread of eternal life, that Jesus gives in his Word sure to feed and live on into eternal life in the great eternal day. Amen.

T. E. ADAMS.

OBITUARY.

Died May 25, 1895, at Scholl's Ferry, Ore., Margaret, wife of W. L. Skeels. She had been a sufferer from that dreadful disease cancer for some years. No higher tribute can be paid to her than to say, that she was a Christian whose character and life agreed with her profession, as a consequence she was loved and esteemed by brethren and neighbors. She rests now from pain and distress, awaiting the coming of the Life Giver.

W. W. JAQUITH.

READ AT THE FUNERAL OF MARGARET SKEELS.

Maggie Skeels dictated the following to her daughter Gracie about three weeks before her death, and while in such a state of suffering that hope of her recovery was almost abandoned:

"Margaret Phipps was born Feb. 20, 1844, in Jefferson Co., Ohio. Moved from there to Delaware Co., Ohio, and in 1854 moved from Delaware Co. to Union Co., Ohio. In which County she lived until after her marriage to W. L. Skeels Feb. 22, 1866. In 1870, moved to Pratt Co., Ill. In the spring of 1873, moved to Champaign Co., Ill.; moved from that location to Albany, Linn Co., Ore., May 12, 1876, and from thence to Washington Co., Ore., in Oct., 1879."

To her statement we add the following facts: In girlhood she was religiously inclined, and united with the denomination sometimes called Newlites, but organizing under the name Christian. Soon after her marriage she embraced the faith as advocated by the Church of God, and was immersed while residing in Ill. more than 21 years ago by Bro. J. S. Hatch. She has been an earnest believer in conditional immortality, the subsistance of the meek, and the coming of the King into his blessed kingdom, ever since and has always been conscientiously practical in her Christian work.

Four years and six months ago cancer in the breast began to show itself in rapid growth. Attempt was made to remove it by caustics. The effort was unsuccessful and almost cost her life. June 28, 1891 physicians removed it with the knife with apparent success. It reappeared after about two and a half years. The doctors removed it with the knife again May 15, 1894; making a wound eleven inches long. In a very few months it reappeared in worse form and more rapid growth. Last February cancer began to form in the stomach; since that time she has suffered most intense pain and agony. She fell asleep in Christ May 25, 1895, aged 51 years, 2 months and 29 days. It is a peaceful sleep in which there is no pain. The resurrection morn will bring a life of no more suffering.

I have been accustomed to writing to THE RESTITUTION when I had news of additions to our number, but now the cruel enemy has taken one away, not only from our number but from me. Four years of dread and doubt, then prayer and hope, then dread and doubt, while we fought the cancer that my poor wife was subject to, until last Saturday (May 25th) the enemy came and completed his cruel work. If it were not that we believe that "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death," all hope would be crushed down in the narrow home in which she now rests. Now the enemy is monarch over all—all nature is finally subjected to his power and dominion; nothing can escape. But the time is near at hand when our Lord shall exercise the supreme power that he purchased on the cross and in the tomb, and "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." We may not comprehend why one so good, and pure, and conscientious during all her life, should suffer so much and have her life burned out by so terrible a disease, why our prayers could not have been answered.

Twenty-nine years we had walked side by side. We had shared each others troubles; had each encouraged the other in doing whatwe could to induce others to accept Christ, and to stay with him. But now our home is left desolate! She suffered so intensely that the pain brought exhaustion and stupor that ended in the last final sleep. What a contrast when she shall awaken in the morning of the resurrection with no more pain, no possibility of suffering, made equal to the angels, neither can she die any more.

How she looked forward to the semi-annual reunions that have been held by our brethren during the last several years. The next meeting that will come for her is in the bright morning of the new world, when there will be no breaking up of the company. Will not the wonderful change from her suffering here to what she will be and have then make that life more peaceful and happy than it otherwise could be? I think so. The contrast will give ability to appreciate. One that has not been sick cannot appreciate health. One that has not been mortal could not contrast the conditions when made immortal. The Father of all mercies knows what is best. Besides disease, if patiently endured, will help to burn out of our characters the dross, that cannot exist among the immortal. If we reach the spiritual life, we must be spiritually minded before we can be exalted to it. If we reach the incorruptible bodies we must first form incorruptible characters. Yesterday they gathered in a large company through the storm at the church, that through her agency has been built for our place of meeting. It was the crowning work of her life to secure sufficient donations through subscriptions to build our church home. They gathered there to hear Bro. Inquith talk of our hope, and what for many years had been her hope. She was the first of the dead to be carried there. She always came, had never missed a meeting, if she could avoid it, until her disease brought her so low that she could no longer go. When the brethren talked of their hope she told them of hers. But oh! what a change! Now silent, unconscious, dead! They carried her to the grave. They all respected her work, and appreciated her Christian character. Though they sympathized with us, none but those who have parted with a companion like her can understand how life is made desolate, and home devastated. They gathered about the tomb, and when with songs of the resurrection hope they had put her away, so we may never see her again unless we are faithful, a sister in Christ placed in pure white daisies, the word "Mother" on her resting place, and the children she had taught for many months in the Sunday school came one by one and laid a bunch of flowers there by the word. Then sisters and neighbors brought stars, and anchors, and crosses, and wreaths all made of beautiful flowers and laid them there, until there was no room for more. They love her Christian walk and work; but it is only one that has walked for years with a Christian wife that can tell, that can know how the things of this life are crushed and the desireful hope of a coming life enlarged.

W. L. SKEELS.

Died, Elder T. F. Whitesett, at his home in Calhoun County, Iowa, age 65 years, 8 months and 21 days. He was born in Indiana; moved from there to Wisconsin, then to Illinois, and from Illinois to Iowa. He was married to Miss Betsy Barkheart. To them was born eleven children. He leaves his wife, three sons and one daughter and many friends to mourn his loss. He embraced the truth over thirty years ago and has ever since lived a true Christian, looking and longing for the coming King. He died very sudden and without pain. The wife has lost a dear husband, the children a loving father and the community feels as though they had lost a true Christian and brother; but we sorrow not as those without hope, for we know if we are prepared we will meet our dear brother in the kingdom of God. Oh, what a blessed hope we find in the Word of God. A little while and we will meet again. Our brother has done a great deal for the cause of Christ, and was one of the overcomers of which we do well if we follow his example. I have heard him wish he could live till the Lord would come, but the enemy death has taken him from us. It being impossible to get any one of the faith to preach his funeral sermon, Job 14th chapter was read and Bro. Titis spoke words of comfort to the bereaved ones. We laid him away to await the appearing of Christ who is able to raise the sleeping ones.

"We shall sleep but not forever,
There will be a glorious dawn;
We will meet to part no never,
On that resurrection morn."

INEZ M. GARTON.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a belief in the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Selected.

To Interpret and Study the Scriptures.

1. Let the Bible define and explain its own terms, figures and symbols.

2. Give every passage a literal construction, unless its own connection and phraseology render such a course absurd by bringing it into collision with truths elsewhere established by positive language.

3. The proper connection of any given passage is not always that with which it stands immediately connected, but those bearing on the same subject found recorded anywhere in the Scriptures. Select all these texts from where they stand, put them together and you will have all the truth revealed on that subject.

4. All passages belonging to any particular subject must connote or more of the particular features of that subject, by which it may be identified as belonging to that subject.

5. The truth in relation to any doctrine must be established by those passages which speak of it in positive and unequivocal language, and those texts belonging to the same subject but which only admit of inferential testimony, no inference should be drawn from them at variance with the truths already established by positive texts.

6. No doctrine should be predicated upon mere inference, neither upon one isolated text of Scripture. Any true doctrine will be found interspersed through the whole Bible.

7. In any doctrine taught by types or shadows, the anti-type must always correspond with the type, and the shadow with the substance.

8. In studying the Scriptures, consider that the New Testament is a commentary on the Old.

9. Never be afraid of results to which you may be driven by your investigations, as this will inevitably bias your mind and disqualify you to arrive at ultimate truth.

10. Investigate everything you believe; if it is the truth, it cannot be injured thereby; if error, the sooner it is corrected the better.

11. Pursue this course with as much independence as if you were the only one concerned.

12. Rely on no authority less than divine in so momentous an undertaking.

Prove all things: hold fast that which is good.

"Generation, after generation," says a fine writer, "have felt as we now feel, and their lives were as active as our own. They passed away like a vapor, while nature wore the same aspect of beauty as when her Creator commanded her to be. The heavens shall be as bright over our graves as they now are around our paths. The world will have the same attractions for our offspring yet unborn that she had once for our childhood. Yet a little while and all this will have happened. The throbbing heart will be stilled, and we shall be at rest. Our funeral will wind its way, and we shall be left behind in silence and darkness for the worm. And it may be for a short time we shall be spoken of, but the things of life will creep in, and our names will soon be forgotten. Days will continue to move on, and laughter and songs will be heard in the room in which we died; and the eye that mourned for us will be dried, and glisten again with joy; and even our children will not think of us, and will forget to lisp our names."

The worldling is like the hinder wheel of a carriage, ever following after the front wheel of happiness, but never overtaking it.

EVERY day is a little life, and our whole life is but a day repeated. Those, therefore, who dare live a day are dangerously prodigal; and those who dare misspend it are desperate."

SMILES says, "Duty, in its purest form, is so constraining that one never thinks in performing it, of one's self at all. It is there. It has to be done without any thought of self-sacrifice."

THIS sound advice is among our recent pick-ups. "Be temperate in food, modest in apparel, careful in speech, civil in manners, prudent in conduct, strong in adversity, humble in prosperity, grateful for favors, cheerful under contempt, patient in affliction, discreet in all your actions."

IT is said of the spider, that in the morning, before she seeks her prey, she mends her broken web; and in doing this she always begins in the middle. And shall those who call themselves Christians, rise and pursue their calling without concern about the broken web of their lives and hearts?

TENNYSON said:

"Move thee with the moving heavens, as they Then of their wonted courses. Work with all
Thy might, and mightier through the mightier One.
Wax like a constant and unwearied star,
That wheeling night by night thro' heaven, is found
Not out of place at last in any one
Of all the starry clusters."

"Let not your hearts be troubled," said the blessed Jesus. "Ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you to myself, that where I am there ye may be also." Ah, that is when we get home. He is coming again and will receive us to himself. Blessed Jesus. We can afford to wait for him. At most our exile is but for a moment, compared to the unending age of glory. It is only a little while and then he that shall come will come, and will not tarry beyond the time appointed. If we have to sail over rough seas, and travail under lowering skies, and be buffeted by winds of adversity, we must let faith contemplate the opening heavens, the sparkling crowns, and the everlasting glory, and then home will not seem far away; only a few more weary stages and then we shall cross the threshhold of our Father's house, and home sickness will be forever over. And the best way to make the time seem short, is to work for the Lord while we wait for him.

Report of a Debate.

We learn by The Fraternal Visitor that a debate recently took place at Llanelly, England, between the curate of St. Paul's at that place, Rev. W. H. Jones and F. G. Jannaway, a Bible truth defender of London, England. The report says that Rev. Jones was so unusually wild in his assertions about Hebrew and Greek words, that Mr. Jannaway, while making no profession of classical learning, was sufficiently at home with Biblical Hebrew, and Greek and English, to smite the curate hip and thigh. The principle differences discussed were:—

1. Neshama is applied to human beings only.
2. Neshama is used in Gen. ix. 6.
3. In the New Testament Psuche is spirit, and pneuma is soul.
4. Christ said to the thief, "Thy Pneuma shall be with me in Paradise."
5. In Hebrew the breath of animals is Nephesh.
6. The Greek adverb Semeron always qualifies the succeeding verb.

Mr. Jannaway denied as follows:—

1. Neshama is applied to all breathing things.
2. Neshama is not used in Gen. ix. 6.
3. The facts are just the reverse.
4. Christ never mentioned Pneuma to the thief.
5. Ruach and Neshama are the Hebrew for the breath of animals.
6. In the Septuagint and Greek New Testament, the adverb Semeron only qualifies the succeeding verb 50 times, whereas it qualifies the preceding verb 150 times.

On difference No. 1. The Lord Bishop of London was written to, and the reply was: "Neshama certainly refers to all flesh," and Canon Curtis: "Neshama is not confined to human things."

On difference No. 2. The Bishop of Manchester said, "Neshama is not in Gen. ix. 6." Prof. Driver of Oxford said: "Neshama does not occur in Gen. ix. 6, or vs. 4 or 5 either. Like these being Nephesh."

On difference No. 3. Canon Scott Holland said: "Pneuma is certainly spirit; Psuche soul. Prebendary Webb-Peploe said: "I may safely affirm that the Affirmer is wrong and the Denier is right."

On difference No. 4. The Lord Bishop of London through his Chaplain said, "Christ did not use the word Pneuma at all in speaking to the penitent thief."

On difference No. 5. The Bishop of Manchester said: "The Denier is right in saying that Neshama is applied to every breathing thing." Prebendary Webb-Peploe said: "Perfectly sure that the Affirmer in your debate is wrong in his statement, and the Denier is right."

On difference No. 7, Prof. Driver, of Oxford said: Semeron may follow or precede the verb which it qualifies."

Between 2,000 and 3,000 people listened to the discussion and the interest in the neighborhood was such that the Llanelly County Guardian published all the learned answers to the positions taken by the curate who claimed to represent the learning of 2,000 years.

A Scientific Gleaning.

Waterman says that physical science has established the remarkable fact that there may be, and to all probability are phenomena which cannot be perceived by our senses. There are sounds which a trained ear can distinguish, which escapes an ordinary ear, there are musical variations which are detected by the practised ear which escape others. Sound vibrations of more than 38,000 pulsations a second are inaudible to ordinary persons, but are heard and registered by sensitive persons,—moreover, there is no doubt that there may be sound vibrations all around us of such extreme rapidity that we cannot hear them.

Pass from acoustics to optics. White light consists of colored rays which when refracted through a triangular bar of glass form a continuous spectrum passing by imperceptible shades from dark red through yellow, green and blue, to very dark violet, just the same colors as are seen in the rainbow. There are rays at each end of the spectrum which cannot be seen. At one end there are heat rays, and at the other end there are chemical rays which are unperceived by our senses, but whose existence is attested by delicate instruments. And physical science gives no reason to believe that we know the limit of the spectrum at the other end. The man, then, who says he will not believe anything but what he can see, or what comes within the observation of his senses, limits his belief very considerably, and ignorantly ignores a great deal that exists in the universe.

"The purpose which the root serves in the economy of vegetation is to feed the plant. Through the Spongioles of the roots the plant imbibes from the soil the needful sap by which it is sustained; and in this way the whole processes are carried on, by which crude soil is converted into the constituents of vegetable matter. For this purpose the root possesses structural peculiarities, adapting it to its special functions. For instance, the tuberous or bulbous root of a dry soil is provided with a store of nourishment for the supply of the plant that is to spring from it. Just as there is provision made for the growth of the germ in the starchy contents of the seed, until it has attained an independent existence, so there is provision made in the nutritive tissues of the bulb or tubes for the support of the plant which it produces. So long as there is nourishment in the root the plant can draw it out: and reader, there is an infinite fulness in the Root of Jesse. In him we possess all things. If we possess Christ, all things are ours;—the world, and life and death, things present and things to come all are yours, for ye are Christ's and Christ is God's."

"Do not be troubled because you have not great abilities or virtues; God made a million spears of grass where he made one tree. The earth is fringed and carpeted, not with forests but with mosses. Only have enough of little virtues and common fidelities and you need not mourn that you are not a hero."

The Question Drawer.

In answer to J. B., we say, in our judgment it is a great and serious mistake on both sides. For instance, take a lively, fashionable, worldly, but amiable young woman. Suppose one who claims to have been taken out of the world should woo and win her affections. We would regard him as neither just nor honorable, unless he is prepared to sacrifice his principles to her disposition, her ideas, her tastes, and her mode of gratifying them. If this be the proper way to look at the matter, that brother should count the cost of his sacrifice before he makes it. On the other hand, would it be honorable on her part to allow attentions from one whose tastes, objects and aims she knew to be opposed to hers, unless she was willing to conform to his rule of life? Without such willingness, from what quarter could she expect happiness? Or, does she rely upon her power over him to change the course of his life? Does she expect him to make all the concessions?

We want to show how essentially different the two parties would be situated. She would be her own. She could take her own risks. She could be expedient. She could consult her own interests. She would be amenable to no law but her own. But what about the Believer? Is he his own? Is he at liberty to consult his own interests, or tastes? Can he be a law to himself? No! these are just the things he could not do. His law is made for him, and he knows it. The sacrifice of his principles involves eternal things—something the woman runs no risk of. She has nothing to lose in that direction. She only risks the happiness of a few years, but she values it, because if she loses that she loses all, poor thing. Her all is her all, and it demands serious and honest consideration. He as surely loses his happiness now as she does, and may lose the life everlasting beside.

It may be objected that we presuppose all the influence to come from the disbeliever. True. That is the tendency. She has a score of assistants in undermining his practice, especially after he has taken one wrong step. If he had been taken out of the world has he not gone back to part of it? And does not that put him on the down grade make it easy to go back further? We believe it. We said the woman would have many assistants; she is in rapport with her surroundings; and he ought not to be, if he is living for the future. In turn his love, his gallantry, and his manhood are appealed to. And if the Spirit does not recognize this tendency why such solemn injunctions?

We admit possibilities on the other side. Presuming a natural affinity between man and wife he may win her, if she believes that God is, and that we have his revealed will. But hostility to the truth is often developed after marriage with an unbeliever, and the wonder is that it is not oftener so. But, allowing the possibility of a change, it cannot be miraculously done, and who is to do the sacrificing while the process is going on,—we mean for the sake of peace? Just think of the destiny of children born of such a union. How are they to be trained for God when parents disagree? We have no time to discuss the whole subject, but we believe it to be altogether wrong to marry except in the Lord.

Iowa Tent Work.

Our tent work is begun. Last night was the first meeting held in the tent since Bro. Russell and I closed at Eagle Grove last September. We are camped for work on a beautiful lawn, among the trees at Jesup, Buchanan County. Brothers and Sisters in Christ, shall we have your earnest prayers that good may be done, and living men and women be obedient to the gospel? Let all help in this work by letter, by prayer, by donation, as best you can.

The tent has done good service, and many thousands have listened to the glad tidings of the Christ and his coming kingdom under its shade. It was a good investment, and while this is the fifth season it has been in the field it is yet a good tent and may be useful for some time to come. Brothers and Sisters in Iowa or elsewhere, shall this work stop for lack of funds? It is for you to say. There is but very little money in our Tent Fund. Freight, R. R. fare, and living expenses of evangelist must be met or the work will stop. We do not want it to stop. We cannot afford to let it stop. Whatever else we may neglect, this work cannot be neglected. Let us keep it in the field until conference time, in August.

Calls come to us from Marathon, Eagle Grove, Alden, and other points where the tent has been and this is encouraging, for it shows the work at those places was appreciated. I am alone, but I hope to have help next week, and when the school closes for vacation our little Pauline will be with me to play the tent organ and help in the singing. Pray for us.

Conference Report.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Michigan convened as per announcement. Every officer save one was present. Elder D. M. Hudler of Iowa came Thursday evening. A good interest was manifested from the first although the weather was very sultry and oppressive still it did not prevent the dear ones from coming, and each came not only to get good, but to give of their abundance spiritually. A good representation from all parts of the state was present. Bro. Hudler gave interesting and very instructive sermons, occupying the pulpit at each preaching service until Bro. L. C. Chase arrived Saturday morning. All felt rejoiced at seeing his familiar, pleasant face, shaking his hand once more, but better than all to hear his same earnest words of gospel truths was indeed inspiring. A paper on "Personal Consecration" was read by request by Sister Barnum, which was full of good things, (It will appear in another column.) and was greatly enjoyed. At the business meeting Saturday morning good work was done, but there was not the time needed to finish all necessary business. At the election of officers Bro. Hammond urgently requested not to be placed at the conference head the coming year, and as he had been a very faithful officer and needed the rest another was selected and after much deliberation was finally chosen. The following was the result of election, President F. L. Austin, Vice President Wm. Moses, Secretary Emma Jackman, Treasurer A. K. Richardson, Evangelists B. W. and M. A. Woodward. Other steps were taken which if followed up will be the means of strengthening the conference as an organization. May the dear Lord prosper every effort made for the advancement of his cause. Friday evening Bro. Hudler spoke to a well filled house, striving to impress all with the necessity of improving the time "until he come" for the time is near at hand to favor Zion. Saturday morning Bro. Chase spoke with his usual earnestness. Bro. Hudler spoke Saturday evening. Sunday morning Bro. Chase gave a short sermon at 9.30, and at 11 B. W. Woodward preached a funeral sermon for a near neighbor who died Friday morning while the meeting was in progress. Life and death walk hand in hand. Sunday 3 P. M. Bro. Hudler again addressed us. After his and Bro. Chase's earnest appeals three arose for baptism. Monday morning Elder Woodward attended to the ordinance, thus closed another yearly conference meeting, which had been a time of refreshing to many. Some were with us who had never before been, we rejoiced to see them. May God keep us all faithful until he comes. Your brother in Christ.

F. L. AUSTIN, Ex. Sec'y.

LETTER TO MICHIGAN CONFERENCE.

Dear Bro. and Sister Woodward—and to all the loved ones of the precious faith who assemble at your State Conference I desire to send Christian greeting:

Although distance prevents me from being present to enjoy this rich season of refreshing with you, and the pleasure of listening to the words of encouragement as they fall from the lips of loved ones in Christ, still I will be with you in spirit. I hope your gathering may be a season of great rejoicing and that our heavenly Father's choicest blessings may rest upon you all.

Inasmuch as we are fellow-travelers to a better country, that is an heavenly one, we ought also to be fellow-workers together in the Master's vineyard, and though distance intervenes the sympathies of the isolated ones may be in unison and in unison is strength, and in this way the scattered ones may become one grand body. For we are all one in Christ Jesus and we should be closely bound and knit together in love when we realize that all the world is arrayed against us because of the doctrines which we hold sacred. But we have a sweet consolation as these words come floating in upon us like balmy zephyrs from angel lips, "Fear not little flock it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." If we trust fully in our dear heavenly Father we have the assurance that he will never leave us nor forsake us though we may be poor in spirit, ours is the kingdom of heaven or a heavenly kingdom. Surely it is better to suffer affliction with the children of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season, if we suffer with him we shall also reign with him. Oh the happy thought that we are the sons of God, do we realize it? Beloved, now are we the sons of God and it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him for we shall see him as he is. What joy can it be that we shall be like him, that crucified Lord, Savior, Brother and Friend. Oh yes, these poor decaying bodies will be transformed into the image of God's dear Son, and because he lives we shall live also. Is there any thing that can dispel the gloom settled down upon poor frail humanity and give hope and comfort while on our earthly pilgrimage like this. Truly it is a sovereign balm for every wound, a cordial for our tears. And then when we contemplate the glorious restitution spoken of by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began, and think it has not even entered the heart of man to know the blessings that are in store for all those who are heirs of salvation. There will be nothing to hurt or make afraid or destroy in all my holy mountain saith the Lord. Then the ears that have been denied the sound of the sweet words of truth, and the eyes that have been oblivious to God's glorious sunshine will be restored. Brake forth into singing, "Oh captive daughter of Zion for thy weeping is almost over, rejoice ye desolate places for your sadness will be turned into songs of everlasting joy. Then with rapture we shall clasp the forms of our loved and lost ones, we shall greet again with joy that fond mother who was laid low e'er we realized the blighting effects of the world's rude strife. That loving father whose voice was hushed by that cruel monster just when his kind counsels were most needed. Dear ones all will be restored to us. The good old worthies who all died in the faith, not having received the promise, but having seen them afar off will roam again amid Eden's bowers, and recline in the shade of the Paradise of God while a halo of glory shall deck each brow. Oh, what a gathering that will be when we meet in the morning in the dawn of a fairer day. Dear brothers and sisters in Christ, will we all be there? Strive to enter in at the straight gate. "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." Let us put on the whole armor of God and fight manfully the good fight of faith, and lay hold on eternal life, and then, dear friends,

We'll clasp glad hands on that evergreen shore,
Where sickness and death shall reign no more;
When parting pangs will all be past,
And life eternally shall last.

A glorious host shall deck each brow,
Secretly mourned—lonely now,
Dear sainted ones in death's embrace,
We then shall see them face to face.

And lips that once his praises spoke,
Shall move again by magic stroke
Of the Almighty's living wand,
And swell his praise through every land.

And shout again the glad refrain
Glory to the Lamb once slain.
Who died, revived and rose again,
That all might rise and with him reign.

Yours sister in the love of the truth.

ANGELENE LENT.

Evangelist's Report.

Last year in making out our report for work done, through having too much work on my mind I carelessly made our report look as though we had traveled nearly 8,000 miles in Michigan, and only received ——dollars (I have forgotten the amount now and have not the books at hand). I should have said miles traveled in Michigan and other states. I am glad to be able to say our brethren are working up to the interest of the cause of truth, and are responding nobly to its needs. I plead guilty of carelessness in this matter. We have through the last conference year traveled 3658 miles, having held meetings in Ohio, Indiana, New York and Michigan, preaching in all 187 sermons, baptized 41 persons, worked in Michigan 61 days, baptizing 19.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Report.

The Ladies' Aid Society is prospering finely, nearly $100 has been raised during the last year for Evangelist work, in no other way but saving our tenth, or whatever amount each felt could be laid aside for the Master. This is entirely separate from the regular Evangelist fund, but is used to further the gospel. This is a good work in many respects. It places responsibility upon our dear girls who are coming into the truth, and others who cannot do much are encouraged to do all they can. God prosper the work.

Fourteenth Christian International Endeavor Convention. Boston, Mass., July 10-14, 1895.

The Lake Erie and Western Railroad, "Natural Gas Route," in connection with Wabash and Canadian Pacific Railway, via Detroit and Montreal, has been selected as the official route for the State of Indiana. Delegates, members and friends: Special Christian Endeavor train leaves Indianapolis, Monday, July 8th, at 7.00 P. M., and reaches Boston, Wednesday, July 10th. This is without question the grandest scenic route obtainable. Make your arrangements to accompany the official train of sleepers and free reclining chairs cars. Only $19.00 round trip. For sleeping car reservation, or any other information desired, address Dr. F. C. Heath, Master of Transportation for Society, or C. F. Daly, Gen. Pass. Agent L. E. & W. R. R., Indianapolis, Ind.—July 10.

The Nickel Plate Road has compiled a list of country homes along the South Shore of Lake Erie, willing to accommodate summer boarders, and a copy will be mailed to any address by enclosing a stamp to any agent of the Nickel Plate Road or to B. F. Horner, Gen'l Passenger Agent.—Aug. 31

Enclose a stamp to any agent of the Nickel Plate Road for an elaborately illustrated Art Souvenir entitled "Summer Outings."—aug 31.

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a New Year gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

For the National Republican League Convention at Cleveland, Ohio, June 18th to 21st, the Nickel Plate Road offers one fare for the round trip.—June 21.

Conference Notice.

The Iowa State Conference of the Church of God will be held in Marshalltown, beginning Thursday evening August 15th, and lasting over till Sunday evening the 25th, 1895. Our reasons for place—the most central, and most convenient in the State for railroad for all brethren. At the crossing of the Chicago & North-Western, Iowa Central, and the Great Western or Diagonal Road. The location in the city is on North Third Street opposite the Green House. The street car line starts out just east of the depot and for a nickel will carry you to the ground. Come prepared to tent and to live. Will have tents on the ground, but all who have tents bring them.

As to time, it will be of more leisure than in June, and therefore secure a better attendance. Also crops will then be sufficiently matured to tell of a certainty what can be done for Evangelistic Work. A regular programme will be given out for work. Begin now to arrange to attend the meetings. Leave your hobbies at home and come prepared for a meeting of straight-forward gospel and Bible work. We shall try to make this one of the most interesting meetings we have ever held in Iowa. We expect to be able to secure reduced rates upon all of the railroads in the state for this occasion.

O. M. MYERS, Pres.
O. J. ALLARD, Sec.

Low Rates to Colorado.

On account of the meeting of the National Educational Association at Denver, Col., July 5th to 12th, 1895, the North-Western Line will sell excursion tickets to Denver, Pueblo, Colorado Springs and Manitou at the rate not to exceed one fare for the round trip (with $2.00 added for membership fee). The time limit of these tickets will be extremely liberal, and an excellent opportunity will be afforded for a summer sojourn in the "Rockies," or enjoyable side trips to the Black Hills, Yellowstone National Park or the Pacific Coast. For full information apply to agents of connecting lines, or address W. B. Kniskern, General Passenger and Ticket Agent Chicago & North-Western R'y, Chicago, Ill.; A. H. Waggener, T. P. A., 7 Jackson place, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Nickel Plate Road has published a map of Boston, Mass., showing the location of the Christian Endeavor Convention Hall and State Headquarters of the 14th International Convention July 10th to 15th, and presenting the merits of their through Drawing Room Sleeping Car Line between Chicago and Boston. Write for a copy to any agent of the Nickel Plate Road or B. F. Horner, General Passenger Agent.—jul 5.

Notice.

Mrs. Ralph Vinton Lyons of Niagara Falls, N. Y. wishes to know if there are any children of the parents of the household of faith who are named after the late Ralph Vinton Lyons. Several years ago Bro. Lyon proposed giving a Bible to any child named for him. Many copies had been given away before his death, and Sister Lyon has many copies yet to send, she desires to carry out her husband's wishes in the matter, and if there are others she knows not of, please address her at 709 Ashland Ave, Niagara Falls, N. Y.,—giving the whole name of child, its age and name of parents. Please respond immediately.

To All Concerned.

We desire to call your attention to the additional train service, recently inaugurated by the Vandalia Line, between Logansport and St. Joseph, Mich. Trains run daily affording excursionists a full day for a summer outing. The bathing at both Lake Maxenkuckee and St. Joseph are exceptionally fine, while the boating facilities are excellent. Sunday excursion tickets at half fare. Call upon Vandalia Line agent for particulars or address E. A. Ford, General Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo.—July 31.

For the Conference of the Epworth League at Chattanooga, Tenn., June 27th to 30th, the Nickel Plate Road offers one fare excursion tickets.

OUR CHILDREN.

IF.

If any little word of mine
May make a life the brighter,
If any little song of mine
May make a heart the lighter,
God help me speak the little word
And take my bit of singing,
And drop it in some lonely vale,
To set the echoes ringing.

If any little bird of mine
May make a life the sweeter,
If any little care of mine
May make a friend's the fleeter
If any lift of mine may ease
The burden of another,
God give me love and care and strength
To help my toiling brother.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 22.

DEATH OF THE FIRST BORN, THE PASSOVER.

It is midnight. The Passover Feast has been kept. Men, women and children stand or sit around, awed, hushed and almost breathless. The death-angel has passed over. They wait; the summons will soon come to depart. They are ready. They are no longer slaves. They are bought by the death of the first-born of Egypt. No more will they have to toil in the brickyards, or hunt for straw in the fields. No more will their dear babes be snatched from the mother's arms to find a grave in the river. Those who made them weep, are weeping now. A wild cry goes up from the Egyptians- "We be all dead men!" Help and comfort there is none. Messengers are dispatched to neighboring houses, but the dead are there. The first-born son of the proud Meneptah lies stark and cold, with wide-open, staring eyes, as if palsied and slain by very terror of the approaching death.

The first-born sons of the captives in the dungeons are sleeping their last long sleep. "There is not a house where there is not one dead." Women are screaming in anguish. All is confusion. The King is conquered at last.

It is not yet morning when word is brought to Moses to rise up and get forth out of the land of Egypt with the Children of Israel. Permission is granted to take the flocks and the herds.

And what now does Meneptah ask? "Bless me also." "The words have a pleading sound; it surely is Esau's voice again, re-echoed in that of a child of his race." "Bless me, even me, also, oh, my father," and Esau lifted up his voice and wept."—Gen. xxvii. 36.

How urgent the Egyptians are! They want this strange people who have ruined their land, to make haste and get away. They think that if Israel remains, they are all as good as dead men.

No wonder that the Lord bade the Hebrews eat the Passover, all equipped for the morrow's journey. They bind up their bread-dough in in the kneading-troughs, wrapping their clothing around it, and slinging it over their shoulders. They go out and borrow jewels of silver and of gold of their Egyptian neighbors. They borrow clothes and all needful things until their enemies are left quite poor. But these are so anxious to get the Hebrews off, that they are glad to lend whatever they possess.

Was it right for God's people to borrow so much when they never expected to pay it back? Of course it was. God told them to do it and he never tells us to do wrong things.

Had not the Israelites been working as slaves for more than seventy years? They had never been paid for building the great treasuries of the King. God means that they shall have their pay. Wicked people may think they can defraud the loved saints of the Lord, but a reckoning day always comes, and the money goes back to its rightful owners. Sinners lay up their gold for the just.

Would you not like to see some of the pictures that the Egyptians of those long ago times cut on the walls of their tombs? You would be startled if you could, for there are the workmen making brick, their bodies splashed with clay and the task-master standing by with his rod.

Some bricks have been brought to England from Egypt, "stamped with the cartoucher of the Pharaohs." There is very little straw in some of them.

On a papyrus of the XIX Dynasty, some poor fellow has written: "I have no one to help me in making bricks—no straw."

If you want to know how the Hebrews had to work, read about Mehemet Ali and his canal. The canal that led from the Nile to the city of Alexandria had been choked up. The sands of the desert were drifting into the suburbs of Alexandria and the land around it had become barren wastes. Pirates made the city their harbor. Mehemet Ali said that "corn must grow in the desert." He ordered all the men, women and children who lived in the little villages on the mouths of the Nile to come and do go to work—250,000 of them. He would give them no tools, and food for only a single month; and there was that awful canal to dig out, forty-eight miles long, eighteen feet deep and ninety feet wide! The little children carried away the dirt in their hands; the women packed it off in their garments; the men stabbed away at it with their sticks as if mad at the very ground that was causing their misery. In six weeks the work was done, but 25,000 of the workmen had starved or died of the plague by the time it was finished. Wasn't it horrible?

Both of the cities that the Hebrews built have been found. One is very near the Suez canal. The walls are twenty-two feet thick and are all made of brick. Some of the brick have straw in them, some stubble and some nothing. They are put together with mortar.

I was puzzled for awhile to account for the contradictory stories that travelers have told us about these cities, and which was which, I couldn't tell. On your Bible atlas' you will find Pithom, placed to the west of Rameses. But discoverers say it is Pithom they have found on the Suez canal. What do yo think about it? I think we must change the names of the places, or—does another man solve our problem for us when he calls the name of the city on the Suez canal Pithom-Rameses? Perhaps both cities were named for the King. Brugsch-Bey says they were temple cities. One of these temples was dedicated to the rising, the other to the setting sun. On a monument has been found an inscription that says "Rameses built Rameses for a magnificent residence city." In a book called "The Mosaic Era," written by J. M. Gibson, the following passage is ascribed to Brugsch-Bey: "The new Pharaoh, who knew not Joseph, who adorned the city of Rameses, the capital of the Taritic name, and the city of Pithom, the capital of what was afterward the Sethroitic name, with Temple-cities, is no other, can be no other than Rameses II." The capital with the Taritic name, must have been Zoan, the capital city of Remeses. It bore the name of Tanis. You will find Zoan in the northern part of Egypt. Have you the names of this Dynasty of Pharaoh's well stored away in your memory? Shall we write them down in this way?

Rameses I—or Thardan.
Seti I—or Walid.
Rameses II—or Rijan.
Meneptah I—or Darem.

Rameses II, was Rameses the Great. He is called Sesostris in your histories. He was "a mighty conqueror" and this is another reason why God dealt with him and with his son Meneptah as he did.

Rameses had "subdued the most of Asia and had even invaded Europe. He intended to make the conquest of the world. Of course the land of Canaan was under his control, and the power of his people must be broken that it may come into possession of the Hebrews. It will be enough for them to overcome the Canaanites without having an Egyptian army to contend with. Rameses reigned sixty-seven years. He became blind and infirm, and committed suicide in the spring of the year 2507 A. M., four hundred years after the birth of Isaac. His son, Meneptah only reigned eight years. Which of the cities, Rameses or Pithom did the Israelites start from when they went out of Egypt? If Zoan was one of them, as Brugsch-Bey seems to intimate, they must have set out from that city. If this was the case it will do away with all troublesome questions as to how Moses and Aaron went so often to the court of the Pharaohs. There would be but a little way to go. Zoan was built on one branch of the Nile. Who will tell us more about these cities? The land of Goshen was sometimes called the land of Rameses.

AUNTIE WINCE.

Our Reward.

"His Lord said unto him, "Well done thou good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things I will make thee ruler over many things, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Matt. xxv. 21.

"Be ye strong therefore and let not thy hands be weak for thy work shall be rewarded." 2 Chron. xv. 7.

If we are faithful we shall be rewarded and the reward of the Lord is eternal life. If we are faithful over a few things we shall be rewarded, if it be only to give the thirsty a drink. Read Matt. xxv. 34, 35, 36, 37, 39, 40. Oh! how hard should we strive to gain that reward—the greatest reward ever offered. Young friends, if you should have a chance to gain a great reward for living and doing good for a few days, would you not take the chance? I think you would. Well here is your chance. Our life is but a few days until we die. This is the first death. Let us try to gain that great reward that we may not have to pass through the second death, but have eternal life, eternal happiness and eternal joy.

Then let us be reading the gospel,
And reading of Christ's blessed Word;
And in the resurrection morning,
Accept the promised reward.

Your sister in Christ.

PSALM. 36.

37 COM. VER.

1. David's (psalm). Be not jealous of those who are doing wickedly nor envious of those who are doing that which is unlawful.

2. Because like grass as it were will they have withered away, and like green herbage will they quickly fall away.

3. Hope in the Lord and do that which is useful-good, and tabernacle on the earth, and thou wilt have been shepherded on the riches thereof.

4. Delight thyself in the Lord, and he will give thee the requests of thy heart.

5. Reveal thy way unto the Lord and hope in him and he will do (cause) it:

6. And he will bring out thy righteousness like the light as it were, and thy verdict (judgment in this case) like noon-day as it were.

7. Subject thyself to the Lord and entreat him: Be not jealous of the one who is being prospered in his way, of the man who is evading law.

8. Cease from wrath and forsake anger; be not jealous so as to do wickedly;

9. Because those who are doing wickedly will have been utterly destroyed; but those who wait patiently for the Lord will inherit the earth.

10. Even yet a little while and there shall not be an obdurate-sinner and thou wilt seek his place and shalt not find it.

11. But the meek will inherit an earth and will delight themselves in a fulness of peace,

12. The obdurate-sinner will watch covertly for the justified one and will gnash his teeth at him;

13. But the Lord will laugh at him, because he foreseeth that his day will come;

14. The obdurate-sinners have drawn a sword, they have stretched a bow to shoot at a beggar and needy one to slay those upright in heart,

15. May their sword have entered into their own heart, and their bows have been broken.

16. Better is the little that a justified one hath than the vast wealth of obdurate-sinners;

17. Because obdurate-sinners' arms will be broken, but the Lord will sustain the justified;

18. The Lord knoweth the ways of the blameless, and their inheritance will be forever (or unto the age).

19. They will not have been put to shame in a time of wickedness and in days of famine they will have been full-fed.

20. Because the obdurate-sinners will perish, and the enemies of the Lord leave off as smoke forsooth hath left off, at the same time that they (the justified) have been glorified and exalted.

21. The obdurate-sinner borroweth and will not repay; but the justified one pitieth and giveth.

22. Because those who commend (bless) him will inherit an earth; but those who curse him will have been utterly destroyed.

23. From the Lord are a man's footsteps restored to uprightness and he will will his way.

24. Whenever he falleth he will not have been utterly cast down because the Lord stayeth up his hand.

25. I became a young man yea indeed I have become old and I have not seen a justified one utterly forsaken nor his seed seeking bread.

26. All the day long doth he show mercy and lend and his seed will be for a blessing.

27. Incline away from evil and do good and pitch thy tent for an age of an age.

28. Because the Lord loveth a judicial way and he will not forsake his holy ones; They will have been guarded forever (or unto the age). Blameless ones will have been requited, and the seed of the irreverent will have been utterly destroyed.

29. But justified ones will inherit an earth and will pitch their tents upon it unto an age of an age.

30. The mouth of a justified one will practice wisdom and his tongue talk in a judicial-way;

31. The law of his God will be in his heart and in his steps he will not have been tripped up.

32. The obdurate-sinner contemplateth the justified one and seeketh to put him to death:

33. But the Lord will not leave him in his hands nor fail to justify him when he judgeth him.

34. Wait patiently for the Lord and watch to guard his way and he will exalt thee to inherit the earth, when thou shalt see obdurate-sinners utterly destroyed.

35. I have seen the irreverent exalting himself and lifting himself up like the cedars of the Libanos (Lebanon).

36. And I have passed by and lo, he was not: and I sought for him, and his place was not found.

37. Watch to guard guilelessness and perceive uprightness, because there is a residue for a man of peace.

38. But the evaders of law will have been destroyed; at the same time will the residues of the irreverent have been destroyed;

39. But salvation for the justified is then from the Lord, and their protector is he in a time of tribulation.

40. And the Lord will be their responsive helper and deliver them, and take them out from among obdurate-sinners and save them because they have hoped in him.

PSALM 37 (38 COM. VER.)

1, David's psalm for a reminder of a sabbath (or sabbatic-period).

2. O Lord, convict me not in thine anger and chasten me not in thy wrath:

3. Because thine arrows are fixed in me and thou hast thy hand firm upon me;

4. There is no healing in my flesh from the face of thy wrath, and there is no peace for my bones from the face of my sins,

5. Because my transgressions have become lifted up higher than my head; Like a heavy burden have they weighed upon me,

6. My stripes have become offensive and putrid by reason of my folly.

7. I have become wretched and bowed down utterly; all the day long have I gone my way with a sad countenance;

8. Because my soul hath been filled with scoffings, and there is no healing in my flesh.

9. I have been afflicted and humbled exceedingly; I have roared with the groaning of my heart;

10. And in thy sight is all my longing-desire and my sighing hath not been hid from thee.

11. My heart hath been disturbed, my strength hath left me, and the light of mine eyes is not with me.

12. My friends and my neighbors have drawn nigh and stood opposed to me, and my nearest have stood afar off;

13. And those who seek my soul have forced me out, and those who seek my calamities have talked inutilities (vanities) and have meditated deceptions all the day long;

14. And I as though deaf have not listened and as though dumb have not opened my mouth;

15. And I have become as though a man who doth not hear and as though one who hath no convincing proofs in his mouth.

16. Because in thee O Lord, have I hoped: Thou wilt hearken, O Lord my God:

17. Because I have said, May mine enemies never have rejoiced over me and when my feet have slipped may they not have magnified speech against me:

18. Because I am ready for scourges and my sorrow is constantly in thy sight;

19. Because I will declare my transgression and be extremely anxious about my sin.

20. But my enemies live and have obtained control over me, and those who hate me unjustly have become multiplied:

21. Those who return evil for good were slandering me when I was pursuing after righteousness:

22. Do not forsake me, O Lord, my God; Do not stand away from me;

23. Attend unto my cry for help, O Lord of my salvation (salvation in the abstract here).

PSALM 38. (39 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; For Idithoun, David's (psalm).

2. I said, I will watch to guard my ways so as not to sin with my tongue; I set a watch upon my mouth when the obdurate-sinner stood in my presence;

3. I became deaf and humiliated and silent from speaking good things and my woe was renewed;

4. My heart became hot within me and in my meditation fire will have flamed out; I talked with my tongue.

5. Make known unto me my end, O Lord, and what the number of my days is, that I may know what I lack;

6. Lo thou hast made my days [illegible] and my being (hypostasis word def. faith in Hebrews chap. 11) is as it were nothing in thy sight: The universe moreover is vanity (inutility) every man that liveth. Interlude.

7. Man goeth his way through it forsooth in an image; yea he disturbeth himself for naught: He treasureth up, and knoweth not for whom he will gather it together,

8. And now what is my patient-endurance? Is it not the Lord? And my being is in thine estimation. Interlude.

9. From all my transgressions deliver me; A fool's reproach hast thou give me to be.

10. I have become dumb and have opened not my mouth, because thou art he who created me.

11. Stand thy scourges away from me; From the strength of thy hand have I left off:

12. With reproofs for transgression hast thou chastened mankind, and like a spider's web hast thou laid waste his soul; Yea in vain doth any man trouble himself. Interlude.

13. Mayest thou have hearkened to my votive-prayer, O Lord, and marked my supplication; Do not disregard my tears in silence; because a sojourner am I on the earth and away from home even as were all my fathers.

14. Allow me to breathe afresh before I depart and am no more.

PSALM 39 (40 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; David's psalm.

2. I waited patiently for the Lord and he heeded me and hearkened unto my supplication;

3. And led me up out of a pit of wretchedness and miry clay and stood my feet upon a rock and restored my steps to uprightness;

4. And put a new song into my mouth, a hymn namely unto one God; Many will see and will have feared and will hope in the Lord.

5. Blessed-happy is the man whose hope is the name of the Lord, and who hath not looked unto inutilities and lies of madness.

6. Many wonders hast thou caused, O Lord my God; and who hath become like to thee in thy reasonings? They have been multiplied beyond number have I declared and said.

7. Sacrifice and offering hast thou not desired; but a body hast thou restored to order for me; a whole-burnt-offering for sin even thou didst not require:

8. Then said I, lo I come; in a chapter of a book hath it been written concerning me,

9. To do thy will have I counseled and to cause thy law to be in the midst of thy heart.

10. The good-tidings of righteousness have I announced in a great church; Lo, my lips thou wilt hinder: O Lord thou knowest:

"My righteousness I have not hid in my heart; I have said that it is thy truth and thy instrumental-salvation; I have not hid thy mercy and thy truth from a great synagogue; (congregation)

12. And do thou, O Lord, not make thy feelings of pity to be far from me; Thy mercy and thy truth have constantly intervened for me.

13. Because I am environed with evils of which there is no number: My transgressions have laid hold of me and I have not been able to look to see; They have been multiplied more than the hairs of my head, and my heart hath failed me.

14. Be satisfied, O Lord, to deliver me, O lord attend unto my cry for help.

15. May they have been put to shame and confounded together who are seeking my soul to destroy it; May they have been turned back and confounded who are purposing calamities for me;

16. May they have realized their shame straightway who are saying unto me, Good enough; good enough!

17. May they have been made glad and rejoiced in thee all those who are seeking thee, O Lord; and may they have said constantly, the Lord be magnified, those who love thy instrumental-salvation.

18. But I am a beggar and a needy one. The Lord will be thoughtful for me: My responsive-helper and protector art thou; O my God, do not tarry.

PSALM 40 (41 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end, David's psalm.

2. Blessed-happy is the man who understandeth in respect to a beggar and a needy one; In a wicked day will the Lord deliver him.

3. May the Lord have watched to guard him to live and made him blessed-happy on the earth; and may he not have delivered him up into the hands of his enemy;

4. May the Lord have become his responsive-helper on his bed of woe; all the day long hast thou turned his bed in his sickness.

5. I said, O Lord, have mercy on me; heal my soul, because I have been sinning against thee.

6. Mine enemies spake evil things of me. When will he die and his name perish?

7. And if one came in to see, his heart said without reason, he hath gathered together transgression to himself; he went his way outside and talked:

8. At the same time all mine enemies were whispering against me; evil things for me were they reasoning against me.

9. An evasive word did they set against me: The one who is lying sick will not arise again will he?

10. Yea the man of my peace, in whom I hoped, the one who was eating bread with me made a great thing of spurning me.

11. But thou, O Lord, do thou have mercy upon me and stand me up and I will repay them.

12. In this way do I know that thou hast cherished me, in that mine enemy shall not have rejoiced over me.

13. And thou intervene for me because of my guilelessness; and thou hast assured me in thy sight forever.

14. The Lord God of Israel be praised from the animate-age even unto the animate-age. May it have come to pass; May it have come to pass.

COMMENT.

The 36th psalm is a hymn full of Messianic instruction in righteousness and resonant with hope for the justified. Observe carefully in this and the 39th and 40th psalms what is said of "the beggar and the needy one" as it is applied primarily to the Christ, but is true in a measure of every individual Christian. He is a beggar for the spirit because he needs it and feels his need, is the philosophy of the teaching. Again observe the close resemblance even in phraseology between this psalm and the beatitudes of the Sermon on the Mount. Also the strict line of demarkation drawn between the justified one and the obdurate-sinner. Again note that the promised blessings are all upon the earth. The meek will inherit the earth"—"will tabernacle upon it"—"will be shepherded upon the wealth of it" etc.

Being a double-major numerically it is full of promise, hope and encouragement—in a word coming victory over sin and sinners here upon the earth where it ought to be.

The 37th psalm has for a heading "For a reminder of a sabbath." very significant too is it when we recall to mind that Christ was crucified on "Preparation Day" which was designed to be a reminder of a coming sabbath. Christ is interceding in this psalm not for himself; but for sinful humanity for whose sake he stands in sight of Calvary and the cross. Note the language and its similarity to the record of the scene before Pilate. "As one deaf and dumb," etc. Human hope has failed and the only help now must come from the Lord. It is also Christ's confession of the sins of the world (the cosmos). Numerically it is a consummation being a seventh.

The 38th psalm has for a part of its heading, "For Idithoun." Who was he? In the Levitical courses of David's appointment he was a head-door-keeper of the temple of the Lord or of the tabernacle that preceded the temple of which it was a type. This is the key to any true understanding of the psalm. It points out the deeper signification of the door-keeper's-office. The sanctified human body becomes the true temple of God's spirit; the heart its inner-sanctuary, and the issues of life which proceed out of man's heart become the burden of this divine soliliquy here given. The great question of life and death and the hereafter and the comparative inutility of temporal things. "The universe is vanity, moreover every man that liveth." life without a future is not worth living. The resurrection therefore necessarily suggested and the psalm being an eighth is therefore numerically correct. What else means this "I am a sojourner on the earth and away from home even as were all my fathers." There is no hope for natural immortality in the last clause of the following verse the 14th "before I depart and am no more."

The 39th psalm has the appropriate heading "Unto the end" in the full sense, because it opens with a declaration of salvation and the new song of glory put into the mouth of the redeemed. There are but nine digits and we would expect from the numbering of this psalm something about the fullness of redemption. We are not disappointed are we? There is a great deal quoted from this psalm in the gospels and epistles and its true Messianic import thus made clear to the earnest truth-seeker. Note this from the 6th verse on through the 10th. I interpret the closing verses of this psalm to be a Messianic prayer for the wicked not against them.

The 40th psalm with the oft repeated heading "Unto the end" and the 40 significent of a fourth conjunction points unmistakeably somehow to judgment and we find the burden of the psalm is the blessed-happiness of the one who hath understanding—understanding being here used in the Scriptural sense strictly and not as the world uses the term, the selfish unrelenting nature of sin and the divine intervention to thwart its deadly effects. "May it have come to pass" is translated generally in the Com. Ver. "Amen" especially in Paul's epistles. Notice the use of the word "hypostasis" in the 6th verse of the 38th psalm—here used in its strict literal sense of "being" or existence. For this is the same word used to define "faith" in the 1st verse of the 11th chapter of Hebrews, translated in the Com. Ver. "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for," etc. Is faith a substance in any true sense? Is it not a being or real state of mind and heart?—a real state as opposed to a hypothetical state produced by the contemplation and acceptance of something imaginary as all idolatry is?

CHAS. GARDNER.

"The envious man is in pain upon all occasions which ought to give him pleasure. The relish of his life is inverted; and the objects which administer the highest satisfaction to those who are exempt from this passion, give the quickest pangs to persons who are subject to it. All the perfections of their fellow-creatures are odious. Youth, beauty, valor, and wisdom, are provocations of their displeasure. What a wretched and upstate state is this! to be offended with excellence, and to hate a man for cause we approve him.

Y. P. S. C. E. Excursion to Boston.

The Society of Christian Endeavor of Central and Northern Indiana, at a meeting in Fort Wayne, Ind., May 21st, selected the Nickel Plate Road as their special train to Boston in July, to attend the Annual Meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. for 1895. This special train will be arranged to stop enroute for a few hours at Niagara Falls and also at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., enabling passengers to enjoy a visit to those famous resorts. No extra charge will be made for these privileges. Passengers at other points along the Nickel Plate Road may join this special train at any station by previous arrangement through the nearest ticket agent or by addressing M. C. Baker, District Passenger Agent, Ft. Wayne, Ind. The Nickel Plate Road offers the lowest rates to all points east or west. This line, with its immediate eastern connections, forms the shortest line to Boston for the meetings of the Y. P. S. C. E. in July, and also the Masonic Knights Templar in August.—June 30.

PRESENTS FOR FRIENDS.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Words;" one of 8-page tract; and one of "Seeking and Finding," all for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of truth. Send to Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va. not to this office.

Cheap Excursions to the West.

On May 21st and June 11th, The North-Western Line (Chicago & North-Western Railway) will sell excursion tickets at very low rates to a large number of points in the west and northwest. For full information apply to ticket agents of connecting lines, or address A. H. Waggener, T. P. A., 7 Jackson place, Indianapolis, Ind.—m 11-15

Solid through trians to New York City were placed in service May 19th over the Nickel Plate and West Shore Railroads. This will enable both first and second class passengers to go through without change of cars. A colored porter will be placed in charge of first and second class day coaches to attend to the wants of our patrons, and to insure scrupulously clean cars enroute. This is in addition to the porters that always accompany the through sleeping cars. Rates continue the lowest. —June 30.

Special Announcement.

We have secured a limited number of copies of "Letter to a Friend." This is our old and popular favorite, a 32 page tract, telling of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the One Hope, the One Faith, and One Baptism. Written by Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. Price 10 cents, 12 for $1.00 post paid. Send soon, for they will not last long.

Fourth of July Excursions via Vandalia Line.

Tickets will be sold on July 3d and 4th, good to return until July 5th, 1895, inclusive, between all stations within two hundred miles of initial point, at one fare for the round trip. Tickets will also be sold to stations on connecting lines on same basis as above. For particulars, call on nearest Vandalia Line Ticket Agent, or address E. A. Ford, Gen'l Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo.

Pay for THE RESTITUTION to be sent to some friend as a New Year gift. That friend will thus have a constant reminder of you throughout the year.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks those not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

Commencing Sunday May 19th, the day coaches on all through trains of the Nickel Plate Road will be attended by a colored porter whose services are placed at the disposal of the patrons of the line. The purpose of this equipment is to insure scrupulously clean cars enroute.—m 22 15.

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Bible and Subjects, by R. C. Bingley, is the title of a pamphlet of 48 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under different headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued calls for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonian Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

Summer Outings.—At Seashore, Mountain and Lake Resorts.

Niagara Falls Excursion, Thursday, August 8, 1895, via the Lake Erie and Western R.R.

On Thursday, August 8, 1895, the Lake Erie & Western R. R. will run their popular excursion to Cleveland, Chautauqua Lake, Buffalo and Niagara Falls at following very low rates, viz.:

Peoria	$7.50
Bloomington	7.00
LaFayette	6.00
Michigan City	6.00
Indianapolis	5.00
Tipton	5.00
Luna	4.00
Ft Wayne	5.00
Muncie	5.00
Connersville	5.00
Rushville	5.00
NewCastle	5.00
Cambridge City	5.00
Fremont	4.00
Sandusky	4.00

With corresponding reductions from intermediate points.

In addition to the above, the purchasers of these tickets will be given privilege of special excursion side trip tickets to Lewiston-on-the-Lake, including a steamboat ride on Lake Ontario, for 25 cents. To Toronto and return by Lake from Lewiston $1.00; to Thousand Island $5.00. Tickets for the above side trips can be had when purchasing Niagara Falls ticket, or at any time on train.

Besides the above privileges, with that of spending Sunday at the Falls, we will furnish all those who desire a side trip from Brockton Junction to Chautauqua Lake and return free of charge.

Tickets of admission to places of special interest at or near Niagara Falls, but outside the reservation, including toll over the great International Bridge to the Canadian side, elevators to the water's edge at Whirlpool Rapids on the Canadian side, will be offered on train at a reduction from prices charged after reaching the Falls.

Do not miss this opportunity to spend Sunday at Niagara Falls. The excursion train will arrive at Niagara Falls 7.00 A. M. Friday, August 9, 1895, and will leave the Falls returning Sunday morning, August 11, at 6 o'clock, stopping at Cleveland Sunday afternoon, giving an opportunity to visit the magnificent monument of the late President Garfield, and many other interesting points.

Tickets will be good, however, to return on regular trains leaving the Falls Saturday, August 10, for those not desiring to remain over. Tickets will also be good returning on all regular trains up to and including Tuesday, August 13, 1895. Secure your tickets, also chair and sleeping car accommodations, early. Those desiring can secure accommodation in these cars while at the Falls. For further information call on any agent Lake Erie & Western R. R., or address C. F. Daly, Gen. Pass. Agent, Indianapolis, Ind.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

Reduced Rates—Excursions over Pennsylvania Lines During Season of 1895.

Liberal concessions in fare over the Pennsylvania Lines have been granted for numerous events to take place this summer in various parts of the United States. In addition to local excursions, tickets at reduced rates will be sold over these lines as given in the following paragraphs. Excursion tickets may be obtained at ticket offices on the Pennsylvania System and will also be sold over this route by connecting railways. Some of the points to which tickets will be sold and dates of sale are as follows:

To Cleveland June 18th and 19th for the National Republican League Convention, good returning until June 22nd inclusive.

To Chattanooga, Tenn., June 25th, 26th and 27th inclusive, account Epworth League International Conference, good returning fifteen days from date of sale. By special arrangement return limit may be extended an additional fifteen days.

To Denver, Colorado Springs, Manitou or Pueblo, Col., July 3d and 4th, account National Educational Association Meeting. The return trip must be commenced July 12th, 13th, 14th or 15th, unless by special arrangement the return limit is extended to Sept. 1st.

To Baltimore, July 16th and 17th, good returning until August 5th, inclusive, account the Convention of Baptist Young People's Union of America.

To Boston, July 5th to 9th, inclusive, for the National Christian Endeavor Meeting. Return limit may be extended by special arrangement to August 3d.

To Boston, August 19th to 25th, inclusive, account Triennial Conclave Knights Templar. Return limit extended to Oct 3d by special arrangement.

To Louisville Ky., in September for National Encampment, G. A. R. One cent per mile. Reasonable return limit.

The reduced rates over the Pennsylvania Lines will not be restricted to members of the organizations mentioned, but may be taken advantage of by the public generally. Any Pennsylvania Line Ticket or Passenger Agent will furnish desired information concerning rates, time of trains, and other details, to all applicants, or the same may be obtained by addressing J. E. Hanes, Ticket Agent, Plymouth or F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Penna.

Through Buffet Sleeping Car to Michigan Points.

Commencing about the middle of June, and continuing until the latter part of September, the Vandalia Line will place in service elegant Buffet Sleeping Cars to be run through to Petoskey, Bay View, via Terre Haute, St Joseph, Grand Rapids, Traverse City and Charlevoix. This will be the only line of through cars from St. Louis to the delightful and cool resorts of Michigan. Only one change of cars to Mackinac Island. For detailed information address nearest Vandalia Line Agent, or E. A. Ford, General Passenger Agent, St. Louis.—June 30.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Poetry.

He Careth.

"Casting all your care upon him, for he careth for you." 1 Pet. v. 7.

What can it mean? Is it so—for me
That the nights are long and the days are dim?
Can he be touched by the griefs I bear,
Which sadden the heart and whiten the hair?

Around his throne are eternal calms,
And around mine are storms and perils,
And life is mantled by any grave,
How can he care for my little life?

And yet I want him to care for me
While I live in this world where the sorrows be;
When the lights die down from the path I take,
When strength is feeble and friends forsake.

When love and music that once did bless,
Have left me to silence and loneliness,
And my lifesong changes to sobbing prayer,
Then my heart cries out to a God who cares.

When shadows hang o'er me the whole day long,
And my spirit is bowed with shame and wrong;
When I am most weak, and the deeper shade
Of suspicion in makes my heart afraid,
And the busy world has for much to do
To stay in its course to help me though,
And I long for a Savior, can it be
That the God of the universe cares for me?

Oh, wonderful story of deathless love!
Each child is dear to that heart above.
He lights for me when I cannot fight,
He comforts me in the grief and night;
He lifts the burden for he is strong,
He still the sigh and makes the song;
The sorrow that bowed me down, he bears,
And loves and pardons because he cares.

Let all who are sad take heart again;
We are not alone in our hours of pain;
Our Father stoops from his throne above
To soothe and quiet us with his love.
He knows us not when the storm is high,
And we have safety, for he is nigh.
Can it be trouble which he doth share?
Oh, rest in peace, for the Lord does care!

Original.

A Difficulty Explained.

In Luke xxiii. 55, 56, we read: "And it was the day of the Preparation, and the sabbath drew on. And the women which had come with him out of Galilee, followed after, and beheld the tomb, and how his body was laid. And they returned and prepared spices and ointments. And on the sabbath day they rested according to the commandment."

This passage shows that the spices were prepared before the sabbath day. As the "sabbath drew on" "they returned and prepared spices and ointments" and after preparing these articles, "on the sabbath day they rested."

See Mark xvi. 1, and you will find that they did not buy the spices until "the sabbath was past." "And when the sabbath was past, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, bought spices that they might come and anoint him."

Is it possible that these two opposite statements could both be true? Yes, both are true exactly so. We must remember that there were two sabbaths that week, one was the yearly Paschal sabbath, and the other the weekly sabbath, with one day between the two sabbaths, and on that intervening day they prepared the spices, which was after the Paschal sabbath, but before the weekly sabbath, hence, there is really no difficulty at all.

See Lev. xxiii. 3, and we read: "the seventh day is a sabbath of rest an holy convocation, ye shall do no work therein." Verse 7, speaking of the first day of the feast of unleavened bread, says: "In the first day ye shall have an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work therein." This sabbath occurred every year on the fifteenth day of the first month. See verses 5 and 6: "In the fourteenth day of the first month at even is the Lord's passover, and on the fifteenth day of the same month is the feast of unleavened bread unto the Lord. Seven days ye must eat unleavened bread. In the first day ye shall have an holy convocation: ye shall do no servile work therein."

This is the law with regard to the weekly and yearly sabbaths. Now, read Mark xiv. 12, and we will be able to show that it was the yearly sabbath which followed the crucifixion. There the disciples came to the Lord, and asked where they should make ready the passover? The law quoted shows that the passover occurred on "the fourteenth day of the first month at even." It lasted from evening to evening. The fifteenth day of course must follow the fourteenth, and the law says, that should be "an holy convocation; ye shall do no servile work therein." Therefore, the yearly sabbath must follow the second evening of the passover. Christ and his disciples ate the passover the first evening. That same night he entered the garden he was arrested, and taken before the high priest. Peter denied him at about three o'clock in the morning (the time of cock-crowing). "And straightway in the morning the chief priests with the elders and scribes, and the whole council held a consultation, and bound Jesus, and carried him away, and delivered him up to Pilate." This was Wednesday morning. "And it was the third hour, (nine o'clock A. M.) and they crucified him." "And when the sixth hour (noon) was come, there was darkness over the whole land until the ninth hour (three o'clock P. M.) And at the ninth hour he cried with a loud voice," etc.

"The Jews therefore, because it was the Preparation (for the yearly Paschal sabbath, it being the fifteenth day) that the bodies should not remain on the cross upon the (yearly) sabbath (for the day of that sabbath was a high day) asked of Pilate that their legs might be broken." "And when even was now come (about six o'clock) because it was Preparation, that is, the day before the sabbath there came Joseph of Arimathea," and begged the body of Jesus and buried it. Here ends the passover, the fourteenth day of the first month; and was followed by the fifteenth day, the yearly holy convocation," which was Thursday. On this day the guard was placed at the tomb. Then followed Friday, the day of preparation for the weekly sabbath. On this day the spices were prepared after the "holy convocation," or yearly sabbath, and before the weekly sabbath.

"Now, late on the sabbath day as it began to dawn toward the first of the week, (about six o'clock Saturday) came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre. And behold there was a great earthquake; for an angel of the Lord descended from heaven," etc. This gives exactly three days and three nights for the entombment of our Lord.

Law Syllogisms.

"For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, (the Sabbath) he is guilty of all," James ii. 10.

"For I testify again to every man that is circumcised that he is a debtor to do the whole law," Gal. v. 3.

Therefore if you must and will keep the "whole law" and the Sabbath, you must first be circumcised then you are a debtor.

Again, if you are a debtor, under obligations to do and keep the whole law and the Sabbath, you become so by virtue of your circumcision.

Therefore, if you are circumcised and try to keep the whole law, ye are separated from Christ, fallen from grace, and Christ will profit you nothing. See Gal. v. 1-4.

What Hope Have You?

If you believe in the teaching of modern theologians, no doubt you accept the popular idea that if, whatever may be your creed you live a good moral and useful life, you will at death be immediately translated from earth, to realms of heavenly bliss, to the heaven of heavens where God dwells. This is your hope. You possess it, doubtless, in consequence of the teaching you have received that man is immortal—born into the world with an ever-living soul. Probably you have been taught to sing that you have "A never-dying soul to save,

And fit it for the sky."

Is this hope a true one? Is it based upon a sure foundation? Does it rest upon the solid, immovable rock of everlasting truth? Or is it altogether false, built upon the shifting sands of human opinion?

If you are a believer in the authority and authenticity of the Scriptures, which are "able to make wise unto salvation," you will not object to an examination of the foundation upon which your hope is built. You will look through the Old and New Testament writings to see if your hope is sure and steadfast, or false and fleeting. Depend upon it the search is not an unimportant one. It is a question of life or death. Then in the first place, let us enquire, Is man born with an immortal soul? Consider the creation of Adam, and answer if immortality as an inherent principle is found there. The record is Gen. ii. 7. "And the Lord God formed man from the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and man became a living soul."

Does the "breath of life" confer immortality? If it does to Adam, it must also to the lower animals. For it is testified concerning the destruction of cattle, beast, and creeping thing by the flood, "All in whose nostrils was the breath of life, of all that was in the dry land died," Gen. ix. 22. It will be perceived that there is no mention of immortality in the above record. True, Adam became a living soul! but this is far different from an ever-living soul. The same term is used to describe the "cattle, beast, and creeping thing of Gen. i. 24.

It is worthy of notice, and a fact to be thought over deeply and seriously by thinkers, that the word "soul" occurs hundreds of times in the Scriptures, yet, not in one single instance is it prefixed by the words "immortal" or "never-dying," neither by any word equivalent to their meaning.

What man really is by nature is abundantly revealed to us. "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." "I am formed out of the clay." "We are dust." "Abraham answered and said, Behold now I have taken upon me to speak unto the Lord, which am but dust and ashes" Gen. xviii. 27. "And now, lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life and eat and live forever" Gen. iii. 22. "Shall mortal man be more just than God" Job iv. 17. The fourteenth chapter of Job contains an accurate description of man by nature. David, in the 37th Psalm, describes the perishing condition of the human race, see verses 10, 20, 36. Then in Ecclesiastes iii. 19, 20 it is testified that man hath no pre-eminence above a beast. Refer to this passage and recognize how harmoniously it agrees with Peter's description of the wicked, 2 Peter ii. 12. "But these as natural brute beasts made to be taken and destroyed, speak evil of the things that they understand not, and shall utterly perish in their own corruption." Then turn to the following references, and perase most carefully, and examine critically:—Isa. ii. 22; Rom. v. 12; 1 Cor. xv. 22; Ps. lxxxix. 48; Job x. 18, 19; Ps. xxxix. 12, 13; Acts iii. 23; Ezek. xviii. 4, 2; Eccl. viii. 8; Matt. x. 28; Luke xii. 19, 20.

Nay, search the Scriptures through; read from the first verse of Genesis to the last of Revelation and you will fail to find any support for the popular doctrine. But you will find testimony—testimony heaped upon testimony—to the effect that unless man enters into covenanted relation-ship with God, he has no hope of immortality, no prospect of a future life.

Immortality at the present time is possessed only by one out of Adam's race—Christ Jesus, 1 Tim. vi. 10. And he who only is inherently immortal is the King Eternal, invisible, the only wise God, 1 Tim. i. 17. Hence eternal life to any of the sons of Adam is yet but a matter of promise. In proof of this important statement note John's declaration: "This is the promise he hath promised us, even Eternal Life" 1 John ii. 25. Then turn to the following testimonies: —2 Tim. i. 1; Titus i. 2; iii. 7; Gal. vi. 8; Mark x. 30; Rom. ii. 7.

From these Scriptures it is evident that there is to be a future life of endless duration, but only for those who obey the divine precepts. Hence the necessity of a resurrection from the dead. This constitutes the true hope of the believer. He looks for the return of Christ, the Life Giver, who declared he was the Resurrection, and that those whom the Father had given him he would raise up again at the last day. For when he comes his reward is with him to give to every man as his works shall be, Rev. xxii. 12. Study carefully the revealed hope of the saints of God of all ages, and notice the oneness—the unity of that hope—and admit the truth of the apostolic declaration, "There is one Hope."

Abraham was promised the land upon which he stood for an everlasting possession. Gen. xiii. 14-17. Isaac and Jacob were also promised the land of Palestine for ever. Gen. xxvi. 3; xxviii. 13. The hope of David was that his house and his kingdom should endure for ever (2 Sam. vii. 12, 16), and that he should be raised from the dead. Psa. lxviii. 20; Psa. xlix. 15. Solomon's greatest hope was the resurrection from the dead. Prov. x. 16, 25; Prov. xi. 4, 18, 20, 31. The expectation of Isaiah was that the kingdom of God should be established on the earth (Isa. xi.); and in the resurrection of the dead Isaiah, Isa. xxvi. 19, and Jeremiah, Jer. iii. 17, placed their trust and confidence. Ezekiel and Daniel also believed the same. Ezek. xxxiv. 23-31; Ezek. xxxvii.; Daniel xii. 1, 2, 13; Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Micah, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi all speak of the glorious state of this earth in the future. Hos. xiii. 14; Joel iii. 16; Amos ix. 11; Micah iv.; Zeph. iii. 20; Hag. ii. 6, 9; Zech. viii. 23; Mal. i. 11. Turning to the New Testament, we find that the hope there revealed harmonizes with the revelation in the Old Testament, though Christ made the things concerning the kingdom of God and the resurrection clearer; for he it was he who brought life and immortality to light by the gospel. True gospel teaching concerning immortality may be read in the words of Martha, who, when her brother Lazarus was dead, exclaimed: "I know that he shall rise again in the resurrection at the last day." John xi. 24. Martha, you perceive, did not not believe in the heathen doctrine of the immortality of the soul. Then we find Peter declaring that "David is not ascended into the heavens." Acts ii. 34. The great apostle to the Gentiles declared that his desire was that he might be raised from the dead, Acts xxiii. 6; and his hope lay in the second appearing of Jesus Christ and the setting up of the kingdom of God. 2 Tim. iv. 1, 8. The hope of James was for the coming of Christ. James v. 7. and lastly, we come to the epistles of John and Jude; and we there find that it is the coming of the Lord and not the going to him, that constitutes the hope of a true Christian. 1 John ii. 28; Jude xiv. 21.

Now the sum and substance of the foregoing is that now are in the Bible can we find one single passage stating that heaven above the skies shall be the eternal abode of the saints. On the contrary, we find hundreds of passages which prove beyond a doubt that in the future, sin, misery, and death shall be no more, Rev. xxi. 4, and this earth will become the habitation of immortal beings. Matt. v. 5; Rev. xx. 6.

Dear Reader, is this your hope? If not, it is our earnest wish that you may be led to see that he that believeth on the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son hath not life. 1 John v. 12. Why believe the imaginations of the fleshly mind, when Christ said that "Every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life, and I will raise him up at the last day."—H. W. H.

Times and Seasons.

In 1 Thess. v. 1, Paul tells the faithful in that city that there was no need of his writing to them of the times and seasons, for they themselves knew perfectly that the day of the Lord comes as a thief in the night: and that they were not in darkness that that day should overtake them as a thief. It was the times and the seasons that had given them this knowledge, so far, at least, as they were not reserved of the Father in his own power. The apostle also tells us in Col. ii. 16 that "holy days, new moons, and sabbaths, are shadows of things which are to come, and it is scarcely to be credited, a priori, that the times of each Jewish rite, feast, and ceremony, should have been handed down to us with such minuteness, unless they also, as well as the other Scriptures, were to be profitable to us. Besides, as the seasons refer to the former rain, seed time, latter rain, harvest, and vintage, so do the times refer to the three times a year that all the males were obliged to appear before the Lord at Jerusalem. The Passover, which was at the commencement of the first feast of first fruits; Pentecost, which was at the commencement of the second feast of first fruits, and the Feast of Tabernacles, after gathering in the harvest of corn and wine; were incontestably fulfilled in the sacrifice of Christ our passover; the gathering of the first fruits of the apostolic labors; and the ingathering at the end of their exclusive labors in Judea, after which "the stranger," or Gentiles, became a gleaning of the corners of the field. These feasts have only had a springing, or germinant, which I have styled an inchoate, accomplishment; but will have their fructiferous, or terminal, fulfilments after the appearing of the Lord in his kingdom. The Passover, Pentecost, and the Feast of Tabernacles, were commemorative and typical; commemorative of the destruction of Egypt's firstborn, and Israel's deliverance; of the giving of the law; and of their dwelling in tents in the wilderness. They were typical of things spiritual and sectional, and spiritual and national. Sectionally they were typical of things pertaining to the "Seeds of the Nazarene" (brethren of Christ) during the apostolic ministration of the Spirit, as already stated in brief. Nationally the Passover typifies the future vengeance on the Gentiles, and the deliverance of Israel and the saints who are passed over at the appearing of the Lord: the Pentecost, the wave manifestation of the firstfruits, and giving of the law from Zion; and the Feast of Tabernacles, the Lord's salvation, or rest for Israel and the nations, which come up to keep the festival there.—Herald of the Kingdom, 1855.

OUR CHILDREN.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 23.

MARCHING OUT.

Six hundred thousand men of the children of Israel marching on foot out of Egypt! And how many women and children? The Bible does not tell us. There were a great many. And, with the Israelites, went up a mixed multitude of other people,—some Egyptians no doubt, and some Edomites.

"And it came to pass at the end of the four hundred and thirty years, even on the self-same day, it came to pass that all the hosts of the Lord went out of the land of Egypt." Take particular note of these words, dear children, there is in them a wonderful lesson for you. God had measured off the 430 years for the sojourning of his people to the exact day, and though to the blind and heedless eyes of men everything seemed to be moving on its accustomed way, without any reference to this small and insignificant people, God was all the while quietly working among the nations to bring about the thing he had long before told. We can only say, "It was God who did it." No other being could have done such a thing. Let your hearts believe,—let them reverently lay hold on a God, who can work such things as this a God who keepeth truth forever. It is surely a blessed thing to be the child of such a God, to feel that you belong to his people, and that the things that are happening in the world are coming to pass that your deliverance may be brought about, and that at the end of the foretold years, on "the self-same day," you will be released from the bondage of one more cruel than Pharaoh, who is determined not to let you go. We do not know just when this will be, but we do know that "the time of the promise has drawn nigh," and that very soon the one whom God promised to raise up, "like unto Moses," will be here.

The Hebrews had all been gathered into the land of Goshen to eat the Passover, so there is no necessity for delay, and the morning finds them moving toward Succoth with their droves of sheep and cattle, and there at night they pitch their tents and rest. (turn to Numbers xxxiii. 3-11.) The next day they travel on to Etham in the edge of the wilderness and stop. Etham was a small place close to the northern point of the Red Sea, and just inside the great wall of Shur on Etham, that stretched from Port Said (Pelusium, then) to Suez on the Red Sea. There were three roads that led out of Egypt, all of them passing through this wall. The one farthest to the north went straight to Canaan: the middle one went out directly east of Succoth; and the last one led around the northern point of the Egyptian Sea. Why did they not take the nearest road, and save themselves from such a long tedious journey around that desolate Arabian land? Because "God led them not through the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near; for God said, lest peradventure the people repent when they see war, and they return to Egypt. But God led the people about through the way of the wilderness of the Red Sea. He led them over no road that other people had traveled. They might have gone out by the last gate, and got away from their foes, for it led into the desert sands where carriages could not be driven. But God knew the best way, and his way is always the safe way. Did they expect to take the nearest route when they started? I think not; they would have gone in a northerly direction, if this had been the case.

They looked for Moses to lead them through the "Ethan" or "Shur" gate, but in the morning he headed them toward the south, and pushed on past the last gate pitching his camp at evening before Migdol by the sea. They were a three days' journey in the wilderness now. Do you remember what they were to do when they got this far? Were they not to make a sacrifice to the Lord their God to show, not only that they were willing to obey, but also to show their thankfulness for what he had done and was doing for them? The evening that they reached Migdol and all the next day, must then have been Friday, for there was always a day of preparation before a Passover sabbath. We are not told whether they kept the feast or not, but they stayed at Migdol until the sabbath day was ended, little guessing what a sacrifice was to be made on their behalf.

Pharaoh, sullen and angry now over his great bereavement, has had spies out watching the course of the Hebrews. He exults when he finds where they are. He can send his army down a shorter road, and cut the Israelites off from getting back to the Red Sea gate, the one is before them, and no way to cross, and bitter lakes, and a wilderness of rock's are beyond Migdol. He thinks he can easily overcome them now; have revenge for all the sorrows they have caused him, and recover the treasures of his people. Exodus xiv. 3. Then his great works are yet unfinished and his people say, "Why have we done this, that we have let Israel go from serving us?" People who have slaves never like to give them up. The Egyptians pursue the Hebrews, and encamp by the sea not far away. Then they move on, and the Israelites see them coming. They are in great terror. Do you wonder? But they ought not to have been, after seeing what wonderful things God could do. They blame Moses, they cry to the Lord. Moses tells them "not to be afraid, but to stand still and see the salvation of the Lord,"—the army they have seen today they will see no more,—the Lord is going to fight for them, they are to hold their peace. They move forward at the command of the Lord Moses stretches out the rod over the sea and all that night he causes a strong east wind to blow, dividing the waters and freezing them as they stand. Exodus xv. 8. This was the evening and night of the first day of the week. The pillar of cloud and the guardian angel of Israel had moved at sunset, and now stands between the two encampments, so the hosts of Egypt can see nothing of what is going on. In the morning that wonderful march through the sea begins? It must have taken many hours, perhaps all that day and all the next night, and part of the next day. Three million people would consume a long time traveling over such a road. I wonder if the Egyptians knew where they were going when they followed the cloud-led hosts of God? We cannot tell. It must have been some time before they discovered that the Hebrews were marching away from them. It is in the morning watch of Monday that their chariot wheels come off, and they seek to flee, saying "The Lord is fighting for Israel against the Egyptians." Again the Lord commands Moses to stretch out the rod, and the waters return. The sacrifice is made, the Lord of Israel are buried in the sea.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION reveals the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisite to the forgiveness of sins, and holy life as essential for final salvation.

BONAR says creation is like a sick man racked with pain and crying out for relief. Blight, and decay, and death, and storms, and earthquakes, and lightnings, are all the groans of creation. This is the day of creation's bondage; the day of liberty is coming. Amen Amen.

A SIGNIFICANT despatch from Berlin says the Kiel program has been so arranged that the French and German steamers will have no possible chance of coming together, and the German crews will be kept on board their ships when the Russian and French crews are taking their shore outing.

THE latest news from Spain is to the effect that the government is about to purchase 50 vessels in England to patrol the waters of Cuba, and to mobilize 25,000 troops in order to tighten its grip upon Cuba. In the meantime one expedition after another is landing with men and supplies for the rebels. On the 10th a most important one landed, consisting of 100 men, 1000 repeating rifles, 2,000,000 rounds of ammunition and $250,000 in gold.

THE London Times in an article on the affairs of Europe says the desire of peace is genuine and universal; but it does not curb national ambitions or dynastic acquisitiveness. Hence the nation that has most to fear from war is the one least prepared for defense, and that nation is sure to be remorselessly squeezed by what is called diplomacy, but is really the static force of arms. The old saying, that the weakest must go to the wall is true, in any event.

ANOTHER human bubble has burst. Some of our readers may remember Bellamy's work published several years ago, entitled "Looking Backward," but which in reality was a looking forward some hundred years or more, when Socialism shall have made all things new. A colony has been established in Australia, on the Bellamy plan. It seems; but, like a thousand other human expedients for the betterment of mankind and bringing in the millennium, it has failed, and some of the disgusted people who have left it, report that it was "run by the devil." Once more the folly of expecting ungodly men to conduct a righteous government is demonstrated. We must wait for the Just One.

ON Sunday, June 16, Brother J. L. Wince, with a few other friends, met at the home of Brother and Sister John Corbaley, in Plymouth, to assist in the baptism of their son, Clarence, who has been in poor health for some time. His desire was to go the river, but as his condition did not admit of that he decided to wait no longer, therefore, it was attended to at the home. How glad and rejoiced we were to see his willing obedience, and we so much desire, if it is the Father's will, that he be restored to health that he may be able to do service for his loving Master. He is a grandson of our highly esteemed Brother and Sister Corbaley of Washington, and who, we feel assured, will be glad to hear that Clarence is living in trust, and in the hope of being exalted to the same glory of his Lord, and of living forever with him when he comes.

BARON HIRSCH in replying to the statement that Jews cannot become agriculturalists, but devote themselves wholly to trade which brings quick profits; says:—"Granted that this is so,—could it be otherwise, when they have for centuries been denied every occupation of a good citizen—especially the tilling of the soil? They were shut out of honorable employment, and so forced, if they did not wish to starve, always to seek some way to earn bread for themselves and their families. If in this way this power and fertility of resource have been evolved in them at the cost of other qualities, I believe that no one has a right to reproach them for it. I admit that they have not done much in the way of tilling the soil, but it is not their fault. They have not been allowed to till the land. In countries where they have been permitted to acquire landed property, they have proved themselves excellent farmers." In Hungary the Jews form a large part of the tillers of the soil, and this fact is acknowledged to such an extent that the high Catholic clergy in Hungary almost exclusively have Jews as tenants on mortmain properties; and almost all large land holders give preference to Jews on account of their industry, their rectitude, and their dexterity. These are facts that cannot be hid, and that have force, so that the anti-Semetic movement has about died out in Hungary. The Baron says his personal experience has led him to recognize that the Jews have very good ability in agriculture. He says: "I have seen this in the Jewish colonies of Turkey, and the reports from the expedition that I have sent to the Argentine Republic plainly show the same fact."

THE mental and moral darkness prevailing in the earth is most intense. We do not always realize it; but circumstances sometimes compel us to do so. By appointment we recently visited a family in order to outline the truth to them. Husband and wife were both members of a church and we thought it was well to ascertain at the beginning, if we could any truth in common, so that we could at least start even. We asked them kindly to tell us what they understood the gospel to be, which Paul, in Rom. i. 16, says is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. At first the lady of the house answered, "The truth of God," and her husband repeated, "The truth of God." But as to what the Truth of God to be believed in order to salvation is, they could not tell. Of course they had not believed it under those circumstances, and therefore were not in a saveable state. All the same, they were members in good standing of a church. Yes; the darkness is profound; and as we see we preach the morning it will be darker still, if possible. Only the coming of Jesus will dispel it. Like a sun he will arise in splendor, and the mist of error and deceit will shrink away as darkness before the dawn. He will destroy the face of the covering cast over all people, and the vail that is spread over all nations. Nor is this all: "he will swallow up death in victory,—and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces." Then, too in utter amazement at the wondrous changes, the people from the ends of the earth will say, "Surely our fathers inherited lies, vanity, and things wherein there is no profit." Jer. xvi. 19.

A Scientific Gleaning.

Prof. Max Mueller says there is no sense whatever in such an expression as "mere words." There are no such things as mere words, unless we look for them in those vast cemeteries which we call dictionaries. There we find mere words, dead words, unmeaning words. The German language, as if to warn us against taking such corpses for living words, calls them worter, and distinguishes them from worte. It calls a dictionary a worterbuch, not a wort-buch. Outside a dictionary, however, and outside a mad house, there are no such things as mere words; nor is there, on the other side, any such thing as mere thought. Things, it has been well said, are thinks, and thinks are words. Can we know anything except by means of a word? Is it possible to become conscious of any thought except by means of a name?.....let us try an experiment. It is impossible to imagine that people, say some primitive savages, had never seen nor heard of gold. How would they become acquainted with it? In digging they might receive the impression of something glittering, but even that impression would be of no consequence unless they could lay hold of it by some concept: that is, unless they can name it, unless they can call it glittering. We at our time of life find no difficulty in calling a thing glittering or bright, or shining. We have names and concepts ready-made for everything. But all these names and concepts had first to be made." [The professor then proceeds to show, which he does very conclusively, we think, that both the formation of concepts and the subsequent process of combining them as arguments must be considered as a process of language. He says:] "There is no such thing as a mere name. A name is nothing if it is not a nomen, that is, what is known, or that by which we know. Nomen was originally gnomen, from gnoscs to know, and was almost the same word as notio, a notion. A mere name is therefore self-contradictory. It means a name which is not a name; but something quite different, namely a sound. We do not call an empty egg-shell a mere egg, not a corpse a mere man; then why should we call a name without its true meaning a mere name? But if there is no such thing as a mere name, neither is there any such thing as a mere thought or mere concept. The two are one and inseparable. We may distinguish them as we distinguish the obverse from the reverse of a coin; but to try to separate them would be like trying to separate the convex from the concave surface of a lens. We think in names only.....How sensations arise, how aethereal vibrations produce in us consciousness of something we do not know, and never shall know. But having the sensations of light or darkness within us, what do we know of any cause of darkness, or any cause of light? Nothing. We simply suffer darkness, or enjoy light, but what makes us suffer and what makes us rejoice we do not know—till we can express it. And how do we express it? We may try what we like, we can express it only in language. We may feel dark, but till we have a name for dark and are able to distinguish darkness as what is not light, or light as what is not darkness, we are not in a state of knowledge. We are only in a state of passive stupor."

Signs of the Times.

Jesus spoke of a time when upon the earth there would be distress of nations with perplexity, and when men's hearts would fail them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth, for the powers of the heaven shall be shaken. That the powers of the heaven to be shaken are the powers of the political or governmental heavens of this world, no intelligent Bible student will question. God's power will never be shaken, but the powers which men have established are to have a terrible shaking, and it is the shadow of that coming event which so disturbs the minds of men. They see forces at work which will inevitably lead up to a catastrophe, and hearts fail as they contemplate it; and the heart-failing shows that they have no hope of averting it.

We were forcibly reminded of this prophecy of our Lord by the recent address of Prof. Taylor of Chicago, delivered in Cleveland; he warned the churches that they must take the middle of the road and preach the truth without fear or favor, or else the crash that Lincoln predicted, and many statesmen of today whom he could name, stand in mortal fear of, will surely come, for two great armies are forming in battle army, and it is only by prudent and just action that the catastrophe can be averted. This is absolute proof of two things, at least—the heart-failing time predicted has come; and secondly, that the divine remedy is ignored,—in their self-sufficiency they think they can avert it themselves if they will.

The Professor told his aristocratic audience about the overcrowding of cities, and that congestion in the body politic produces disease that may result in death. He said the densely crowded cities of New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and other cities are whited sepulchres of crime and disease. Poverty flourished, vice was rampant, virtue was mocked, and a miasma arose that threatened the whole country with blood-poisoning. Herded together in tenements too wretched for savages, men were driven to desperation, women were commercialized to retain life, an army of 60,000 scarlet women being found in New York alone, not from choice. They are confronted with sweater's dens, discouraged by the endless drudgery and poverty in prospect, lose hope, and plunge recklessly into what at first is a life of pleasure and a living hell at the last. He said the church could make no headway unless those who pretend to be Christians develop an active civic spirit and refuse to be led by ward bums, and cowed by selfish politicians.

Here again it is painfully evident that God is almost, if not quite ruled out. They seem oblivious of the truth that worse and worse is the progressive order of the last day. We cannot help sighing and crying over the heart-rending picture, and we are not surprised that men's hearts fail them.

Because when they prescribe the best remedy they can think of, they must, it has been related, know from the experience of the past, that all human expedients fail to change the hearts of men, and so long as hearts are unchanged their conduct will be unchanged, and the wages of sin will have to be taken. There will be no permanent change for the better till the last remaining shake of the heavens and the earth takes place. The speaker truthfully said this condition of things cannot last. No, thanks be to God, things are bad enough now to convince men of this.

Conference Report.

The Third Quarterly Conference of the Church of God in Nebraska, began upon the evening of June 7th, 1895, at Moorfield, Nebraska, as published in THE RESTITUTION, with Bro. Adams in the pulpit, when place he occupied during all the meetings, delivering five sermons in all. The congregation was good in number and very attentive. The number coming from a distance being more than could be expected, owing to high waters and bad roads. All seemed to be well repaid by the splendid discourses they were permitted to hear from Bro. Adams, and all seemed to say by word and look that it was one of the best meetings they had ever attended. On Sunday evening Bro. Adams offered an invitation to any who desired to yield obedience, to come forward and two very worthy ones came and on Monday about the noon hour we all gathered at the creek and one more came out on the side of right and they were all placed in the watery grave, and arose to walk in newness of life, and we are convinced that they are the kind who, when they have once put their hand to the plow will never look back. After baptism we broke the loaf, then the lunch baskets were gotten out and we had dinner, after which we bid them good bye. Thus ended one of the best meetings we were ever permitted to attend. In conclusion we want to say a word to all the good brethren. Let us all begin to make ourselves ready to attend the Annual Conference at St. Paul, and go with the full intention of making it a season of joy and thanksgiving, and learn the lessons of love and obey them.

The following is a synopsis of business done. The meeting was called to order by the President. In absence of the Secretary, C. P. Story was elected Sec'y., Pro Tem.

Evangelists Report.—Money received, $125.49. Less expenses, $125.00. No. of discourses, 54. No. baptized, 4.

Assistant Evangelist,—No. days labor, 10. Expense .65. Received of Treasurer, $10.65.

Treasurer's Report.—Amount carried over, $34.69. Received of Sec'y., April 10th, $35.00. Total, $69.69. April 10th paid to Assistant Evangelist, $10.65. March 28, to Evangelist $7.50. May 14th, $30.00. Total paid out, $48.15. Amount on hand $21.54.

NEW BUSINESS.

Upon motion it was decided we hold next Annual Conference at St. Paul Neb. By motion it was decided that the President appoint a Programme Committee of three to write up a Programme for the Annual Conference. The following are the names of the committee, W. L. Crowe and Rena Gordon, St. Paul, and Almus Adams Arapahoe, Neb. The following churches sent letters of greeting and report of work. Blair, St Paul, Gordon, South Frontier, and Bro. Newel reported verbally of North Frontier.

It was moved and carried that the Conference enter a protest to the Secretary's report for last conference, refering to drafting of constitution, which report said:—"It was carried by a small majority," when there was only one dissenting vote. The Constitution simply regulates the duty of and work of officers and evangelists, the sole object being to further the work.

Upon suggestion it was decided the president shall fix date of Annual Conference, same to be held last of August or first of September, 1895.

O. P. STORY, Sec., Pro Tem.

As was previously announced the Church of God in Indiana convened at Antioch meeting house, June 7, 1895, and continued over the Sunday following. Friday was devoted to preaching. On Saturday A. M. the conference was called to order with Bro. Wagoner in the chair. There being little or no business before the house the session was consequently of short duration. The minutes of the preceding meeting were read and approved. The report of the treasurer showed amount on hand at beginning of quarter was $207.22, received since last report $8.00, paid out $68.70, amount in treasury $146.52. The roll of the churches being called, three reported, Argos, Plymouth and Bracken. A letter was recently received from a Bro. David Bowles of Wisconsin calling for a minister to be sent to that place for the purpose of administering baptism to some who desired to start in the cause. The question was first submitted to the conference, but was finally left to the evangelist committee which decided to send Bro. Wagoner there, his expenses to be paid out of the evangelist fund. The question of the Sunday School quarterly was then raised and discussed at some length, but as nothing definite could be arrived at the subject was dropped, and the conference adjourned to meet at call of the secretary.

The ministers present were J. L. Wince, J. F. Wagoner, L. E. Conner, and R. C. Railsback. The meeting was fairly well attended throughout, quite a number being present from abroad. On Sunday there was an unusually large gathering, the house was crowded many being unable to get in. The preaching was excellent, being practical, just such as we stand in need of, and as a result three came forward and were baptized on Sunday morning by Bro. Conner. May they prove faithful is our prayer.

J. F. WAGONER, Pres.
A. C. ROBERTS, Sec'y.

LETTER TO ANTIOCH CONFERENCE.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I must speak a word of cheer to you this morning, for our God hath put gladness in my heart, more than in the time that the corn and the wine of those who say, "Who shall show us any good?" increased. He has shown me his good things; he has made me to see that his salvation is near, when glory shall dwell in our land. We can put our trust in God, and rejoice and shout for joy because he defends us, and blesses us and compasses us about as with a shield, and because he in his good pleasure is doing good to Zion, is building up again the walls of Jerusalem, and is causing his praise to be heard in her streets. The sabbaths of the Lord are again kept in the Holy City, the language of Moses and the prophets is rapidly becoming a living tongue as of old. The only newspapers published in all Palestine are published in Hebrew, and Jews fill the rooms of the Missionary, A Ben Oliel, to learn of "the Messiahship of the Lord Jesus, and the credentials of the most holy faith." In all the large cities and in many small towns, lectures are given on the questions, "Has the Messiah come? And who was he?" And there are attentive listeners, thankful hearts and warm handshakings at the close, and many questions are asked as to Jesus being really David's Son and Lord. "Beginning at Jerusalem," the blessed news of a coming king is to go throughout the lands of the East and soon the throne of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ will be there, and the glory of the Lord will fill the earth as the waters cover the sea. Why should there not be gladness in our hearts? The latter rains have returned, under fields overlain by sun-burnt rocks there is a rich and fertile soil, and busy workers will soon remove the stones, and the land will become like the garden of the Lord, its high slopes covered with forests and vines, and its valleys flowing with milk and honey. Oh, for a home in our fatherland! for a place in that city, the glory of which no mortal eye has seen, and the beauty of which "can never be excelled." "The hope of living forever in that country and in that city," ought to stimulate us to renewed and greater efforts to save our fellowmen, for that inheritance will be forever, shall we not be more faithful hereafter? At home? in church? in society? Teach the little ones car fully. Be sure that they understand the blessed truth. God be with you during the rest of the meeting. You have my earnest prayers.

S. ROXANA WINCE.

[Came June 10, after the Conference so was too late to read out] is here given.—ED.]

Editor Restitution:

By your kind permission I will offer a few lines through the columns of THE RESTITUTION, for the benefit of those who read it, as to what we are doing. This year has been one of severe trials with me. I have been trying to hold out the Words of Life to perishing mortals, except for a short time during my dear wife's last illness. Since she fell asleep, I have talked to the people at different points every Sunday with some success. The first Sunday at the Jackson School house near Oxford. Second Sunday at the Economy School house south of Gouda, at 11 A. M., and at the Messner School house 3 miles west of Gouda, at 3 P. M. Third Sunday at the Lone Star School house near New Kirk, O. T. and the fourth Sunday at the Ward School house in O. T. Saturday evening before fourth Sunday at A. P. Chaplin's School house O. T. I have numerous other calls, but cannot go to all. Recently the Macedonian cry came from Salt Fork some 50 miles distant southwest in the Territory, "Come over and help us." We dropped one of our appointments and answered to that call. I went over to Bro. I. M. Vickerys and he took his buggy and we wound our way through the strip some 40 miles, landing at Bro. Butcher's. Found them getting ready to go on some ten miles distant to the place of meeting. But before we started we were treated to a good square meal, prepared by our beloved Sister Butcher. Here Bro. and Sister Chambers joined us, on we went. Got there in good time. A young gentleman (for the sake of meeting) kindly gave us the use of his house. The people could not all get inside. Gave three discourses to a large crowd of eager listeners. On Sunday at 3 o'clock we met at the river and helped four intelligent ones to put on Christ by baptism. These were Harvey S. Wile, Mr. Peoples, Mrs. Wiles and Mrs. Cramer, with others soon to follow. These are some of the fruits of the good seed sown by the hands of Bro. and Sister Butcher as they have long ago instituted Bible readings, and still the good work goes on there. We stayed over Monday and broke the loaf with them. Thus ended a meeting long to be remembered. This was another green spot in our life, amid our trials and troubles. These meetings were praise worthy for attendance and attention. The music was good led by our esteemed Sister Chambers and Bro. H. L. Wile. This makes eight prisoners we have recently endeavored to set free. To God be all praise. The work being done here is really commendable, and many would do well to copy after them. We pray that the loving arms of mercy may be thrown around them to keep them from falling. Brothers and Sisters prove faithful that no man take thy crown. May God be with you till we meet again. Submitted in love.

I. S. MILLER.

Editor Restitution:

May 21st, Tuesday morning 6 A. M. finds us walking from the depot to our own home once more, after an absence of 19 days spent with the brethren at Niagara Falls. We went among this people entire strangers, but soon found out they were the same warm-hearted, whole-souled beings that characterize our people as a whole. We found here some wide differences in opinion, but withal a band of zealous, devoted, prayerful, sacrificing workers. It is not our lot to find so many good things very often in one place. There is much opposition and prejudice in the city toward the little flock, occurring perhaps justly from past circumstances, which can only be overcome by leaving the isms and pursuing a strictly gospel and prayerful plan among our dear believers there. In spite of all barriers, however, eight souls put on Christ before we left, and Brother Greiner writes us another one, a very intelligent young man, has made the good confession, one on whom Bro. Greiner has been sowing the seed with careful patience for some time. He is now rewarded for his long waiting. May God continue to call them out one by one, here and there, for O, the time seems so short, soon the last one will be chosen. During our stay at the Falls we had a very interesting and enjoyable visit at the home of the late Bro. H. V. Lyons. We found dear Sister Lyon there in her lonely widowhood, still actively carrying out in every possible particular the wishes of Bro. Lyon. She desired me to say to the brethren. The home is still there, waiting with an old time welcome, any of the dear, weary vineyard toilers, and although he is gone, his home, his books, his picture so life-like on the wall, are all there with his wife to welcome whosoever comes in the name of truth. May the good father keep Sister Lyon in her declining years, with all the faithful ones, safely sheltered in his loving care.

B. W. & M. A. WOODWARD.

Dear Restitution:

I have not given any report of work done for some time, for I do not feel that I am worthy of but very little notice. As far as I am concerned, for what I do in the cause of my Master, is all to the glory of God and his Son. I am but a mere cipher, it is God's work and not mine. For the last three months I have been out in the field, and there has been some good done in the name of the dear Lord. I had some good meetings in Illinois and in Indiana, and during those meetings I have immersed three into the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of their sins, and others encouraged to more diligence. I feel so unworthy of any credit to myself, that I don't feel like writing anything for our paper. I am giving all of my time to the work of the Lord, and I feel as if I owed it all to him, and feel as if my work would soon be done. God help me to be faithful. I want to be found ready when the Master calls for me, and if I am worthy of any place in Christ's kingdom I shall be satisfied with it. Oh, Father help us all to be found ready when the King cometh. This is my prayer for Jesus' sake. Amen.

Oil on the Waters.

'Tis said that sailors, in the Southern Seas,
In danger's hour,
Have oil upon the seething waves, and these
Have half their power,

Our lives are wrecked on Time's relentless tide,
And, day by day,
The surging billows, rolling far and wide,
Disturb our way.

And oftentimes in full distress we lie,
Stranded aloof,
Or tossed, helpless, by the wind and waves,
and nigh
A rock-bound coast,

Or, if in that dread peril we could throw
Faith round our bark,
The waves would sink, the winds lose
Gently blow,
Light follow dark.

The Design of God in the Creation of Man.

That Jehovah had a design in the formation of man is evident to all thinking minds, in fact, there was nothing created in vain. The earth was created to be inhabited. Design is depicted to the earnest student visible. The heavens above disclose design, the earth beneath, light, air and water, proclaim design. Both the animate and inanimate in nature, proclaim design, that the hand that made them is divine.

No other planet in the great innumerable constellation of immensity is called earth, except our home planet. Concerning it, it is written in the Volume of Inspiration, "One generation passeth away, and another generation cometh, but the earth abideth forever." It is eternity-bound. Man, the last formed of the dust of the ground, God having breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, becomes a living being. Man was designed to be entrusted with the affairs of earth. Was to multiply and replenish the earth, was to subdue it and have dominion over it. In order to accomplish this, a helpmeet was provided for the man of earth. For the man and woman a beautiful home was prepared, with a garden in which God planted trees bearing delicious fruits. The Tree of Life was there also. Their duty was to dress and keep the garden, and of all the fruit that grew on the trees they were to freely eat, except one of which they were forbidden, were warned by the God that made them of the direful consequences that would ensue. Of banishment and death if they violated the decree of Jehovah, "Thou shalt not eat of it." The sequel discloses the solemn fact that Jehovah is not to be mocked by his creatures. They disobeyed, were banished and died, in time.

In consequence of the one rash act of our parents, we are mortal and must die. Death reigns over all earth's inhabitants alike, there is no difference between man and beast so far as the decree is concerned. "Dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return," is a decree of Jehovah that has not been countermanded since the expulsion from the garden. The original purpose of Deity is not to be frustrated by the puny arm of his creatures.

Jehovah has arranged a scheme of redemption by which he proposes to accomplish his original design in the creation of heaven and earth, and has revealed his plan of redemption to faithful men of Adam's race, that they might transmit it to their posterity, so that all who would gladly receive it and comply with the conditions might be saved, be born again. It is through a kingdom that the God of heaven is going to set up upon the earth in the latter days that he proposes to accomplish the re-generation of earth and its inhabitants from the curse of sin and death. The Lord Jesus the Anointed is the heir of the future habitable, and the redeemed of earth, the born again of the human race, his Bride shall reign with him on earth.

Jesus the Only Begotten Son of God, is the Nobleman of the parable who went to a far country to be invested with royalty, and is to return to those expecting him. he will appear without a sin-offering unto salvation, being the first-born from the dead, he will have the pre-eminence over all in the age to come. Will be King of kings and Lord of lords.

When he appears his Bride, the waiting ones, will be made like him, incorruptible. At the sounding of the trump the sleeping saints will arise invested with an incorruptible and deathless nature. The living will be changed, divested of the mortal and invested with the immortal nature and suddenly caught away from their associates, men of this world or age, and will meet Jesus in the air, from whence they will descend to Jerusalem, the Mount of Olives, See Zech. xiv. Soon after th meeting of the Bride with the Bridegroom and their descent, he will take unto himself his great power and reign on Davids throne, of which he is the legal heir. In Jerusalem, in the presence of the ancients gloriously he will be called the Song of the whole earth. Then the glory of the Lord will appear and all flesh shall see it together. Then is when judgment will be given in to the saints of the Most High. Then is the time the saints shall judge the world.

Submitted in the gospel hope.
H. Murphy.

Editor Restitution:

The following is a part of an address delivered at Gladbrook, at the reorganization of the congregation there. Believing it may prove interesting to the brethren I send it for them. Yours in the hope.
A. J. Eychaner.

CONDITIONS OF MEMBERSHIP AND DUTIES.

1. Every one who presents himself or herself for membership should be a firm believer in God and trust him as the great rewarder of all labor. One who sees all our actions and to whom we are responsible for all we do or say, that the thoughts and intentions of the heart are alike open to him.

2. We should be believers in the Lord Jesus Christ as our Savior, Advocate and Redeemer: our pattern in faith and conduct; and ever look to him as the Author and Finisher of our faith.

3. We should believe the gospel of the Christ as the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, or as stated in the Acts, "The things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ."

4. Those who wish to become members should be those who have yielded obedience in baptism, thus putting on the Lord Jesus or becoming members of his body; and branches of the vine, children of the Household of Faith. They should confess and forsake their sins and show by their walk that they are living in harmony with the commandments.

5. If they have complied with the conditions of membership then they should receive the "right hand of fellowship," from the whole church, or from the Elders or Ministers in behalf of the church, as a token of acceptance and a pledge of mutual help and sympathy. The members of the Church of God should all be considered as standing on the same level—all brothers and sisters in the Lord. "He that is chief let him be servant of all," so that even the officers of the congregation are the servants of the "Household of faith."

6. It is expected that in this "Household of Faith" every member shall do his duty or her duty. As the members of a common family are expected to contribute to the support and comfort, and share in the joys and sorrows of the family, so also the members of any congregation are expected to help bear the burdens and contribute to the well-being and happiness of the family of Christ.

When we enter the church new relations, new duties, new responsibilities are assumed, and we no longer stand alone. When a man takes a wife, or a woman takes a husband, individuality is lost in the new union and a partner is now to be consulted in all our new work. There is now more than one to plan for, more than self to please, more than self to maintain. So too in the union with Christ. The Body is not one member now, but many members. Each member of our natural bodies is related to every other in the system, so too is Christ. When we are married to the Body of the Anointed we should take our place as a bride takes her place in the new relation as a member of a union. She is not at liberty now to consult merely her own will, but there is another will that must receive recognition and a mutual agreement must characterize every action or there will be division instead of union. Every member then should be a help in the family. They should be willing and ready to bear their part in the financial burden. If the Church is the light of the world, how can this light be kept burning without the help of every member. Each one can lay by something as an offering to the Lord. If it is our Lord's work we are engaged in, then whatever we do in the direction is done for him who did so much for us. The apostle's direction is in point, "Whatever ye do, do it heartily as unto the Lord."

We ought also to help in a spiritual way, by doing our duty at the prayer meeting or social meeting, and Sunday School. We can do this by learning a choice gem of Scripture and repeating it, or make a selection of a favorite hymn for singing. Stand up as a witness as being on the Lord's side and interested in his work, in short doing as well as you can any work assigned to you. Be faithful in attendance at all the meetings, if possible. Yes, you should make it your business to be present, and not forsake the assembly of your brothers and sisters. You are interested in the success of the congregation. Their success ... your success, their failure your failure. As each one in a family does his part in entertaining a visitor, so each one in the congregation should do their part in pleasing the Divine Christ when we meet together and expect him to be present. The Bible particularly enjoins upon each member to "help bear each other's burdens," and we will thus fulfil the law of Christ, and "Be ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving one another even as God (for Christ's sake) hath forgiven you."

Let it be noticed that whatever we do we must do willingly. Better do but little and do it willingly than to do much and do it by constraint. Paul says, "If I do this thing willingly I have a reward," and Peter in speaking of the service of a Elder says that it should not be "by constraint but willingly." Whatever service is rendered then must be willingly whether it is money, or work, or teaching, or faithfulness in attendance, the service must be a free will offering or God will not accept.

By the church here it was decided, in order to meet running expenses, to make a monthly assessment of ten cents upon every member, and take up a public collection once a month, on the first Sunday of each month. The secretary will provide collection envelopes one for each family, for twelve months or twelve envelopes. If there is only one member in a family you will put ten cents in the envelope, seal it and write your name upon the outside, also the month and the amount. If there are two members in a family put in twenty cents, if three members thirty cents, etc. If you desire to put in more at a time than ten cents, or in other words it may sometimes be convenient for you to put in twenty-five or fifty cents or one dollar, in such event you will be credited by the secretary for the full amount put in, and your envelope filed, which always shows how far and how much you have paid if you take care to write the name upon the outside and the amount. I would advise that each one pay monthly if possible. If quarterly or semi-annually let it always be in advance. For the reason that it is easier to pay in that way. This monthly collection is for the expenses of the weekly meetings. To support and keep up preaching is for the present left with the Elders and Deacons. For the present, preaching is provided for. We all feel that in building this house we have (since the failure of crops last year) about as much as we can well do to pay the remainder of the indebtedness, yet we trust we have done a good work and that a way will open to keep up preaching, if not all the time at least occasionally and the Sunday School all the time. Here then is clearly an urgent need of help from every member. Save up the pennies and they will grow into dollars in time and the work will be carried on. I cannot refrain from saying right here that the best and the only Scriptural plan to save money for the Lord, in my humble opinion, is to lay aside at home each week or each day as the Lord has prospered us one-tenth of our income. I have preached on this subject twice to this people, yet to my certain knowledge there is not one in this congregation who are members who have adopted the plan. If upon other points my preaching is as ineffectual, then I will despair, or get discouraged. I wish that it might be otherwise. If the tithing system was adopted by every member there would be uniformity, and if, say one-half of the amount thus raised were paid into the church treasury there would be a blessing upon the whole body, and all would feel better than under a haphazard system. But we must be content with things as they are at present than as we wish them to be.

We have bought a new church record book, and written the same pledge or statement written in the old book when we organized Jan. 6, 1889. It reads as follows:

"We the members of the Church of God at Gladbrook recognize the Word of God as revealed in the Bible as our standard of faith and conduct, and God helping us we will endeavor to make our lives and faith conform to its teachings, so far as we understand it." This is short and to the point, and has been with us for six years. It is not a creed. The Word of God is our creed. The open Bible is our watchword. To do good is our religion.

This church record is in the care of the secretary, and open for inspection to all the members of the congregation. In it your names will be recorded and the date; and when a member dies, or moves away, or desires a letter to some other church or congregation if the facts will be briefly stated opposite your name. Tonight we desire all the old members to come forward and sign your names.

On next Sunday evening there will be an opportunity extended for those who have been baptized but who have not received the right hand of fellowship, when their names will also be added. After which any who wish to join with us, who have not yet done so, and who are with us in sympathy and faith, and are willing to cast in their lot with us will be welcomed, and receive the right hand of fellowship and be added to our number. In starting our church record anew we want to condense and preserve any items of interest so that they may not only be preserved, but that they may furnish at any time a ready reference to any work of the past. Of this nature is our Sunday School work and preaching. The future alone can tell what the result of all this year's work will be. It is a record to be proud of, when we consider all the circumstances.

In a community where many relatives live, there are always more or less difficulties arising between members of the church. These differences though small at first frequently grow and become burdens in time if they are not checked and righted. They arise in two ways, 1st, By misunderstandings, 2nd, By a thoughtless way of doing things. Now in a church these must be kept out if we would prosper. The way to keep them out is for each member to use good judgment and do right. The "start" is half of the race. In our re-organization let every thing be dropped of the past that would in any way hinder a free and hearty exchange of brotherly love and Christian sentiment. Bury every envy, or jealousy, or ill feeling; put a bridle upon the tongue and a watch over every action. Watch self first, last and always. See to it that fairness, impartiality and purity of motive characterize every dealing, statement or action. Be slow to take offence. Better have no secrets and tell none. Be careful not to say anything to wound the feelings of a brother or sister. Never bring up anything that is settled. Do not dig up "the hatchet that was buried," and don't fail to bury the hatchet as soon as you find one, and as quietly as you can.

Only reciprocal love can satisfy; hence, wealth can never meet the desire of the heart.

TEMPERANCE.

The Song of the Sot.

With clothes all shabby and worn,
And face all blotched and red,
A leper sat, with trembling hand,
Supporting his dizzy head.
Drink! drink! drink!
He made his life a thing to dread
And with a voice like that of the dead
He sang this song of the sot.

Drink! drink! drink!
I thirst, I burn, I need more!
And drink! drink! drink!
Till God is cast out from me.
Oh, why don't you ask a favor?
Why make me like a slave?
Your drink or home, or land and name,
No I give them all for more!

Drink! drink! drink!
'Tis my best friend to me!
Drink! drink! drink!
Till I am heavy and dead
To sorrow, to want, to shame
To home, to want, to sorrow,
I drink and feel the live long day,
And do the same to-morrow.

Curses, with mothers bend!
Curses, with sisters and wives!
You curse me? I pay ready cash for my own.
For other people's lives.
Drink! drink! drink!
To curses, want and woe!
Tax I pay—a—ble, I pay for my sin.
And that is my name and fame.

For why do I speak of fame
When my life is dark and drear?
Why tell so fully of my name.
Which I sell for a glass of beer?
I drink and I drink till I am mad,
But drink has marred my career;
It has chilled my heart, benumbed my brain;
Till life is void of cheer.

Drink! drink! drink!
But it does not slake my thirst;
It burns my throat; and oh! my head;
It aches as if 'twould burst!
In my home, which might glow
With the bloom of my health and cheer;
Dear ones are sick, and food are low;
They're feeling want, I fear.

Drink! drink! drink!
Till money and health are gone;
And drink! drink! drink!
Till I'm lean and lank and wan.
My friends with haughty mien,
Pass by, with scorn a nod;
They now regard my life, I ween,
As worthless as a clod.

What people think and say
Was once of concern to me;
But my pride has now all passed away;
I'm meek as I can be.
'Tis true I know full well;
I ought to mend my ways,
Reverse my career and commence
To bring about better days.

Alas, 'tis vain; my will
Is gone, and all despite Such good intent, my mind is still
As closed and dark as night.
Once will and thought were clear.
But drinking hurt and oft,
Has robbed me of my birthright dear;
No more I look aloft.

Oh, had I one short hour
Of respite, here 'tis brief,
I would give some chance for love and hope
To ease this load of grief;
But thirst for drink's so great,
I scare the cursed bowl,
And drink and drink although, sad fate,
For drink I sell my soul."

With clothes so shabby and worn
And face all blotched and red,
The leper sat, with trembling hand,
Supporting his aching head.
Drink! drink! drink!
Hopeless and dark his lot.
He wished in his heart that he were dead.
As he sang this song of the sot.

Canada does not allow a liquor dealer or saloon keeper to hold a municipal office. Sensible.

Of the twelve thousand saloon-keepers of New York City, whose "good moral character" entitled them to license, eight thousand have served terms in prison.

Within ten years there have been in this country 21,384 deaths from yellow fever, and 650,000 deaths from alcohol. Yet we license alcohol and quarantine yellow fever.

The Canadian Temperance League recently presented a gold medal to the pupil in the public schools of Toronto who passed the best examination in the study of temperance and physiology.

"You are vipers, and your crime is second only to murder. You men have been proved guilty of sending through the United States mails books and pictures of the most demoralizing and debasing character. I would rather that a rattlesnake come into my house and crawled into my child's couch than have your vile literature carried to him. It would be an awful crime; but your offense is worse than if you had spread the yellow fever by the agency of the mails. I do not intend that any one shall ever hold up my courts as commencing your business in lascivious books and pictures, nor that a mild sentence could be so construed. When you send your villainous stuff into the homes of the people, a young boy or girl may see it, and a life be blighted. Your business seeks to strike down the teachings and years of labor which parents have given to the training of their children. You, Steele, I sentence to three years at hard labor in the penitentiary at Joliet; and you, Young, to five years at hard labor at the same place." —Sentence by Judge Grosscup, at Chicago.

The man who labors to be rich in grace is sweetly resting while he labors, while he who labors to be rich in gold wears himself out in unrest.

OBITUARY.

Died May 30, 1895, Sadie Tilton, oldest daughter of James and Josephine Tilton, of Rochelle, Illinois. Sadie was a graduate of the Josephine Training School for nurses, of Chicago, Illinois. She was affectionate, kind and gentle in her manner and beloved by all who formed her acquaintance. A large and solemn assembly was present at the service to sympathize with the sorrowing family at their home, conducted by the writer.

Report.

Editor Restitution:

Brother Geo. Kidwell of Arkansas, visited Wheatland, Mo., and delivered three able discourses to attentive audiences, with increasing interest, over the 1st Sunday in June. On Sunday night his subject was the "Times of Restitution," and truly he has heeded the injunction of Paul to Timothy. We were reminded of old times, when we used to have good meetings. He promised to return in September. In conclusion permit me to insert the lawyers plea, "Give me something that my mind can grasp, that faith can take hold of, something real and tangible, something real and substantial to hope for, a living God to trust in, and something to expect some future good."

Reduced Rates to Asbury Park.

The Nickel Plate Road offers a rate of a fare and a third on the certificate plan July 8th to 13th, account National Meeting League of American Wheelmen.

Special Announcement.

We have secured a limited number of copies of "Letter to a Friend." This is our old and popular favorite, a 32 page tract, telling of the Covenants of Promise, and their connection with the One Hope, the One Faith, and One Baptism. Written by Mrs. C. C. Woodruff. Price 10 cents, 12 for $1.00 post paid. Send soon, for they will not last long.

For the National Educational Association at Denver, Colo., July 5th to 12th, the Nickel Plate Road offers special low rates. A superb passenger service. Unexcelled Dining Cars. For information inquire of agents of the Nickel Plate Road.

As small violets attract by their fragrance, and not by their size, so humble lives have a drawing influence not possessed by the proud.

Go to the Seashore July 8th to 13th and attend the meeting of the league of American Wheelmen at Asbury Park, N. J. The Nickel Plate Road has authorized a rate of a fare and a third on the certificate plan.

Christ gives human life a new significance. Christianity broadens life. The man who gives up this world to secure the next is an eternal gainer, while he who gives up this to be rid of it loses all.

For the glorious Fourth, the Nickel Plate Road offers one fare for the round trip to all points on its line within a radius of 200 miles from starting point. Tickets on sale July 3rd and 4th, good returning until July 5th.

It is better to preach the gospel to a few, and awake some to righteousness, than to preach to many and put them to sleep with sensational opiates.

Fourth of July Excursions on July 3rd and 4th the Nickel Plate Road will sell round trip tickets between points on its line within a radius of 200 miles from starting point for a single fare. Good returning to and including July 5th.

Our love is measured by our trust, and our trust by our love.

Iowa Notice.

The Iowa State Conference of the Church of God will be held in Marshalltown, beginning Thursday evening August 15th, and lasting over till Sunday evening the 25th, 1895. Our reasons for place—the most central, and most convenient in the State for railroad for all brethren. At the crossing of the Chicago & North-Western, Iowa Central, and the Great Western or Diagonal Road. The location in the city is on North Third Street opposite the Green House. The street car line starts out just east of the depot and for a nickel will carry you to the ground. Come prepared to tent and to live. Will have tents on the ground, but all who have tents bring them.

As to time, it will be of more leisure then in June, and therefore secure a better attendance. Also crops will then be sufficiently matured to tell of a certainty what can be done for Evangelistic Work. A regular programme will be given out for work. Begin now to arrange to attend the meetings. Leave your hobbies at home and come prepared for a meeting of straight-forward gospel and Bible work. We shall try to make this one of the most interesting meetings we have ever held in Iowa. We expect to be able to secure reduced rates upon all of the railroads in the state for this occasion.

Y. P. S. C. E. Excursion to Boston.

The Society of Christian Endeavor of Central and Northern Indiana, at a meeting in Fort Wayne, Ind., May 21st, selected the Nickel Plate Road as their special train to Boston in July, to attend the Annual Meeting of the Y. P. S. C. E. for 1895. This special train will be arranged to stop enroute for a few hours at Niagara Falls and also at Saratoga Springs, N. Y., enabling passengers to enjoy a visit to those famous resorts. No extra charge will be made for these privileges. Passengers at other points along the Nickel Plate Road may join this special train at any station by previous arrangement through the nearest ticket agent as by allowing M. C. Baker, District Passenger Agent, Ft. Wayne, Ind. The Nickel Plate Road offers the lowest rates to all points east or west. This line, with its immediate eastern connections, forms the shortest line to Boston for the meetings of the Y. P. S. C. E. in July, and also the Masonic Knights Templar in August.—June 30.

PRESENTS FOR FRIENDS.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Words;" one of 8-page tract; and one of "Seeking and Finding," all for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of truth. Send to Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va. not to this office.

Solid through trians to New York City were placed in service May 19th over the Nickel Plate and West Shore Railroads. This will enable both first and second class passengers to go through without change of cars. A colored porter will be placed in charge of first and second class day coaches to attend to the wants of our patrons, and to insure scrupulously clean cars enroute. This is in addition to the porters that always accompany the through sleeping cars. Rates continue the lowest. —June 30.

To All Concerned.

We desire to call your attention to the additional train service, recently inaugurated by the Vandalia Line, between Logansport and St. Joseph, Mich. Trains run daily affording excursionists a full day for a summer outing. The bathing at both Lake Maxenkucket and St. Joseph are exceptionally fine, while the boating facilities are excellent. Sunday excursion tickets at half fare. Call upon Vandalia Line agent for particulars or address E. A Ford, General Passenger Agent, St. Louis, Mo.—July 31.

For the Conference of the Epworth League at Chattanooga, Tenn., June 27th to 30th, the Nickel Plate Road offers one fare excursion tickets.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks those not able to pay for their paper will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. Your delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

Commencing Sunday May 19th, the day coaches on all through trains of the Nickel Plate Road will be attended by a colored porter whose services are placed at the disposal of the patrons of the line. The purpose of this equipment is to insure scrupulously clean cars enroute.—m 22 15.

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects, by R. C. Bingley, is the title of a pamphlet of 48 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under different headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued calls for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonian Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

Summer Outings.—At Seashore, Mountain and Lake Resorts.

Colored porters have been placed in charge of day coaches on through trains of the Nickel Plate Road to insure perfectly clean coaches enroute.—m 22 15.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brethren and are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

Poetry.

Be Earnest.

The white-winged hours speed swiftly on,
And leave no track behind.
So life a vapor dim, is gone
If frivolous the mind.

Of rain a promise there may seem
And this of stately growth.
But like the theme of a dream
Both shall dissolve at length.

Original.

PSALM. 41.

42 COM. VER.

1. Unto the end; For understanding for the sons of Kore (the temple choir).

2. As the hind longeth for the fountains of water, even so my soul longeth for thee, O God.

3. My soul hath thirsted for the living God: When shall I come and appear before thy face?

4. My tears have become my bread day and night, while it is being said unto me each day, day after day, where is thy God?

5. These things have I called to mind and poured out my soul upon me, because I shall go through, a wanderer, in a place of tabernacle unto the house of God with a voice of gladness and confession, an echo of those who keep festival:

6. Why art thou over-sad, O my soul, and why dost thou disquiet me? Hope in the Lord, because I shall confess unto him, O thou instrumental-salvation of my face, O thou my God.

7. Unto myself hath my soul become disquieted; Therefore shall I have recalled thee to mind from a land of Jordan and from Emoni Ebn's little mount.

8. Abyss invoketh abyss with a voice of thy cataracts: all thy billows and thy waves have gone over me:

9. The Lord will enjoin his mercy by day and by night will he reveal it: Mine is a votive-prayer unto the God of my life.

10. I will say unto God, My intervener art thou, Why hast thou ignored me?

11. Those who afflict me have reproached me, while my bones were being crushed, while they were saying unto me each day, day after day, Where is thy God?

12. Why art thou over-sad, O my soul, and why art thou disquieting me? Hope in the Lord, because I shall confess unto him, O thou, the salvation of my face and my God,

PSALM 42 (43 COM. VER.)

1. David's psalm. Judge me, O God and require my right from a nation not holy: From an unjust and deceitful man deliver me.

2. Because thou, O God, art my controlling-power. Why hast thou thrust me away? And why do I go my way sad-visaged while my enemy is afflicting me?

3. Send out thy light and thy truth; They have guided me and led me unto thy sacred mount and unto thy habitations.

4. I will go in unto the altar of God unto the God who causeth my youth to rejoice; I will confess unto thee with Cithara, O God my God.

5. Why art thou over-sad, O my soul, and why art thou disquiting me? Hope in God that I shall confess unto him, O thou instrumental-salvation of my face, my God.

PSALM 43 (44 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; For the sons of Kore (the temple Choir) for understanding, a psalm.

2. O God we have heard with our ears; our fathers have told us of a deed thou didst do in their days in ancient days.

3. Thy hand destroyed nations and planted them down, thou didst afflict laities and cast them out

4. For not with their sword did they inherit a land (or earth) and their arm did not save them, but thy right hand and thy arm and the illumination of thy countenance; because thou wert satisfied with them.

5. Thou art he my king and my God who enjoineth Jacob's salvations.

6. In thee will we hook our enemies and in thy name have we made nought of those who arise against us;

7. For not in my bow do I hope and my sword will not save me.

8. For thou hast saved us from those who afflict us, and those who hate us hast thou put to shame.

9. In God shall we have been praised all the day long and in thy name will we confess forever (unto the age). Interlude.

10. But just now hast thou thrust away and put us to shame and thou wilt not enter into our hosts (dunameis).

11. Thou hast turned us back in the face of our enemies and those who hate us have been plundering us for themselves.

12. Thou hast given us like sheep as it were to be eaten and thou hast dispersed us among the nations.

13. Thou hast given away thy laity without a price, and there was no fulness in their alahs:

14. Thou hast made us a reproach to our neighbors, a mockery and laughter to those round about us.

15. Thou hast made us a parable among the nations, a wagging of the head among the laities.

16. All the day long is my disgrace before me and the shame of my face hath covered me.

17. By reason of the voice of the reproacher and prater, from the face of enemy and persecutor.

18. All these things have come upon us and we have not ignored thee, and we have not done wrong unto thy covenant,

19. And one heart hath not stood away to the rear: and thou hast inclined our paths away from thy way;

20. Because thou hast humbled us in a place of evil-doing and a shadow of death hath covered us.

21. If we had ignored the name of our God, and if we had spread our hands out unto an alien God,

22. Would not God requite these things? For he knoweth the hidden things of the heart;

23. That for thy sake we are being put to death all the day long; have been accounted as it were sheep for slaughter.

24. Awake, why dost thou sleep, O Lord? Arise and do not thrust away completely.

25. Why dost thou turn away thy face; Why ignore our poverty and our tribulation.

26. Because our soul hath been humbled to the dust; our belly hath cleaved to the earth.

27. Arise, O Lord, Respond to our cry for help and redeem us for thy name's sake.

PSALM 44 (45 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; Concerning those who will have become alienated; for the sons of Kore (the temple Choir) for understanding: An ode about The Beloved.

2. My heart hath sought out a good word; I address my works (doings) to the King: My tongue is a pen of a swift-writing scribe.

3. Ripened in beauty as compared with the sons of men art thou; Grace hath been poured out with thy lips: Therefore God hath blessed thee forever.

4. Mayest thou have girded on thy sword upon thy thigh, O thou able one, in thy ripeness and thy beauty,

5. And mayest thou have extended, and do thou prosper and rule as king for the sake of thy truth and meekness and righteousness, and thy right hand will guide thee wondrously.

6. Sharpened arrows are thine, O thou Able One; Laities will fall beneath thee in the heart of the enemies of the king.

7. Thy throne O God is unto an age of an age; a sceptre of uprightness is the sceptre of thy kingdom;

8. Thou hast loved righteousness and hated transgression; Therefore God, thy God hath anointed thee with an elaion of gladness above thy participants.

9. Myhr and stakte and kasia are from thy outer-garments: ...

10. Daughters of kings are there from ivory palaces, from out which they cheer thee: The queen standeth beside thee in honor of thee; at thy right hand, clad with a variegated outer-garment in an undergarmented inter-woven with gold.

11. Mayest thou have heard O daughter, and mayest thou have perceived and inclined thine ear, and mayest thou have ignored thy laity and thy father's house:

12. Because the king hath longed for thy beauty; because he is thy lord,

13. And daughters of Turos (Tyro) will do him homage with votive-gifts; the rich of the laity of the land (or earth) will litanize thy face.

14. All the glory thereof (of the earth) belongeth to the daughter of the king, O Esebon, clad with a variegated outer-garment with golden fringes.

15. Virgins will have been brought away in her train unto the king; her neighbors will have been brought away unto thee.

16. They will have been brought away with rejoicing and gladness; They will have been led into the king's inner sanctuary.

17. In return for thy father's sons have been begotten unto thee: Thou will constitute them rulers over all the earth (or land).

18. They will have remembered thy name in every generation and generation: Therefore laities will confess unto thee unto the age and unto the age of the age.

PSALM 45 (46 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; For the sons of Kore (the temple choir) concerning the hidden things, a psalm.

2. Our Lord is a refuge; and a help (lit. an ability) a responsive-helper in tribulations that find us exceedingly.

3. Therefore we shall not have feared when the earth is being shaken and mountains are being transported into the hearts of seas.

4. Their waters echoed and were disturbed; the mountains were shaken with his controlling-power. Interlude.

5. The swellings of the river make the City of God to rejoice. The Most High hath sanctified his habitation;

6. God is in the midst of her; She will not have been moved, God will afford responsive-help to her with his face.

7. Nations have been disturbed; kingdoms have declined; He hath given his voice; the earth hath been moved.

8. The Lord of Hosts (abilities) is in our midst, the God of Jakob (Jacob) our intervener. Interlude.

9. Come hither and see the works of the Lord, the prodigies which he hath disposed on the earth,

10. Removing wars unto the ends of the earth: Bow will he break and weapon will he shatter and broad-shield will he burn with fire.

11. Take leisure and comprehend that I am God: I shall have been exalted among the nations; I shall have been exalted on the earth.

15. The Lord of Hosts (the abilities) is in our midst, the God of Jakob our Intervener.

COMMENT.

The 41st psalm has the significant heading, "For understanding for the sons of Kore" and is a soliloquy. It is a psalm of hope rather than faith and teaches us how important a factor hope is in the day of tribulation that comes to every child of God "And now abideth these three faith, hope, love." Perhaps it was just here and in this psalm that Paul got such an uplift in spiritual understanding, and such ability to subject his soul to the claims of the higher spiritual life and the hope of the gospel. It is Messinnic in being the cry of the human-nature in the dual struggle and tribulation—the representative suffering of humanity and the comfort of the spirit therein. The numerical signification points to a major harmonic of some sort in one person and that one can be no other than the Christ, and the emphasis placed upon hope shows that this harmonic is the divine hope.

The 42nd psalm is identified as one of David's and is the complement of the 41st being the hope of the Church or the Christian hope which follows and supplements or brings up that which is lacking in the sufferings of the Christ, and is numerically correct, as two would represent the Church in this relation. The last clause of the 5th verse I understand to be the Church addressing Christ as prompted by the Spirit.

The 43rd psalm as shown by its heading is also to give spiritual understanding and contains a great deal of exhortation that must then have been mysterious; but which now in the light of sacred history is perfectly clear to the Christian Church—the burden of which is God in his saint or saints to work out his wondrous purposes—the inability of the flesh and the ability of the spirit—the loss and the gain—the failure and the triumph, the glory of redemption in a word—the humiliation, the cry and the responsive-help. Numerically a third in this relation would indicate the official work of the spirit or the divine responsive-help when human hope had failed.

The 44th psalm having the significant heading, "Concerning those who will have become alienated—for understanding; an ode about The Beloved" ought to be very suggestive in many ways to the Christian at all familiar with God's Word. The Messianic import is unmistakeable and has been generally conceded by all the Christian interpretors. The Queen here is the Church of Christ represented as being wooed and exhorted to hear and yield—and the glories to follow such a union. The wonderful beauty of the psalm has been recognized in all ages. The symbolic imagry and import there is no time or space here to bring out, though this is necessary to any full understanding of the subject matter. "An olive-oil of gladness" for instance is significant of an anointing with God's spirit, all the imagry here used must be interpreted in this way to rightly understand the full thought of the psalm. Numerically the psalm is a major harmonic of divine teaching.

The 45th psalm is a minor harmonic with the suggestive heading "Concerning the hidden things." This ought to stimulate the spiritual truth-seeker. I think, even at this late day in the experience of the Christian Church. Observe the clause of the 11th verse, "Take leisure and comprehend that I am God." The Church will do well now to heed this exhortation and it may not yet learn some "hidden things." The psalm gives us a glimpse of the great natural change that is yet to come to this planet when the long delayed judgment and restoration to righteousness comes—not "restitution" but "restoration of all things etc." This is one of the many glimpses given us in prophecy. A minor is a harmonic, but there is always sadness and sorrow in the melody, and the songs of the sanctuary and the saints have always had a leaning toward the minor key.

Deliverance of the Children of Israel.

"The passover and the sprinkling of blood were kept by faith among the children of Israel. The death-wail of the first-born of Egypt filled the land with notes of woe, and caused the Egyptians to demand, and Pharaoh to permit the immediate departure of Israel; and early on the morrow the captive nation began their march. Directed by God, guided by Moses, and hastened by Pharaoh, they stretched their long lines across the plain. Each house of bondage contributed to swell the host; and the whole, like a mighty army, despatched from Succoth, and followed the majestic guiding cloud to the borders of the wilderness. Thence they turned and passed by Migdol, and coming where two lofty mountains flanked an intervening valley, they entered it, and marching down, encamped on the verge of the Red Sea. But when once they were gone, the old and ungodly passions burned again in the monarch's heart. He gathered his warriors, he assembled his horsemen, he prepared his chariots, and with arms and armies he started forth to recapture the fleeing fugitives. The people, the spoils, and the women were the objects that stimulated their pursuit. Rage, covetousness, and lust hurried them with headlong haste. Away they sped; the earth trembles beneath the clatter of the countless hoofs of Egyptian horses; ing on the borders of the sea, they heard in the distance the roar of the seething multitude, the cries of rage, and lust and haste; the jostling of chariot wheels, the neighing of horses, and the rattling of armor. They saw the dust that attended their hurried march; and in it the glitter of gold, the flash of steel, and all the dread accompaniments of war's tumultuous and desolating tide. Cries of anguish and despair rose from the lips of the imperiled host of Israel. And then came the mandate, "Speak to Israel that they go forward." The wondrous rod was outstretched above the foaming waves; the billows crouched, the flood divided, and stood congealed in giant walls on either side, while between them lay, for Israel, the highway of salvation from their foes. "By faith they passed through the Red Sea dry shod." The old man and the young, the matron and the maid, the little timid child holding the hand of his stalwart father; all, with bleating flocks and lowing herds before them, pressed on in the awful pathway. The sea was about them, they learned the hidden secrets of its silent depths—the waves were on either hand, the awful cloud of glory beamed on them and on their foes; and the everlasting God led them through the mighty deep. By faith they passed the sea. Faith gave courage to the weakest heart. Faith held them steadfast in their purpose. Faith chased away the last vestige of their fear, and caused them to walk solemnly, yet triumphantly on. At length they reached the shore. The last of all the mighty host gathered on the other verge of the flood, and Pharaoh saw with rage and disappointment his prey eluding his grasp and passing beyond his reach. Could he be foiled thus; could he at last relinquish his hellish scheme? Nay, he would make one more effort. "Whom the gods will to destroy, they first make mad," said the ancient heathens. So it was now. The great controversy between Pharaoh approached its termination. But there was one more act. God hardened the monster's heart until reckless madness ruled his mind supreme. And then

--the way is yet open—Israel is yet in sight—he will try the perils of that awful passage. Why should not he yet be victor in the strife? And so those foaming steeds turn toward the margin of the flood. "Forward!" shouted the king, now but a maniac, burning with lust and rage. "Forward!" rings the maddening cry from the lips of each foe of God. Down the verge they plunge into the most awful path an army ever trod. On, on, rush chariots; on, on, leap horses; on, on, press the armed men; mad, wild, furious, they haste into the awful net. And when the shore is vacant; when all are within the watery gorge; then invisible hands hold the rushing chariot wheels—they drag heavily on the miry bottom; the steeds flag in their hurried course; the charioteers urge them on in vain; and dire dismay settles upon the infatuated throng.

And now Moses stands upon the beetling shore, and overlooks the mighty host. The sky grows black with a gathering tempest—the cloud of fire glares angrily through the gloom—and as the morning breaks, the wonder-working rod is raised aloft once more. Oh, how these solid walls of waters melt! "Flee—flee!" but flight is too late. The sea asserts its rule. The gurgling waves roll back with torrent-like flow—the death wail of Egypt's chivalry sounds loud and shrill above the roar of the tempest and the booming of the Red Sea's billows—the storm-tossed waters rave and thunder above the Egyptian's heads—the deep boils awfully with wild and tameless rage—the vivid lightnings gleam along the dark- ing waves—the thunders mutter the funeral dirge of the ungodly host—and the controversy of Jehovah with Egypt and its rulers is closed, in the might and majesty of God, by the destruction of his infatuated foes. Above the roar and confusion of their overthrow there rings from the other shore a peal of lofty praise. A few snatches of the song have floated on the air, and come down through the years of many generations, and are still known among men. "Then sang Moses and the children of Israel this song unto Jehovah, and spake saying—

"I will sing unto Jehovah, for he hath triumphed gloriously;
The horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.
Jehovah is my strength and song, and he is become my salvation:
He is my God, and I will prepare him an habitation;
My father's God, and I will exalt him.
Jehovah is a man of war. Jehovah is his name.
Pharaoh's chariots and his host hath he cast into the sea;
His chosen captains also are drowned in the Red Sea.
The depths have covered them; they sank into the bottom as a stone.
Thy right hand, O Jehovah, is become glorious in power;
Thy right hand, O Jehovah, hath dashed in pieces the enemy.
And in the greatness of thine excellency
Thou hast overthrown them that rose up against thee.
Thou sentest forth thy wrath, which consumed them as stubble.
And with the blast of thy nostrils the waters were gathered together,
The floods stood upright as a heap,
The depths were congealed in the heart of the sea.
The enemy said, I will pursue, I will overtake,
I will divide the spoil; my lust shall be satisfied upon them;
I will draw my sword, my hand shall destroy them;
Thou didst blow with thy wind, the sea covered them;
They sank as lead in the mighty waters.
Who is like unto thee, O Jehovah among the gods?
Who is like thee, glorious in holiness,
Fearful in praises, doing wonders?
Thou stretchedst out thy right hand,
The earth swallowed them.
Thou in thy mercy hast led forth the people thou hast redeemed;
Thou hast guided them in thy strength unto thy holy habitation.
The people shall hear, and be afraid;
Sorrow shall take hold on the inhabitants of Palestina.
Then the dukes of Edom shall be amazed;
The mighty men of Moab, trembling shall take hold upon them;
All the inhabitants of Canaan shall melt away.
Fear and dread shall fall upon them;
By the greatness of thine arm they shall be as a stone
Till thy people pass over, O Jehovah,
Till the people pass over, which thou hast purchased.
Thou shalt bring them in,
And plant them in the mountain of thine inheritance,
In the place, O Jehovah, which thou hast made for thee to dwell in,
In the sanctuary, O Jehovah, which thy hands have established.
Jehovah shall reign for ever and ever.

For the horse of Pharaoh went in with his chariots and with his horsemen into the sea, and the Lord brought again the waters of the sea upon them; but the children of Israel went on dry land in the midst of the sea. And Miriam, the prophetess, the sister of Aaron, took a timbrel in her hand; and all the women went out after her with timbrels and with dances. And Miriam answered them:

Sing ye to Jehovah, for he hath triumphed gloriously;
The horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea.

Such were the high and holy strains that celebrated the overthrow of the adversaries of the Lord. Pharaoh's race was run. His controversy with God was closed. He had fallen in the mad onset against Omnipotence. He had fallen like an oak of Bashan, or like a cedar of Lebanon before the thunderbolt. And as the sound of his fall rolled in echoes across the desert, surely others would fear. The princes of Edom, the rulers of Moab, the inhabitants of Canaan, all these would tremble at the dire catastrophe and learn to reverence the God of heaven and earth. And so was closed up the controversy of God with the ruler of Egypt—closed as all other controversies had been closed, not by submission, nor by arbitration, not by mercy, but closed on the one hand by unmitigated and stubborn rebellion, and on the other hand by sudden and overwhelming and exterminating vengeance. Every mercy was abused, every respite misimproved, every promise repudiated, every vow violated, every command disregarded, every sign mimicked. Every effort for pacification and adjustment was put forth, but all in vain. Man would not repent, would not obey, and so nothing remained but to give up the struggle, and allow the dark tide of revolt to roll on unhindered, or else by measures prompt, speedy, and decisive to put an end to their rebellious course. It was done—the Red Sea buried them in her depths, and then vomited them up and rolled them, horses, chariots, king, princes, robes and weapons, upon the distant shore. Thus was Israel delivered from hard and cruel bondage. Thus was there a lesson taught which caused the ears of oppressors to tingle wherever it has been told. There were judgments executed which magnified God, honored his law, vindicated his government, delivered his people, and destroyed his foes.—From "Great Controversy between God and Man," by H. L. H. in Bible Echo.

Our Record.

We are writing an imperishable record by our fleeting deeds. Half a dozen pages carry all the story of that stormy life of David. It takes a thousand rose trees to make a vial full of essence of roses. The record and issues of life will be condensed into small compass, but the essence of it is eternal. We will find it again, and have to drink as we have brewed when we get yonder. "Be not deceived, God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." There is a time to "sow," and that is the present life; and there is a time to "reap" the fruits of our sowing, and that is the time when times have ended and eternity is here.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the full restitution of all things which God has spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the resurrection of [illegible] the literal resurrection of the dead; the judgment-[illegible] of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ; and many other kindred truths. Also baptism by [illegible] of the gospel, repentance, and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins as pre-requisites to the forgiveness of sins, and only life as essential for final salvation.

EMERSON says, "Words have weight when there's a man behind them." That being so what shall we say of words when God is behind them, and his spirit in them? Are they not quick and powerful? Are they not God's saving power to those believing them?

SOME one has said "the infidelity that hurts is that of a man who makes out that he is on God's side, and then wont live up to it." Another says, "If we are right we cannot be hurt by the truth: and if we are not right, we ought to be hurt righteously."

BISHOP BUTLER truly observes that moral precepts are precepts the reasons of which we see; positive precepts are precepts the reasons of which we do not see. Moral duties arise out of the nature of the case itself, prior to external command. Positive duties do not arise out of the nature of the case, but from external command; nor would they be duties at all, but for such command.

THE Corean developments are regarded with grave anxiety. It is thought that Russia intends to make Japan carry out her agreement to make Corea an independent country, the latter having it is said renounced the Japanese alliance and placed the kingdom at the disposal of Russia. The Liberal Ministry in England has been defeated and given place to the Unionists under Lord Salisbury.

JEAN PAUL RICHTER said the noblest spirits are those which turn to heaven, not in the hour of sorrow, but in that of joy. Like the lark they wait for the clouds to disperse, that they may soar up into their native element." That may be so, but we are thankful to know that God's children are invited to look to him in the time of trouble, even if they have neglected to do so when things moved smoothly on. Oh what a good and gracious father God's children have.

IT was said by Chrysostom that Christ was wont to catch every man in the way of his own craft,—magicians with a star, fishers with fish." God speaks in such forms and phrases as may best work upon those to whom he speaks. David a shepherd was selected to feed His people. The magicians were given a star to guide them to Christ. Those who followed Christ for something to eat were given a lesson on spiritual food; and the Samaritan woman at the well heard a sermon concerning the water of life.

THE latest foolishness from the Spiritualistic headquarters, Lake Brady, Ohio, is to the effect that we are all double, and every man embodies a woman. Said an authority on Sunday: "Spirits do not re-incarnate, but matter does. The resurrection of the body is impossible, but the atoms of your body have re-incarnated millions of times. You are all double: you have four eyes, four ears and two noses,—you are four-legged, male and female; every man embodies a woman, and every woman a man."

READER, did it ever occur to you, that in the very nature of things, only those whom Jesus pronounces blessed, are blessed? The world says, "Blessed the rich, the joyous, the elevated, the quick-spirited, the popular, the worldly wise, and the ambitious." Jesus says, "Blessed the mourning, the meek, the spiritually aspiring, the merciful, the pure, the persecuted, the peacemaker." How entirely different the lists! Here the blessed Master strikes out a new path,—teaches a pure and lofty theology and philosophy with a distinctness which the wise men of old could only feel after,—caught a glimpse of, but could not seize. Do not forget it, reader, the kingdom of God awaits the poor in spirit,—comfort awaits the mourner,—the whole earth as an inheritance awaits the meek, hungerers and thirsters after righteousness shall be filled,—shall be perfectly and completely satisfied,—mercy awaits the merciful, the pure in heart see God,—the peacemakers become God's children, and the persecuted for righteousness sake possess the Kingdom of Heaven. What a catalogue of heavenly blessings!

AGAIN, reader,—have you ever thought seriously of the necessity of being in Christ, who is the resurrection and the life, in order to live again, and live always? If not, you are entreated to believe at once the gospel by which the Great Teacher has brought Life and Immortality to light,—turn away from sin, and then, as the heavenly sin-covering garment put him on by baptism into him. Having done this, go on, press forward all the time, seeking for glory, honor and incorruptibility, by a patient continuance in well doing, and God will assuredly render (through Christ) to you eternal life."

NO. 76 of Luther's famous theses against the doctrine of indulgencies, was as follows: "The indulgencies of the Pope cannot take away the smallest daily sin, in regard to the fault of delinquency." The theses were provoked by the merchandise carried on by Tetel a man of notoriously loose life who held the office of commissary-in-chief, who proclaimed his mission with such words as these: "Now you can ransom your souls. Thoughtless man, with 12 pence you can deliver your father out of purgatory. The Lord our God is no longer God. He has committed all power to the Pope." —Swains Religious Revolution in XVI. Century.

WHEN the French infidel said to the peasant, "We will pull down your churches, destroy your pictures, and demolish everything that reminds you of God," the peasant replied, "But you will leave us the stars!" What a noble, devout, and unanswerable answer! Yes, indeed; he would have to leave the stars: and as long as the stars revolve and shine, so long the heavens will declare the glory of God, and the firmament shall show his handiwork. Upon a marble tablet in the observatory at Williamstown College are the words of Isaiah the prophet: "Lift up your eyes on high, and behold who hath created these things that bringeth out their hosts by number: He calleth them all by name; by the greatness of his might, for that he is strong in power; not one faileth." This was the prophet's answer to the skepticism of his times.

"WE assure lly believe that on a day known only to God, the Lord Jesus Christ will suddenly come again from heaven with power and great glory; and we look for this second appearing of our Savior as the blessed hope of his church for which we ought always to wait in sober watchfulness and diligence, that we may be found ready at his coming;" we were not aware, until we read in Glad Tidings, that such an article of faith was at any time held by the Presbyterian Church: but so it seems to have been. If it has not been erased from the book it must be a dead article, judging from the public utterances of its teachers. It strikes us that they must have two hopes if they still hold to this one. If heaven above at death will not satisfy them they must be hard to please; and how they could enjoy heaven above and heaven below at the same time we cannot conceive.

"AND when Jesus saw that he answered discreetly, he said unto him, Thou art not far from the kingdom of God." Mark xii. 34. Our mind is anxiously—we may say, painfully exercised about some of whom it might be said, they are not far from the kingdom of God. Jesus was not speaking of proximity to the kingdom of God,—neither are we. There are some whom we we love, because of many lovely and noble traits of character, who know the Truth and acknowledge it to be God's saving agency; they have some love for it, too, but not enough to cut themselves loose from the world—(religious and secular) and, forsaking all, follow Christ. We tremble for them. It will never be easier, but every day harder for them to take a stand for God and truth in the face of predominant error and fanaticism. Better for them had they never known the way of life, if they neglect this great salvation.

The Question Drawer.

"Mr. Joblin, I would be much obliged to you if you would harmonize your view, that a person must believe the gospel of the kingdom and repent of his sins and then be baptized before he can be saved, with the declaration of Jesus in Mark v. 36, to the ruler of the synagogue. It seems to me if he was only required to believe, it is enough for any body." J.

We would like to ask our correspondent if he can tell us what the Ruler was asked, or required to believe? Was it that gospel he commissioned his disciples to go into all the world to preach, and of which he said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved?" Was the Ruler enquiring what he must do to be saved? If he was not, then the condition exacted him his belief was not a condition of salvation at all. By reference to the 22nd and 23rd verses the cause of his visit to Jesus is plainly seen. His daughter was dangerously ill, and as the last resort applied to Jesus who was performing such wonders in the neighborhood. Jesus went with the Ruler who had expressed his confidence that if he would lay his hands on her she would live. On the way to the Ruler's house a woman in the crowd that followed him was cured of a disease of twelve years standing by just touching his garment, and she was told that her faith had made her whole. It was then that the messengers came to say the Ruler's daughter was dead, and it was useless to trouble the Master further. But having told the Ruler not to be afraid, only believe, he allowed only Peter, James and John to enter the house with him, and put out the crowd and took the damsel by the hand, saying, "Damsel, I say unto thee arise;" and straightway she arose. We are aware that a so-called "Gospel Message" tract, with "Only Believe" as its title has been published; and the words "only believe" is supposed to be the gospel message. In the same way the words "Jesus only" in Mark ix. 8, have been wrested out of its connection and made to take the place of the gospel or the anagnuit the gospel or Christ—God's saving agent. This is misleading, cruel, and outrageously wicked.

INSTEAD of answering "THOMAS" directly, we will ask him what Jesus' answer to the question, "Are there few that be saved was? Did he correct their apprehension by reminding them of his oft-repeated announcement that he had come to save all men? Or, did he not rather say, strive to enter in at the strait gate, for strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it; for wide is the gate and broad is the road that leadeth to destruction and many there be that go in thereat. Does he not also say many shall seek to enter in but shall not be able? We leave this for THOMAS to answer.

"SADDUCEE," we pity you enough to ask you, if the ancient Sadducees had believed as our modern theologians do, would they not have enquired, "Whose wife IS she of the seven who married her, now that she is dead?" Would they have seen any necessity for a resurrection if the seven husbands and the wife were not really dead? And would not another difficulty have confronted them? Suppose some of the husbands had been good and some bad, and the woman good,—according to their theology would they not go to different places? Would it not be almost miraculous for all seven to be good? Under the circumstances supposed all seven are considered eligible, and this goes to show that the belief of the Sadducees gives no countenance to the prevailing notions of this day. And we seriously commend to the attention of "Sadducee," the words of Jesus which need no comment, indeed, there is no room for comment,—for he says, "They which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that age and the resurrection from the dead neither marry nor are given in marriage, neither can they die any more, for they are equal unto the angels, and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." All this by virtue of obtaining that age by a resurrection. It is Jesus who says it. Ponder it well,—never man spake as did he; his words are worth more than ten thousand human assertions and thinks to construct a theory upon."

Editor Restitution:

I think it is necessary for me to write something concerning my work in this section. I have thought often of writing, the trouble with me is perhaps I do not do enough work. Having poor health and not much of this world's goods, circumstances do not permit me to labor extensively in the vineyard of the Lord. Last October a year I went to South Fork Buser River, spoke some five times to attentive audiences, and baptized two of my brother's family, two noble girls. This is about sixteen miles from where I live. Last fall I baptized two, a man and his wife in Middle Island Creek, Tyler County, close to Northbend. About six weeks ago I went to Beren, Ritchie County about eighteen miles from home in the midst of Seventh Day Adventists and Seventh Day Baptists. I held meetings in the Adventist house. I spoke five times to an orderly people, giving the best of attention. There certainly was a good impression made. Saturday forenoon I talked on Eternal Life, in afternoon on the Kingdom foretold by Daniel, at night on the Promises to Abraham. Sunday forenoon on the Begathering of the Twelves Tribes of Israel, at night on the Covenant made with David. Left them with strong invitation to stay longer and come back again. We address widely on the age to come and regathering of Israel nationally, and the conversion of the nations. We talked a good deal on these things. They finally said they guessed they would have to let me have my own way. I do not want my own way but I want God's way. They said the earth would be without an inhabitant. I read to show them that the cities of Israel were to be without an inhabitant. Jer. iv., read it all. They read part of the chapter, but I read it all, and pressed strongly that it did not mean the whole earth. They are a reasonable people, and I think honest. I told them it was a pity that those who were looking for the speedy coming of the Lord did not see alike. I labored earnestly among them to convince them of the grand truths of the gospel. It is with God to give the increase. I would like to labor more abundantly in the cause of the Lord if circumstances would permit. I speak at Holbrook school house every five weeks, and at Brother Wilcox' shoe shop the same, both in Tyler County. There are about twenty members here scattered in a radius of twelve or fourteen miles, too much scattered to meet very often. I wish some of our able speakers could come this way occasionally. I would like to hear their voices among the hills of West Virginia proclaiming the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, and the soon coming of the Son of Man in power and great glory. Dear brother ministers, work for the time is short. May the Church of God heed the call, and be ready to meet her Lord.

S. N. GRIM.

Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I am at home again after an absence of about six weeks, in Tempe, Arizona, where our beloved Brother C. A. Saylor, lives. We held meetings in six different places and at last organized a church of 17 members. Brother Saylor moved from Brown Co., Kansas, to Arizona a little over two years ago. Seven of his children put on baptism, which shows that parents can teach their children at home, which is something that is very much neglected by many of our brethren. He lives in a very pleasant place which seems to me akind of Paradise. I expect to return to that place by the first of September, and preach in the school-house on the farm of my future home, where I expect to make my home. While at Tempe, thirteen put on Christ by baptism. May God bless and keep them. After a short stay at home I went to Bosworth, Mo., and had a very good meeting. From there we went to Blue Mound, where two more came out for Christ. On May first we started for Ripley, Ill., arriving at Mount Sterling the next day. Here we met our Brother Isaac Lanning. We went to visit Brother and Sister Cox, but they were away, so after a friendly chat with Sister Jennie Cox, we started on to Ripley. Here sad news awaited us of our Sister Bowman, who died that evening. While here we had the pleasure of meeting Brother D. M. Hadler. We formed a very favorable opinion of him. We had a good meeting and hope good was done. On the 10th of May I left for Skrainke, Mo. Here the Baptist people closed their door against us and also voted us out of the School house, but we had another house to go to and the meeting went on and the result was that seven put on Christ by baptism, and four of the seven came from the Baptist church. When they heard the gospel of the kingdom of God which Paul said was the power of God unto salvation, they put on Christ by baptism. They started a Bible Class and are going to work in earnest. They are poor in this world's goods but rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom. If any of the preaching brethren pass through their way stop and see them. Call on P. J. Graham, near Skrainko P. O. From here we went to Crawford Co., Kan., where we have been preaching for 25 years, and on the 22nd of May we arrived at home. Since Feb. 26, we have traveled over 4,800 miles, preached 58 discourses and baptized 31 persons from 17 years up to 66 years of age. May God's blessing rest upon all of God's children, and especially upon these new converts, and may they ever be found at their posts as faithful members of Christ. To God give all the glory. On Sunday, June 16, I visited the Seabright neighborhood, in Linn Co. Kan. While here I met Bro. J. C. Kinsey and a host of others, and we had a good meeting with good results. Seven put on Christ in the presence of a large concourse of people. And the next day another came, making eight in all that were added to the church. I am now going to the Lightning Creek Church, where I have preached for 25 years. Alas! it is the last time for that place, as I am preparing to take a new field. Who will come and take my place. The sod is broken and plenty of wheat to be gathered from the tares.

JOHN FOOKS.

Report of Discussion.

Dear readers of THE RESTITUTION, I wish to give you a report of a discussion held two miles south and three miles east of Moorefield, Frontier County, Nebraska, between Brother Almus Adams of Furnace County near Arapahoe, and George Stambo of York County, Nebraska, a minister of the Dunkard Church.

The following questions were discussed:

1. That man is wholly mortal. Brother Adams affirmed this question, and Mr. Stanbo denied.

2. That the kingdom spoken of in Dan. ii. 44, is wholly in the future. Brother Adams affirmed this one, and Mr. Stanbo denied.

3. That trine immersion is the original baptism. Mr. Stanbo affirmed this question, and Bro. Adams denied.

4. That feet washing spoken of in the 13th chapter of John was a command of the church. Mr. Stanbo affirmed and Mr. Adams denied.

The discussion began May 27, 1895, and closed Friday 31, and was left to the people to decide for themselves which was right, hoping that the seed that was sown will lodge in some good honest heart, and grow and bring forth fruit. After the discussion was over, the third quarterly conference was held in the tent three miles east of Moorefield, Nebraska, at the home of Brother and Sister Shultz. Every thing went off smooth and quiet. The conference began June 7, and closed the 9th. During the meeting three came out and Bro. Adams baptized them into the body of Christ. We were all glad to see them make the start to fight the good fight of faith, and to prepare for the kingdom. My hope is, that all of the brothers and sisters will be prepared to meet the Lord when he shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and receive the promise of everlasting life and a home in the kingdom.

S. J. STEDMAN.

Report of Meeting.

By request I send report of the annual meeting of the church at Scholl's Oregon, held on June 8th and 9th, 1895. All were disappointed that Brother Corbaley could not be with us. A letter from him was read, expressing his regrets and encouraging us to press onward in the struggle for eternal life. A good letter from Sister Brooks, now in California, was also read. Brothers E. E. Grant and W. L. Skeels preached for us, and both presented the truth in such a way as to give us courage, and to cause us to rejoice that there were some among us able to and willing to boldly proclaim our Father's message to the perishing world. A feature of the meeting was the Sunday afternoon meeting, at which several essays by different brethren were read, and a Bible reading by the young folks upon "The Characteristics of Christ."

The church officers elected for the next year were W. W. Trousdell, Elder, W. W. Jaquith, Deacon, C. K. Schmeltzer, Deacon, also C. B. Brooks trustee of the church property for three years.

We were reminded by the absence of our loved Sister Skeels of the inroads made by the enemy. We have a monument to her zeal in the Christian cause, in the church building in which we meet.

A number of brethren from a distance were here to encourage us with their presence and strong faith. All, I think, agreed that we had a good and profitable meeting.

Selections.

These Selections were made by little Jessie Brookover, who died shortly after the Holidays. S. R. Wilson.

Let us not be discouraged, though our future is dark and gloomy, let us do our part courageously.

One can not always be judged by his dress.

Do thou duty; it is for thee,
And leave unto the Lord the rest.

The very time to be helpful and pleasant is when everybody is tired and cross.

Character is what you are; reputation is what people think you are. As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he.

Temperance.—Eat not to dullness; drink not to elevation.

Silence. Speak not but what may benefit others or yourself, avoid trifling conversation.

Order.—Let all your things have their places; let each part of your business have its time.

Resolution.—Resolve to perform what you ought; perform without fail what you resolve.

Frugality.—Make no expense but do good to others or yourself; waste nothing.

Industry.—Lose no time; be always employed in something useful; cut off all unnecessary actions.

Sincerity.—Use no hurtful deceit; think innocently and justly, and if you speak, speak accordingly.

Justice.—Wrong none by doing injuries, or omitting the benefits that are your duty.

Avoid extremes; forbear resenting injuries so much as you think they deserve.

Tolerate no uncleanliness in body, clothes or habitation.

Be not disturbed at trifles or at accidents common or unavoidable.

SCRIPTURE VERSES.

Trust.—Not as I will, but as thou wilt, Matt. xxvi. 39.

Honesty.—Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect, Matt. v. 48.

Benevolence.—Cast thy bread upon the waters; for thou shalt find it after many days, Eccl. xi. 1.

Courage and bravery.—Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you, Luke vi. 27.

Promptness.—Boast not thyself of tomorrow, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth, Prov. xxvii. 1.

Animals.—A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast, Prov. xii. 10; Job xii. 7.

Habit.—My son, if sinners entice thee, consent thou not, Prov. i. 10. (Regard for the parents and the aged.)

Honor thy father and mother.

Heroism.—He gave his life a ransom for many.

Politeness.—A little wrong to another is a great wrong to ourselves.

"It is an argument for the truth of the Bible, that there is nothing else that informs us what God designs by that series of revolution and events that are brought to pass in the world: what end, he asks, and what scheme he has laid out. It is most fit that the intelligent beings of the world should be made acquainted with it. The thing that is God's great design is something concerning them; and the revolutions by which it is to be brought to pass, are revolutions among them, and in their state. The state of the inanimate unperceiving part of the world, is nothing regarded, any otherwise than in a subservience to the perceiving and intelligent part. And it is most rational to suppose, that God should reveal the design he has been carrying on to his rational creatures: that as God hath made them capable of it, they may actively fall in with and promote it, acting herein as the subjects and friends of God."—Edwards.

Poetry.

Sterling Worth.

What is there in the garb of man,
That we should honor or despise?
To judge of grain, are we to scan,
The husk, when in the kernel lies?

A coat, by honest labor born,
May wrap a heart as true as steel,
And so may husks, all weather worn,
A perfect grain of wheat conceal.

A crown may rest upon a head
Where seldom dwelleth worthy thought,
While countless noble thoughts are bred,
Neath felt of straw that's roughly wrought.

What signifies our place of birth,
The length of purse, or place we fill?
The only real test of worth,
Is passing through the fanning mill.

The hand of time, the flail doth ply,
Alike upon the rich and poor,
The great, the small, the low, the high,
Are equal on the threshing floor.

And he who oversees the fan,
That chaff and wheat doth separate,
Will favor not the garb of man,
The grain must be of standard weight.

News from Jerusalem. No. 3.

Since writing my last article, Mr. Jacob Eliahu, a native Jew from Palestine on a brief visit to this country from the Holy City, delivered his second discourse to our Chicago Church, with regard to the "Fulfillment of Prophecy from Personal Observation in the Holy Land." Our hearts were cheered as we listened to one of the descendants of Abraham, (who now believes that Jesus is the Christ) relate in detail what his eyes had seen with regard to the marvelous fulfillment of God's Word in a perfectly natural way.

He dwelt at large as to how God in the past had manifested both his pleasure and displeasure, by the giving or the withholding of rain. When the people were obedient, and did that which was well pleasing in his sight, he showered upon them an abundance of rain, and as a result plenty and prosperity was seen everywhere, and when the rain did not come, the people assembled together and enquired: "What have we done that God has not sent us the rain?" He said such was the case today. He called special attention to the matter of the "latter rain," and how much the Scriptures had to say about that rain. He dwelt upon the literal fulfillment of Deut. xi. 10-17, where God tells Israel that he was bringing them to a good land, "the land, whither ye go to possess it, is a land of hills and valleys, and drinketh water of the rain of heaven: a land which the Lord thy God careth for; the eyes of the Lord thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year." He then promises that if they are obedient, then "I will give you the rain of your land in his due season, the first rain, and the latter rain." But if disobedient, "then the Lord's wrath shall be kindled against you, and he shut up heaven, that there be no rain, and that the land yield not her fruit: and ye perish quickly from off the good land which the Lord giveth you." The sequel was, that they were disobedient, and they did "perish quickly from off the good land," and the earth became as "iron and the heavens as brass," and the land became a desolate barren waste, from that day until within our own lifetime.

He shows from prophecy that after Israel's punishment should be ended, and the land had enjoyed her sabbaths, that God's favor would once more return both to the land and the people, and Israel would say as recorded in Hos. vi. 1-3: "Come and let us return unto the Lord: for he hath torn, and he will heal us; he hath smitten, and he will bind us up." "Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the Lord: his going forth is prepared as the morning; and he shall come unto us as the rain, as the latter and former rain unto the earth." He showed that these rains which were withheld have returned in our own lifetime, but has more especially during the last ten years become quite noticeable. He showed from an official record what the rainfall had been for the first five years of the ten, and the same record showed that during the last five years the rainfall had doubled in quantity, and he stated that they were still on the increase, especially the "latter rain."

He also stated that the early rain developed the seed, which was invariably followed by a rapid growth, on account of hot weather, but the early rain was never sufficient to bring crops to maturity, they depended upon the "latter rain," and if the latter rain failed to come, the crops were ruined, and distress followed. In such a case, the people at once concluded that God had not given the rain because they were guilty of something that was not pleasing in his sight, and it was incumbent upon them to repent of the evil. He said the people here in this country have no idea how much they (in Jerusalem) must depend upon God. The people of Jerusalem have to rely upon the rainfall for water supply for domestic uses, but in Chicago people draw from Lake Michigan in great abundance for every need, and were even wasteful with it; the contrast seemed great to them. He thought that the people under such circumstances were apt to forget God. With the return of the rains, the Jews began to come until now, there were more than twice as many Jews in the Holy land than returned from Babylon, which all told was only 43,000. There are in Palestine today, over 100,000, so are 70,000 of these have returned in our own day. It became a fact, that there was not room enough inside the city to accommodate God's ancient people who were flocking back to their home from which they have been so long exiled, and now there are as many houses outside of the walls as there are on the inside, which ten or twelve years ago were fields. At that time, no ones life was safe if caught outside of the walls at sunset, when the gates were closed. But now, the gates are never closed, either by night or by day.

Remember what Zechariah said: "Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls, for the multitude of men and cattle therein." Is not this the beginning of the fulfillment of this prophecy? God's divine purposes are being literally carried out.

While a few of us were visiting our Jerusalem friends in Chicago, they showed us a plaster model of a tomb in Jerusalem, which had just been sent them, that they may illustrate just what the tomb of Joseph was like wherein Jesus was buried.

We appreciate the instruction conveyed to us by it, for it is evident at many of us have entertained wrong conceptions concerning it.

The chambers of the tomb are hewn out of the rock, and was a tomb such as was used by the rich, like Joseph. The poor could not afford to construct such tombs. Another thing which interested us is, that this kind of a tomb harmonizes with what we read in the Sacred Book concerning Joseph's tomb.

The opening to the tomb was a square hole near the bottom, and no one could look in without stooping down." And the stone placed against the opening, was not a great boulder, as many have heretofore supposed, but a large round stone, like a millstone, which rolled in a groove along the inside of the tomb, and dropped into a socket at the entrance, thus completely closing it up. While the women might possibly roll the stone along the groove, yet they could not possibly raise the stone from the socket. This was a matter of interest to us, and if it were not for the expense, I would like to have a cut made from it, that THE RESTITUTION readers may see the picture, and get a better idea than can be given by pen. They have kindly consented to draw me sketch of it.

They also showed us some tear bottles, taken from some ancient tombs.

Our visits to these people have been of interest and profit. Especially do we admire their godly walk in life.

Dear readers, we have in fact fallen upon the times when this "generation" shall not pass until all shall be accomplished. Oh, what holy and pure lives we should all live at this critical period. May God give us a realizing sense of our duty, and what a pleasure is even now derived from a godly life.

Only a tiny candle
Lit by him,
Not lost, though he has many
Lamps to trim.

Only an earthen vessel
Used today,
Although in the Master's pathway
God once lay.

Only a cup of water
Given in love,
But the Savior saw and owned it
From above.

Only the world's derision
Meekly borne,
Yet he notes the word of rejection,
Done in scorn.

Only a little service
By the way,
He'll reward the smallest effort
"In that day."

Only following Jesus
To the end;
And then his promised glory
He will send.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.- No. 24.

MARCHING OUT.

We left the Israelites in the sea. The hosts of Pharaoh had been drowned in the hour of dawn on Monday morning. "Not so much as one of them remained." But the people of the Lord, being far in advance of the Egyptians, were untouched by the waters. They continued their journey through the sea. Read Exodus xiv. 23, 24. "And the waters returned, and covered the chariots and the horsemen, and all the host of Pharaoh that came in after them, there remained not so much as one of them.

But the children of Israel walked upon dry land in the midst of the sea; and the waters were a wall unto them on their right hand and on their left. "Late in the afternoon the passage ended." It was the last day of the feast of unleavened bread. They are out of Egypt. "Thus the Lord saved Israel that day out of the hand of the Egyptians, and Israel saw the Egyptians dead upon the seashore. And Israel saw that great work which the Lord did upon the Egyptians; and the people feared the Lord, and believed the Lord and his servant Moses."

Then came that wonderful song of deliverance. You must read it or, better still learn it all by heart. Ex. xv. For by and by we shall sing the same song. It will be when we have gotten the victory over the old Pagan and Papal Beast, and are standing on the sea of glass with the harps of God in our hands. Rev. xv. 2, 3, 4. "And they sing the song of Moses, the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty: just and true are thy ways, thou king of saints who shall not fear thee, Oh Lord, and glorify thy name? for thou only art holy; for all nations shall come and worship before thee; for thy judgments are made manifest."

"O the new, new song, we shall sing it soon."

There will be no more oppression then, no more Red Seas to cross, no more deserts to go through, for the land of Canaan will at last be won to be our inheritance forever. But we are not yet done with our story; there are knotty questions of history to clear up and "the wherefore" of God's dealings with Israel in Egypt, to bring out more plainly before the eyes of your mind. Was Meneptah himself drowned in the Red Sea? It looks as if he were, "He made ready his chariot," he "took his people with him," "he pursued after the children of Israel," and "when Pharaoh drew nigh," are the expressions used in the Bible narrative. Ex. xiv. 6-10. David in the Psalms speaks of him as being overthrown in the Red Sea. Psalm cxxxvi. 15. But if he were drowned, he only reigned six years instead of eight. Still it is often said that a king does a thing himself, when as a matter of fact, he is not personally present at all. He can make ready his chariot, and pursue his enemies through his servants and captains, and have it reported that he did it because it is done by his orders. This may have been the way with Meneptah. His tomb was left unfinished, for the bondmen were called away and the engraving tools were dropped. Not an Israelite was left to finish the ornamentation of the last resting-place of this stubborn Pharaoh. His story was left unwritten; the Egyptians recorded none of the disasters that befel their kings. So we are left quite in the dark as to what happened in Egypt after the children of Israel were on the other side of the sea. There are no long papyrus rolls to tell us, no hieroglyphics cut in the rock to picture that last awful catastrophe that fell upon the relentless foes of the Hebrews.

If Meneptah and a remnant of his army escaped to return to Zoan, he was glad enough to bury the history of his reign in the oblivion of silence. Seti II., whose name was also Meneptah, ascended the throne soon after the exodus took place. There is such confusion in the records on the monuments about this time, that we can make out but little about the people and their kings. There seem to have been four Seti's and two Meneptah's. Then it is supposed that the XIX. dynasty—that of Esau—was overthrown and replaced by the descendants of the native Egyptian sovereigns.

The firstborn of Meneptah, you must remember, had died in that terrible night, when all the firstborn of Egypt were swept away. How long was it from the time Moses came back to Egypt, and appeared at the court of Pharaoh with the rod of God in his hand till the Israelites were out of bondage? Not more than twenty-five days—a little more than three weeks! A surprisingly short space of time for such wonders to be wrought. What lofty, inspiring faith lived in the breast of Moses! He knew the power of Pharaoh. He knew the stubbornness of his heart, his cruelty, his pride, his ambition. The king could order his head cut off, or have him swung by the neck from a tree, but he felt no fear, "By faith," he stood there, and delivered the commission that had been given him at the burning bush. "By faith," he stretched out the rod; "by faith," he led the hosts of the Lord through the sea. Faith in whom, dear children? In the Lord God of Israel, in your God, and in mine! Moses cannot be awed into submission; he will not [illegible] except no compromise. He has heard the voice of God, he believes that the Lord, by his hand, will set his people free. Do you believe as he did?—that God, by the hand of Jesus, will set us free from the bondage of corruption, and will lead us into the heavenly Canaan to die no more? You must! You must!

Letters Sent to Michigan Conference.

These were not read for lack of time on account of a funeral held at the church Sunday morning.—M. A. W.

Dear Bro. and Sister Woodward:

I am one of the lone ones living in faith with all of the brethren who are in Christ, waiting for the soon coming kingdom. I came from Belle Plain, Iowa, in the year 1885, and belonged to the "Church of God" at Irving, Iowa, and was acquainted with G. C. Ramsey, H. V. Reed, J. M. Stevenson, A. J. Eychaner, Bro. Prime, G. M. Myers and others of the brethren. Since I came away I have only corresponded with G. M. Myers and Bro. Chown. Have been in Delta since coming to Michigan. No brethren here and have not heard one sermon since I left Iowa, so you may know I have been hungry some time to hear the Word preached. I am still in the faith waiting. I saw in THE RESTITUTION the appointment at Dutton, and want to come but cannot. It has only been a short time since I knew of the whereabouts of any of the "Church of God" until I got THE RESTITUTION, and that is only lately. You may wonder at this, but you will know when I come, for I will come soon if God permit. I would like so much to be with you at this meeting, for if there is any one I like to associate with it is the people of God; people around here are very wicked, and I live all by myself, for I have no wife now. My health has been very poor for the last four years, but I have good faith in God and his promises, and in the soon coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, for this is all my pleasure. This hope has kept my poor heart beating through lots of trouble. But thank the good Lord we will soon have all crossed the last wave, for we can almost see clear over the satanic billows now. Christ is soon coming with strong hand, and with that will come our rest and immortality. Let us all be faithful until Jesus comes. Will you pray for me? May God bless you all and be with you in all your meetings.

S. E. BAIRD.

Dear Christian Friends at Dutton:

I do so much wish I could be with you during the meetings which will commence this evening. I have been blessed more in the last year than ever before, and I thank God for it. Thank him for one thing above all others, he brought me to him. Sometimes I almost get discouraged and think the trials most too many, but no, dear friends, they are not. I would that more of my young friends would accept him as their Savior. He is a dear, dear friend in time of need. I ask for your sincere prayers to help me, I want to be found faithful, doing my Master's will when he comes to claim his own. Your Sister in Christ.

LILLIE PEARL CHAFFEE.

This dear young sister had many hard things to overcome, having been led into much of city life which is conducive of injury to body and soul, but thank God her heart was touched with love at the conference a year ago, and the change is simply marvelous. Nothing but an earnest desire to do God's will could have worked this upon her young life. Be faithful, dear Lulu, the overcomer's crown awaits you. We were so sorry you could not be with us, but when we remember the kind deed of love, and sacrifices that kept you from this meeting, we praise God. He gives you grace for the work.

M. A. W.

Dear Brothers and Sisters assemble in Conference:

I send you greeting and Christian love, as I cannot be with you. I want to send you a few words of encouragement, and to ask you to remember us in your most earnest prayers. May God bless all who may be permitted to meet together for the advancement of the cause we prize above all others. God has so wonderfully blessed me since we met in conference last June. He has answered my many earnest prayers, by bringing my only child to his feet for mercy. O, bless his holy name. Can I, will I, ever doubt him again? May God forbid that I should, and I want to say to any of my brothers or sisters who have any special requests to ask of "Our Father" not to get discouraged if they are not granted at once, for remember he has promised "not to withhold any good thing from those that walk uprightly before him." If he keeps us waiting a little, it is for our good. Perhaps because we need to learn patience. This is, and has been one of my hardest lessons to learn. Patience is only a small word, but O, how hard to command at all times and under all circumstances. Truly our numbers are few compared to the popular churches, but we have so much more to hope for and to cling to. Let us not grow weary in well-doing for we know we shall reap if we faint not. Your Sister in Christ.

CLARA J. CHAFFEE.

How much we missed the dear sister from our prayer and testimony meetings. God only knows, but we realized your deed of love which deserved you would work its new reward.

M. A. W.

Church of God assembled in Conference at Dutton, Mich., Dear Brothers and Sisters:

I received a postal from the Secretary, wishing me to attend the meeting at Dutton, and oh! how I would like to go once more and hear the truth preached. But it will not be so I can attend so I thought I would write a few lines and send my mite to help along the cause if I can do nothing more. So enclosed please find one dollar to be used as seen fit. I do not know as there will be any there that will remember Bro. Martin Daniel's of Prairieville oldest daughter, or not. I am she. I was baptized June 1883, by Bro. E. Hoyt at the conference at Mendon, Michigan. But have never met with any of like faith, nor heard a gospel sermon preached since. I have my Bible, and have read THE RESTITUTION ever since and tried to live the best I could, still I feel very weak as if I had not progressed as I should. Could I have had help from the Church, or an encouraging word from those of like faith once in awhile to help strengthen me on my way. But my faith in the gospel is strong, it is the only way whereby we can be saved. Pray for me that I may be strengthened, that my name may not be blotted from the book of life. Your Sister in Christ.

MRS. EMMA L. CHOATE.

OBITUARY.

Sister Sarah Ellen Armstrong died June 17, 1895, at her home in Clinton County, In., aged 54 years. I immersed her about fourteen years ago. She was one of those earnest workers in the Master's cause. Funeral by the writer at the house. Many of the dear brethren and sisters gathered to hear words of comfort from God's Word, also many friends. The opening lesson was from I Cor. ix. first to fifth verse, "Judge nothing before the time, till the Lord come." Showing we have no right to judge, leave that until the Lord come, and then every man shall have praise of the Lord. I quoted from I Thess. iv. 13 to 18, also Job xiv. 10 to 16; Job xvii. 13 to 14; xix. 23-27; xi. 23-27; Rev. xiv. 13; Isa. xxvi. 19; Jer. xxxi. 15-16. We then laid her away to rest till the Lord shall come to reward his people in the earth made new.

J. S. HATCH.

Mary Ames was born May 10, 1813, was married twice. Her last husband's name was Rogers. Sis. Rogers has for the last fifteen years been living with her daughter, Sister Weaver in Hesperia, Michigan. She embraced the faith about thirty years ago, falling asleep June 11, 1895. She had two daughters and one son, all gone to their rest. Sister Rogers has been a most earnest worker in the Church for years, always ready [illegible] we went there to preach the Word. The Weaver home was indeed a home, but now it is all broken up. First Bro. Weaver, then Sister Weaver, now the last one has gone. The home goes into the hands of others. When O Lord, will that time come, when "One shall not build and another inhabit." Elder B. W. Woodward preached the funeral discourse.

Eliza Ann Warner was born at Lanox, Madison County, N. Y. She moved with her parents to Genesc County, N. Y. She married Levi E. Gorton in the year 1840, and afterwards moved to Colon, St. Joseph County, Michigan. Her husband died January, 1859, leaving two living children, a son and a daughter. The son died nearly two years ago and the daughter still lives in Dakota. She was united in marriage with J. D. Sheridan, March 8, 1860. Mr. and Mrs. Sheridan moved to Osage, in July, 1870. She has been a kind, loving and faithful wife. She shared equally with her companion the pleasures of this life. She also bore the adversities, of which there have been many, with patience. As to her hope, she was in perfect sympathy with her husband in the anticipation of something better beyond the grave. She passed away May 26, 1895, aged 78 years, six months and 26 days.

Sylvanus Pike was born June 23, 1811, in Whitingham, Windham County, Vermont, where he lived thirty-nine years, when he moved to New York, living five years in Jefferson and St. Lawrence Counties. From there he moved to Palmira, Lenawee County, Michigan, living there five years, next moving to Watson, Allegan County, Michigan, April 30, 1860, there spending the rest of his life, falling asleep in Jesus May 22, 1893, aged 33 years, 10 months and 21 days. Bro. Pike was a member of the Methodist Church since young manhood, with the exception of five years in which he belonged to the Baptist Church. About twenty years ago he embraced the Abrahamic faith, and has ever been a worthy member. He has been twice married. He leaves a wife, two sons and other relatives and friends to mourn his absence, but thank God we may lay him to rest in hope. The writer spoke at his funeral from John xi. 23, 24, 25.

MARY A. WOODWARD.

Dear ones of the household of faith again we are called upon to tell the sad story of the death of another dear brother. Bro. L. J. Whitesett who died of paralysis, aged 65 years and 8 months. As Bro. Whitesett is widely known and has many warm friends that would perhaps like to know the particulars in regard to his sickness and death, we will say that five years ago this month while at conference he was taken with a stroke of paralysis, since which time he has not been able to preach as heretofore, but, however, feeble as he was, has preached almost every Sunday, held a 3 days meeting in Bro. Titus' new barn, held two protracted meetings and baptized six into the name of Christ, since his coming here among us a little over a year ago, and the Sunday previous to his death he filled his appointment as usual, and after preaching his sermon he said, now this may be the last time I will have the pleasure of meeting with you, so I would like to talk to you a little while on baptism. He then gave his congregation a loving exhortation on the great importance of obedience to our Lord's command. What a noble memorial lesson, yes one that knew Bro. Whitesett best will miss him most, for he was a most zealous proclaimer of the Glad Tidings, which shall be a joy to all people. About a year ago he had another light stroke, and the night of his death he awoke his wife about one o'clock and said, "I am dying," and in a moment was silent in death. As there was none of our preaching brethren near, Bro. C. W. Titus read a favorite chapter, and then with loving hands our dear brother was layed to rest in the Garfield cemetery, in Sac County, Iowa about twelve miles east of Sac City. To me it seemed sad indeed, that after all his faithful service and the many times he has spoken comforting words on like occasions, that there was none to speak words of comfort to his afflicted wife and children, which are four in number three sons and one daughter. Bro. George Hanes was sent for to talk but refused to come simply on the ground of his great love for Bro. Whitesett, he said he knew he could not talk for grief. O dear ones of the blessed faith, I would that we all had such love for one another. How easy it would be for us to fulfill the law of Christ which is the law of liberty, then our Lord could say, "Ye are my disciples indeed," but my prayer is that our good Father in heaven will inspire our hearts with as much zeal and love for the upbuilding of the Church as our dear brother that has just been taken from us by the cruel hand of death, and now let each one of us do our part in trying to comfort and protect his afflicted companion, and in the crowning day of which he loved so well to sing, may we each and all be gathered as precious jewels.

"The crowning day is coming, is coming
by and by,
When our Lord shall come in power and glory from on high,
Oh, the glorious sight will gladden each waiting, watchful eye,
In the crowning day that's coming by and by.

MRS. E. R. BROWN.

A special train of first class day coaches and sleeping cars has been chartered by the Young People's Christian Union to run through solid to the Boston Convention July 10th to 14th. The official route selected from Chicago is the Nickel Plate, West Shore, and Fitchburg Railroads, and the special train is scheduled to leave Chicago at 12:30 noon Monday, July 8th, and will stop at local stations to pick up Boston passengers. The schedule is so arranged that Ft. Wayne will be reached at 5:25 P. M. Fostoria at 7:52, leaving Cleveland at 10:30 P. M., running directly through, and arriving at Boston in the early evening.

The true brilliancy of the diamond is seen in the dark: the true grace of the saint is exhibited under trial.

Conference Notice.

The Iowa State Conference of the Church of God will be held in Marshalltown, beginning Thursday evening August 15th, and lasting over till Sunday evening the 25th, 1895. Our reasons for place—the most central, and most convenient in the State for railroad for all brethren. At the crossing of the Chicago & North-Western, Iowa Central, and the Great Western or Diagonal Road. The location in the city is on North Third Street opposite the Green House. The street car line starts out just east of the depot and for a nickel will carry you to the ground. Come prepared to tent and to live. Will have tents on the ground, but all who have tents bring them.

As to time, it will be of more leisure than in June, and therefore secure a better attendance. Also crops will then be sufficiently matured to tell of a certainty what can be done for Evangelistic Work. A regular programme will be given out for work. Begin now to arrange to attend the meetings. Leave your hobbies at home and come prepared for a meeting of straight-forward gospel and Bible work. We shall try to make this one of the most interesting meetings we have ever held in Iowa. We expect to be able to secure reduced rates upon all of the railroads in the state for this occasion.

G. M. MYERS, Pres.
O. J. ALLARD, Sec.

To Our Patrons.

We ask you each to renew your subscription for 1895. Besides your names, we want several hundred new ones added to our list. This can be done if you help. Without your assistance we cannot hope to see this accomplished. As we are situated at present, we cannot offer big premiums for new subscribers. We will, however, on request, send to the person sending us his own renewal and a new name for one year, one-half pound of assorted tracts, post paid. For two new subscribers we will send one pound of tracts. Our poor folks those not able to pay for their paper—will receive it free on application by them. We trust to the generosity of those who love the cause and have some means at their disposal, to assist in this work. It is the Lord's cause, and he is sure to reward. In the reckoning day we shall have due credit for each good act.

Attention, Please.

We want the attention for a few moments of the friends who are owing us for this paper. You have promised to pay. We depend on the fulfilment of your promise to get means to pay for paper, typesetting and press work. You delay paying us. We are compelled to pay our obligations. This is written for the purpose of inducing you to look at the question from our side of the fence. How do you like the view from our side? What would you think if our positions were reversed?

PRESENTS FOR FRIENDS.

I hereby offer until further notice one copy of "The Gospel of the Kingdom," leather gilt binding; one copy of same in cloth binding; one copy of "Twelve Words;" one of 8 page tract; and one of "Seeking and Finding," all for the low price of one dollar. This offer is made for the good of the cause of truth. Send to Wiley Jones, Manchester, Va. not to this office.

Fourteenth Christian International Endeavor Convention, Boston, Mass., July 10-14, 1895.

The Lake Erie and Western Railroad, "Natural Gas Route," in connection with Wabash and Canadian Pacific Railway, via Detroit and Montreal, has been selected as the official route for the State of Indiana. Delegates, members and friends: Special Christian Endeavor train leaves Indianapolis, Monday, July 8th, at 7.00 P. M., and reaches Boston, Wednesday, July 10th. This is without question the grandest scenic route obtainable. Make your arrangements to accompany the official train of sleepers and free reclining chairs cars. Only $19.00 round trip. For sleeping car reservation, or any other information desired, address Dr. F. C. Heath, Master of Transportation for Society, or C. F. Daly, Gen. Pass. Agent L. E. & W. R. R., Indianapolis, Ind.—July 10.

Low Rates to Colorado.

On account of the meeting of the National Educational Association at Denver, Col., July 5th to 12th, 1895, the North-Western Line will sell excursion tickets to Denver, Pueblo, Colorado Springs and Manitou at the rate not to exceed one fare for the round trip (with $2.00 added for membership fee). The time limit of these tickets will be extremely liberal, and an excellent opportunity will be afforded for a summer sojourn in the "Rockies," or enjoyable side trips to the Black Hills, Yellowstone National Park or the Pacific Coast. For full information apply to agents of connecting lines, or address W. B. Kniskern, General Passenger and Ticket Agent Chicago & North-Western R'y, Chicago, Ill.; A. H. Waggener, T. P. A., 7 Jackson place, Indianapolis, Ind.

The Nickel Plate Road has compiled a list of country homes along the South Shore of Lake Erie, willing to accommodate summer boarders, and a copy will be mailed to any address by enclosing a stamp to any agent of the Nickel Plate Road or to B. F. Horner, Gen'l Passenger Agent.—Aug. 31

THE SPECIAL EVANGELIST FUND.

This fund is raised and controlled by the Sisters, for the purpose of placing some young man in the field as a proclaimer of truth. Hereafter in making donations to this fund please say whether or not you intend to give a stated amount regularly each quarter. This work is continuous, and quarterly contributions are asked for, though single time gifts are very welcome. Send all monies for this fund to Mrs. Eva L. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind.

Niagara Falls Excursion, Thursday, August 8, 1895, via the Lake Erie and Western R.R.

On Thursday, August 8, 1895, the Lake Erie & Western R. R. will run their popular excursion to Cleveland, Chautauqua Lake, Buffalo and Niagara Falls at following very low rates, viz.:

Peoria	$7.50
Bloomington	7.00
LaFayette	6.00
Michigan City	5.00
Indianapolis	5.00
Tipton	5.00
Lima	4.00
Ft Wayne	5.00
Muncie	5.00
Connersville	5.00
Rushville	5.00
Newcastle	5.00
Cambridge City	5.00
Fremont	4.00
Sandusky	4.00

With corresponding reductions from intermediate points.

In addition to the above, the purchasers of these tickets will be given privilege of special excursion side trip tickets to Lewiston-on-the-Lake, including a steamboat ride on Lake Ontario, for 25 cents. To Toronto and return by Lake from Lewiston $1.00; to Thousand Island $5.00. Tickets for the above side trips can be had when purchasing Niagara Falls ticket, or at any time on train.

Besides the above privileges, with that of spending Sunday at the Falls, we will furnish all those who desire a side trip from Brocton Junction to Chautauqua Lake and return free of charge.

Tickets of admission to places of special interest at or near Niagara Falls, but outside the reservation, including toll over the great International Bridge to the Canadian side, elevators to the water's edge at Whirlpool Rapids on the Canadian side, will be offered on train at a reduction from prices charged after reaching the Falls.

Do not miss this opportunity to spend Sunday at Niagara Falls. The excursion train will arrive at Niagara Falls 7.00 A. M. Friday, August 9, 1895, and will leave the Falls returning Sunday morning, August 11, at 9 o'clock, stopping at Cleveland Sunday afternoon, giving an opportunity to visit the magnificent monument of the late President Garfield, and many other interesting points.

Tickets will be good, however, to return on regular trains leaving the Falls Saturday, August 10, for those not desiring to remain over. Tickets will also be good returning on all regular trains up to and including Tuesday, August 13, 1895. Secure your tickets, also chair and sleeping car accommodations, early. Those desiring can secure accommodation in these cars while at the Falls. For further information call on any agent Lake Erie & Western R. R., or address C. F. Daly, Gen. Pass. Agent, Indianapolis, Ind.

NOTICE.

Index Rerum: A Ready Reference on Biblical Subjects, by R. C. Bingley, is the title of a pamphlet of 68 pages containing texts of Scripture grouped under different headings, making it a very handy work in studying the Bible. Several editions have been sold, and the continued calls for it is evidence of its worth. In the back part is a large chart folded showing the duration of the kingdoms of men from the Babylonian Dynasty to the end of Gentile times. Price 15 cents, at this office. It is worth five times the price. Send for one or more.

Enclose a stamp to any agent of the Nickel Plate Road for an elaborately illustrated Art Souvenir entitled "Summer Outings."—aug 31.

CONTINGENT FUND.

Dear Restitution:

Favorable responses having been made to suggestions for a "Contingent Fund," the writer would suggest further that all calls to administer baptism be answered by the one nearest the candidate, as this will economize the fund.

All who desire to contribute to the "Contingent Fund," please send remittances to THE RESTITUTION office, Plymouth, Ind., and receipts will be sent, and the fund disbursed as may be requested. Publication to be made of amounts of donations and expenditures.

We whose names are herewith subscribed, agree to pay during the year 1895, the amount subscribed, the fund thus created to be employed in answering calls to baptize persons, who, being isolated from the brotherhood are unable to secure the services of an administrator.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION," Plymouth, Marshall Co., Ind.

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money order, or registered letter. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. Some will say I have sent bills loose in letters hundreds of times, and it always went safe through." No one denies it, and you may send so many times again, and yet the very next time you may be the loser. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have, and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring your address changed, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above, you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended to.

WANTED—Several Hundred New Subscribers for THE RESTITUTION for 1895.

Poetry.

Speak Kind Words.

Do you know a heart that hungers
For a word of love and cheer?
There are many such about us—
It may be one is near.
Look around you. If you find it,
Speak the word that's needed so;
And your own heart may be strengthened
By the help that you bestow.

It may be that some one falters,
On the brink of sin and wrong,
And a word from you may save him
Help to make the tempted strong.
Look around you. O, my brother!
What a sin is yours and mine
If we see that help is needed,
And we give no friendly sign!

Never think kind words are wasted
Bread on waters cast are they:
And it may be we shall find them
Coming back to us some day
Coming back when sorely needed,
In a time of deep distress;
So, my friend, let's give them freely,
Gift and giver God will bless.

—H. M. Addison.

PSALM. 46.

47 COM. VER.

1. Unto the end; For the sons of Kore, a psalm.

2. All the nations, clap your hands; (lit. may ye have etc.) alala unto God with a voice of gladness;

3. Because a Lord Most High, to be feared, a great King is he, over all the earth.

4. He hath made laities subject to us, and nations hath he put under our feet:

5. He hath selected [illegible] which he loved. Interlude.

6. God hath gone up in a shout of alala, Lord with a voice of a trumpet.

7. Exalt the strain unto our God; exalt the strain; exalt the strain unto our King; exalt the strain.

8. Because a king of all the earth is God: exalt the strain in an understanding way.

9. God hath become King over the nations; God hath taken his seat upon his sacred throne.

10. Rulers of laities have been gathered together unto the God of Habraam, because God's people who control the earth have been exceedingly exalted.

PSALM 47 (48 COM. VER.)

1. A psalm for an ode for the sons of Kore, on a second (day) of a sabbatic period.

2. Great is the Lord and greatly to be praised in a city of our God, on his sacred mountain;

3. Rooted in the gladness of all the earth, Sion's mountains its sides toward the North, the city of the great King.

4. God is recognized in her dignities, whenever he interveneth for her.

5. Because lo, the kings have been gathered together; they have come to the same place.

6. When they saw in this wise they wondered, they were disturbed, they were moved:

7. Trembling laid hold of them: There were these woes (birth-pangs) as of one bringing forth.

8. With a violent spiritual-breath wilt thou break ships of Tharsis (Thrace).

9. Even as we have heard; in this wise have we perceived (seen with the mind's eye in vision meant) in a city of the Lord of Hosts, in a city of our God, God hath founded it forever. Interlude.

10. We have apprehended it to be thy mercy in the midst of thy laity.

11. According to thy name, O God, in this wise also be thy praise unto the ends of the earth; thy right hand full of righteousness,

12. May Mount Sion have rejoiced; May the daughters of Joudaia have been glad on the account of thy judicial renderings, O Lord.

13. May ye have surrounded and encompassed Sion; May ye have discoursed in her towers;

14. Set your hearts on her ability and go through her palaces, that ye may discourse them to another generation:

15. Because this One is our God unto the age and unto the age of the age; He will shepherd us for the ages.

PSALM 48 (49 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end: For the sons of Kore. a psalm.

2. May ye have heard all these things. ye nations; May ye have marked them well all ye who inhabit the inhabited.

3. Ye earth-born and ye sons of men, rich and needy together.

4. My mouth will talk wisdom and the meditation of my heart understanding.

5. I will incline mine ear unto a parable; I will open up my theme with a psaltry.

6. Why do I fear in a day of wickedness? The transgression of my heel will encompass me.

7. There are those who trust in their ability, and who boast in the fulness of their riches.

8. Should a brother not redeem, will a man redeem himself? No, he will not give unto God his expiation of himself and the price of the redemption of himself, even though he hath toiled forever, and should he live unto the end so as not to see corruption.

11. Whenever he shall see wise men condemned to die, at the same time will the thoughtless and foolish perish, and leave behind them their wealth to aliens.

12. And their graves will be their habitations unto generation and generation: They have called their landed estates by their names.

13. And a man though he be in honor hath not understood and he hath been compared to the domestic-animals that are without reason and he hath been likened unto them.

14. This their way is their stumbling-block, and after these things will they commend (bless). Interlude.

15. Like sheep as it were have they been put in Hades; (the grave) death will shepherd them; and the upright will lord it over them in the morning; and their cry for help will have waxed old in Hades (the grave) away from their glory.

16. But God will redeem my soul from out the hands of Hades when he taketh me. Interlude.

17. Fear not when a man groweth rich and when the glory of his house hath been increased.

18. Because not when he dieth will he take them all, nor will his glory go down along with him.

19. Because his soul should have been blessed with his life; He should confess whenever thou doest him good.

20. He will go in unto generations of his fathers; until an age he will not see light.

21. A man though he be in honor hath not understood; He hath been compared to the domestic-animals that are without reason, and he hath been likened unto them.

PSALM 49 (50 COM. VER.)

1. Asaph's psalm. A God of gods, the Lord, hath spoken and called the earth from the rising of the sun unto the setting thereof;

2. From out Sion is the becoming splendor of his timely beauty.

3. God will come manifestly, our God, and he will not be silent; fire will have burned before him, and round about him a cyclone exceedingly.

4. He will call on the heavens above and the earth to judge in behalf of his laity.

5. Gather ye together his holy ones unto him, those who have made a covenant with him and sacrifices.

6. And heaven will declare his righteousness, because God is Judge. Interlude.

7. Hear my laity and I will talk to thee; Israel, and I will go through the testimony for thee; God, thy God am I.

8. Not for thy sacrifices will I reprove (convict) thee. and thy whole-burnt-offerings are constantly before me.

9. I will not accept yearling-bullocks from thy house; nor he-goats from thy flocks.

10. Because mine are all the wild-beasts of the forest. domestic-animals on the mountains and cattle:

11. I know all the flying-things of the heavens, and the seasonable beauty of the field is with me.

12. If I hunger I shall not have told thee; For mine is the inhabited and the fulness thereof.

13. Will I eat flesh of bulls or drink blood of he-goats?

14. Sacrifice unto God a sacrifice of praise. and pay unto the Most High thy vows;

15. And invoke me in a day of tribulation and I will deliver thee, and thou wilt glory me. Interlude.

16. And God hath said unto the elaborate-sinner, Why dost thou discourse my statutes (acts of justification): And why dost thou take up my covenant with thy mouth?

17. And thou hast hated chastening (instruction) and hast cast my words behind thee.

18. If thou didst behold a thief, thou didst run along with him and with adulterers thou didst place thy portion.

19. With thy mouth thou didst [illegible]

20. When seated thou wast talking against thy brother and in the way of the son of thy mother hast thou placed a stumbling-block.

21. These things hast thou done and I have kept silent; Thou hast transgressed in supposing that I shall be like thee; I shall convict thee and I shall withstand thee to thy face.

22. Understand these things forsooth ye who are ignoring God, lest perchance he snatch you away and there be no one to deliver.

23. A sacrifice of praise will glorify me; and therein is there a way in which I will show him my instrumental-salvation.

PSALM 50 (51 COM. VER.)

1. Unto the end; David's psalm,

2. When Nathan the prophet came unto him, when he had gone in unto Bersabee (Bath Sheba C. V.)

3. Have mercy on me, O God, according to thy great mercy, and according to the plenitude of thy feelings of pity wipe out my transgression.

4. Wash me more from my transgression and from my sin cleanse me:

5 Because I am aware of my transgression and my sin is ever before me.

6. Against thee alone did I sin and do the wicked thing in thy sight. Would that thou mayest be justified in thy words and prevail when thou art judged (criticised).

7. For lo, I was conceived in transgressions and in sins did my mother long for me.

8. For lo, thou hast loved truth and the un-evident and hidden things of thy wisdom hast thou revealed to me.

9. Thou wilt sprinkle me with a hyssop and I shall have become clean; thou wilt wash me and I shall have become whiter than snow.

10. Thou wilt cause me to hear gladness and rejoicing; my bones that have been humbled will be glad.

11. Turn away thy face from my sins and wipe out all my transgressions.

12. Generate a clean heart in me, O God, and renew a right spirit in my vital-parts.

13. Cast me not away from thy face and take not thy sanctified spirit away from me.

14. Restore unto me the gladness of thy instrumental-salvation and stay me up with thy leading-spirit.

15. I shall (will?) teach transgressors thy ways and irreverent ones will turn unto thee.

16. Deliver me from blood (acts of blood) O God, thou God of my salvation (salvation in the abstract). My tongue will express the gladness of thy righteousness;

17. O Lord, my lips will thou open and my mouth will declare thy praise.

18. Because if thou hadst desired a sacrifice, I would have given it; whole-burnt-offerings thou will not be satisfied with:

19. A sacrifice unto God is a contrite spirit: a contrite and humbled heart God will not despise.

20. Be good unto Sion, O Lord, in thy satisfaction (in thy way satisfactory to thee) and may the walls of Hierousalem have been built.

21. Then wilt thou be satisfied with a sacrifice of righteousness, an offering and whole-burnt-offerings: Then will they offer yearling-bullocks on thine altar.

COMMENT.

The 46th psalm is an alala of victory and looks forward to the expected time when God will assert his kingdom and personal rule upon the earth—when the angelic and other spiritual agencies have accomplished their destined work and intervention has ceased. "The kingdom that hath drawn nigh unto [illegible] hath he put under our feet."

The psalm was a choral song for the temple service with an appropriate accompaniment of instrumental music designed to echo the thought of the alala as expressed in words of triumphant rejoicing. It is the realization in vision of the promised victory, and a double-major harmonically.

The 47th psalm with the preceding and following one the 48th constitute a choral trilogy of salvation. We had in the 46th the assertion of the kingdom and the inauguration as it were of the King. In the 47th we have the assertion of the glory of Sion as the Capitol of the kingdom, "the city that hath the foundations whose architect and builder is God"—"Sion the mother of us all"—"the new Hierousalem"—"God hath founded it forever." "We have apprehended it to be thy mercy in the midst of thy laity"—as seen in vision here meant. The 12-13-14 and 15 verses constitute an exhortation and encouragement to God's people in view of this coming glory. Being a seventh the psalm is a consummation, and here a consummation of glory.

The 48th psalm being an eighth is a full harmonic and we should expect it to be resonant with the full octave chords of redemption. The gospel is no longer an eclectic one going forth to call the individual, but the age-lasting ("everlasting") or final call to the nations; but it has the same ring and the conditions are the same—"Why should I fear?" "Will a man redeem himself or pay the expiatory price of his redemption?" What are mortal honor and riches? Can you take them down with you to Hades (the grave)? How have you used the mammon of unrighteousness? In such a way as to be worthy of the "true riches?" The resurrectional morning and its sequences also emphasized. The importance of understanding and the responsibility it brings also.

The 49th psalm designated as Asaph's is a divine picture of sublimity, a summing up of the great thoughts of God—the series full, as we would expect in a nine. It speaks for itself or rather God speaks in it as a God should a God who is addressing his people with whom he has made a covenant over sacrifices. It is the gospel in epitome. It is a glimpse of the throne and its glory—the great power held in abeyance and the mercy and forbearance toward the sinner in view of the abhorence expressed for sin.

Observe the emphasis in the 23d verse placed upon the "instrumental-salvation" or (the Christ).

The 50th psalm is an emphatic minor, a ten times five a penitential confession and for restoration to favor. We all know by the heading what the occasion and the particular sin was in David's experience. As an absolute monarch David was legally responsible to no one and no law except himself. Therefore he says and truthfully "Against thee alone did I sin, and do the wicked thing in thy sight." It is God's moral law that is troubling him; and his anxiety is that God shall be "just and the justifier" in the eyes of all posterity—or in other words that God be justified in the eyes of the law as well as actually just; and his conclusion is the same as the one drawn by Paul at more length in Romans. The futility of sacrifice in itself—the necessity of regeneration and renewal of life, and restoration of spirit, the leading spirit, the sanctified spirit and "the gladness of thy instrumental-salvation."

Observe the emphasis placed upon satisfaction in the closing verses of this psalm. It is one thing to please, another to satisfy, and note here what satisfies God. For it is the gist of the gospel renewed.

CHAS. GARDNER.

OUR CHILDREN.

The Little Seed.

Down by the root of a maple,
A little seed stirred
In its sleep, for it dreamed or it fancied
A whisper it heard.

Dreamed, or it fancied, that some one
Said low in its ear:
"Wake up, little seed, from your slumbers;
The springtime is here.

Up in the beautiful sunlight
Are beautiful things.
Blue skies, and green grasses, and zephyrs,
And creatures with wings.

Rouse up from your long, lonely silence,
And come to the light.
For the world is so busy and bonny,
And happy and bright."

And the dear little seed in its closet
With longing grew wild.
There surely was never a bigger
More sweetly beguiled.

And it felt its heart growing and growing,
Awakened at length,
And round it the brown coat it was bursting
And moved by its strength.

And soon in the beautiful daylight
It lifted its head,
And saw such a wonderful landscape
Around it outspread.

And there in the sunlight and starlight,
And moonlight, and dew,
And raindrops, the dear little seedling
Just flourished and grew.

The birds sang a chorus above it,
The breezes blew sweet,
And at last it was crowned with a blossom,
That made it complete.

The Story of Israel in Egypt.—No. 26.

ISRAEL THE FIRSTBORN OF THE NATIONS.

We have some important lessons yet to learn about our dear heavenly Father in that strange Egyptian land. We must review a little. The magicians, who worked miracles before Pharaoh, were priests of the false gods.

What ever they done in the way of wonders was done to impress the people with the might and power of these gods. They believed that the great deities of Egypt were working through them. God meant to teach them better, so he sent Moses and Aaron to do things that the wisest men in Egypt would not be able to perform or explain.

The Egyptians worshipped almost everything. The worship of the old Nimrod-god of Babylon was there; it was called Baal-worship, or the worship of the sun-god. The river Nile was an object of adoration, and so was the black bull, with the white spot on his face. The ibis-bird, the beetle, the serpent, and the monstrous stone images, so large that a picnic might have been held in their lap were all sacred things.

"Against all the gods of Egypt will I execute judgment," was the decree of the Lord. Did you notice as you went on with your lessons that the plagues fell upon many of these objects of worship?

The very first lesson showed that the great Builder of the Heavens, dwelt not in the serpents of Egypt, for "Aaron's rod devoured the rods of the Magi."

The river Nile, worshipped by these foolish people, as the Creator and the Fountain of Life, was turned into a stinking, loathsome stream of blood that slew the very fish that were dancing in its waters. The God, who could smite the river was above it, he was its Creator and the Author of the living creatures within it; this was the second lesson.

The frogs came and went, the dust was turned into lice, and the magicians were convinced that the real God was on the side of Moses and of Aaron.

The sacred bull perishes with the other cattle, the terrible boils break out on the persons of the other men, the gods do not protect them: nor can they save the land from the flies, the hail, nor the locusts.

The face of the great sun-god is veiled in a darkness that none can penetrate. This cannot be God; if it were, its face could not be shadowed by the hand of another.

The sentence of death hangs over the land,—which of the gods will it be, who will pardon the sins and remit the sentence?

Meneptah believes it will be the gods of Egypt, for he has been taught to think, that even he himself is a god, and surely no harm can come to his house, nor to his son, but the death-angel spares not the first-born of the king-priest, he dies, and it is proven that God dwells not in mortal flesh.

"The Lord is greater than all gods, for in the thing that they dealt proudly, he is above them all."

He showed that "he had control of all forces" and "an abiding power, which no length of resistance could weaken or defy."

His word is to be made good to Israel; he will lead them out of Egypt.

If Pharaoh yields to a kindly worded command, it is well,—blessing will come upon him and upon his people, if not,—curses and death will follow. For had not God said to Abraham, "I will bless him that blesseth thee and curse him that curseth thee?"

I want you, dear children to think of the power and greatness of God,—I want you to worship him as such, and never by thought, or word, or act, allow yourselves to pay reverence to any other being, or thing, animate or inanimate. There is no help nor salvation in the Virgin Mary, in dead saints, in silver crucifixes, in masses, in penances, in confessions, nor in priests. Keep aloof from them all, for these things are the essence of the devil's religion. Through them you worship the old Baal of the Canaanites. Cleave to the Bible, die if need be, but never give it up, make no alliances with the Romanist, God, has forbidden it.

Now we must go back to Abraham. He is the father. 1st, of a son,—"In Isaac, shall thy seed be called." 2nd of nations,—"A father of many nations have I made thee." But these nations must come from Isaac. The sons of Hagar and of Keturah are not to be the fathers of a race who will bless and save the other peoples of earth. Can you not see that the promises are double? Isaac, the son of promise points to Christ. Christ is the Seed through whom "the willing and the obedient are to eat the good of the land." God always selects instruments through whom his work is to be done. When he called Abraham out of Ur of the Chaldees, he was making preparation for a great salvation, a salvation so wonderful, so grand, so beautiful, so far-reaching, that we can never, never, grasp a tithe of its glory, and to accomplish this work he chose the children of Abraham, who were to come through Isaac.

The birthright that was Isaac's, Jacob's, and Joseph's goes to the nation. Israel become God's Son. Through this nation, with Christ, as the One borne aloft, to whom all eyes must be turned is the great salvation to be wrought.

God said, in Exodus iv. 22, "Israel, is my Son, even my first-born," and in Hosea he repeats the same thought in these words, "When Israel was a child, then I loved him, and called my Son out of Egypt."

It used to trouble me greatly to think that God, through all those long ages was blessing Israel and showing his face to Israel and leaving the nations outside in darkness, and in ignorance. But [illegible] saved. Provisions were made for this. They could become adopted Israelites. They could have atonement made for their sins; they could be pardoned and could lay hold of the hope of Israel, that there should be a resurrection of the dead. To be an Israelite, did not make salvation sure. The keeping of the law given on Mt. Sinai, could not give eternal life. There must be an atonement of blood, and faith in that atonement. Each person must believe for himself, that God accepted the appointed sacrifice made on his behalf, and forgave his sins,—looking forward to the coming Savior. Israelites, as well as Gentiles must choose life, or choose death.

By choosing the way of wisdom and of right, they could attain to a place of honor and of glory that would be theirs through endless ages. They could become the kings and priests of the everlasting Canaan, but, if they choose to take their own evil course, they must lose all this and perish.

A national salvation is not an eternal salvation. God may give great blessings to a people, and may make them instruments of blessing to others, but you must never forget, dear children, that it is only the grace of God wrought out in the willing obedience of living, loving service, that will save us eternally.

Israel, is now, the First-born of the nations, and from them,—after they have been fitly schooled,—missionaries must go out to teach other men about the true and living God.

AUNTIE WINCH.

"To the extent that man had life he had it precisely as God had life—he thought as God thought, he loved as God loved; and moved only upon a lower scale with God above him, and the eternities before him as an ideal and opportunity for his full development and enjoyment of a being like himself."

"A Christian, when he makes a good profession, should be sure to make his profession good. It is sad to see many walk in the dark themselves who carry a lantern for others."

COTTON Mather said, "The new heavens in connection with the new earth, is that heavenly country which the patriarchs looked for. When the great God promised them that he would be their God and bless them, they understood it of his bringing them into this deathless and sinless state."

DR. John Gill, quoting early Jewish writers and proving the resurrection from the promise made to the Fathers, says, "God made promise to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and to their seed, the land of Canaan for an everlasting possession; but they had it not, and as God cannot lie, they must be raised from the dead to inherit it.

"UNEXPECTED and startling are the ways our influence gets beyond our reach. The unconscious influence is the shadow cast by our characters. One of the solemnities of life is the thought that we are responsible for what we unthinkingly say and do,—one's words stand vitally related to our characters, as we are to give account for every pernicious word."

SAYS Drummond, "Contemplate the love of Christ and you will love. Stand before that mirror, reflect Christ's character and you will be changed into the same image from tenderness to tenderness. There is no other way. You cannot love to order. You can only look at the lovely object and fall in love with it, and grow into likeness of it. And so look at this perfect life. Look at the great sacrifice as he laid down himself all through life and upon the cross of Calvary, and you must love him, and loving him you must become like him."

ther, p. 293 that Dr. Erasmus Albernus, when leaving Bradenburgh, asked Luther how to preach before the Elector. Luther replied, "Your sermons should be addressed, not to princes and nobles, but to the rude, uncultivated commonality. If in my discourses I were to be thinking about Melanthon and the other doctors, I should do no good at all; but I preach in plain language to the plain people, and that pleases all parties. If I know the Greek, Hebrew and Latin languages, I reserve them for our learned meetings, where they are of use, for at these we deal in such subtleties and such profundities, that God himself, I wot, must marvel at us!"

THE recent Republican League Convention in Cleveland was opened by prayer by Rev. Mr. Darsie, a Disciple Minister of the city. After thanking God for national greatness—praying for the party represented there and thanking God for its past history, and its great men, Lincoln, Grant and Garfield, and praying that the party may ever be the ally of that righteousness that exalteth a nation, etc., etc., he had no sooner closed with the words,

"Our Fathers' God, to thee,
Author of Liberty,
To thee we sing;
Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light,
Protect us with thy might,
Great God, our King!"

when one clap of the hands cause applause to roll over the hall like a prairie fire.

About the year 1875 or 6 Bro. B. Wilson of the Gospel Banner office distributed a little work entitled "Light Sowings," or "Conversations on Important Bible Topics." We think it a very useful and interesting little work, and having obtained a copy of Bro. W. H. Wilson we propose to reproduce a chapter of it each week till our readers have had the benefit of the whole. We hope all our readers will appreciate it as we did when it first appeared. We predict that the most advanced scholars in Auntie Wilcox's Bible Class will be perfectly delighted with these dialogues. We hope that the editor will be able to put it in the same place in THE RESTITUTION every week so that our young folks will know just where to find it.

If you ask when the righteous shall be recompensed, reader, you have reliable answers in the words of Jesus, first in the flesh, and then in the spirit. In Luke xiv. 13, 14, he says, "But when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind, and thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." In Rev. xxii. 12, just before closing the testimony for the age he says, "And behold I come quickly and my reward is with me to give every man according as his work shall be." Infallible testimony, this, that up to the time of his coming not one of the faithful has been rewarded. And how beautifully these Scriptures dovetail with other utterances of the Lord and his apostles. In John v. 25 Jesus says, "The hour is coming in which all that are in their graves shall hear his voice and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of condemnation." And in 1 Thess. iv. 16 we read "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God and the dead in Christ shall rise first."

THE last piece of clerical wrestling of the Scripture we have met with is that of the Rev. M. Holland, a congregationalist. He says "it is in accordance with the Divine law of Order that the Second coming of Christ should be spiritual and not literal," and quotes 1 Cor. xv. 46 to prove it: "That was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural and afterwards that which is spiritual." And goes on to say, "The first was a literal, personal coming, the second is a spiritual coming." The spiritual coming of Christ brings the fullness of that love which is the breathing of God's loving spirit into the soul, imparting and exciting the sympathy of regenerated humanity within our spirit; it brings the fullness of that faith which is the living light of the divine wisdom by which we receive the sure conviction of the great eternal realities which lay beyond the range of bodily sight, and brings the fullness of the religion of love. His first coming was with you." "His second coming is to be in man." "And shall be in you." "In you Christ the hope of glory." Col. i. 27. This coming is with great power and glory,—it blesses the soul and the church,—and through the church it blesses the world with blessings unspeakable and full of glory." It is painful to see men who assume to be mouth-pieces for God destroying what should be their blessed hope. Having made a lie out of one of the grandest truths of God, by making the second coming of Christ consist of his dwelling in them; and his coming in power and great glory to consist of blessings for the soul and the church, pray what remains for the future? Is it not both cruel and reckless to remove the props which support men in trial and suffering, and offer nothing in its place?

A Scientific Gleaning.

Brain diseases and their diagnosis was discussed some time since, at a meeting of the Society for Internal Medicine, at Berlin. A man was introduced who was able to walk and move his arms and could take hold of anything, but who had not the same feeling in the right hand and arm, as in the left; and when stuck with a pin he did not feel it as much on the first as on the latter. When he shut his eyes and took any object into his right hand he would feel it, but was unable to tell what it was. He would have to put a knife or a handkerchief, for instance, into the left hand in order to know it. The feeling of touch and of the muscles was also reduced; but his condition has much improved. According to the symptoms and the course of the disease it was claimed as certain that the affliction was caused by the diseased condition of the outer skin of the brain in a certain place in the left hemisphere of the brain. It was further discussed, how far brain diseases could be treated chirurgically. The assurance in discovering brain diseases is already so pronounced with some physicians, that they have dared to open the brain-capsule, take a piece of bone from it, and operate on the brain with a knife, scissors and other instruments. The greatest success has been achieved with this treatment in England, and people were permanently cured who were lame and useless in life. In Germany the physicians are afraid to perform these operations, being of the opinion that in most cases the disease cannot be located with certainty.

The Question Drawer.

To BRO. BOH: We were about to forward our answer to your question regarding the day of crucifixion, when Bro. Wilson's article on that subject came to hand. On finding that we had arrived at the same conclusion we decided not to forward what we intended.

FOR BRO. H. D. B: In answer in part to the subject upon which you write, we submit for your consideration various translations of 1 Tim. ii. 5, 6, 7.

"For God is one, and there is one Mediator of God and men, that Man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom in behalf of all the testimony in its own seasons for which I was appointed a herald and an apostle." Diaglott.

"For [there is] one God, one Mediator also between God and men, a Man, Christ Jesus, who gave himself in behalf of all, the testimony for appropriate opportunities unto which I was appointed a proclaimer and an apostle." Rotherham's Translation.

"For one is God, one also is Mediator of God and of men, the Man Christ Jesus, who did give himself a ransom for all - the testimony in its own times in regard to which I was set a preacher and apostle." - Young's Translation.

"For there is one God, and one Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus who gave himself a ransom for all, of which the testimony is in its proper season, for which I was appointed a herald and an apostle." - A. Campbell's Translation.

"For God is one; and the Mediator between God and men is one,—[namely] the Man Jesus, the Messiah, who gave himself a ransom adapted in due time, of which I am constituted a herald and legate."—Syriac Translation.

"For there is one God, one Mediator also between God and men, Christ Jesus, [himself] man; who gave himself a ransom for all,—the matter to be testified in its own time, whereunto I was appointed an herald and an apostle."—Dean Alford's Translation.

"For there is one God, and one Mediator of God and man, the Man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all, a testimony for its own times, of which I was made a herald and an apostle."—Sawyer's Translation.

"For there is one God and one Mediator between God and men, the Man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all (the testimony to be declared in due season) for which I am appointed a preacher and an apostle."—Whiting's Translation.

"For there is one God, and one Mediator between God and man, the Man Christ Jesus, who gave himself a ransom for all, of which the testimony has been given in its proper times, to give which testimony I have been appointed a preacher and an apostle." Anderson's Translation.

Death, What is it?

Words are the articulate sounds by which we give expression to the ideas that originate in the heart; thus we use the word light to express an idea exactly the opposite to that of darkness; and we use the word good to express an idea exactly the opposite to that of evil. When we say it is dark we do not expect to be understood that it is light; and when we say men are evil, we do not expect to be understood as saying they are good. So when it is said, "Sin when it is finished bringeth forth death," are we not to understand death to be a state exactly the opposite of life? Death then according to analogy is a state or condition in which there is positively no life; a total cessation of all vital and mental functions, a state like Adam was in prior to his creation. Does God's Word agree with this analogous reasoning? It most certainly does: listen to a few texts; "In death there is no remembrance of Thee." Psa. vi. 5. "His breath goeth forth, he returneth unto his dust, in that very day his thoughts perish." Psa. cxlvi. 4. "For the living know that they shall die, but the dead know not any thing." Eccl. ix. 5. Death resolves man to his original elements. "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was; and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." Eccl. xii. 7. But what about that spirit that returns to God who gave it? Why that spirit was in existence countless ages anterior to creation, in short it is eternal with God himself. Just as soon as God imparted his spirit to Adam he was alive, and he remained alive until that same spirit returned unto God who gave it. And as both the spirit and the dust-formed creature returned to their respective origins, what reason have we to think that Adam had a subsequent existence? If the spirit is the seat of consciousness, then Adam's existence must be co eternal with his Creator; for if it returns a conscious entity, it must have been given a conscious entity. But the spirit is life, an emanation from the fountain of life, Psa. xxxvi. 9. And God imparts it to every created organism, and as long as the organism retains this spirit we are in a state which we call alive, and when the organism becomes enfeebled and exhausted and cannot retain the spirit, Eccl. viii. 8. "His breath goeth forth, he returneth unto his dust," and death is the word we use to describe his condition or state. From the foregoing reasoning then, it will be seen that Scripture and analogy unite in proving that death resolves man into a state of silence and inaction as positive and profound as was his state countless ages before creation's morn. Then well might death be called "the king of terrors." Who is able to grapple with the foe? Is there no antidote for death? Must he forever sway his scepter in eternal silence over the [illegible] or taken from our mighty, or shall the lawful captive be delivered?" Who will answer this momentous question? Hark an answer comes down from the highest heaven, in these thrilling words, "I will ransom them from the power of the grave, I will redeem them from death, O death I will be thy plagues, O grave I will be thy destruction." Hos. xiii. 14. "He will swallow up death in victory." Isa. xxv. 8. When will this language have its fulfilment? Let Paul answer, "So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, death is swallowed up in victory." 1 Cor. xv. 54. "Thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." Christ then is the antidote for death. He breaks the silence of the death-state which otherwise would be eternal. When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." Well might the Apostle exclaim, "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift." The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." And this is the promise that he hath given unto us eternal life, and that life is in his Son.

Baptized for the Dead.

In a recent number of THE RESTITUTION Bro. Joblin treats of the above words, found in 1 Cor. xv. 29, much after the manner of Wakefield. To my mind this treatment of the preposition (ὑπερ) huper, with the genitive, by supplying a pronoun in the accusative, robs the passage of its relevancy and force. In Dr. Luther's version we find the preposition rendered by "ueber," signifying concerning about, over, more than.

The whole chapter is an argument for and a picture of the resurrection. Baptism is [illegible]e logically introduced. If there is no resurrection from the death-state, why are we baptized into this death-state? Why do we in baptism represent a burial into the state of the dead and a resurrection out of it, if there be no rising? Why do we baptize with reference to the condition of the dead, in respect to or in behalf of the dead, in the likeness of their state? Are we not buried with Christ in baptism, wherein also we are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead? "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. It is the like figure whereunto baptism doth now save us."

The verb may well be rendered gain or acquire: or the passage, else what shall it avail them. Your Brother in the love of the Truth.

A Tobacco Habit Cure.

Since the publication recently of an editorial comment on tobacco-using, by Bro. Joblin, I have no doubt there have been some who are making the effort to overcome the desire for that "destroyer of the temple of God," and my desire is to help them in their warfare against this "lust of the flesh."

In the first place put the pipe or plug from you as you would a deadly adder, then by a persistent effort of the will and simple habits of life, and frequent cleansings of the body by baths, the desire for it will soon pass from you.

Adopt a simple vegetarian diet, and let it be free from all seasoning - no salt, pepper, grease or condiments of any kind. Take frequent warm baths and drink all the boiled water you can at a temperature to suit the taste. In fact "wash and be clean;" deluge the body inside and out and wash away the "defiler," and I will assure you your desire will vanish, and with it some of the ills of the flesh you have been suffering from, and others will be lessened.

Is not the desire to make the temple of God pure and holy for the indwelling of his spirit strong enough in you to make this effort? you will rejoice in it, and receive a recompense of reward for so doing now and a greater reward in the kingdom of God.

I used tobacco for seventeen years, but today, two years after that seventeen years of transgression of the laws of my being, I hate it as I do all sin.

I would not advise any one to take tobacco antidotes, for if they do take away the desire the effect of the poisonous drug remains. Submitted in love.

To the Work.

"Go work today in my vineyard." Matt. xxi. 28.

We who have taken upon ourselves the name of Christ are children of God, if children then heirs, heirs of God, joint-heirs with Christ. It behooves us to be up and doing while yet 'tis day, for soon the night cometh when no man can work. We are servants of God, let us keep in the strait and narrow way that shall ultimately lead unto eternal life, for when Christ comes his reward is with him to give every man according as his work shall be, so let us strive to enter the strait gate, for narrow is the way and few there be that find it, that we may hear the welcome applaudit, "Enter thou into the joys of the Lord," instead of "Depart from me ye workers of iniquity." Let us not stand idly waiting for reapers more to come, until our sickles are rusty, and the hour of death draws near, 'ere we begin work for our Master. Oh, that none may think there is no work for them to do, for in this sin cursed world all can find something to do in helping poor fallen humanity, and for the upbuilding of Christ's glorious kingdom on the earth. Let all do with their might what their hands find to do, for remember Christ said, "No man having put his hand to the plow, and looking back is fit for the kingdom of God." Luke ix. 62. Oh, may we do the Lord's work that we may say as Paul did, "I have fought a good fight, I have kept the faith," so that there will be a crown of righteousness laid up for us, which the righteous Judge will give us and not to us only, but to all such as love his appearing. One thing above all, "let us be kindly affectioned one to another." Rom. xii. 10. Your Sister in the faith.

A True Comparison.

It is said in truth, that oil and water will not mix, and it may be truly said that if they do mix, the oil is of very poor quality. It is true you may shake them together until they seem to mix for the time being, but stop the shaking and let quiet be restored, and see how soon they separate, and why? because there is no affinity between them. Just so the Christian may, and often is shaken up with the world, by force of circumstances so that apparently they were mixed. But let quiet be restored, and they separate like the water and the oil, and why? Simply because there is no affinity between them, and if they do not separate, you may safely say that the Christian is of a very poor quality. And you may safely say that the oil and water will not voluntarily mix, neither will the Christian voluntarily and from choice mix with the world.

Answer to Request.

In THE RESTITUTION of May 22, Sister Parkhurst requests that some one give an explanation of John iii. 13, and Luke ix. 30-35, to which I will say by way of an explanation (in a brief way) First, That Jesus taught in this third chapter of John, that in order to, and as prerequisite to see, and enter into the kingdom of God, we must be born again, born of the spirit. As we have in the example of Jesus, "Who was the first fruits of them that slept." 1 Cor. xv. 20. And therefore the first of all the race of mortal man who hath ascended up to heaven, (or in other words) the first transformed from the natural to the spiritual plain of being. Jesus said, "No man hath ascended, or has been transformed and exalted to the spiritual plain (and to the divine nature) but he that came down." Even the Son of man which is in heaven. And now we will notice the account of the fulfilment of of the saying of Jesus as recorded in Luke ix. 27. That there be some standing here, which shall not taste of death till they see the kingdom of God. And we find by Matt. xvii. 1, and Mark ix. 2, that Peter, James and and John were the ones favored to see the transfiguration of Jesus, Elias and Moses: And standing as the representatives of God's kingdom,—Jesus as its head, and Elias and Moses as its members—which kingdom is a spiritual kingdom, and accessible only through the resurrection and a transformation from the natural to the spiritual plain of being. And in connection with this read the saying of Paul. Rom. viii. 28-30.

Satan's Wants.

Johnson the drunkard is dying to-day
With traces of sin on his face;
He'll be missed at the club, at the bar, at the play.
Wanted—a boy for his place.

Simmons the gambler was killed in a fight,
He died without pardon or grace;
Someone must train for his burden and blight.
Wanted—a boy for his place.

The scoffer, the convict, the idler, the thief,
Are lost, and without any noise,
Make it known that there come to my instant relief
Some thousand or more of the boys.

Boys from the fireside, boys from the farm,
Boys from the home and the school,
Come leave your misgivings, there can be no harm
Where "drink and bewarry" is the rule.

Wanted—for every lost servant of mine,
Some one to live without grace,
Some one to die without pardon divine,
Will you be the boy for the place?

"Gather out the Stones."

"It is such a stony little path between here and Mrs. Harvey's, that I can't bear to go over it," said Jem.

"And Dick Harvey doesn't like it any better when he comes over here," said Frank. "I heard him say he had gotten ever so many stone-bruises in that path. He was grumbling about it yesterday,"

"Why don't you clear the way between here and your neighbor's?" asked Mr. Morris. "You would much better do that than stand there and grumble about it."

"Why, we never could get all the stones out of that path," cried Jem.

"Not all in one day, nor by taking all the stones at once," said the father. "But if each of the boys who cross there would take a stone out of the way every time he goes, the work would be done. Try it."

The boys did try it. There were a half-dozen young lads who used the path, and each one helped to clear it by doing a little every time he went that way. By this means the stones were cast out, and the path was cleared.

This is exactly the way to make it easier and pleasanter for others in this world. Let each one make it his business, as he goes through life, to take some little hindrance out of the way, whenever he can. Little faults should be cured, and little temptations that cause unwary feet to stumble should be removed. Small unkindnesses should be confessed and careless ways amended. Trifling slights should be smoothed over, and sharp words, dropped in fits of ill-temper, should be taken back, as far as may be. All these things will make the path of life smoother. It is worth while to clear the way.

"Go through, go through the gates; prepare ye the way of the people; cast up, cast up the highway; gather out the stones; lift up a standard for the people." Isa. lxii. 10.

Purity in Thought and Word.

Evil thoughts and words make indelible impressions. They will not let themselves be forgotten, no matter how bitterly repented of.

A young man who had been profane and irreverent, said, when he at last desired to lead a new life, that it was useless. He had spoiled all good things by his evil use of its mine in the midst of prayers. The jests he had made of the Scripture floated before his eyes when he would read the Bible, and even among the purest and sweetest scenes of his life the impure pictures of his imagination intruded themselves. And yet he had been outwardly a respectable man; he thought he had kept his wickedness hidden from the sight of the world, but—shall I tell you?—not only the deeds, but the thoughts of his youth, were woven into the characters of his children, and they in their wildness, dissipation, and immorality told by their actions, to the world the thoughts their father had entertained in his youth. He knew that his own soul was scarred forever by the impress of his sins. But how his heart was grieved when he realized that the souls of his children were also marred by his sins. You can never regain a lost hour. You can never wipe off the smirch of impurity. You can repent and be forgiven, but you will know the scars are still there.—Mary A. Allen.

"Us Boys."

A temperance lecturer when discussing his favorite theme said:

"Now, boys, when I ask you a question, you must not be afraid to speak up and answer me. When you look around and see all these fine houses, farms and cattle, do you ever think who owns them all now? Your fathers own them, do they not?

"Yes sir," shouted a hundred voices.

"Where will your fathers be in twenty years?"

"Dead" shouted the boys.

"That's right." And who will own this property then?"

"Us boys," shouted the urchins.

"Right. Now tell me, did you ever, in going along the street, notice the drunkards lounging around the public-house door waiting for some one to treat them?"

"Yes sir; lots of them."

"Well, where will they be in twenty years from now?"

"Dead!" exclaimed the boys.

"And who will be the drunkards then?"

"Us boys."

Everybody was thunderstruck. It sounded awful! It was awful; but it was true.

Let us see to it that it will not be true of any of us.

POETRY.

Tribute to Sister Maggie Skeels.

She is sleeping, yes, she's sleeping,
With the loved at Mountain Side.
But have crossed o'er death's dark river,
Crossed o'er with the swelling tide.

Friends and neighbors kindly laid her,
In her dark and narrow bed,
And she's sleeping, calmly sleeping,
With the cold and silent dead.

She is resting, sweetly resting,
With her grave o'er-strewn with flowers
That they gathered, fondly gathered,
From their gardens and their bowers.

Years have passed so quickly by,
Since we knew her in her bloom,
Now they've laid her, gently laid her,
In the dark and silent tomb.

Now she's waiting, calmly waiting,
Peaceful in her grave so low.
Soon, O soon, she'll join our number
With the loved of long ago.

Yes, indeed, we know she's sleeping,
Just as Jesus slept of yore.
And like him she'll rise in beauty.
Ne'er to feel death any more.

By and by she'll hear the summons
Of our blessed Lord and King,
And then, rising, quickly rising,
With the saints that ages bring.

From her grave that may be moss-grown,
Where she sleepeth now in peace,
To praise the name of her dear Savior,
Who has promised to release.

All the dead the Blessed Lord raises,
All that's died o'er land or sea,
And they too will join the chorus,
And praise the Lamb of Calvary.

All that's watching, truly watching,
Till the resurrection day,
Will be gathered quickly gathered,
To meet Christ upon the way.

Then the saints that now are sleeping,
Will arise and gathered be,
All will join and meet the Savior
To live and reign eternally.

Special Guidance.

While recently attending a service at the W. C. T. U. Temple, a minister who spoke from the platform declared that no one could possibly understand the Word of guidance of the Holy Spirit. He then went on to tell what he had learned from the Bible by the aid of the Spirit. He said the Bible taught that there never would be a literal resurrection of the dead. And that there never would be a literal second coming of Christ.

How sad! Dear reader, have we not fallen upon perilous times? Can the Holy Spirit contradict its own word? Never! never! In place of being guided by the Holy Spirit, these men were evidently led by "seducing spirits," who guide them to believe "doctrines of devils," which Paul said would come in the "last days." So many people are led into error by appropriating to themselves John xiv. 25, 26: "But the Comforter, even the Holy Spirit, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring to your remembrance all that I said unto you." This is applicable solely to those whom he addressed in person, and whom he personally taught, and to no one else. He says, he shall "bring to your remembrance all that I said unto you." These words were spoken to persons whom he had specially taught before his ascension, for the purpose of making them heralds of the message of life to others, and who needed the Holy Spirit to quicken their memories as to what he had said to them, and not to guide them into a spiritual discernment, or spiritual interpretation of those words, which modern blind guides teach us.

They seem to love to have their hearers believe that the Revealed Will of God is in fact no revelation at all but a collection of impenetrable mysteries which cannot be understood unless interpreted by the same Spirit which inspired holy men of old to write them.

This man claims that the Divine Spirit led him to believe that the Bible taught that there never would be a literal resurrection of the dead, but that it must be understood in a spiritual sense. His instruction must have been derived from lying "seducing spirits," because it is at variance with what the Holy Spirit revealed to the Prophet Isaiah when he said: "Thy dead men shall live, (not spiritual dead) together with my dead body shall they arise. (Modern so-called spirit-guided interpreters, say dead bodies never arise.) Awake and sing, ye that dwell in dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth (where they were buried) shall cast out the dead."

The same Holy Spirit lead Daniel to say: "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt."

It also led John to say: "Marvel not at this: For the hour cometh, in which all that are in the tombs shall hear his voice and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done ill, unto the resurrection of judgment." Modernized preachers who claim spirit-guidance do not hesitate for one moment to affirm that the dead "in the tombs," will never "come forth."

The "seducing spirits," which delight in "doctrines of devils," have led this preacher to ignore the world's great hope, the second coming of the Lord Jesus. But the Spirit of God, lead n holy man of old to say: "We have not followed cunningly devised fables when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." Another one led by the same Holy Spirit exhorts that we keep our eyes fixed on that blessed hope, even the bright appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ. Did not also angels clothed in white comfort the Lord's disciples when the clouds of heaven received him, and obscured their vision by saying: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye looking into heaven? this Jesus which was received up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye beheld him going into heaven." This ascension was literal, physical and visible. He "shall so come in like manner," says the heavenly messengers. Modern so-called spirit-guided men, say he never will, which do you believe? When this so-called spirit-guidance leads men to contradict plain statements of God's Word, and leads them into the mazes of scepticism, it is time for all Bible true guidance spirit-guidance about tensively preached in these last days.

W. H. WILSON.

Words Justify and Condemn.

"For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." Matt. xii. 37. These are the words of Jesus to the multitude, and they apply to the multitude today. Words as a rule point to, and are an index of the heart, hence Jesus says "for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh, and a good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things; and an evil man out of the evil treasure, bringeth forth evil things." Then we must conclude that our words in public and private are commending us to God, or they will be a witness against us. Then how careful we ought to be about our words. For Jesus says again, "But I say unto you, that every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." Then we had far better not talk at all, (which is a miserable life) than to talk in such a way as to create a host of witnesses that will tell against us in that great day. Paul tells the brethren to walk in wisdom toward them that are without, redeeming the time. "Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt, that ye may know how ye ought to answer every man." It seems that we have all lost much valuable time foolishly, and now our duty is to redeem back, as much as we can, by our walk and our talk. And if we would accomplish any good, we must not walk and talk as the world does, and as we once did. If we do our light is under a bushel, and we are not the light of the world as Jesus was, and as we ought to be. If a professed Christian walks and talks as the world does, it is self-evident that they are deceived, and the heart has not been changed, they are simply a blank, a cipher, a stumbling block to the cause they disgrace. If the heart, mind and affection have been radically changed, and we have been converted, our walk and talk must tell it. And yet it wont make us love the devil, or the enemies of the Lord, or very worldly-minded Christians, (if there be any such) as we love good, whole-souled Christians. Then if our heart is so filled and attuned with the things of this vain world, that our tongues are daily employed in the every day common clitter clatter nonsense, we may be assured all is not well. We are deceived, and our title is not clear. We heard a good old sister say once, that if her neighbors would come to see her, she would stop her work and talk Bible to them if the house was not on fire. A commendable zeal truly. Now, I admit that a man or a woman may talk lots of Bible, and yet may not be a Christian; but I cannot admit for a moment that a good Christian will be content to sit still, and not talk Bible and divine things, if they can find some one to talk to. Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. Another good sister said to me one day, when on important Bible subject of Christian duty was mentioned, Brother Adams, I want to talk to you tomorrow on that subject, if dinner has to go late." That certainly has the right ring, and is the index of the right spirit. And yet and to say that some professed Christians will look at such persons with a jealous eye and heart, and say they are cranky. Well they said worse things than that about the Master, and if he was here no doubt but they would look shy of him, and say he was cranky too.

In conclusion let me ask all such folks, if they really believe that the Master when here spent his time and life in this cheap common clitter clatter talk? If not, are we imitating and serving him, or the God of this world, which? If we have the spirit of the Master, will we not try to imitate and follow him, and thus prove that we have been redeemed from our vain conversation by the precious blood of Christ? And now we should be holy in all manner of conversation, and our conversation should be as becometh the gospel, if it is in heaven, as Paul says. If we are conand life will correspond, while we have been converted to God, our vain and idle words and actions must be changed. If the heart is filled with the love of God and his truth, that is our subject of conversation, but if it is filled with the things of this world, our conversation will tell it on us. Some peoples' hearts, it seems, are fashioned very much after the pattern of that noted inn of Bethlehem; lots of room there for every body else, and for everything pertaining to this life, in apple pie order at that, but no room for Jesus. Sad, and truth indeed. Remember well, that this same Jesus whom you are slighting and offending by crowding him out of your hearts and homes, has said, "Behold, I stand at the door and knock," if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." O, what a meek and modest guest, will not thrust himself in where he is not invited or wanted. Hear now, and hearken to his words which are as a straight edge, and as quick and powerful, and sharper than any two edged-sword. He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad.

Personal Consecration.

We are nearing the end of the age. The signs of the times, the unrest and fear; men's hearts failing them for fear, for the things that are coming upon the earth, the careless unconcerned selfishness of a great part of the professed followers of Christ, and the arousing and earnest consecration of the other part; the wonderful awakening and grasping of the truth of Christ's personal coming and that very soon, with the unparalleled revival of the missionary spirit and the realizing sense of our duty as to the last command of our Savior, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations," with returning faith in God to heal all disease as well as sin. All these things with many more clearly show that the end is near, very near, that we may lift up our heads and rejoice for our Lord is at hand, even at the door. Very soon will be ended forever the fighting and warring with Satan and his host, this constant and ceaseless struggle for life and its necessities, and with a glad shout we may meet our coming King, our blessed Savior, our loving Elder Brother. Then what! Eternity! Eternal Life! O wonderful thought! Do we comprehend the significance the magnitude of that word. Years and ages roll away, and life is but begun. Life with Christ; personal companionship with, and a full understanding of him, his plans and wishes, a never-ending association with our redeemed loved ones, with never a pain or sorrow, not a fear of death or separation. This battle with sin and temptation forever past, victorious to the end, no, victorious forever, for the end is never reached. Praise the Lord for eternal life with Christ. "He that hath this hope in him purifieth himself even as he is pure." Even as he is pure. Are not these comprehensive words? Aye—it comprehends an earnest, faithful, every-day Christ-like living; self-sacrifice, self-denial, for, "even Christ pleased not himself." Patience, forbearance, long-suffering; so full of love that the angry word, the evil thought will not be present, for "love is not provoked, thinketh no evil." 1 Cor. xiii. 3. It comprehends a faith that trusts God under all temptations, with feet planted firmly on the promise, "With every temptation there shall be made a way of escape." A faith that like Abraham of old, "believes God, and trusts the Savior to redeem us from all iniquity." Titus ii. 14. To save us from our sins, a faith that believes that "The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin." Yes, and to be pure "even as he is pure," comprehends more than this. A ready unquestioning obedience to God in everything, in the spirit as well as in the letter of the law. "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me." "If a man love me he will keep my sayings." John xiv. Obedience at any cost, even to the uprooting of notions, pet theories, and cherished prejudices. It may be a fierce struggle with self, a hand to hand [illegible] so to speak, to thus consecrate our whole selves, time, money and talent to God and his service; and the life of consecration may bring upon us the bitter censure of esteemed friends, and epithets of "fanatic," "fogy" or "lunatic" perhaps, but 'tis only our "reasonable service," the most we can do (and still 'tis so little) in return for the great love that prompted our heavenly Father to provide such an abundant redemption from sin, and disease: for the boundless love that cares for us all of the time. Who never "leaves or forsakes" his faithful children."

"Who comforteth us in all our tribulation." 2 Cor. iv. "Who works in us to will and to do of his good pleasure." Phil. ii. 13. "Who is able to keep us from falling." Jude. "Who is able to make all grace abound to us, that we always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work." 2 Cor. ix. 8. "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us," etc. Then let us, "awake to righteousness and sin not," redeeming the time, and with Paul let us pray to "Be filled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdom, and spiritual understanding, that we might walk worthy of the Lord, unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God, strengthened with all might according to his glorious power, unto all patience and long-suffering with joyfulness." Col. i. 9, 10, 11. And may we be made perfect in every good work to do his will, the Father "Working in us that which is (pleasing) well pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory forever and ever."

MRS. E. BARNUM.

Knowledge is power in the same sense that wood is fuel. Wood on fire is fuel. Knowledge on fire is power. There is no more power in knowledge than there is in the stones or stars which you know, unless there be a spirit and life in the knowledge which gives it its energy. In proportion as men have this spiritual power do they become strong in the world.—Alexander M'Kenzie.

Letter Drawer.

To the loved ones of like precious faith:

I would like to say a few words, as I have been reading so many encouraging letters from the dear brothers and sisters. I was baptized by Bro. Hatch over four years ago, while he was holding a meeting at our church. THE RESTITUTION is always a welcome visitor. Although I am permitted to attend Sunday School and meeting, I need the help of THE RESTITUTION. We know that the time is near when Christ shall come to make up his jewels. O, may we be counted worthy of eternal life, is my prayer. Pray for me, dear brothers and sisters, that I may be faithful. Your sister in hope of eternal life.

JESSIE MURPHY.

Dear Restitution:

Inclosed find express money order for $1.65 to pay for THE RESTITUTION, and one copy of Index Rerum, by H. C. Bingley. My time for THE RESTITUTION expired April 6, 1895, and I ought to have renewed before, but for poor folks money seems hard to get always when you need it. With the many years that I have taken our family paper, dating back when Bro. Marsh of Rochester, New York, published it. I can say that I like it better and better. Your corps of writers are good, better, best, without calling any names. I am pleased, edified and enlightened, and thereby enabled to grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Your brother in the hope of the gospel of the kingdom.

D. SHAW.

Dear Restitution:

I enjoy reading the letters from the brothers and sisters. My husband and myself are alone in "The One Faith" in this part of the country. I often wish we could meet with the brethren and hear the pure gospel preached; but THE RESTITUTION makes its regular visits, and is our only preacher except the Bible. How many there are that preach for doctrine the few preach the gospel that our Savior and his apostles preached. Our Savior will soon come to claim his Bride. May we be ready to meet him and hear him say, "Well done thou good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things." May we overcome the trials and temptations of this world, for there are precious promises made to the overcomers. "He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment; and I will not blot out his name out of the Book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father and before his angels." Yours in hope.

NANNIE OSBORN.

Editor Restitution:

I send a few words to the letter drawer if thought worthy to be published. I have read many letters in THE RESTITUTION from the dear brothers and sisters. I derive so much comfort from them. It is all I have besides the blessed Word of God. It cheers me to see that there are some trying to serve the true and living God. And may we all that have put off the old man and his works, and have put on the new man Christ Jesus, leave the world and draw near to God by prayer through faith, and he will draw near to us and fill us with his love and goodness that we may never be found naked, but be clothed with humility, and filled with the fruits of the righteousness of Christ which is love and good will, that we may outride the storms of this life and be wholly prepared for a home in the kingdom of God, with our robes all washed white in in the blood of the Lamb, that when the Bridegroom comes he will find me watching and waiting with my lamp trimmed and burning. Pray for me that I may ever be found praying and waiting for my Lord's return.

C. A. P.

Dear Restitution:

My grand-parents have taken THE RESTITUTION for thirty years, although at times it has been under different names. I have not read it very much, but what I have read I think is very true, and I now promise to read it more in the future than I have been in the past. I am twelve years old, and have a brother and a sister younger than I am. My father and mother are both professed Christians. I was baptized over a year ago by a Baptist minister. Two of my friends were baptized at the same time, and they were given the right hand of followship to become of the "Free Will Baptist Church." I did not want to join that church, as I do not believe as they do, and I should not want to communa with them, as they use leaven bread, and I think they ought to use unleaven. I was baptized for the remission of my sins. I do not think we can be saved if we are not baptized into Christ, our Savior, and become Abraham's seed, although we must remember and try with the help of God to keep the other commandments. I believe Christ is coming to set up his kingdom on this earth, and that all the saints shall be raised to be kings and rulers. I do not think people go to heaven when they are dead and buried, as most of the ministers preach nowadays. Yours in hope of eternal life.

ZUBA WINTER.
